THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferenze, in view of the fact that we have already had the roll-call of the defendants it seems unnecessary to me that you read again the names of the defendants as they now follow in the indictment and if we hear no objection we will proceed immediately to a reading of the counts beginning on page 6.

MR. FERENZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. FERENZ: Count One - Crimes against Humanity.

1. Between May 1941 and July 1943 all of the defendants herein committed Crimes against Humanity, as defined in Article II of Control Council Law No. 10, in that they were principals in, accessories to, ordered, abetted, took a consenting part in, were connected with plans and enterprises involving, and were members of organizations or groups connected with: atrocities and offenses, including but not limited to, persecutions on political, racial, and religious grounds, murder, extermination, imprisonment, and other inhumane acts committed against civilian populations, including German nationals and nationals of other countries.

2. The acts, conduct, plans and enterprises charged in paragraph 1 of this Count were carried out as part of a systematic program of genocide, aimed at the destruction of foreign nations and ethnic groups by murderous extermination.

3. Beginning in May 1941, on the orders of Himmler, special task forces called "Einsatzgruppen" were formed from the personnel of the SS, the SD, the Gestapo , and otherpolice units. The primary purpose of these groups was to accompany the German army into the E astern territories, and exterminate Jews, Gypsies , Soviet officials, and other elements of the civilian population regarded as racially "inferior" or "politically undesirable."

4. Initially four Einsatzgruppen were formed, each of which supervised the operation of a number of subordinate units called "Einsatz kommandos" or "Sonderkommandos."

Some Einsatzgruppen had, in addition, other units for special purposes. Each Einsatzgruppe together with its subordinate units consisted of about 500 to 800 persons. DR. HANSSURHOLT: May I please have a word? The defense of the defendant Dr. Rasch calls the attention of the Court to the fact that the defendant is not in a position to attend the Court. The defense has made an application on 8 Sept. that the proceedings against Dr. Rasch be severed. The defendant was brought in this morning and the momentary condi tion of the defendant gives the defense reason to point out that he cannot attend the proceedings any further.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you satisfied that he is not in physical condition to attend the balance of the proceedings this morning which may not endure longer than an hour?

DR. SURHOLT: The defendant has just told me that owing to his condition he is not in a position even to understand the words of the prosecutor. He can't hear them .

THE PRESIDENT: Then do you make the representation that he is not in physical condition to be arraigned this morning?

DR. SURHOLT: I don't think so but I am prepared to represent him and the defendant has consented to that.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you ask that he be excused from the Courtroom for the rest of the proceeding this morning?

DR. SURHOLT: Yes, I ask for that.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The defendant Otto Rasch because of his physical condition will be excused from attendance this morning and he will be arraigned at a later date individually, will attendants escort the defendant Otto Rasch from the Courtroom? MR. GICK: Dr. Karl Gick, Your Honor, for the Defendant Strauch. May I make a statement as defense counsel for the Defendant Strauch? I would like to inform the Tribunal that the Defendant Strauch suffers from epileptic attacks. As soon as we do receive the motion we will reply to it, and the Tribunal may consider it at their convenience. I would, at this time, however, like to have it part of the record that the Defendant Rasch, who was excused, was excused at his own request and the Prosecution has no objection to it; however, before he was brought here this morning I was assured by a physician that he was physically able to attend the arraignment. He was excused on his own statement and not on the advice or request of any physician.

Further opportunity will be given defense counsel to further peruse and study these documents prior to the opening of the actual trial date. Consistent with the safeguarding of every right of the defendants, as guaranteed by the Charter, the ordinances, and the laws controlling the procedure of this Tribunal, this case will proceed with dispatch. Any defense counsel who desires to call a witness or to obtain a document must not wait until he is about to call his client to the witness stand to testify. The Tribunal does not want to be placed in the situation of idling a day or even an hour while awaiting evidence which, with a little bit of foresight and energy, could have been obtained in ample time. The trial--the taking of testimony, will begin on Monday, September 29, 1947, in Courtroom No. 2. This Court will be in recess until that time. The Tribunal will now rise.

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Military Tribunal II-A will now be in order and you will ascertain if the defendants are present.

THE MARSHAL: May it please your Honors, the Defendants Otto Rasch and Eduard Strauch are absent.

THE PRESIDENT: Because of what?

THE MARSHAL: At the request of the medical authorities, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Since the arraignment several days ago, Otto Rasch and Eduard Strauch have been arraigned separately because on the opening day they were too ill to respond, but that the record will show that they now have been arraigned properly, in accordance with law.

MR. FERENCZ: May it please Your Honors, it is with sorrow and with hope that we here disclose the deliberate slaughter of more than a million innocent and defenseless men, women and children. This was the tragic fulfillment of a program of intolerance and arrogance. Vengeance is not our goal, nor do we seek merely a just retribution. We ask this Court to affirm by international penal action man's right to live in peace and dignity regardless of his race or creed. The case we present is a plea of Humanity to Law.

the dark decade of the Third Reich, would have seemed incredible. The defendants were commanders and officers of special SS groups known as Einsatzgruppen - established for the specific purpose of massacring human beings because they were Jews, or because they were for some other reason regarded as inferior peoples. Each of the defendants in the dock held a position of responsibility or command in an extermination unit. Each assumed the right to decide the fate of men, and death was the intended result of his power and contempt. Their own reports will show that the slaughter committed by these defendants was dictated, not by military necessity, but by that supreme perversion of thought, the Nazi theory of the master race. We shall show that these deeds of men in uniform were the methodical execution of long-range plans to destroy ethnic, national, political and religious groups which stood condemned in the Nazi mind. Genocide - the extermination of whole categories of human beings, was a foremost instrument of the Nazi doctrine. Even before the war the concentration camps within the Third Reich had witnessed many killings inspired by these ideas. During the early months of the war the Nazi regime expanded its plans for genocide and enlarged the means to execute them. Following the German invasion of Poland there arose extermination camps such as Auschwitz and Maidanek. In Spring 1941, in contemplation of the coming assault upon the Soviet Union, the Einsatzgruppen were created as military units, but not to fight as soldiers. They were organized for murder. In advance of the attack on Russia, the Einsatzgruppen were ordered to destroy life behind the lines of combat. Not all life to be sure. They were to destroy all those denominated Jew, political official, Gypsy, and those other thousands called "asocial" by the self-styled Nazi supermen. This was the nex German "Kultur".

gistered. They were forced to wear the Stard of David under threat of death. All were then assembled with their families to be"re-settled" under Nazi supervision. At the outskirts of each town was a ditch, where a squad of Einsatz men waited for their victims. Whole families were arrayed, kneeling or standing near the pit to face a deadly hail of fire. men for extermination, denying them the right to live.

Helpless civilians were conveniently labeled "Partisans" or "Partisan-sympathizers" and then executed. and insane, for "useless eaters" could never serve the Third Reich. beings and discharge corpses. Every Einstzgruppe had its allotment of these carriages of death. these Nazi slaughters and vowed that Justice would be done. Here we act to fulfill that pledge, but not alone because of it. crippled and its people hungry. Most Germans are still unaware of the detailed events we shall account. They must realize that these things did occur in order to understand somewhat the causes of their present plight. They put their faith in Hitler and their hope in his regime. The nazi ideology, devoid of humanism and founded on a ruthless materialism, was proclaimed throughout Germany and was known to all Germans. Hitler and other Nazi leaders made no secret of their purpose to destroy the Jews. As we here record the massacre of thousands of helpless children, the German people may reflect on it to assess the merits of the system they so enthusiastically acclaimed. If they shame at the folly of their choice they may yet find a true ideal in place of a foul fetish.

of this case. We charge more than murder, for we cannot shut our eyes to a fact ominous and full of foreboding for all of mankind. Not since men abondoned tribal loyalties has any state challenged the right of whole peoples to exist. And not since medieval times have governments marked men for death because of race or faith. Now comes this recrudescence - this Nazi doctrine of a master race - an arrogance blended from tribal conceit and a boundless contempt for man himself. It is an idea whose toleration endangers all men. It is, as we have charged, a Crime against Humanity.

The conscience of humanity is the foundation of all law. We seek here a judgment expressing that conscience and reaffirming under law the basic rights of man."

Mr. Glancy will now read Part I of the opening statement,

THE PRESIDENT: Let me suggest that as each attorney appears at the podium he announce his name and whom he represents, Of course that will not be necessary with the Prosecution, but I would like the defense counsel to do that. We didn't seem to do that last time, but that seems to make the record somewhat ambiguous.

MR. FERENCZ: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal. to investigate the basic tenets and the development of the Nazi doctrine which inspired the crimes we shall prove. It is conceded that the Nazi neither invented nor monopolized this idea of superior peoples but the consequences they wrought gave it a new and terrible meaning. The Nazi conception has little in common with that arrogance and pretention which has frequently accompanied the mingling of different peoples.

The master race dogma as the Nazis understood and practiced it, was nothing less than the most all-encompassing and terrible racial persecution of all time. It was one of the most important points of the "unalterable program of the Nazi party" and the only one which was consistantly advanced from the very beginning of Nazi rule in Germany to the bitter end. It was, as Gottfried Feder, the official commentator of the Nazi Program, called it "the emotional foundation of the Nazi movement". The Jews were only one of the peoples marked for extermination in the Nazi program. The motivation of the crime of genocide, as it was carried out by Hitler and his legions in all of the occupied and dominated countries, steemed from the Nazi ideology of "blood and race". In this theory of the predominance of the alleged Nordic race over all others and in the mystic belief that Nordic blood was the only creative power in the world, the Einsatzgruppen had their ideological basis. In this primitive theory; derived in part from Nietzsche's teaching of the Germanic superman, the Nazis found the justification for Germany's domination of the world. As Rosenberg put it in mystic fog:

"A new faith is arising today; the myth of the blood, the come the old sacraments."

3 September 1933, Hitler professed a similar creed, but gave it a more practical expression:

"But long ago man has proceeded in the same way with his fellow man.

The higher race - at first higher in the sense of possess embraces races of unequal value.

Thus there results the sub as the sole conceivable right because founded on reason."

and races, particularly the Slavs of Eastern Europe, as inferior, and Jews and Gypsies, as sub-human. From this thesis to the conclusion that inferior people should be decimated, and sub-humans exterminated like vermin, is but an easy step. The International Military Tribunal found in its judgment:

"The evidence shows that at any, rate in the East, the mass German occupying forces.

In Poland and the Soviet Union territory could be used for colonization by Germans.

Hitler had written in 'Mein Kampf', on these lines, and the plan was clearly stated by Himmler in July 1942, when he wrote:

'It is not our task to Germanize the East in the old sense, ly Germanic blood live in the East."

In August 1942 the policy for the Eastern Territories as laid down by Bermann was summarized by a subordinate of Rosenberg as follows:

"The Slavs are to work for us. In so far as we do not need Germanic health services are superfluous.

The fertility of the Slavs is undesirable."

"In Poland the intelligentsia had been marked down for exter representatives of the Polish intelligentsia."

This aim was openly admitted by the highest SS dignitaries. Himmler gave vivid expression to this view point in a meeting of SS Major Generals at Posen, in October 1943:

"What happens to a Russian, to a Czech does not interest me in the slightest.

What the nations can offer in the way of napping their children and raising them here with us.

Whether only so far as we need them as slaves for our Kultur; other wise, it is of no interest to me.

Whether 10,000 Russian fe ditch for Germany is finished.

We shall never be rough and heartless when it is not necessary, that is clear.

We Germans these human animals.

But it is a crime against our blood to and grandsons to have a more difficult time with them.

When somebody comes to me and says; 'I cannot dig the anti-tank kill them', then I have to say, 'You are a murderer of your own blood because; if the anti-tank ditch is not dug, German They are our own blood.

That is what I want to instil into of the most sacred laws of the future.

Our concern, our duty is our people and our blood.

It is for them that we must provide plan, work and fight, nothing else.

I wish the SS Germanic peoples, especially Russians.

All else is vain, winning of the war."

Cabinet session in the Government Building at Cracow on 16 December 1941 and advocated the following solution of the Jewish problem:

"Gentlemen, I must ask you to rid yourself of all feeling of pity.

We must annihilate the Jews, wherever we find them structure of the Reich as a whole."

licy as follows: "The Jews are a race which has to be eliminated. Wherever we catch one it is his end." And earlier, speaking of his function as Governor General of Poland, he confided to his diary this sentiment: "Of course, I cannot eliminate all lice and Jews in only a year's time." Military Tribunal, was asked how the defendant Ohlendorf could admit the murder of 90,000 people, he replied:

"I am of the opinion that when, for years, for decades, the inevitable."

Germany to embark on the program of extermination. The prophecy of Hitler, made in his speech to the German Reichstag on 30 January 1939, that the result of war would be the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe came very near fulfillment.

It is estimated that, of the 9,600,000 Jews who lived in Nazi dominated countries, 6,000,000 have perished in the gas chambers of the Concentration Camps or were murdered by the Einsatzgruppen. As the International Military Tribunal found in its judg ment:

"Adolf Eichmann, who had been put in charge of this program killed in the extermination institutions."

this work with hideous and ruthless efficiency. It was Himmler who boasted proudly in his speech to the highest SS leaders, in 1943, "Only the SS was equal to the task of exterminating the Jewish people.

Others talked about it but had too many reservations..

honor in the history of the SS." Hans Frank, has publicly regretted his advocacy:

"We have fought against Jewry, we have fought against it for tion - utterances which are terrible.

...A thousand years will pass, and this guilt of Germany will still not be erased."

During the last years the world has learned much about this "state within the state" which was formed by the SS. Much about this new aristocracy of "blood and elite" need not be repeated here. The Einsatzgruppen were part of the SS. They were created at the direction of Hitler and Himmler, by Heydrich the Chief of the Security Police and SD, who was Himmler's righthand man, and operated under the direct control of the RSHA, the Reich Security Main Office, one of the most important of the twelve main offices of the SS.

The Einsatzgruppen were formed in the Spring of 1941. The sequence of events was as follows:

directing that the Security Police and the Security Service be called in to assist the Army in breaking every means of resistance behind the fighting front. Thereafter, the Quartermaster General of the Army, General Wagner, representing Keitel, the Chief of the High Command of the Wehrmacht, met Heydrich, Chief of the Security Police and Security Service. These two men reached an agreement concerning the activation, commitment, command and jurisdiction of units of the Security Police and SD within the framework of the Army. The Einsatzgruppen were to function in the rear operational areas in administrative subordination to the field armies, in order to carry out these tasks as directed by Heydrich and Himmler. level were necessary for the creation of such small units is shown by the character of their assignment. These "security measures" were defined according to the principles of the Security Police and the SD, the principles of Heydrich, the principles of unmitigated terror and murder. The actions of the Einsatzgruppen in the conquered territories will demonstrate the purpose for which they were organized. was attached to an Army Group. Einsatzgruppe A was attached to Army Group North, Einsatzgruppe B was attached to Army Group South. Einsatzgruppe D was assigned to the 11th German Army which was to be nucleus for the formation of a fourth Army Group, after it reached the Caucasus. The function of the Einsatzgruppen was here to insure the political security of the conquered territories both in the operational areas of the Wehrmacht and the rear areas which were not directly under civil administration. These two missions were made known at a mass meeting of the Einsatzgruppen personnel before the attack on Russia. At this meeting Heydrich, Chief of the SIPO and SD, and Streckenbach, Chief of the Personnel Office of the RSHA flatly stated that the task of the Ein satzgruppen would be accomplished by exterminating the opposition to National Socialism.

of the Einsatzgruppen. Hitler himself, instructed them that it was the mission of these Special Task Forces to exterminate all Jews and political commissars in their assigned territories. The Einsatzgruppen were dependent upon the Army Commander for their billets, food and transport: relations between Armed Forces and the Security Police and SD were close and almost cordial, and the commanders of the Einsatzgruppen reported again and again that the understanding of the Army Commanders for the task of the Einsatzgruppen made their operations considerably easier." The officer strength of the Einsatzgruppen was drawn from the SD, SS, Kripo and Gestapo. The enlisted forces were composed of the Waffen SS, the Order police, the Gestapo and locally recruited police, When occasion demanded, the Wehrmacht Commanders would bolster the strength of the Einsatzgruppen with contingents of their own. The Einsatzgruppen were divided into Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos. These sub-units differed only in name. When a mission called for a very small task force, the Einsatz or Sonderkommando was capable of further subdivision, called Teilkommando or splinter groups. population alone, but reached into prisoner-of-war camps in total disregard of the rules of warfare. Soldiers were screened by Einsatzkommandos personnel in order to find and kill Jews and political commissars. of the ideological background of this fight to the commanders in chief and the highest officers of the three branches of the Armed Forces.

This war, he said, would not be an ordinary war, but a clash of conflicting ideologies. Special measures would have to be taken against political functionaries and commissars of the Soviet Army. Political activities and commissars were not to be treated as prisoners of war, but were to be segregated and turned over to special detachments of the SD which were to accompany the German troops. The carrying out of this Hitler directive was described by the International Military Tribunal in its judgment that:

"... There existed in the prisoner-of-war camps on the Eastern Front small screening teams (Einsatzkommandos), headed by lower ranking members of the Secret Police (Gestapo).to report them to the office of the Secret Police."

German soldier might suffer from the sight of these executions, the Chief of the Office IV of the RSHA assured him cynically that, in the future, this "special treatment" - the euphemistic expression for killing - would take place outside the camps so that the troops would not see them. tionary, commissar, higher ranking civil servant, leading personality of the economical field, member of the intelligentsia or Jew might escape extermination. These purposes were realized in actions we shall now describe.

MR. GLANCY: Mr. Walton shall continue for the Prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. WALTON: began in conformity with the agreements between the Army High Command and the Reichs Security Main Office. At first the Border Police School Barracks at Pretzsch in Saxony was designated as an assembly point but because of the inadequacy of facilities, the neighboring villages of Dueben and Schmiedeberg were also designated as assembly points.

from military or police organizations, they already understood normal military duties. The course of training given them at the assembly points, consisted of lectures and speeches on their new and special functions. After this orientation the Gruppen received their equipment, and were to be committed to action. Events were not long delayed which brought these organizations to their assigned tasks, and their missions were thoroughly understood from the highest ranking leader of a Gruppe down to the lowest SS Man. Russia. The Einsatzgruppen, already alerted, fell in behind the marching columns of the Wehrmacht as an integral part of the machine constructed for swift and total war. Within a space of three days the training grounds in Saxony were empty and all Einsatzgruppen had entered upon the performance of their various missions. territory in the early months of this aggression. By December 1941 the Eastern front extended from Leningrad on the North to the Crimean Peninsula in the South. The Baltic States, White Ruthenia and most of the Ukraine were in German hands. In this wide land the Einsatzgruppen moved behind the lines of combat. They were deployed from north to south in alphabetical order across the east of Europe. as the proof is adduced. And it will be seen that they followed like methods in executing their common mission. Identity of purpose and of top command were reflected in a common pattern of performance. Some victims were disposed of casually. Political functionaries were shot where found. Prisoners of war who fell in the category of opponents of National Socialism were handed by the Wehrmacht to the Einsatzgruppen and killed.

These swift methods were also applied in disposing of Jews, gypsies and persons falling under that vague denomination "undesirables." But these latter classes of humans marked for slaughter were large - too large to be disposed of by casual assassination. Their very numbers demanded that they be killed en masse. Accordingly, we find plans and methods adpated to this necessity. to 800 men. Four of these small forces totaling not more than 3,000 men killed at least 1,000,000 human beings in approximately two years' time. These figures enable us to make estimates which help considerably in understanding this case. They show that the four Einsatzgruppen averaged some 1,350 murders per day during a two year period; 1,350 human beings slaughtered on the average day, 7 days a week for more than 100 weeks. That is 337 murders per average day by each group of 500 to 800 men during the two year period. All these thousands of men, women and children killed had first to be selected, brought together, held in restraint and transported to a place of death. They had to be counted, stripped of possessions, shot and buried. And burial did not end the job, for all of the pitiful possessions taken from the dead had to be salvaged, crated and shipped to the Reich. Finally, books were kept to cover these transactions. Details of all those things had to be recorded and reported. extermination operation, an Einsatz unit rounded up those elements of the population marked for slaughter. This was accomplished by special orders to report and by manhunts. It was followed by concentration of the victims under guard to be transported to a place for execution or at the abbatoir itself. In accomplishing roundups a common deceit was widely practiced: those who were to die were told to report for "resettlement" - hope was held out to those who had none in fact, and who awaited certain death. The methods of extermination varied little. Mass shooting, the commonest means of slaughter, was described with classis simplicity by Herman Graebe, a German civilian, before the International Military Tribunal.

Graebe was in charge of a building firm in the Ukraine. May I read from his statement:

"I walked around the mound, and found myself confronted by a tremendous grave.

People were closely wedged together and heads.

Some of the people shot were still moving. Some were were still alive.

The pit was already 2/3 full. I estimated that it contained about 1,000 people.

I looked for the man who did the shooting.

He was an SS-man, who sat at the adge of the narrow end of the pit, his feet dangling into the pit.

He had a tommy gun on his knees and was smoking a cigarette.

The people, lying there, to the place to which the SS-man directed them.

They lay down in front of the dead or injured people; some caressed those who were still alive and spoke to them in a low voice.

Then I heard a series of shots.

I looked into the pit and saw that on top of the bodies that lay before them.

Blood was running from their necks.

I was surprised that I was not ordered away, The next batch was approaching already.

They went down into the shot.

When I walked back, round the mound I noticed another truck-load of people which had just arrived.

This time it included sick and infirm persons.

An old, very thin woman with while two people held her up.

The woman appeared to be paralyzed.

The naked people carried the woman around the mound. I left with meters away from it.

Some of them were still alive; they looked firm who stood around.

A girl of about 20 spoke to me and asked me to give her clothes, and help her escape.

At that moment we I moved away to my site.

10 minutes later we heard shots from the vicinity of the pit.

The Jews still alive had been ordered to throw the corpses into the pit; - then they had themselves to lie down in this to be shot in the neck."

gasses in enclosed trucks or vans. Here again the victims were induced to inter these death machines by the promise that they would be transported to other areas for re-settlement. As the van left the leading area it was filled with deadly fumes. A few minutes later, when the van reached the disposal point, the corpses were unloaded into prepared excavations which became unmarked mass graves.

These, then, were the usual methods used by the Einsatzgruppen. May I now briefly detail some of their activities. ing what it had been doing. The report gave the total of 121,817 persons killed. The Commanding Officer stated:

"To our surprise it was not easy at first to set in motion an extensive pogrom against the Jews.

Klimatis, the leader was noticed from the outside.

During the first pogrom in the consisting of about 60 houses.

During the following nights, approximately 2,300 Jews were made harm, less in a similar way."

Sandberger, arrested all male Jews over 16 in its area and with the exception of doctors and the Counsel of Elders, they were all executed. The defendant Strauch commanded Einsatzkommando 2. Six months after they began operations, they reported a total of 33,970 executions. The Commissioner General of White Ruthenia had the following to say :

"During detailed consultations with the SSBrigadefuehrer Zenner Dr. Juris Strauch, we found that we had liquidated approximately 55,000 Jews in White Ruthenia during the last 10 weeks.

In the endangering the allocation of labor in any way."

The proof will show, we believe, that this proportion of only 2% of the victims shot for crime is not unusual.

The Defendant Nuemann commanded Einsatzgruppe B. In Minsk this Einsatzgruppe had rounded up all make inhabitants and put them in a civilian prison camp. By careful screening, with the help of the Secret Field Police, it was able to liquidate over a thousand Jews. In Lithuania, a local commando of this Gruppe reported that 500 Jews were being liquidated daily. The report also stated that nearly half a million roubles in cash "which belonged to Jews who were subject to special treatment were appropriated as belonging to the enemies of the Reich and confiscated." By the middle of November 1941, Einsatzgruppe B could report a total of 45, 467 executions. These executions were broken down as follows: In reporting further executions in the civilian prisoners camps in Minsk, Einsatzgruppe B stated that another 733 civilian prisoners were liquidated. The comment made concerning these executions is:

"All the persons executed were absolutely inferior elements with a predominate mixture of Asiatic blood. No responsibility could be assumed if they were left in the occupied zone." B. In one of his affidavits he says:

"I carried out one execution in the course of my duty.

similar number were executed in Minsk ....in both occasions a in front of it and shot with carbines.

About 10 people were dead.

Coups de grace were not necessary."

Eugen Steimle, the defendant, commanded Sonderkommando 7A. In one of his affidavits he tells us that he had been reprimanded for not shooting women and children in his mass executions. His reports will indicate that the reprimand was not without effect. and he tells us:

"During the time I was Kommando Head of the Kommando 7B, Bryansk.

The people to be executed were handed over to my unit by the local Commandant.

The corpses were temporarily buried in the snow and later buried by the army.

The valuables and Six did not vary from this standard pattern. Under the significant heading, "Executive Activities", this group reported in the first days of November.

"As to purely executive matters, approximately 80,000 persons occupation of Kiew; it was carried out exclusively against Jews E Even though approximately 75,000 Jews have been liquidated in this a possible solution of the Jewish problem.

Although we succeeded, all Jews have indeed disappeared.

But when after a certain periof executed Jews."

The killing of 33,000 Jewish inhabitants of Kiev in only two days stands out even among the ghastly records of the Einsatzgruppen. It was the Defendant BLOBEL, who with his unit under the command of the Defendant RASCH, accomplished this massacre which nearly defies human imagination.

Einsatzgruppe C received high praise for its activities from the Commander of the 6th Army High Command, Generalfeldmarschall von REICHENAU. This ruthless, mass killing shamed some of the German witnesses, and the Einsatzgruppe had to report that "Unfortunately it often occurred that the Einsatzkommandos had to suffer more or less hidden reproaches for their consequent stand on the Jewish problem." which was marked for extermination. They were only the most helpless victims. Therefore, Einsatzgruppe C stressed the point of the political sources of danger by reporting:

"Even if an immediate hundred percent exclusion of the Jewry danger.

The Bolshevistic work depends on Jews, Russians, Georgians, Armenians, Poles, Lartians, Ukrainians; the population.

In this situation, the goal of a political police of the Jews."

Einsatzkommando 5 was commanded by the Defendant SCHULZ. Only half a year after this Einsatzkommando had begun its activities, it was able to report a total of 15,000 executions. It was reported that the liquidation of insane Jews represented a particularly heavy mental burden for the members of Schulz's Einsatzkommando, who were in charge of this operation. Nor were the non-Jewish inmates of insane asylums spared. Einsatzkommando 6 killed 800 of them in one asylum alone. The commander of this unit, at a later time, was the Defendant BIBERSTEIN. Before he became leader of Einsatzkommando 6, he was a Protestant Minister - and under his aegis two to three thousand helpless people were murdered, and he himself supervised executions which were carried out by his unit by means of a gas-van.

The Headquarters Staff of Einsatzgruppe D is in the dock. The Commander was the Defendant Ohlendorf and his Deputy was the Defendant Schubert, A sub-unit of Ohlendorf's command, Einsatzkommando 12, was commanded by the Defendant Nosske. A third unit of Einsatzgruppe D, Sonderkommando 10/B, was led by one Persterer who is now deceased. Persterer's Deputy was the Defendant Ruehl.

During the first nine months of Ohlendorf's year in command of Einsatzgruppe D, this force destroyed more than 90,00 human beings. These thousands, killed at an average rate of 340 per day, were variously denominated Jews, gypsies, asiatics, and "undesirables". Between 16 November and 15 December 1941, this Einsatzgruppe killed an average of 700 human beings per day for the whole thirty day period. The intensity of the labors of Einsatzgruppe D is suggested by an April 1942 report upon its work in the Crimea, which states:

"The Crimea is freed of Jews. Only occasionally some small groups are turning up, especially in the northern areas. In cases where single Jews could camouflage themselves by means of forged papers, etc. they will, nevertheless, be recognized sooner or later, as experience has taught." In ordering these massacres Ohlendorf and his men were not without scruples.

"It was," he said, " my wish that these executions be carried out in a manner and fashion which was military and suitably humane under the circumstances. For this reason I personally inspected a number of executions, for example, executions which were carried out by Kommando 11B under the direction of Dr. Werner Braune, executions by Kommando 11A under Sturmbannfuehrer ZAPP in Nikolajew, and a smaller execution by Kommando 10B under the leadership of Alois PERSTERER in Ananjew. For technical reasons ( e.g. because of road conditions) it was not possible to inspect all mass executions. Insofar as I was prevented from Inspections for personal reasons, I ordered members of my staff to represent me at these. I remember that SCHUBERT inspected an execution which was carried out by Kommando 11B under BRAUNE's direction inDecember 1941 in Simferopol.

The only people whom I generally assigned to inspections were, except for SCHUBERT, Willi SEIBERT and Hans GABEL." to Berlin as, "very difficult" because "reports about actions against Jews gradually filtered through from fleeing Jews, Russians, and also from unguarded talks of German soldiers." But these difficulties apparently increased the determination of Einsatzgruppe D. On 18 February it reported to Berlin:

" By the end of February the combing-throughof the occupied Crimea will have beenfinished. Certain important areas in towns in particular are being regularly rechecked. The search for isolated Jews who have up to now avoided being shot by hiding themselves or by giving false personnel data, was continued. From 9 January to 15 February more than 300 Jews were apprehended in Simferopol and executed. By this the number of persons executed in Simferopol increased to almost 10,00 Jews, about 300 more than the number of Jews registered. In the other Kommando areas as well, 100-200 Jews were still disposed of in each instance." The International Military Tribunal reached the conclusion from the evidence then before it that:

"Einsatzgruppen of the Security Police and SD operating behind the lines of the Eastern Front engaged in the wholesale massacre of Jews.... Commissars, Jews, members of the intelligentsia, fanatical communists and even those who were considered incurably sick were classified as 'intolerable', and exterminated......These units were also involved in the widespread murder and ill-treatment of the civilian population of occupied territories. Under the guise of combatting partisan units, units of the SS exterminated Jews and people deemed politically undesirable by the SS, and their reports record the execution of enormous numbers of persons." The brief details I have recounted indicate the character of the proof to come. It is for such crimes as these that we invoke the jurisdiction of this court.

If it please Your Honors, Mr. Ferencz wil conclude the opening statement.

MR. FERENCZ: Jurisdiction of the Court Council Law No. 10, a quadripartite enactment made pursuant to these agreements, authorize the creation of this court. These Military Tribunals, established by the United States as agencies to administer Law 10, are in essence and in fact International Courts. towns, but the rights the defendants violated belong to all men everywhere. These rights may be vindicated by any nation, alone or in concert with others. The nationality of the victim and the time and place of crime do not impugn this jurisdiction. We find this law both in opinions of the Permanent Court of In ternational Justice and the practice of states in military offenses.1 The permanent court has held that states have legal power to determine any criminal matter as long as such legal action is not prohibited by international law.2 Where conduct menaces the universal social order, there can be and has been no prohibition on the right of courts to act. No law has ever prohibited the trial by any court of crimes such as we shall here disclose. crimes. International jurisprudence soon gave States the right to punish these violators regardless of the victim's nationality or the location of the crime. This applied in time of war or peace. It has long been accepted that a belligerent may punish members of enemy forces in its 1. Cowles, Universality of Jurisdiction of War Crimes.

1 The jurisdiction exercised by military courts trying offenses against the laws of war has never been territorial. Sir Hartley Shawcross, the British prosecutor at the International Trial, pointed out that:

"The right of humanitarian intervention on behalf of the rights of man trampled upon by a State in a manner shocking the sense of mankind has long been considered to form part of the law of nations".2 German law professors too declared this in their writings.3 The jurisdictional power of every State extends to the punishment of offenses against the law of nations "by whomsoever and wheresoever committed".4 It is, therefore, wholly fitting for this Court to hear these charges of international crimes and to adjudge them in the name of civilization. committed Crimes against Humanity. The same acts we have declared under Count I as Crimes against Humanity are alleged under Count II as War Crimes, The same acts are, therefore, charged as separate and distinct offenses. In this there is no novelty. An assault punishable in itself may be part of the graver offense of robbery, and it is proper pleading to charge both of the crime. So here the killing of defenseless civilians during a war may be a war crime, but the same killings are part of another crime, a graver one if you will, genocide - or a Crime against Humanity. This is the distinction we make in our pleading. It is real and most significant. To avoid at the outset any possible misconception, let us point out the differences between the two offenses.

By their very nature they can effect only nationals of a belligerent and cannot be committed in time of peace. The Crime against Humanity is not so delimited. It is fundamentally different from the mere war crime in that it embraces systematic violations of fundamental human rights committed at any time against the nationals of any nation. They may occur during peace or in war. The animus or criminal intent is directed against the rights of all men, not merely the right of persons within a war zone. At a recent conference for the unification of penal law, the definition of crimes against humanity was a leading topic. There it was the Counselor of the Vatican who said:

"The essential and inalienable rights of man cannot vary in time and space. They cannot be interpreted and limited by the social conscience of a people or a particular epoch for they are essentially immutable and eternal. Any injury ....done with the intention of extermination, mutilation, or enslavement, against the life, freedom of opinion... the moral or physical integrity of the family.....or the dignity of the human being, by reason of his opinion, his race, caste, family or profession, is a crime against humanity."1 hostilities, may violate basic rights of man and simultaneously transgress the rules of warfare. That is the intrinsic nature of the offenses here charged. To call them war crimes only is to ignore their inspiration and their true character.

Control Council Law No. 10 clearly lists war crimes as offenses constituting violations of the laws and customs of war, and Crimes against Humanity as a distinct offense unrelated to war.2 The London Charter restricted the jurisdiction 1. Report of the VIIIth Conference for the Unification of Penal 2. Art. II, 1(b) and (c) of the International Military Tribunal to Crimes against Humanity connected with Crimes against Peace or War Crimes.

1 This restriction does not appear in the Control Council enactment, which recognizes that Crimes against Humanity are in international law, completely independent of either Crimes against Peace or War Crimes. To deny this independence would make the change devoid of meaning.2 In this case the crimes occurred while Germany was at war.

This is a coincidence of time. The plans for persecution and annihilation were rooted deep in Nazi ideology and would have been effected even had their agressions failed to erup in open conflict. This was shown by their actions in Germany itself, in Austria and in Czechoslovakia. 1. Charter of the IMT, Art. 6(c) 2. The opening statement by the Prosecution in Case No. 5, U.S.

v. Flick et al, pp. 56-73, contains a detailed exposition of which we have charged.

It accuses these defendants of atrocities and offenses, including persecutions on political, racial and religious grounds, murder, extermination, imprisonment and other inhumane acts. Each of these is recognized as a crime by Law No. 10. That murder and extermination violated the criminal laws of all civilized nations even the defendants will not be heard to deny. gave no warning to these accused that their attacks against ethnic, national, religious and political groups infringed the rights of manking? We do not refer to localized outbursts of hatred nor petty discriminations which unfortunately occur in the most civilized of states. When persecutions reach the scale of nationwide campaigns designed to make life intolerable for, or to exterminate large groups of people, law dare not remain silent. We must condemn the motive if we would affect the crime. To condemn an evil and ignore its cause is to invite its repetition. The Control Council simply re-asserted existing law when naming persecutions as an international offense. Germany itself had been their champion. In the Berlin Treaty of 1878, Germany declared that religious differences could not be used to exclude a person from his civil or political rights. Following the first World War, in the German-Polish Convention of 1922, Germany obtained the legal protection for her ethnic minorities throughout Poland. The German Government bound itself under German Law to guarantee the complete protection of the life and liberties of all inhabitants, without discrimination as to their birth, nationality, language, race or religion.1 Germany agreed that these were obligations of international 1. concern1 and were basic laws which could not be superseded by any official, order, or any other law. 2 In the Permanent Court of International Justice Germany obtained recognition of an guarantees by international Law of her minority rights in Poland. 3 Indeed, it was under the guise of protecting the rights of minorities that the Nazis Invaded Czechoslovakia. So mindful of their own rights; no callous of the rights of others. gave ample warning to the world. It should come as no surprise to these defendants that they may now be judged under international law for acts which were always known as crimes. Count Two of our Indictment accused these defendants of violations of the laws and customs of war. The acts particularized in Court One, in addition to constituting Crimes against Humanity also violated rules for the conduct of hostilities and are therefore charged as a distinct offense. The standards of conduct for an occupying Power were established by the Rules of war. They were obligated by international agreements to protect family honor and rights, to respect the person and property of non-combatants as well as their freedom of religion. Prisoners-of-war were to be treated as prescribed by humane codes adopted by all civilized nations. The evidence will disclose how the defendants in this case defied these laws, how unarmed civilians were methodically liquidated, how 1. Ibid - Art. 72 2. Ibid - Chap. I i. 3. Opinion No. 6 and 7. prisoners-of-war were casually Selected for extermination, and it will also show wholesale plunder and destruction devoid of all military necessity. All of these acts are war crimes as recognized in Law No. 10. declared that the SS, the Gestapo, and the SD were criminal organizations. In reaching their decisions the Court made frequent reference to the deeds of the Einsatzgruppen. These activities contributed largely to the Tribunal's finding that membership in the organizations named, constituted crime. We have charged that all of these defendants Were members of one or more of these criminal groups on or after 1 September 1939. Proof of such continuing membership supports conviction under Count Three of our Indictment. There will be little doubt that each one knew the criminal nature of the band he joined. If the law condemns any man for these participations none can bear greater guilt than the defendants in this case.

how the Einsatzgruppen were organized and their ideological foundation in Nazi Germany. We have suggested that the chief significance of this case lies in the protection by law of fundamental human rights and we have described how those rights were systematically violated. We also seek here to hold a handful of men responsible for crimes they alone could not possibly have committed. What are the standards by which we test their guilt? the mass executions committed by their units. In those cases they are clearly responsible under standards known and accepted by all. In other cases it may not be shown that these defendants specifically ordered or directly participated in the crimes of their Kommandos. Here guilt is just as great. of his organization. We cannot believe that any member of a group engaged in murders by the thousands could fail to know its criminal intent. We do not undertake the burden of showing any defendant's foreknowledge of the precise contours of the crime committed. No where on earth does the law impose such a burden. command in an extermination unit. By virtue of his post he had the power to order executions. It is not conceivable that these grave deeds Were independent acts of misguided subordinates. They were bound by law, if not by conscience, to refrain from such activity. That they knew, no doubt, as well as all men know it. They COURT II-A CASE IX will not here deny their knowledge of the Lord's Commandment, well known to all who wear the soldier's uniform.

Laws which impose on him who takes command the duty to prevent, within his power, crimes by these in his control-these laws, declaratory of common morality rest lightly on the honorable soldier. He feels no restraint in the rule that old men, women and children shall be protected as far as military necessity permits. It is this duty legal and moral, to prevent, to mitigate, and to disavow the slaughter of innocents, that all the defendants flagrantly violated. The purpose of the laws of war to protect civilian populations and prisoners would largely be defeated if a commander could with impunity neglect to take reasonable measures for their protection. This was declared by the Supreme Court of the United States 1 and relied upon by Military Tribunal I in the case against German doctors. 2 of these defendants carried with it the power and duty to control their subordinates. This power, coupled with the knowledge of intended crime and the subsequent commission of crime during their time of command imposes clear criminal responsibility. that some word of explanation deges in as if to salve the conscience of the executioner. "So and so many persons were shot." the report will read "because they were too old and infirm to work." "this or that ghetto was liquidated, to prevent an epidemic," "so many children were shot, because they were mentally ill." 1. Application of Yamashita, 66 Supreme Court 340-347 2. Such lean tokens cannot exculpate these wrongs. The Euthanasia doctrine based on a Hitler order scorning pre-existing law spurred the annihilation program. Military Tribunal I, in discussing euthanasia laws stated:

"The Family of Nations is not obligated to give recognition to such legislation when it manifestly gives legality to plain murder and torture of defenseless and powerless human beings of other nations." 1 Law No. 10 specifically declares that certain acts are Crimes against Humanity "whether or not in violation of the internal law of the country where perpetrated."

The defendants here can seek no refuge in the Law. of a superior does not free him from responsibility for crime.

It may be considered in mitigation. This is the law we follow here, and is notinnovation to the men we charge. Even the German Military Code provides that:

"If the execution of a military order in the course of duty violates the criminal law, then the superior officer giving the order will bear the sole responsibility therefore. However, the obeying subordinates will share the punishment of the participant:

(1) If he has exceeded the order given to him or (2) It was within his knowledge that the order of his superior officer concerned an act by which it was intended to commit a civil or military crime or transgression."

Moral teachings have not so decayed that reasonable men could think these wrongs were right. 2 million Jews were murdered by the Einsatzgruppen and other units of the Security Police.1 The defendants in the dock were the cruel executioners, whose terror wrote the blackest page in human history. Death was their tool and life their toy. If these men be immune, then law has lost its meaning and man must live in fear.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now be in recess and reconvene at 11:20 for the purpose of hearing the proof to be presented by the Prosecution.

We will repeat what we said on arraignment day: That the Defense must he prepared to proceed immediately upon the termination of the presentation of proof by the Prosecution.

DR. ASCHENAUER: My name is Aschenauer, Defense Counsel for the Defendant Ohlendorf. already handed to the Tribunal on the 26th of September, 1947. Several Defense Counsel in Case 9 have already informed the Tribunal that the assumption on the part of the Tribunal, that the Defense compared to that working in other trials was better supplied with detail and that therefore no break was necessary, does not correspond to the facts. in which they stated that Prosecution material was available in Room 119, but unfortunately it transpired that nothing was available in that room. It was stated in this letter that Room 119 had been mixed up with 219, but even a search for material in Room 219 wasn't 1. Official Text p. 292.

particularly successful, since that room was locked. Apart from that, even after the first day, fifteen of the thirty volumes which had been made available had been collected again by the Prosecution, and finally it isn't fair to compel the Defense to go through thirty volumes in order to find some evidence. Finally, it is an impossible condition if more than twenty Defense Counsel can look at documents at the rate of only one copy at a time, dealing with various parts of the evidence. ment books have been available does not alter this fact. In every trial so far, it has been the custom for all Defense Counsel to receive Prosecution documents from the Prosecution before the completion of document books. In case IX only twelve Defense Counsel have received a small number before that certain date, and in that connection as we were concerned with incomplete extracts from documents, the Defense is all the more handicapped since the indictment, as was said, concerned purely a relatively short presentation of documents. Nor can the Defense refrain from stating to the Tribunal that only a short time ago some days should be inserted between the completion of the Prosecution's presentation and the Defenses' opening statement; only in this way it is possible to guarantee a correctly conducted defense. would appear necessary that the Defense and the defendants each be given at least one copy of the document book, as was the custom in Case 6, and not, as was the case in this instance, one document book per Defense Counsel and Defendant.

THE PRESIDENT: So far as opening statements pre concerned, there is no reason why you should wait until the presentation of all the Prosecution's evidence before you begin to write your statement. You know what the defendants are charged with. There is no reason why you could not at this very instance, if you were called upon, proceed to write where you now are, and give your opening statement in the Ohlendorf defense. You know what he is charged with: the indictment is very specific, and you now heard the opening statement. Defense counsel are informed now that if they intend to present an opening statement, that they should proceed to write it immediately, and, so far as translations are concerned, if we can have them done in the way that mimeograph copies can be prepared, very well; if not, then the statments may be translated and read from the interpreters's booths. With regard to the documents. I should like to hear from the Prosecution as to just what has been given to the Defense, that we can make a ruling in accordance with the facts.

MR. FRENCZ: May it please, Your Honors: the Defense Counsel made a motion similar to this and submitted it in writing to the Tribunal. At this time the Prosecution replied in writing, and the Tribunal ordered in accordance with it a careful examination of both sides of the case. I do not care to go into the details of exactly which documents were delivered on which days inasmuch as I do not have receipts in my possession at this time. However, I would like to point out that the uniform rules of procedure laid down by all the Tribunals require only that defense counsel be given copies of documents to be introduced twenty-four hours before they are actually introduced. That is all that is required by the rules as laid down by the Tribunal.

THE TRIBUNAL: Does every defense counsel now have translated copies of these documents books on the bench?

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, on Friday afternoon I received signed receipts from the Defense Administrator showing that the Defense Administrator, who represents the defense counsel, had received copies 29 September 1947_M_MSD_7&8_2_Gallagher (Frank) of every single document we intend to use in this entire case.

Those documents are how arrayed in the document book in front of defense counsel. In addition to that which is much more, in a much longer time, than the rule required, we have given to the defense counsel twelve copies of every document we intend to use. These twelve copies were delivered as quickly as our translation branch could prepare them. I gave the translation branch several weeks ago a letter instructing them to give the defense counsel those copies, and they did deliver them, so that by last Friday or last Thursday, they had received advanced copies of ninety percent of our documents and by Friday they had then all which is much more than the rules require? I do not go into examination about what the Prosecution has given to the defense counsel.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Upon the statement by the representative of the Prosecution, I should like to draw attention to it that the Defense Administrator has received this material, that is possible, but he does not in any way represent us. The nine document books from which the Prosecution is reading were handed out to us on Friday evening, but it is out of the question that if the Prosecution is to read from them; that thereafter immediately after the opening statement one is able to represent one's client with regard to every individual document. The time for preparation is much too short.

THE PRESIDENT: Defense counsel must not believe that there is any intention on the part of the Prosecution, and certainly not on the part of the Tribunal to "ham-string" them in their adequate and complete presentationof the defdnse. What we want to avoid is unnecessary delay, and very often you approach a problem with the defeatest attitude, that you must have much more time than the situation really requires, for instance, with regard to witnesses. Now you have stated that the mail is slow, and much time be required for correspondance, and we can certainly understand that but there is no reason why with the immediate dispatch of correspondance for the purpose of obtaining witnesses who, enough witnesses can't be ready to proceed with the defense. After 29 September 1947_M_MSD_7&8_3_Gallagher (Frank) all, we have a great number of defendants, so that the one individual defendant need not wait until his case actually arrives before he begins to prepare his defense, he should begin immediately, I mena today, now.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Now may I bring the attention of the Tribunal that it is written the task of an adequate Defense to see that every defendant should be given the privilege to present his case in one piece, it is an impossibility for defense counsel to deal with his defense piece-meal;(one sentence missing because change of film.)

THE PRESIDENT: Do you now have copies of these defense books in German?

DR. ASCHENAUER: These document books have been handed over in nine volumes, and they are avilable, yes, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, very well. The Prosecution will immediately proceed to introduce these in the record, and they then become proof, and subject to refutation. You will have as you now indicated you do have now the translation, and you will have amply time to read them and prepare your defense. Now with regard to the opening statements, I do not assume that you have any intention of making opining statements. Certainly they should not be unnecessarily long statements. It would appear to us that no opening statment for the defense should be longer than thirty minutes in duration. As there any one who feels they should have more time than that? It does not seem to me it would he necessary.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I believe that so far as I am concerned, half an hour will be enough. I am at least speaking so much now for the defendant than on behalf of the Defense. I am coming to the question of opening statements, it seems to me that the Prosecution today has touched upon a number of legal questions, which so far have never been mentioned before a Tribunal, with so much emphasis, and it seems necessary to me, therefore, that this speech be given to us as quickly as possible in the German language. Might I remind you, Mr. President, that in the Pohl case, President Toms took care that it was given to 29 September 1947_M_MSD_7&8_4_Gallagher (Frank) us immediately in the German language; if you look at these document books, have to come to the assumtpion that we must make our opening statements rather quickly.

We therefore should have to have this opening speech rather quickly, for this Tribunal, being legally trained, would no doubt agree with me, that the legal concepts can not be examined by hearing them, but exact reading is essential.

THE PRESIDENT: You need not labor on that point, I agree with you entirely. You should have a copy of this opening statement quickly. Mr. Ferencz, how soon may they have that translation?

MR. FERENCA: Your Honor, the German version of the opening statement is now being mimeographed, and they will certainly be available this afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. BERGOLD: Only when we have got an examined it, will be have the possibility of making a decision regarding the length of time the opening statement will require to be read, and therefore, I beg the Tribunal to reserve a discussion on the length of these opening statements, at least, for today, until we have had the opportunity to examine the opening speech, and then to come to a decision how long we should need to reply to it individually.

THE PRESIDENT: You have concluded the discussion, We want you to have had an opportunity to read the opening statement, counsel. The Tribunal will be in recess for twenty minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom please find your seats.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: May it please your Honors, inasmuch as this case will be based almost entirely upon official German documents, I would like at the outset to outline the procedure to be used for the introduction of these documents and to establish the authenticity of the documents to be presented. as expeditiously as possible and to read in court only those portions of the documents which are particularly significant. Each of your Honors should have before you a manila folder which is marked "Military Tribunal Case No. IX, Prosecution Document Book No. I." On the first page there is an index to the contents of the book. Immediately following this index there is a more detailed description of the documents and the order in which they will be presented. German copies of these document books were presented to the defense counsel three days ago, and advance copies of a large part of the documents were made available to the defense several weeks ago. Some of the documents to be used are lengthy and cover many subjects completely unrelated to the issues at bar. We have extracted for the document books only those portions which we have thought were in any way relevant in this case. Should our judgment have been faulty we shall gladly join defense counsel in correction of it. The proof in this case is quite free from subtlety, and I think we should quarrel little respecting the admitting of documents. have access to the complete document, and it is the complete document which will be offered as an exhibit.

In accordance with the procedure established in other military tribunals and with the permission of the court, the Prosecution will assume that a document is in fact admitted into the record if no objection is raised by the defense counsel at the time that the document is offered in evidence. As a document is offered in evidence the identification number of the document will be mentioned as well as the Prosecution exhibit number. A certified copy of the original document will be handed to the representative of the Secretary-General as the offer is made. These copies become the official exhibits and are subject to inspection by defense counsel at the time of the offer if they so desire. should be noted that they fall into three broad categories: one, affidavits; two, German documents which were processed for use before the International Military Tribunal; and three, German documents which were processed for use before military tribunals such as this one.

The Prosecution offers as Exhibit No. 1 a certificate by the Chief of Counsel for War Crimes showing the authority of certain persons to administer oaths and to attest those affidavits which will be offered in evidence before this Tribunal. The certificate will be found on Page 1 of the Document Book No. I. prepared for use before the International Military Tribunal was established by a certificate of Major Willian Coogan, It was introduced in that trial as United States Exhibit No. 1 and explained how the United States Army captured, assembled and preserved German documents, records and arehives, and how they were catalogued and identified for use in trial. I would now like to offer as Exhibit No. 2 the Coogan certificate.

This supplies substantially the same information as the Coogan certificate. I offer the Niebergall certificate as Prosecution Exhibit No. 3. These reports were called operational situation reports and were prepared in the following manner; The Einsatz units in the field were required to send regular reports to Berlin by mail and by radio describing their activities and giving their locations.

I offer Document NO-2716 as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 4.

DR. KOESSL: Dr. Koessl for the defendant Schubert. the reprint, at least my reprint, has several mistakes in it. I will make a decision after looking over the original.

THE PRESIDENT: How do you now know that there are mistakes in this document if you haven't seen the original?

DR. KOESSL: The mistakes are quite evident, for example, the Reich Chancillory. Already upon the first reading you can see that there are mistakes in it.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose we do this. Suppose we accept the document and then when you nave checked your copy with the original you may come to the podium and indicate what you think are errors and what correction should be made, and they we shall adjust the document accordingly.

DR. KOESSL: Yes, sir. But at the same time I also object against NO-3055. That is the Schubert affidavit of the 24th of February, 1947. It will be submitted later on, but in this volume.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose you make the objection at that time. It might be easier to rule on it then.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honors please, there will be several typographical errors in these documents, as is inevitable when we have work of this caliber. We shall be very glad to correct such errors at any time they are pointed out to us.

DR. GAWLIK: Dr. Gawlik for the Defendant Naumann. defense documents that objections can be raised if there are any mistakes after looking at the original? At the moment we have to immediately compare the originals with the transcripts.

THE PRESIDENT: The door will be open at all times for corrections of any character.

MR. FERENCZ: In Document NO-2716, which is an affidavit of the Defendant Schubert, there is a description of the typical manner in which the Kommando leaders had to send reports to the group headquarters containing information as to the number of Russians and Jews executed, and I quote from Paragraph 7 of his affidavit found on Page 17 of Document Book I, Page 19 of the German copy.

"The Einsatzgruppe reported in two ways to the Reich Security Head Office. Once through radio, then in writing. The radio reports were kept strictly secret and apart from Ohlendorff, his deputy Standartenfuehrer Willi Seibert and the head telegraphist Fritsch, nobody with the exception of the radio personnel was allowed to enter the radio station. This is the reason why only the above mentioned persons had knowledge of the exact contents of these radio reports. The reports were dictated directly to Fritsch by Ohlendorff or Seibert. After the report had been sent off by Fritsch I received it for filing. In cases in which numbers of executions were reported, a space was left open, so that I never knew the total amount of persons killed. The written reports were sent to Berlin by courier. These reports contained exact details and descriptions of the places in which the actions had taken place, the course of the coperations, losses, number of places destroyed and persons killed, arrest of agents, reports on interrogations, reports on the civilian sector, etc." Here the defendant -

DR. GAWLIK: Dr. Gawlik for the Defendants Naumann and Seibert. the Prosecution in every case indicates against which defendant the material is offered and what it wishes to prove by it so that we are not unclear about this.

THE PRESIDENT: What it wishes to prove by a document is certainly superfluous because the document itself, if it means anything, will show what it intends to prove. Now, insofar as identifying the defendant himself is concerned, I should like to hear from the Prosecution in that regard.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, this is another illustration of a case in which the defense counsel have made a motion, received a written reply from the Prosecution and have received a court order and have brought up the same motion again in court. I will only repeat what I said in my reply to their original motion. Most of those documents are reports Which concern many of the defendants. Several of them concern all of the defendants. To stop at each point and recite the roster of the men in the dock would add very little to the case. One portion of cour case is devoted to proving the individual responsibility of each defendant. At that time we will refer back to the documents already received in evidence and point out exactly how each defendant is connected with that document. That is the procedure we intend to follow here and it seems to us to be very clear as to which documents will implicate which defendants.

THE PRESIDENT: That would seem to cover the situation, Dr. Gawlik. If, however, you find later on you are confused as to what defendant is charged with the contents of any particular document, then you may make whatever motionsyou desire to the Tribunal and they will be ruled upon, for it seems go us at this moment that the procedure outlined by the Prosecution is entirely reasonable and will be entirely clarifying to the defense.

MR. FERENCZ: In Document NO-2890, which was just introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 5, the Defendant Ohlendorff tells us in Paragraph 7, found on Page 23 of Document Book I, Page 26 of the German copy, and I quote: "The reports of the Einsatzgruppen went to the Army or Army Groups, to theChief of the SIPO and SD." Your Honor, the SIPO is the security police, "Normally, weekly or bi-weekly reports were sent to the Chief of the SIPO and SD by wireless and written reports were sent to Berlin approximately every month. The Army Groups or Armies were kept currently informed about the security in their area and other current problems. The reports to Berlin went to the Chief of the SIPO and SD in the Reich Main Security Office. After the founding of the Commando-Staff of the Chief of the SIPO and SD in about May 1942, this staff prepared the subsequent reports.

The Commando-Staff consisted basically of Gruppenfuehrer Mueller, Chief of Office IV and Obersturmbannfuehrer Noski, Group Leader in Office IV, to which specialists from Offices III, IV and V were available for coordinating the composition of the reports. Questions which had to do with the personnel of the group and with garrisons, came to Office I. Administrative questions and matters concerning equipment were taken care of by Office II. Information about the spheres of life (SD) went to Office III. The Chief of Office IV received reports on the general security situation, including Jews and communists. Information about the unoccupied Russian areas went to Office VI." book as Prosecution Exhibit 6. This is Page 29 of the German copy. This is an affidavit of an SS leader, Kurt Lindow, who states as follows:

"In October 1941, till about middle of 1942, I first was deputy chief and later on chief of sub-department IV A 1. This sub-department dealt with communism, war crimes and enemy propaganda; moreover it handled the reports of the various Einsatzgruppen until the Headquarter Staff was set up in 1942. The Einsatzgruppen in the East regularly sent their reports to Berlin by wireless or by letter. The reports indicated the various locations of the Gruppen and the most important events during the period under survey. I read most of those reports and passed them on to Inspector Dr. Knobloch of the Criminal Police who made them up into a compilation which at first was published daily under the title 'Operational Situation Reports USSR'. These reports were stencilled and I corrected them; afterwards they were mimeographed and distributed. The originals of the reports which were sent to the Reich Security Main Office were mostly signed by the commander of the Einsatzgruppe or his deputy.

"The reports 'Operational Situation Reports USSR', No.'s 114, 115 118, 121, 122, 128, 138, 141, 142, 144, 159, as shown to me, are photostats of the original reports drawn up by Dr. Knobloch in subdepartment IV A 1 of which I was the chief." evidence. They were a sampling. They were shown to the affiant for the purposes of identification. Lindow continues:

"I recognize them as such by the red bordering discernible on the photostat, by their size, the types and partial bordering. I identify the handwritten initials appearing on the various reports as those of persons employed with the Reich Security Main Office, but considering that six years have elapsed since, I cannot remember the full names of these persons whose handwritten initials appear on the documents. From the contents of the handwritten notes I conclude that these were made by Dr. Knobloch, and moreover I notice that various parts of the abovementioned reports are extracted from the original reports of the Einsatzgruppen to the Reich Security Main Office.

"On the strength of my position as deputy chief and, later on, chief of subdepartment IV A 1, I consider myself a competent witness, able to confirm that the Operational Situation Reports USSR which were published by the chief of the Security Police and the Security Service under file mark IV A 1 were compiled entirely from the original reports of the Einsatzgruppen reaching my sub-department by wireless or by letter." of facts officially reported by the Einsatzgruppen themselves. Einsatzgruppen.

The Defendant Ohlendorff has given us a careful exposition of the formation of the Einsatzgruppen before the Russian campaign and how they were organized. This affidavit is Document NO-2890, found on Page 21 of Document Book No. I, and was received as Prosecution Exhibit 5, Page 23 of the German Document Book. It reads as follows:

"1. The Einsatzgruppen for the Eastern Campaign (Russia 1941) began as a result of an agreement between the Chief of the Security Police and Security Service on the one hand, and the Chiefs of the OKW and OKH on the other," This, your Honors, refers to the Army High Command, "As I remember it, this agreement was signed by Heydrich and a representative of the OKH. On the basis of this agreement between the chief of the Security Police and Security Service, the OKW and OKH, the Einsatsgruppen were to take over the political security of the front areas, which, up to the time of the Russian campaign, the army units had carried out themselves. The Secret Field Police were to occupy themselves only with security within the groops to which they were assigned.

"2. As far as I remember, this agreement took effect about three weeks before the start of the Russian campaign and was as follows:

"a) The Chief of the SIPO and SD formed his own motorized military units in the form of Einsatzgruppen, which were divided into EinsatzKommandos and Sonderkommandos and were to be assigned in their entirety to the Army Groups or Armies. The Chief of the Einsatzgruppen was the deputy of the Chief of the SIPO and SD, who was assigned to Commander in Chief of the Army Group or Army.

"b) That the Armies or the Army Groups had to supply the Einsatzgruppen with quarters, food, repairs, gasoline and the like. Each Army Group and the 11th Army, the latter as nucleusof another Army Group for the Caucasus, was assigned an Einsa tzgruppe, which in turn was divided into Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos.

"During the Russian campaign there were four Einsatzgruppeh, which bore the identifying letters A, B, C, and D, The area of operation of each Einsatzgruppe was determined by the fact that the Einsatzgruppe was assigned to a certain Army Group or Army, and marched with it. The Einsa tzkommandos or the Sonderkommandos formed from them were assigned from time to time to area designated by the Army Group or Army. The Einsatzkommandos were divided into Sonderkommandos in order to have more small units available for the size of the area of operation.

"The areas of operation of the Einsatzgruppen were as follows: The Einsatzgruppe A operated from the center Latvia, Lithuania, and Esthonia towards the East. The Einsatzgruppe B operated in the direction of Moscow in the area adjoining Einsatzgruppe A to the south. Einsatzgruppe C had the Ukraine except for the part occupied by Einsatzgruppe D. At a later time, when the Einsatzgruppe D advanced towards the Caucasus, Einsatzgruppe C was in charge of the entire Ukraine, in so far asit was not under civil administration.

"Einsatzgruppe D had the Ukraine south of the line Czernowitz, Mogilew-Podolsk, Jampol, Ananjew, Nikolajew, Melitopol, Mariupol, Taganrog, Rostow. This area also included the Crimean peninsula. At a later time Einsatzgruppe D was in charge of the Caucasus area.

"All of the Einsatzgruppen were made up of a number of Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos. For example, Einsatzgruppe D, of which I was chief, had the Sonderkommandos 10A, 10B, 11A, 11B, and Einsatzkommando 12." Tribunal the breakdown of Einsatzgruppen.

I'll continue:

"(5) The personnel strength of the Einsatzgruppen varied. It usually consisted of a total of 500 to 800 men. Einsatzgruppe D belonged to the smaller Einsatzgruppen. The officers and non-commissioned officers of the Kommandos were composed of men on detached service from the State Police, Criminal Police, and in limited numbers, from the Security Service, Aside from these, the troops were largely made up of 'Not dienstverpflichtete' (Compulsory service) of companies of the Waffen-SS and Order Police."

will return to it shortly when we deal with the subject of the function of the Einsatzgruppen which is the topic of that paragraph. 27 of Document Book #1, which is Document NO 4134 and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 7. This is on page 31 of the German book.

DR. ASCHENAUER (Defense Counsel for defendant Ohlendorf): I object against the submission of the Document NO. 4134. This document contains obvious errors. On page 31 of the German document book, Report USSR, No, 42 126, dated 29 October 1941. On page 36 of this copy, German document book, I find the following: "Situation report, USSR, #126, 27th October 1941." On the same page, the following text is to be founds "On daily report #110, 27 October 1941 the communication report remains unchanged." Daily report is evidently confused with situation report. Then 110 and 126 are not correct. It is also completely out of the question that from the 22nd of October to the 27th of October, 16 situation reports or daily reports should be made out and passed on. Here there is a question of mistakes and I therefore ask that this document be refused.

MR. FERENCZ: As I understand the objection, Your Honor, it is to either a poor translation whereby something was translated as "daily report" instead of "Operational report" and there is a number on the report which confuses the defense counsel. In the absence of a showing here of exactly what the defense counsel is talking about, I don't feel competent to comment on the particular objection. However, as a general matter, if there is such an error, I will certainly be glad to correct it. I am certain that there must be several errors in the presentation as we will give it. If there is anything more than purely formal objection, I wish the defense counsel would make that clear.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, is the document, as you read it, at least clear as to intent, and you find objection only to some detail which perhaps later can be straightened out?

DR. ASCHENAUER: No, Your Honor, I have the original in front of me now and here there are no typographical errorsand this is not a matter of typographical errors nor of details. My objection refers to the probative value of the document. First of all, in the operational report 126, there are two different dates given. One date, the 29th of October 1941, on the first page of the document. In one of the further pages, the date 27th of October 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you reading now from the original? That is, the photostat?

DR. ASCHENAUER: No, this is the original document which the prosecution is offering.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that's what I say. You are reading now from the original?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes,

THE PRESIDENT: And the objections, I take it, are to the original document and not to the translation?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, that's right. And if I say "operational report" is confused with "daily report" or "situation report", then it's completely out of the question that the number 110 is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, if you have no objection to the translation itself, then we don't see how your objection to the original can have any value, because the prosecution submits it as it is and if it is defective in any way then, of course, it's to your advantage that it's defective and, at the proper time, you will point that out in argument to the Tribunal when the issue must be decided. So, therefore, it does not go to the authenticity nor to the relevancy of the document. It's up to the prosecution to determine whether they wish to present in evidence a document which may be defective.

DR. BERGOLD (Defense Counsel for defendant Biberstein): I believe my colleague would have to object to something else. It isn't really the actual original, but the photostat of the original and, anmely, that copy which the prosecution is submitting as evidence to the Tribunal. The objection of my colleague could, if I understand him correctly mean that this is something which is not authentic and which perhaps, at the first look at it, might look like a forgery. Therefore, it seems necessary that the prosecution in this case does not submit the photostat, but the originals, so that it can be objected to or not.

THE PRESIDENTS: Well, the photostat is always taken at its face falue unless it can be shown that there was some mechanical difficulty in the actual photographing of the document. Do I understand you to say, Dr. Bergold, that you insist on the presentation of the original report itself, and how would that help you any more than the photograph would?

DR. BERGOLD: No, the photostat isn't always the same. Sometimes one can see, by looking at an original, that, for example, different kinds of paper were used so that the original might be composed of different reports. Or that various typewriter ribbons were used. But you can only see that by looking at the original. The photostat does not show those color differences nor does it show the differences in the quality of paper.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Mr. Ferencz, what have you to say to this?

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, there are two different objections to this document. The first objection made is that document which we have offered as a photostat of the original has, on the first page, the date 29 October 1941, whereas, on one of the pages next to the end, it has the date 27 October 1941. It seems quite immaterial to me whether the date was 29 October or 27 October, We have offered the document for a completely different purpose.

you pointed out, is a matter which will be seen by the Court and which will be given weight in judging the probative value of this particular exhibit. The second objection made, however, is that this photostat copy may not be a true copy of the original. Either because...........

Pardon me, I'd understood it as being an objection that there may have been some error in copying the original. However, I see that defense counsel does not agree with me.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Bergold, just what is your objection? The Tribunal had also understood it that way.

DR. BERGOLD: No, I merely say that the photostat is surely correct, but sometimes one can only judge a doubtful document if one looks at the original and see if the original in itself is a closed document or doesn't consist of several reports. The photostat is, of course, always correct. The photostat is unimpeachable. My request is merely to submit the original. Then we can decide whether we can maintain the objection or not.

MR. FERENCZ: I would like to point out that the certificate which goes with every exhibit certifies that it is a true photostatic copy of the original. In most other cases it has not been necessary to present the original. However, in order that these defendants are convinced that they have been given every opportunity, I have had the originals brought here from Berlin. They are available in my office and defense counsel are welcome, at any time, to compare the photostatic copy with the original and I will be very glad to correct any errors.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. That answers it very completely.

DR. BERGOLD: I thank the prosecution for their graciousness.

MR. FERENCZ: The Operational Situation Report of 29 October 1941, found on page 27 of Document Book #1, which is the report we have just been discussing, shows the breakdown of Einsatzgruppen, Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos, as charged in paragraph 4 of the Indictment, and as shown on the chart now before the Court.

We come now to the purpose or function of the Einsatzgruppen. There was a definite reason why the Nazis considered it important, before the Russian campaign, to organize these special groups. There were special aims in the Nazi program which could not be fulfilled by the army alone and which would require battalions of SS men. Throughout the reports, letters, orders, affidavits, and other documents which will be presented here, the Court will find one persistent and ghastly thing:

Execution of Jews because they were Jews; execution of political functionaries because they were Communists; execution of Gypsies because they were regarded as anti-social; and execution of others because their arrogant murderers considered them inferior. Einsatzgruppen was.... What the function was. Document NO 4762 is a copy of portions of the judgment and is found on page 34 of Document Book #1. Page 39 of the German copy. It reads as follows:

"The murder and ill-treatment of civilian populations reached its height in the treatment of the citizens of the Soviet Union and Poland. Some four weeks before the invasion of Russia began, special task forces of the SIPO and SD, called Einsatz Groups, were formed on the orders of Himmler for the purpose of following the German armies into Russia, combatting partisans and members of Resistance Groups, and exterminating the Jews and communist leaders and other sections of the population. In the beginning, four such Einsa tz Groups were formed, one operating in the Baltic States, one towards Moscow, one towards Kiev, and one operating in the south of Russia."

And further the judgment says:

"The plan for exterminating the Jews was developed shortly after the attack on the Soviet Union. Einsatzgruppen of the Security Police and SD, formed for the purpose of breaking the resistance of the population of the areas lying behind the German armies in the East, were given the duty of exterminating the Jews in those areas."

NO 4762 as Prosecution Exhibit 8: NO. 2620-PS, found on page 35 of Document Book 1, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 9, that - I quote. It's found on page 40 of the German book:

"Himmler stated that an important part of our task consisted of the extermination of Jews - women, men and children - and of Communist functionaries." formed, as stated in paragraph 3 of his affidavit, Document NO. 4145 which appears on page 37 of Document Book #1, and which is now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 10, as follows. Page 43 of the German book.

"During the setting-up of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos during the months of May/June 1941 I was at Dueben. During June, Heydrich, Chief of the Security Police and Sd, and Streckenbach, Head of Office I of the Reich Security Main Office, held lectures on the duties of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos. At this time we were already being instructed about the tasks of exterminating the Jews. It was stated that Eastern Jewry was the intellectual reservoir of Bolshevism and therefore, in the Fuehrer's opinion, must be exterminated. This speech was made to a small, selected audience. Although I cannot remember the individuals present, I assume that many of the Einsatzgruppen chiefs and Einsatz and Sonderkommando chiefs were present. I heard another speech by Heydrich in the Prinz Albrecht Palais in Berlin, in the course of which he again emphasized these points." addressed a letter to the chiefs of all Einsatzgruppen concerning the Jewish question. This letter, which is found on page 40 of Document Book #1, which is Document EC 307-1, is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 11, Page 48 of the German book.

point, I would like to point out the practice of other Tribunals. When there were objections of defense counsel to particular documents, the practice was to permit the prosecution to present its case in chief and then give the defendants every opportunity in their presentation of their case to point out errors in the documents, to emphasize different paragraphs of the document, and to make such corrections as they see fit.

DR. ASCHENAUER (Defense Counsel for defendant Ohlendorf): Your Honor, that was not the usage before other Military Tribunals.

I object to this document. It does not at all refer to the subject of the Indictment before this Tribunal. The document merely refers to the commitment of Einsatzgruppen in Poland. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the Einsatzgruppen in Russia. In Russia, in 1939, there were no German Einsatzgruppen yet.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, this is exactly the type of objection I refer to. When the Court has a document before it, the defense counsel may attack its probative value or the reason it is being Introduced. I would like, however, to continue introducing the document, as planned, without interruption, and the defense may make their objection at any time in the presentation of their case and point out any facts which may impeach the document at that time.

May I proceed?

THE PRESIDENT: Defense counsel certainly may object to the authenticity or relevancy of a document at the time it is being presented, because, if it is obviously irrelevant and obviously not authentic, there is no reason why the Tribunal should take up its time in even considering it. But, as to minor details - not necessarily minor details - but, as to itmes in the document itself which can easily be presented after the prosecution has terminated its case, I would suggest that that be the procedure to be followed. understand that he objects to its relevancy. Is that right, Dr. Aschenauer?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, I'd like to hear you on the relevancy, Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, this document is a letter sent to all the chiefs of Einsatzgruppen of the Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: All of them?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Regardless of locality or geography?

MR. FERENCZ: The heading is: "To the Chiefs of all Einsatzgruppen of the Security Police. Re: The Jewish question in the occupied territory."

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that seems to be sufficiently broad to cover the categories into which the defendants fall.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honor please, I think I can anticipate the objection here. The date is September, 1939, and the question may arise, how is it related to these defendants? We are introducing this document not to show what any of these defendants did, but to emphasize what the Gruppen were doing, what the Chief of the Security Police and SD was doing. The same man who was Chief of the Security Police and SD when these defendants were in command, and the report shows that he discusses the terrible measures planned in the final solution of the Jewish question. It certainly seems relevant to me to see what the man who ordered these defendants to go into combat was talking about shortly before he did so, on a question which is very relevant to this case.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, the objection made by the prosecution can be removed quite easily, be merely referring to a Prosecution Document itself. That is, Exhibit #8. That is the excerpt which was quoted before COURT II-A CASE IX from the judgment of the IMT.

This disproves the opinion that has just been expressed by the prosecutor now,

MR. FERENCZ: That is correct, Your Honor. This is another letter from a different source, further substantiating the point we are making. as such, it seems to me to be very relevant.

THE PRESIDENT: As background material it seems quite relevant to the case. We have introduced in other trials, speeches by Himmler which may not have been made directly to the defendants involved but which certainly indicated the pattern of activity of the SS group involved.

DR. BERGOLD: Yes, I understand the point of view, Your Honor, but this document is of a certain importance for us because Einsatzgruppen are addressed in this document. It is addressed to the Chiefs of all Einsatzgruppen. Therefore, the great possibility exists that the Einsatzgruppen which are under indictment here should be confused with these Einsatzgruppen. The Einsatzgruppen which are indicted here did not yet exist on the 21st of September, 1939. To be sure, they had not even been planned yet and, for that reason, I understand our objection that this must be cleared up because, otherwise, the impression is created from the very beginning that in this document, this type of Einsatzgruppen is referred to.

THE PRESIDENT: Is there anything in the document which would indicate the life of the order? Would it not be continuing until such time as these Einsatzgruppen came into being,and, therefore, would apply to all Einsatzgruppen?

DR. BERGOLD: No, Your Honor. They are quite different types of Einsatzgruppen. They never had anything to do with these here. They had quite a different organization and structure. Therefore, this order could never be applied to these.

DR. GAWLIK (Defense Counsel for Haumann & Seibert): Your Honor, I raise another objection. This concerns the document. It is a simple copy which does not bear any signature whatsoever. It isn't signed at all. This is apparent from the photostat. Therefore, I have to raise an objection to the authenticity of this document. It is only certified for the correctness of the copy "Major, General Staff" and it does not have a handwritten signature or initial.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the document is offered by the prosecution in order to show what Heydrich's thoughts were about the final solution of the Jewish question. That is all. We ask the Court not to consider the document for any other point. That being so, I don't think it worth while to delay at this time to discuss the authenticity of the document. This, as every other document we shall introduce, will bear the certificate that it is a true copy of a captured document. Therefore, it is admissible if half is missing, or if the signature is missing, or whatever condition it may be in. We offer it for that simple point.

THE PRESIDENT: With the limitation that the prosecution has now volunteered, the document will be received and given such probative value as it will merit in the final consideration of the case.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I ask you to reconsider this decision because a document cannot have any probative value which is unsigned. It is completely valueless. This original document reads this way. "Signed: Signature, written with typewriter. A copy has merely been made of it. It's completely out of the ordinary.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, lest this problem continue COURT II-A CASE IX to arise, I think it worth while to take a moment to answer this objection.

signed personally by Heydrich. They copy has typed in "Signed: Signature". Immediately under that: "Certified True Copy, Signed: Major, I.G." This is obviously a copy made by the Germans themselves of a true copy and that is why it is being introduced.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, the situation is not this way. I don't object that Heydrich didn't sign it, but it would have to be signed by whoever made out the certified copy. Namely, the Major in the General Staff, but even this major did not sign it. It says literally "no signature" and literally is typed in. "Signed: Signature" and this was written with typewriter and this is completely unusual. The initials of the major would have to be present or the signature of the major. And this document could have been written in any way and has not the slightest probative value. And my objection isn't that it is not the intials of Heydrich, but there are no initials at all, not even of the person who made up the certified copy. Up above it says "copy" and down below "Signed" with typewriter. There is no such thing.

THE PRESIDENT: If counsel will let the Tribunal have the photostat during the recess period, we will render a decision definitively when we reconvene at 1:50. May I have that now?

We would ordinarily have reconvened at 1:45, but since we have gone five minutes over the period, it will be 1:50. Ten minutes to two.

Now what page is that?

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: The certificate which accompanies Exhibit 11, Document EC-307-1, indicates that the document was found in German archives, records and files captured by Military Forces under the command of the Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Forces. Since the document was found in the German archives, that fact in itself would argue against spuriousness or forgery because since the document would appear to be detrimental or inimical to the interests of those who possessed it, it is scarcely possible that one would hold in his possession a forged document against his own interests. Therefore, under the rules of procedure, the exhibit will be accepted for whatever probative value the Tribunal will give to it eventually in consideration of the entire case.

You may proceed, Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: Thank you. function of the Einsatz Gruppen and had just introduced Document EC-307-1 where Heydrich emphasized that the total measures planned and the final aim were to be kept strictly secret, and that the measures planned required the most thorough preparation both from the technical and economic points of view. The defendant, Ohlendorf, in his affidavit, which was offered this morning as Prosecution Exhibit 5, stated in paragraph 6 which is on page 22 of the English document book and page 25 of the German document book, and I quote:

"The Einsatzgruppen had the following assignments: they were responsible for all political security tasks within the operational area of the army units and of the rear areas insofar as the latter did not fall under the civil administration.

In addition they had the task of clearing the area of Jews, communist officials and agents. The lastnamed task was to be accomplished by killing all racially and politically undesirable elements seized, who were considered dangerous to the security." I and offered as Proseuction Exhibit 12, is a directive issued on 11 November 1942 by the Reich Commissioner for the Eastern Administration. This document made it clear that the carrying out of executions, especially the liquidation of Jews, was the task of the Security Police and the SD. Heydrich on 23 April 1942 sent to Ribbentrop a monthly report on Einsatz Gruppen activities. This is Document NO2662 found on page 48 of Document Book I and is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 13. It is on page 46 of the German document book. Here under the heading of "Executive Operations" the report has two separate sections dealing with the actions taken against Jews and Communists. ment Book I as Prosecution Exhibit 14. This is the infamous Operational Order No. 8 from Heydrich, Chief of the Security Police, issued to all Einsatz Gruppen in July 1941 describing his duties in purging prisoner-of-war camps. I quote:

"I am enclosing directives for the purging of the prisoner camps which contain Soviet Russians."

"I request that the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen try to execute the purge of the transit camps with their own forces as far as possible." segregate civilians and prisoners of war to select those considered politically intolerable.

Enclosure 2 states and I quote:

"Above all it is necessary to find out all important officials of the State and the Party, in particular professional revolutionaries, the officials of the Comintern, all influential party officials of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and its subdivisions in the central committees, the regional and district committees, all People's Commissars and their deputies, all former political commissars in the Red Army, the leading personalities on the central and intermediate level of the State administration, the leading personalities of the economy, the Soviet-Russian intellectuals, all Jews, all persons found to be agitators or fanatical Communists."

Then follows:

"In order to carry out successfully the measures indicated in these instructions the Kommandos will request the camp authorities to surrender the prisoners in question.

"Executions must not be carried out in or near the camp. If the camps are in the Government-General close to the frontier, prisoners are to be moved to former Soviet territory, if possible, for special treatment." things in their Judgment stating:

"Soviet prisoners of war in prisoner-of-war camps in Germany were screened by Einsatzkommandos acting under the directions of the local Gestapo officers. Commissars, Jews, members of the intelligentsia, 'fanatical Communists' and even those who were considered incurably sick were classified as 'intolerable' and exterminated." cution Exhibit 15. It is found on page 64 of the document book, page 82 of the German copy.

already been introduced, swore in an affidavit he made in 1945, Document No. 2542-PS found on page 65 of the Document book and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 16, that Himmler had given orders to execute captured Russian political commissars and Jewish soldiers. In the prisoner-of-war camps on the Eastern front Einsatzkommandos had to segregate the prisoners for candidates for execution. This affidavit was read in part in the Judgment of the International Military Tribunal. Document NO-4763 is a part of the Judgment and I offer it as Prosecution Exhibit 17. It states and I quote from page 67 of the document book, page 86 of the German document book:

"There existed in the prisoner-of-war camps on the Eastern Front small screening teams (Einsatzkommandos), headed by lower ranking members of the Secret Police (Gestapo). These teams were assigned to the camp commanders and had the job to segregate the prisoners of war who were candidates for execution according to the orders that had been given, and to report them to the office of the Secret Police."

A few months after issuing Operational Order No. 8, the Chief of the Security Police sent another important order to the Einsatzkommandos. This is Document NO-3421found on page 68 of the document book and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 18. It is on page 87 of the German book. It states -

DR. ASCHENAUER: Dr. Aschenauer for defendant Ohlendorf. 3421. The Prosecutor has just explained that that was an order to the Einsatzkommandos in the East. Looking at it at first it shows that the Einsatzkommandos in the East were not addressed here. They only meant the Einsatz kommandos which had assembly points in the individual prisoner-of-war camps in the Reich.

This document is not connected with the question raised by the Prosecution. For that reason I ask you to sustain my objection.

THE PRESIDENT: What is your view on this, Mr. Ferencz?

MR. FERENCZ: If it please Your Honor, what the Defense Counsel has pointed out is something which would go to the probative value of the particular document. I do not agree with his interpretation of it. Of course, that is a matter for the Court to decide. As such, we request that the Court accept this document as an exhibit. If as the Defense Counsel contends, it has no value in. this case, the Court will certainly recognize that and can discard the document.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I did not talk about the probative value but only about the distributor. On page 2 of the document it reads:

"To all Main Offices of the State Police, information to the Reichsfuehrer-SS and Chief of the German Police, to the Chief of the SIPO and the SD, to the Chiefs of the Amt I, II, III, IV, V, VI, and VII, to the Departments IV D 2, IV D 3 and IV foreign workers, to the Group Leader IV D, SS-Obersturmbannfuehrer Dr. Weinmann, to all higher SS and Police Leaders, to all Inspectors of the SIPO and the SD, to the Commander of the SIPO and the SD, to the Inspector of the concentration camps, to all Commanders of concentration camps."

That is the distribution list. All these offices were informed about the Order. Only the chiefs of the Einsatzkommandos in the East were not informed about it. For that reason I do not understand what this document has to do with the presentation of the Prosecution. The document is irrelevant. For that reason I ask you not to accept it.

I do not want to mention anything about the contents.

THE PRESIDENT: The mere fact that it is not addressed to the Einsatz Gruppen of itself would not be a valid objection because in the very nature of things in unfolding the history of this operation, we will need to have documents other than those which are addressed directly to the defendants; so that of itself would not be a sufficient objection. If, however, you can show that the contents of the document in no way affected the defendants, then that would be another matter and that would go to the probative value.

DR. ASCHENAUER: In that case, Your Honor, I want to postpone it until I present my evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Judge Speight calls to my attention on page 68 the sentence which reads;

"The surplus copies attached are to be distributed to the leaders of the Einsatzkommandos."

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I also found this sentence but the sentence does not refer to the Einsatzkommandos in the East but to the Einsatzkommandos of the SIPO and SD concerning the concentration camps in the Reich. That is a question we wish to examine when we present out evidence.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, since we are on this point, I would like to point out, too, that in the heading it makes reference to Operational Orders 8 and 9. This is on page 68 of the document now before you. I have just read part of Operational Order 8. I refer the Tribunal back to page 56 of the document book which is Operational Order No. 8. There it gives the distribution list again and since Defense Counsel has seen fit to read the entire list in the second document, I will read the entire distribution list or part of it at least in the first document which is referred to in the second, and it says:

"To the Einsatzgruppe A, Sonderkommando Ia, Sonderkommando Ib, Einsatzkommando II, Einsatzkommando III, Einsatzgruppe B, Sonderkommando VII a, Sonderkommando VII b, Einsatzkommando VIII, Einsatzkommando IX, Einsatzgurppe C, Sonderkommando IV a, Sonderkommando IV b, Einsatzkommando V, Einsatzkommando VI."

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, the document will be accepted and admitted for such probative value as will be determined later.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, sir.

DR. STVEBINGER: Dr. Stvebinger for defendant Werner Braune. this document 5414. At the bottom of page 6 -

THE PRESIDENT: Which one are you referring to? Which one are you referring to?

DR. STVEBINGER: Document No. 3414.

THE PRESIDENT: What page is that in the American document book?

DR. STVEBINGER: I only have the German one in front of me. Page 67 in the German document book.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. What is the objection?

DR. STVEBINGER: This document bears at the bottom of page 6 the stamp "Higher State Police, Secret State Police Office." I wish to point out that no such stamp existed ever. No "Higher State Police" in that sense never esisted.

MR. FERENCZ: May 7 point out, Your Honors, this is completely collateral. The Court has the document before it end can test the authenticity of the document.

THE PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled and the Prosecution will continue.

MR. FERENCZ: Another top secret order deals with the same subject. It is Document NO-3422 found on page 71 of the document book and now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 19. I will read a few extracts:

"Enclosed please find the directives for the purging of the prisoner-of-war camps and transit camps containing Soviet prisoners of war and civilian prisoners in the Rear army area; for your information and observance (see Enclosure 1).

"In particular I order that the operations order number 8 and 14 as well as the supplementary ordinance issued to them be destroyed immediately in case of danger."

Further on page 75 it states;

"The chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen for their zone of operation will submit to me monthly brief reports on the activity of the Sonderkommandos according to the pattern laid down for the activity reports of the Sonderkommandos."

On page 76 it states:

"In agreement with the commanding officers of the rear army area (district commanders for prisoners of war), the operations of the Sonderkommandos have to be regulated in such way that the segregation is effected as unobtrusively as possible and that the liquidations are carried out without delay and at such a distance from transit camps and villages as to insure their not becoming known to the other prisoners of war and to the population." every Kommando represented in the dock. ment book is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 20. This is on page 107 of the German book. This is an operational situation report stating that:

"Directives given by the Reich Main Security Office Liquidation of State officials and of Party officials took place in all mentioned towns of White Russia; Jews were dealt with according to orders in the same manner.

The individual numbers of executions has not yet been established." book and page 109 of the German copy is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 21. This is an Einsatzgruppe report dated the 14th day of January, 1942, and stating on page 83, page 114 of the German book:

"Efforts are being made to purge the Eastern territory of Jews as completely as possible. Shootings were carried out in such a way as to attract as little public attention as possible." impelled to execute those whose political opinion, race or religion differed from their own. Thus, in Document NO3340, German document book page 119 and found on page 86 of Document Book I, which is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 22, Einsatzgruppe A reported that they had to shoot 140 persons near Leningrad, some of them for "membership in the Jewish race."

121 of the German document "book, is now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 23. Here, Einsatzgruppe C reported their principal duty, apart from liquidating the party organizations and cleansing the country of Jews, was combatting partisans. This indicated that the destruction of the Communist party and the Jews was regarded as a routine matter by them. Einsatzgruppe D reported in Document NO-3139, page 123 of the German document book, found on page 91 of the English document book, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 24; that they had solved the first part of the Jewish question when the Jews had been registered and herded into a few streets. The Einsatzgruppen knew in advance what they were going to do. The basic orders were given to them before the invasion of Russia, and in accordance with those instructions the Einsatzgruppen were able to plan their future operations. This is illustrated by the report of 22 August 1941, Document NO-2842, found on page 93 of the document book and page 127 of the German book, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 25. Here the plans of the Einsatzgruppe C were disclosed. The plans reported were to round up the Jews in certain villages, liquidate them, and raze the villages to the ground. When the Einsatzgruppen wrote of their plans to destroy all the Jews, they meant exactly what they said. An old woman or an infant of Jewish blood were subjects fit only to be shot. NO-3644, found on page 100 of the document book, page 134 of the German book, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 26, and I quote:

"Rasch informed us that Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln had been to see him and had transmitted an order by the Reichsfuehrer-SS, implying that all Jews were to be shot. Only in cases where Jews were required for purposes of labor, consideration as to their executions should "be given. Jewish women and children were, if necessary, to be shot as wall in order to prevent acts of revenge."

without foundation, as can he shown in a secret letter sent from the Eastern front on the second of December 1941 by the Inspector of Armaments. This letter, Document 3257-PS, found on page 103 of the Document Book, 136 of the German document book, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 27, was addressed to Gen. Thomas, chief of the Industrial Armament Department in Berlin. The Inspector, who was chiefly disturbed by the annihilation of laborers needed for production, had the following to report, and I quote:

"The attitude of the Jewish population was anxious, obliging from the beginning. They tried to avoid everything that might displease the German administration. That they hated the German administration and army inwardly goes without saying, and cannot be surprising. However, there is no proof that Jewry as a whole, or even to a greater part, was implicated in acts of sabotage. Surely, there were some terrorists or saboteurs among them, just as among the Ukrainians. But it cannot be said that the Jews, as such, represented a danger to the German armed forces..."

DR. ASCHENAUER (Counsel for defendant Ohlendorf): Your Honors, I beg your pardon, but I have to interrupt. I must object to this document. This document 3257 does not bear any signature also nothing can be seen from the document as to its origin. It says the Ukrainian Inspector--therefore, it is nothing but a paper. The document does not show by whom it was sent, or whether it was sent off. Therefore, for that reason I contest the authenticity of this document and ask you not to accept it.

he attitude of the Jewish population was anxious, obliging from the beginning. They tried to avoid everything that might displease the German administration. That they hated the German administration and army inwardly goes without saying and cannot he surprising. However, there is no proof that Jewry as a whole, or even to a greater part, was implicated in acts of sabotage. Surely, there were some terrorists or saboteurs among them--just as among the Ukrainians. But it cannot he said that the Jews, as such, represented a danger to the German armed forces. The output produced by Jews who, of course, were prompted by nothing hut the feeling of fear, was satisfactory to the troops and the German administration."

"The Jewish population remained temporarily unmolested shortly after the fighting. Only weeks, sometimes months later, specially detached formations of the police (Ordnungspolizei) executed a planned shooting of Jews. This action as a rule proceeded from east to west. It was done entirely in public with the use of the Ukrainian militia and unfortunately in many instances also with members of the armed forces taking part voluntarily. The way these actions, which included men and old men, women and children of all ages, were carried out was horrible. The great masses executed make this action more gigantic than any similar measure taken so far in the Soviet Union. So far about 150,000 to 200,000 Jews may have "been executed in the part of the Ukraine belonging to the Reichskommissariat; no consideration was given to the interests of economy."

they wrought. The Germans were characteristically systematic and efficient in their murders. There are no records in history more shameful to mankind than the description of the methods used in the Nazi program of genecide.

I will read further from Ohlendorf's affidavit which was introduced as Prosecution Exhibit Ho. 9, and it is on page 35 of the document book, page 40 of the German copy.

"In the implementation of this extermination program, the Special Commitment Groups (Einsatzgruppen) were subdivided into Special Commitment Detachments (Einsatzkommandos), and the Einsatzkommandos into stil smaller units, the so-called Special Purpose Detachments (Sonderkommandos) and Unit Detachments (Teilkommandos). Usually, the smaller units were led by a member of the SD, the Gestapo or the Criminal Police. The unit selected for this task would enter a village or city and order the prominent Jewish citizens to call together all Jews for the purpose of resettlement. They were requested to hand over their valuables to the leaders of the unit, and shortly before the execution to surrender their outer clothing. The men, women, and children were led to a place of execution, which in most cases was located next to a more deeply excavated anti-tank ditch. Then they were shot--kneeling or standing--and the corpses thrown into the ditch, I never permitted the shooting by individuals in the Group D, but ordered that several of the men should shoot at the same time in order to avoid direct, personal responsibility. The leaders of the unit, or a specially designated persons, however, had to fire the last bullet against those victims which were not dead immediately. 1 learned from conversations with other group leaders that some of them demanded that the victims lie down flat on the ground to be shot through the nape of the neck. I did not approve of these methods." standard procedure for executions. His affidavit, Document NO-3055, offered as Prosecution Exhibit 28, page 143 of the German book, and page 107 of the English book, indicates, too, that the killers were without humanity.

"As commissioner of Ohlendorff I followed his orders. I went to the gypsy quarter of Simferopol and supervised the loading of the persons, who were to be shot, into a truck. I took care that the loading was completed as quickly as possible, and that there were no disturbances and unrest by the native population. Furthermore, I took care that the condemned persons were not beaten while the loading was going on. Since it was my task to supervise the whole execution, I would only stay a short time at each phase of it. The -place which was designated for the shooting of these Russians and Jews was several kilometers outside of Simferopol and about 500 meters off the road in an anti-tank ditch. Among other things, I ascertained that the traffic in that region was stopped by persons designated for this, and was detoured on side roads. When the condemmed persons arrived at the place of execution they were ordered to leave their money, their valuables and papers at a place designated for this. I watched that none of the deposited items were kept by the SS- and Orpo men who were designated for the collection. The depositing of this property by the condemned persons was finished without the use of force. I supervised this phase carefully in order that all the valuables could be handed over to the Einsatzgruppe D for subsequent remittance to Berlin."

"For a short time, when the people who were to be shot were already standing in their positions in the tank ditch, I supervised the actual shooting, which was carried out in strictest conformity with Ohlendorff's order--in a military and humane manner as far as possible. She people were shot with sub-machine guns and rifles. I know that it was of the greatest importance to Ohlendorff to have the persons who were to be shot killed in the most humane and military manner possible, because otherwise, in other methods of killing, the moral strain would have been too great for the execution squad." execution squad, but the only concern for the unfortunate victim was that he be standing in the proper position in the tank ditch before he was shot.

killing which would eliminate some of the work for the executions. He states in paragraph 5 of his affidavit, Document NO-4314, German document book page 145, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit No. 29-I see there is another objection coming. I will continue the quote later.

DR. BERGOLD (Counsel for defendant Biberstein): Your Honors, I wish to make an explanation on principle here. From the document books of the Prosecution I understand that there is only one item of evidence against Biberstein, his own affidavit, which the Prosecution is about to submit. I talked about this case, and I wish to reserve the right to make objections, I cannot specify them exactly now. I wish to state that this decisive interrogation not always conducted according to the regulations on interrogations, as usual in an English court; and secondly that it does not contain the complete interrogation of the defendant--but only part of it--which therefore cannot be understood very well. For that reason I ask to reserve the right to object to this at a later time.

MR. FERENCZ: As I understand it, Dr. Bergold wishes to reserve his right to object to this document at a later time. We have no objection to that,,

THE PRESIDENT: The right is reserved.

MR. FERENCZ: I have just offered this document NO-4314 as Prosecution Exhibit 29. It is found on page 112 of the document book. Here the defendant Biberstein states:

"The persons to be executed had to kneel down on the edge of a grave and members of my Kommandos shot them in the back of the neck with an automatic pistol. The persons thus killed mostly dropped straight into the pit. I had no special expert for those shot in the neck. No physician was present either at this form of execution."

Occasionally the Germans tried to disguise their actions. The Jews were ordered to assemble and ware told that they were going to "be resettled. Thus page 15 of the report of 7 October 1941, which is Document NI-3140, found on page 116 of the document book, page 155 of the German, and offered as Prosecution Exhibit 30, we have this statement:

"The resettlement measure against the Jews was throughout approved by the population. The fact that in reality the Jews were liquidated was hardly known until now." page 159 of the German, and now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 31-

DR. HEIM (Counsel for defendant Blobel): Your Honors, I object to the affidavit of defendant Blobel. I ask that Document No. 3824 only to be permitted under the condition that Mr. Wartenberg, who took this affidavit, may be crossexamined. In this examination I want to show that this affidavit is an excerpt from a longer interrogation of defendant Blobel and that sentences of the affidavit taken out of the context give quite a different meaning than the defendant Blobel gave in the original examination--and wanted to give. In the course of examination it is supposed to be shown that the defendant Blobel, before signing the affidavit, wanted to make necessary corrections. His request was not granted, however, because he would have the opportunity to do this during the next interrogation. This interrogation which he was promised, however, never took place.

MR. FERENCZ: The Prosecution has absolutely no objection to the defendant who made this affidavit taking the stand in his case and explaining to the Court exactly how the affidavit was made, or any corrections he wishes to make at that time.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, that is the inevitable right of every defendant.

MR. FERENCZ: I will now read the affidavit in question:

"During the period of my service as chief of the Sonderkommando IV-A, from the time of its organization in June 1941 until January 1942, I was assigned at various occasions for the execution of Communists, saboteurs, Jews, and other undesirable persons.

I can no longer remember the exact number of the executed persons. According to a superficial estimate, the correctness of which I cannot guarantee, I presume that the number of executions in which the Sonderkommando IV-A took a part lies somewhere between 10,000 and 15,000. I witnessed several mass executions, and in two cases I was ordered to direct the execution. In August or September 1941 an execution took place near Korosten. Seven hundred to 1,000 men were shot, and Dr. Rasch was present at the execution. I had divided my unit into a number of execution squads of thirty men each. First, the subordinated police of the Ukrainian militia, the population and the members of the Sonderkommando seized the people, and mass graves were prepared.

execution, 15 men were led in each case to the brink of the mass grave, where they had to kneel down, their faces turned toward the grave. At that time, clothes and valuables were not yet collected. Later on this was changed."

"1) The execution squad was composed of menof the Sonderkommando 4A, the military and the police. When the men were ready for the execution, Sonderkommando leaders, who were in charge of these execution squads gave the order to shoot since they were kneeling on the brink of the mass grave , and the victims fell , as a rule, at once into the mass grave. I have always used rather large execution squads, since I declined to use men who were specialists for shots in the neck, Each squad shot for about one hour and was then replaced. The persons which still had to be shot were assembled near the place of the execution and were guarded by members of that squad which at that moment did not take part in the execution.

II) I supervised personally the execution which I have described here and I saw to it that no encroachments took place." Not content with merely slaughtering people in open fields, the SS devised a mechanical method for murder.

The defendant Biberstein declares in his affidavit, No. 4314, which was just introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 29, declared on page 113, and this is page 146 of the German book:

"I personally superintended an execution in Rostow, which was performed by means of a gas-truck. The persons destined for death, after their money and valuables ' sometimes the clothes also) had been taken from them, were loaded into the gas-truck which held be tween 50 and 60 people.

The truck was then driven to aplace outside the town where members of my Kommando had already dug a massgrave. I have spasms.

No physician was present at unloading to certify that the people were really dead." the ordinary massacres. In a letter sent to Berlin, Document No. 501 P.S. found on page 134 of the English document boo, 165 of the German book, and offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 32, an SS Lieutenant Becker, who was in charge of the vans complained about these difficulties: vans of Einsatzgruppen C and D had to be overhauled. Even though these vans were camouflaged as house trailers they soon became known to the civilian population as death vans. The Commandoes used their own men to unload the bodies after the gassing for they feared that if prisoners were used for this work, they might escape.

Lt. Becker explained that this work might cause serious psychological and physical injury to the commando men who had to do the unloading. methods used in these executions, I will now read excerpts from an eye-witness account. This account was given before the International Military Tribunal and a large portion of it was read into the judgment as a finding of fact. man, Document NO 2992 PS, and is offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 33. Part of this affidavit was read in the opening statement. I will read another part.

The witness, a german, Hermann Graebe , here states:

the earth mounds . The people who had got off the trucks -men, of an SS-man, who carried a riding or dog whip.

They had to put shoes, top clothing and underclothing.

I saw a heap of shoes of with a whip in his hand.

During the 15 minutes that I stood near the pit I heard no complaint or plea for mercy.

I watched a family about 20 to 24.

An old woman with snow-white hair was holding the it.

The child was cooing with delight. The couple were looking on with tears in their eyes.

The father was holding the hand of a boy of about 10 years old and speaking to him softly; the boy was fighting his tears.

The father pointed toward the sky, stroked his head, and seemed to explain something to him.

At that moment the SS-man at the pit shouted something to his comrade.

The latter earth mound.

Among them was the family, which I have mentioned.

passed close to me, pointed to herself, and said, "23". I walked grave.

People were closely wedged together and lying on top of each other so that only their heads were visible.

Nearly all had blood running over their shoulders from their heads.

Some of the people shot were still moving.

Some were lifting their arms and turning their heads to show that they were still alive.

The pit was already 2/3 full.

I estimated that it already contained about 1000 people."

Mr. Clancy will continue with Document Book 2.

THE PRESIDENT: I think this is an appropriate time to take a recess. The Tribunal will be in recess until 10 minutes past three.

(A recess was taken until 3:10)

DR. LUMMERT for defendant Blume: Your Honor, I have an objection, - a belated objection to raise, against the affidavit of the defendant Blume, Document No. NO 51545, Exhibit No. 10. I have just learned of this during the recess, when I had occasion during the recess to discuss the affidavit with the defendant Blumer. The first document book was submitted on Friday when I was no longer in the building. It was technically impossible to speak to the defendant Blume before this morning, and only now, just during the recess I learned that the defendant, Blume, when he gave the affidavit, was in a spirtitual state of mind, which made it impossible for him to give a valid and good affidavit.

JUDGE MUSMANO: Couusel when your Client takes the stand he will have full opportunity to explain the circumstances under which he gave the affidavit.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, at the moment I would just like to reserve the right to make a formal objection against this affidavit, not against the contents - merely a formal objection, and I would just like to reserve this right at the moment.

JUDGE MUSMANO: The Court will show that you made an objection, and your right to a further objection is reserved to you and to your client.

DR. LUMMERT: I would just like to give this reason. The defendant, Blume,--

JUDGE MUSMANO: It is not necessary to go into the reasons. You will have an adequate opportunity.

DR. LUMMERT: Thank you, you Honor.

DR. HEIM: Dr. Heim for the Defendant Blobel. If Your Honors please, permit me to make the following statement belatedly. On the 11th of August I was allowed to present the Witness Hennige for the Defendant Blobel. Hennige, about two weeks later, was delivered to the Court prison. Repeated requests to the Prosecution to let me examine Hennige as my witness were refused, giving the reason that Hennige, since May, 1947--that is long before the charges were made-was named as a Prosecution witness. The Prosecution informed me that I can speak to the witness Hennige from the 17th of September on. I ask the Court to make a ruling to the effect that the Witness Hennige, who has been granted to me, can be examined by me without the presence of a commissioner, since Hennige is both a Prosecution and a Defense witness. Up to this time I have had only the opportunity to speak to this witness in the presence of a commissioner.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: These motions of defense by Dr. Heim were before the Tribunal, as far as I can remember, about ten days or seven days ago, I have answered these motions on behalf of the Prosecution. I do not think it is necessary that this question be taken up in open court again. The Tribunal has the motions of the defense counsel before it, and the Tribunal has the answers of the Prosecution before it, and the Tribunal will decide on it.

THE PRESIDENT: We will give you a decision on that tomorrow morning.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: The name of the witness is Hennige? I mean the witness in the case.

DR. HEIM: Hennige.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I have a further question to bring up here. On the 17th of August I made a motion to interrogate the witness Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.Kraege who is in prison here, and I made a motion to grant this witness as my witness.

Repeated motions were refused, with the reason that Kraege was being examined by the Prosecution at the time, and that from the first of September on he would be at my disposal. On the 28th of August the Prosecution, without informing the defense, took this witness back to Dachau. My motion to bring this witness back to the Court prison in Nurnberg has not been answered so far. I ask Your Honors to tell the Prosecution to return this witness to the Nurnberg Prison.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, by regretable mistake the witness Kraege was sent out to Dachau as we did not need him any more. But we wrote immediately a letter to the Defense Information Center, giving the information that the witness was sent by mistake out of Dachau and asking Captain Rise, who was in charge of the Defense Information Center, to inform the defense counsel that if he should desire the present of the Witness Kraege we have no objections against that. I do not think that the Prosecution has the duty to get witnesses for the defense here. If the defense counsel makes a normal application for the summons of the witness here, the witness will be brought to Nurnberg.

THE PRESIDENT: We must not make a distinction between Prosecution and defense when it comes to the matter of obtaining a witness. We are seeking to get the truth in this case, and if defense counsel asks the Prosecution for assistance to obtain a witness, the Prosecution must give every aid to the defense. I will make no distinction between witnesses, A witness is supposed to be impartial and neutral and not be for one side or the other. Of course each side has to take the initiative in obtaining the witness. Now, I'm glad that you have made this effort to have this man brought back, and I will appreciate your following it up to see that he does get here so that the defense may have him as their witness.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: I do not know-- Your Honor, I certainly will make every effort. I can recollect just now that the defense Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.counsel, after Kraege was sent out, filed a request, an application, for the summons of the witness Kraege; but if they did so the witness would be brought automatically to Nurnberg.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, this time I wish, with Your Honors' permission, to offer the documents into evidence which are assembled in Document Books II-A, II-B, II-C, and II-D. These documents are offered in support of the allegations contained in paragraphs 6, 7, 8, and 9 of the Indictment.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, so that I may be certain about the numbering, do I understand that from No. I you go to II-A? There is no No. II as such?

MR. GLANCY: No sir, there is not.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: These reports contained herein contain the details of the crimes which are particularized in the paragraphs of the Indictment, which I have previously mentioned. I shall not quote from these documents which will be analyzed and discussed by the Prosecution at a later time when we shall treat the responsibility of the individual defendants here in the dock. I wish at this time to offer these documents into evidence with the understanding that the Prosecution will refer to them in detail at the appropriate time. The operational situation reports assembled in Document Books II-A, II-B, II-C, and II-D give a clear picture of the types of crimes with which the defendants are charged. With the permission of the Tribunal I shall proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

MR. GLANCY: I offer Document L-180 as Prosecution Exhibit 34. This is a Stahlecker report of activities of Einsatzgruppe A up to the 15th of October 194l.

I offer Document NO-2940 as Prosecution Exhibit 35. This is a report dated 6 of July 1941.

I offer Document 2273-PS as Prosecution Exhibit 36. This is a report of Einsatzgruppe A.

I offer NO-2935 as Prosecution Exhibit 37. This is a report dated the 7th of July 1941.

I offer Document NO-3155 as Prosecution Exhibit No. 38. This is a report dated the 12th of October 1941. report dated 1 December 1941.

I offer Document NO-2829--this is No. 2-8-2-9--as Prosecution Exhibit No. 41.

I offer Document NO-3405 as Prosecution Exhibit 42. This is a report dated 16 January 191+2.

I offer Document NO-3257 as Prosecution Exhibit 43. This is a report dated the 5th of January 1941.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Dr. Aschenauer for the Defendant Ohlendorf. Your Honor, may I express my basic misgivings about this type of presentation? I do not know whether in this type of presentation, in which one merely mentions document and exhibit numbers, the basic principle of the proceedings are preserved. It is impossible that during this time the defense has the time to test and examine these documents to see whether any objections should be made against them. It is out of the question to keep up with this type of presentation. It is impossible to raise any objections to the effect, whether this document is admissible or authentic or relevant. It is impossible to examine whether the document is signed correctly, from where it comes, from whom it comes, etc.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know, Dr. Aschenauer, whether you have been counsel in any of the other cases tried in the Palace of Justice here, but we have tried various systems with regard to the introduction of documents, and we have reached the conclusion that this is the most logical and the most expeditious manner of disposing of documents.

When they are read in open court a great deal of time is taken, and much of the contents is lost anyway, and the Tribunal must read the documents anyway, so that we are merely wasting time in reading in open court what the Tribunal must analyze and study with a great deal of detail later on. Now, what the Tribunal can do and what the defense counsel can do: We have just now terminated a case in which this procedure was followed. An exhibit number is given to the document and then the defense counsel at his leisure, as the Tribunal must also do at Court hours, study the documents. You will have ample opportunity to make every objection that the document suggests as to authenticity, as to relevancy, as to possible errors in translation. Any objection which you may make now can be made later. Otherwise, it would be an interminable procedure, and it wouldn't help the Prosecution nor the defense. And I assure you that it is only because we have tried out the other systems that we have now come to accept this system, and I think later you will be satisfied that all your rights will be protected.

MR. GLANCY: The Prosecution wishes to advise defense counsel at this time, Sir, that the reason we have chosen this method is to avoid constant repetition. At a later time when we go into the individual responsibility of the defendants, we shall refer to these again. The defense's wishes to object will not be prevented in the slightest by this procedure.

THE PRESIDENT: (To DR. KOESSL) Do you wish to present something?

DR. KOESSL (For the defendant Schubert): Your Honor, after what I have just heard, I believe it would be even better to submit the document in such a manner that the Prosecution say those documents in Book III-A, for example, will be Exhibits 40 to 60. In this manner, all document books could be submitted within a quarter of an hour, and we could then take up the three days in which we can read these documents and really study them.

THE PRESIDENT: But you seem to overlook the fact that each document must become an exhibit, and must receive an exhibit number, and that is what we are doing now. And if he gives a merely inclusive number for a document book, then you would not have the exhibit number to each document,

DR. KOESSL: I don't mean it that way, your Honor. I see,-for example, here, 23 documents, and according to those, one merely gives those documents the numbers 34 to 57. That is my proposition-

THE PRESIDENT: Well, your proposition is not well taken because there may be some documents he does not want to introduce.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, I will now proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Court No. 2-A, Case No. 9 2-C and 2-D. proceed with the case against those defendants who were members of Einsatzgruppe A. I shall refer first to Document NO-2890 which has been previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit No. 5 and which may be found in Document Book I on page 20.

This is the affidavit of the defendant Ohlendorf. In paragraph 3 there were four Einsatzgruppen formed at the beginning of the Russian campaign and they were denominated Einsatzgruppen A, B, C, and D. Further he states in the same paragraph that the area of operations for which Einsatzgruppe A was responsible was from the center of Latvia, Lithuania and Esthonia towards the East. Book I and which has previously been introduced as Prosecution Exhibit No. 7. document which enumerates the Commando which formed Einsatzgruppe A and their various locutions.

COURT II-A CASE 9 III, one of the four commandos of this Einstazgruppe. Here we see the towns there as well as their location at White Ruthenia, In addition to Latvia, Lithuania. Esthonia, White Ruthenia was also a part of the territory for which Einsatzgruppe A was responsible. Reports that we shall introduce at a later time will also substantiate this. From this part of this document we may also see that Einsatzgruppe A was composed of the four commandos previously mentioned. These four commandos were identified as Sonderkommandos 1A and 1b,and Sonderkommandos 2 and 3. The Mission of the Sonderkommandos of the Einsatzgruppen and the reasons for and the purpose of these units has been clearly explained by evidence previously introduced and therefore, I shall at this time concern myself with the case against the defendant JOST. Document Book 3-A. I offer this as Prosecution Exhibit 98. This is the SS personnel record of the defendant Brigadefuehrer General Heinz Jost. On page 7 we see a curriculum vitae of the defendant General Jost in his own words:

"I was born on 9 July 1904 in Holzhausen, district Kirchheim, the son of the pharmacist Heinrich Jost and his wife Clara, nee Dinges. From 1911 till 1914 I attended the grammar school in Lorsch (Hessen), following I attended the Senior High School (Gymnasium) in Densheim until the Final examination in 1923. Following that I Studied Jurisprudence in Giessen and Munich; passed the first examination in May 1927. My time of preparation as legal clerk I spent at the local court in Lorsch, the district court, and labor court in Darmstadt, the district office in Bensheim and with an attorney in Worms. After passing the COURT II-A CASE 9 bar examination in the fall of 1930, I settled down in March 1931 in Lorsch as attorney.

In March 1933 I became Police Director-in Worms, following that in Giessen until April 1934. After rather long assignment at the Reich Leitung of the DAF. After rather long assignment at the Leitung of the DAF, I was taken into the SD on a full-time basis, and today I hold there the office of an Amtschef. membership number 75,946. I worked in the Party as Local Gruppen Leader, District Propagandist, and Organization Leader, as Speaker, and SA Fuehrer until I was taken over Into the SS." Book 3-A. This will be Prosecution Exhibit 99. This is the affidavit of the defendant Jost. Here he admits he took command of Einsatzgruppe A at the end of March 1942 and remained in command until the end of August, 1943. In his own words, he says, "From the end of March until the end of August or the beginning of September 1942 I was assigned with the execution of the official business of the Einsatzgruppe A and all affairs of the commander for the East-land, Ostland, During this time I took over the office of the Einsatzgruppe A." Einsatzgruppe A Just was also know by the title of "BdS Ostland". This denomination, I wish to add, involved no change of function of the defendant Jost.

COURT II-A CASE 9 also commander-in-chief of the Security Police and SD in East land (BdS Ostland). Headquarters for the Einsatzgruppe A was located in KRASNOCWARDEISK, whilst headquarters for the commander-in-chief-for the Security Police and SD East land was located in RIGA. On the whole the duties of a commander-in-chief of the Security Police and SD were the same as those of a chief of an Einsatzgruppe, and the duties of a commander of the Security Police and DS (KdS) the same as those of a chief of a Sonderkommando or Einsatzkommando respectively, The difference in these names can be explained by the fact that a commander-in-chief or a commander of the Security Police and SD was subject to civilian administration and received his orders from the higher SS and Police Leader or SS and Police Leader respectively, whilst the Einsatzgruppen and Kommandos received their orders from the Chief of the Security Police and SD on the one hand, or from locally superior Wehrmacht offices on the other hand, After this district had been declared an area of civilian administration all Einsatz units were changed into units of the commander-in-chief or commander of the Security police and SD. There was no basic change of duties." which I introduce as Prosecution Exhibit 100, found on page 66 of Document Book 3-A, page 92 of the German Document Book. Here we see under the heading of rather next to Einsatzgruppe A that Jost was designated as the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe A and that his subordinate commander had the title of KdS. We see from these documents that the only difference that existed was that from the change of command, in either case directives were funneled through COURT II-A CASE 9 Jost who issued orders to a subordinate.

From Document NO-3256 we also see that the defendant Sandberger was the KdS in Esthonia. Lange, whose present whereabouts is unknown, was the KdS in Latvia, the defendant Strauch was the KdS in white Ruthenia and that Jaeger, who is also presently at large, was the KdS in Lithunania. At this time the area was under the brilliant administration of subordinates of the defendant Jost, as the BdS Ostland and commander of Einsatzgruppe A. which has been previously described and Jost participated in the furtherance of the static plans for the extermination or liquidation of Russian Jews. Reports which I shall introduce, were phoned and dispatched by the defendant Jost, as will be seen later. In support of this I offer Document USSR-41 as Prosecution Exhibit 101. It may be found on page 3 of Document Book 3-A.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, when you are referring to a document please give us first the document book; then the page. When you give us the page number then we don't know which book is being referred to.

MR. GLANCY: I will follow that, sir, thank you. In the German copy it's page 5. This is the findings of the Russian Extra-ordinary State Commission for the Investigation of War Crimes. Here are reported letters-excerpts of letters-by SS-Sturmbamufuehrer Kirchstein. It emanates from the office of the Chief of the Security Police and SD. It's marked as will be noted "secret." In one of those letters dated 28 May 1942 it is reported that on 14 April 1943, 243 patients of a mental hospital died. The finding of the Commission certifying to the fact that these patients were murdered by the forces of the Security COURT II-A CASE 9 Police and SD.

These forces were under the command of the defendant Jost. Book 2-A on page 133. This was previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 56. This is the Operational Situation port of the Einsatzgruppe No. 195 dated 24 April 1942. I wish to call the attention of the Tribunal there's a typographical error in my copy of the document, it's dated here 24 April 1947. I can assure the Tribunal that's merely a typographical error. The original is 1942. Under the heading or "Einsatzgruppe A", location KRASNOVADAI it's reported:

"Within the period of the report a total of 1272 persons were executed, 983 Of them Jews who had infectious diseases or were so old and infirm that they could not be any more used for work, 71 gypsies, 204 communists and 14 more Jews who had been guilty of different offenses and crimes." It's interesting to note that in addition to those murders for no reason other than that they were part of a group of these unfortunates, that it was the basic mission of the Einsatzgruppen that they had to be exterminated. Thats clearly shown by stating that others whom they murdered were guilty of various misdeeds and crimes. 128 of Document Book 2-A also introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 55. This is the Operational Situation Report No. 193, dated 17 April 1942, under the heading "Lithuania" which as has been shown was under the command of the defendant Jost, we see that it is reported:

"In Olita 22 people were shot on 7 April 1912 because or Communist activities and connections with partisan groups. Russian stick grenades and explosives were found COURT II-A CASE 9 on several of the Communists and were secured.

The same day 22 persons, among them 14 Jews, who purportedly had spread communist propaganda very recently, were shot in Kauen." contained in the indictment under Count III I refer again to Document NO-2896, found on page 4 of Document Book 3-A which was introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 98. Here it is seen that the defendant Jost joined the NSDAP on 1 February 1928 and received the party number of 75946. On page 6 it is noted that he joined the SS in July of 1934 with the SS number of 36243. It is noted on page 7 that he was a member of the SD as a Section Chief. Through Periodical promotions he rose to the rank of Brigadier General in the SS. This concludes the prosecution's case in chief against the defendant Heinz Jost.

Noting the time, your Honor, it's ten after four. Does the Tribunal wish that we proceed against the defendant Sandberger or wait until our session tomorrow morning?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we have quite a bit of time we can use in some way.

MR. GLANCY: In the case against the defendant Sandberger I offer Document NO-2891, found on page 73 of Document Book 3-A as Prosecution Exhibit 102. This is the affidavit of the defendant Sandberger. In this document he states that he joined Einsatzgruppe A in June of 1941 at which time the area fell under the control of the civilian administration and Sandberger assumed the duties of KdS in and Pretzsch Elbe. He retained this position until late in 1943. --- --- This is offered to (mintelligible) of the COURT II-A CASE 9 Regeierungsrat Dr. Sandburger at present in Riga.

"I herewith appoint you, effective innediately, commander of the Security Police and the SD for the Generalbezirk Estonia of the Reich, Commissariat Ostland, office in Reval." 31 of Document L-180 which may be found on page 11 of Document Book 2-A and which has been previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 34.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, may I make another suggestion?

MR. GLANCY: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: You give us the references in diametrically reverse order. You give us the smallest order and then higher and higher until we got to the top. We don't know where you are. Give us the Document Book, the page number, then the document number and then the paragraph number.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you, your Honor. I will rectify that.

THE PRESIDENT: I think it will be simpler that way.

MR. GLANCY: This is the infamous report rendered by Stahlecker, predecessor to Jost, as Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe A, under whose command Sandberger was until Stahlecker's death in March, 1942. This report is dated 31 January 1942. It contains a comprehensive report up to 15 October 1941. 9 of the document which is page 19 of the Document Book. I refer to paragraph 3:

"Most of the 4,500 Jews living in Esthonia at the beginning of the Eastern Campaign Tied with the retreating Red Army, about 200 stayed behing. In Reval alone there lived about 1,000 Jews.

"The arrest of all male Jews of over 16 years of age has been nearly finished, With the exception of the doctors and the Elders of the Jews who were appointed by the Special Commandos, they were executed by the Self-Protection Units under the control of the Special Detachment la. Jewesses in Pernau and Reval of the age groups from 16 to 60 who are fit for work were arrested and put to peat-cutting or other labor." in command of Sonderkommando I-A with headquarters in Reval, Esthonia. Besides the execution of these unfortunates referred to, we see that the women did not escape unscathed, but suffered the ignominous fate of slave labor. on page 16, which is page 26 of the Document Book, we see a tabulation of the murders committed by Einsatzgruppe A, under the Heading, "Esthonia," it reports 474 Jews, 684 Communists, getting the total of 1,158 persons who met their deaths under the supervision -- under the command of Defendant Sandberger until October 15, 1941. previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit -

MR. GLANCY: 21 -- I am sorry, Sir, but due to an oversight, the portion which I was going to quote and in which we are interested, has been omitted from this part of the document. If it please the Tribunal, I will reserve and introduce this at a later point.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Very well.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you. In Document Book III-A, page 13, I offer Document NO-3844. This is another affidavit. This will be introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 104.

DR. HEIM (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL): Your Honors, as a result of the method of presentation by the prosecution, it is not possible for me to follow the prosecution, especially because the prosecution does not give the pages in the German Document Book. I also believe that the other defense counsel suffer from the same trouble and we cannot correctly put in the exhibit numbers, I therefore would ask the prosecution to give us the exhibit numbers of those documents submitted in Book III-A and in the future also the pages in the German document book, if possible.

MR. GLANCY: The prosecution apologizes for this oversight and realizes it makes it very difficult for the defense counsel. After hours we will be very pleased to aid the defense in lining up their exhibits.

THE PRESIDENTS Very well, Mr. Glancy. Do you have the page numbers in the German document books at hand, as you proceed?

MR. GLANCY: I can, Sir, with a slight delay -

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I was thinking perhaps for tomorrow, if you would have them for tomorrow, as you go along and then for what has already been done you might assist defense counsel, with one counsel, and he can give it to all the others.

MR. GLANCY: It is my pleasure.

THE PRESIDENT: Any one of you can see Mr. Glancy and he will help you out in getting the correct numbers.

MR. GLANCY: Here we find in this affidavit of the Defendant Sand berger where he states -- It is page 21 of the German -- I will quote:

"I, Martin SANDBERGER, after being duly sworn, declare an oath: Security Service in Reval from summer 1941 until summer 1943, the following facts became known to me:

When in the winter of 1941/1942 Obergruppenfuehrer JEGKELN (Hi-her SS and Plice deader Russia-North) travelled on an official trip through PSKOW, he ordered the local office of the Security Police to shoot 400 Esthonian Jews who were in the working camp in, or near PSKOW. At the same time he expressed his indignation about the fact that the Jews had not already been shot previously. This was the reason why the chief of the office did not dare to postpone the execution, and ask me as Commander of the Security Police and the Security Service in Reval about my opinion, but ordered their immediate execution. official trip through PSCHOW. I can no longer remember the name of the chief of the office, but one of the three names mentioned below must be the name of the person who ordered that the order for the shooting be carried out." culpability, these troops in Pleskau -- which is the German - by his own admission performed the executions. The troops in Pleskau were a part of Sandberger's command and he, as commander, is responsible for their actions.

On page 72 of Document Book III-A, we find Document NO-3873. I offer this document as Prosecution Exhibit 105; in the German document book it may be found on page 97. This is an affidavit of the Defendant Sandberger, dated 19 November 1945, where as in other instances he attempts to avoid responsibility for the actions of troops under his command. However, the prosecution presents these remarks for the consideration and judgment of the Tribunal herein he states:

"I, Martin Sandberger, after being duly sworn, declare on oath:

"In my capacity as Commander of the Security Police and the Security Service in Reval from summer 1941 until summer 1943, the following facts became known to me:

"Brigadefuehrer Stahlecker who was at that time Commander-in-chief of the Security Police and of the Security Service in Riga (Russia-North) gave me or my office the following orders:

"July 1941 that the Jews who were at that time in Esthonia should be interned (analogous to the internment of 'hostile foreigners' in the area of operation).

"About September 1941 that these Jews should be shot.

"I can no longer remember whether these orders were given to me orally by Stahlecker, or orally or by telephone by his office IV to the Chief IV of Reval."

"The internment order was carried out by the political police of Esthonia or by the prefects of the Esthonian Police. The shooting order was not carried out by me." their commander, is deemed responsible for their actions. The prosecution has charged under Count III of the indictment that the Defendant Sandberger was a member subsequent to 1 September 1939 of the SS and SD, organizations declared to be criminal by the International Military Tribunal and paragraph I-D of article II of Control Council Law 10. was previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 103. It may be found on page 23 and 24 of the German Book. This document is the SS personal record and shows that he became a member of the NSDAP on the 1st of December 1931.and that he joined the SS on the 11th of May, 1935, with the SS Membership No. 272495. artenfuehrer on the 30th of January, 1945, His personal record further shows that he was assigned as commanding officer to Amt VI of the RSHA by a letter found on page 18 - page 28 of the German Book, signed by Dr. Kaltenbrunner:

"After being relieved of your commission as Commander of the Security Police and the SD, Italy, you will be transferred from Office I to Office VI of the Reich Main Security Office, effective retroactively from 1 December 1943. At this time I charge you with the direction of Group VI-A." Sandberger.

THE PRESIDENT: I think this would be a good point at which to recess for the day. Mr. Ferencz, would you please assign someone to the document book this evening to get the German page numbers so that we can get that just as quickly as the English page numbers for tomorrow?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30 when we will convene in Courtroom No. 2, Room 581 581. The Tribunal will now rise.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 30 September 1947, at 0930 hours.)

30 September 1947_M_MSD_1&2_1_Biosi (Lee) Military Tribunal No. IIA in the matter

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal Ho. II_A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: You may continue with the presentation of the prosecution.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you, your Honor, is here represented by councel before I proceed with the case against the defendant Strauch.

DR. GLICK (for the defendant Strauch): Your Honor, I shall take this opportunity to make the following statement! My client yesterday morning had another epileptic fit. He injured himself considerably during that attack. According to available information at the present, he suffered a knee injury, and a spine injury. He will not be able to attend the proceedings within the near future. Yesterday, also, he could not attend the trial. I therefore ask that, for the time being, my client be excused from participating in these proceedings. After gathering more detailed information from the doctor about the case, I will make a written application to the court - which will determine the further condition, and the further participation of the defendant Strauch in the proceeding, I will then ask for a final decision of the Court.

If I may continue my statement in this connection! I have had no opportunity to go through the documents with my client, the documents were only given to me yesterday, before that I had only received several excerpts which, in the main, did not concern my client.

Therefore, I am not in a position to make any statement concerning any documents which apply to my client. I ask that I "be permitted to reserve this right for a later time.

THE PRESIDED: The record will show that the defendant Edward Strauch is. for the moment, because of his physical condition, unable to be present in Court and he will he excused from attendance in Court. The Tribunal, of course, will be ready at all times to receive any motion which his councel desires to submit in Strauch's behalf. as they pertain to Strauch's counsel of course will have ample opportunity - not only to study the documents, but to reply to them in due course.

MR. GLANCY: Now that it has been ascertained that the defendant Strauch is here represented by counsel, the prosecution is ready to proceed with the case against the defendant Strauch. the German, Document NO-.2966, which I now offer as Prosecution inhibit ICS. This is the SS personnel record of the defendant Obersturmbannfuehrer Lt. Col. Edward Strauch.

At the bottom of page 20, beside the notation "Security Police Service Record" we see the following? "Since 4 November 1941 leader of Einsatzkommando Latvia with the Commander-in-chief of the Security Police and the SD for the Eastern Territories and since February 1942 Commander of the Security Police and the SD in White Ruthenia; since February 1943 assigned to the Deputy of the Reichsfuehrer SS for Anti-.Guerilla Combat as Intelligence Officer (Ic)." Commandant of the Security Police and SD for the General District White Ruthenia, temporarily represented by SS-Sturmbannfuehrer Hofmann. This document refers hack to an earlier period and states, on page 64, at the top of the page, and I quote: "On the 30th November 1941, 10,600 Jews were shot in Riga. The action was led by the Higher SS and Police Leader. One officer and 20 men of Einsatzkommando 2 took part". Strauch, as has been previously shown, was part of Einsatzkommando in Lativa 2 with Headquarters in Riga on the 30th of November 1941. Further, it is reported, "the total to date in the area of Einsatzkommando 2 thus amounts to 33,970." of the German. This is Operational Report No. 155, dated 4 January 1942. It was received in Berlin on the 14th of January 1942, Commander of the Security Police and the Security Service for the General District White Ruthenia.

On page 84 under the heading of White Ruthenia, I quote: "In White Ruthenia the purge is in progress. The number of the Jews in the area handed over to the civil administration is at present approximately 139,000. 33,210 Jews were shot by Einsatzgruppe A since it had taken over the official duties in White Ruthenia."

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, you have said "Einsatzgruppe A", and I presume that is correct. I merely want to have your confirmation on that because it so happens that in the reproduction that very letter does not appear in my copy, nor in the copies of my brother judges,

MR. GLANCY: One moment, please.

It says "A" in the German Book, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: I refer the tribunal to Document Book III-A, page 45 30 September 1947_M_MSD_1&2_4_Biolsi (Lee) of the English, page 63 of the German, Document NO-4533, here offered as Prosecution Exhibit 107.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, just; a moment please. Here that has another exhibit number.

MR. GLANCY: One moment, sir, I will correct it if that is so. show that this has not been previously introduced. What do your records show, sir?

THE PRESIDENT: We have it marked asExhibit 100.

THE SECRETARY GENERAL: That is 3256, Judge.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, -3256? Very well. This is 109.

MR. GLANCY: This is Operational Situation Report No. 186, dated 27 March 1942. Turning to page 67 of the English, 92 of the German, we see that the defendant Strauch is listed as the Commander of the Security Police and the SD for the District General White Ruthenia. On page 70 of the English, page 95 of the German, under the heading of White Ruthenia, we note:

"Further operations carried out against the Jews, as for example in Rakow and Tscherwen (15000 Jews were shot in Tscherwen) create a feeling of. insecurity and even anxiety in the population of White Ruthenia, In the more educated circles it is said that they were not used to such a procedure during the Soviet regime and that it was impossible to estimate the consequences of such measures." of the German:

"In the interest of further general pacification in the security police field within the area of the 18th Army, 102 persons were shot during the time covered by the report (former leading Communist-NKWD operators, saboteurs, partisans)."

130 of the German, we find Document NO-3241, which has been previously introduced as Prosecution Exhibit No. 53. This is Operational Situation Report No, 178, dated 9 March 1942. On page 121 of the English, page 133 of the German, we see in the second paragraph, the fillowing report:

"During an action against the Jews, executed on the 2nd and 3rd of March; 3,412 Jews were executed in Minsk, 302 in Wileijka, and 2,007 in Barenowitschi. Thus altogether 5, 721 Jews were executed." page 17 of the German, we find Document NO-3872 which I offer as prosecution Exhibit 110. This is an affidavit of the defendant Sandberger, executed on the 19th of November 1945. Here we see in paragraph that Sandberger names the defendant Strauch as one of those responsible for persecution of the Jaws in Minsk. The extent to which the defendant Strauch may be held responsible and the zeal with which He participated in the murder of the Jews may be seen by referring to Document Book III-A, page 32 of the English, page in the German Document Book, which I offer as Prosecution Exhibit

111, Document 3028-PS. This is a letter addressed -to the Reich Commissar for White Ruthenia, Gauleiter Lohse, from the Commissar General for White Ruthenia, signed Kube. Here it is stated:

"In every encounter with partisans in White Ruthenia it has been established that in the former Sovies part of the District General, as well as in the former Polish part, the Jews together with the Polish resistance movement in the East and the Red army men of Moscow, are the mainstay of the partisan movement. As a result of this, and in view of the danger to the whole economy, the treatment of the Jews in White Ruthenia is a predominantly political matter which, therefore, should not be solved according to economic, but political angles.

During detailed consultations with the SCBrigadefuehrer Zenner and the extremely capable Chief of the SD, SS-Obersturmbannfuehrer Dr. Strauch, we found that we had liquidated approximately 55,000 Jews in White Ruthenia during the last 10 weeks. In the Minsk-Land area, the Jewry was completely exterminated without endangering the allocation of labor in any way. In the prevailing Polish Lida area, 16,000 Jews, in Solnim 8,000 Jews, etc., were liquidated. The preparations for the liquidation of the Jews in the Glebokie area were completely disrupted by an arbitrary action by the Rear Army Area, which has already been reported to your office. In the Roar Army Area - I was not contacted - 10,000 Jews were liquidated, who were schedule for extermination by us anyway. In the city of Minsk, about 10,000 Jews were liquidated on 23 and 29 July, 6,500 of whom were Russian Jews - mainly old people, women and children the remainder consisted of Jews unfit for work, most of whom had been sent to Minsk from Vienna, Bruenn, Bremen and Berlin in November of the previous year, at the Fuehrer's orders.

"The Sluzk area was also ridded of several thousand Jews, The same applies to Nowogrodek and Wilejka. Radical measures still remain to be -taken for Baranowitschi and Hanzewitschi. In Baranowitschi about 10,000 Jews are still living in the town alone, 9,000 of whom will be liquidated next month. In the town of Minsk, 2,600 Jews from Germany have been left over. Besides, all the 6,000 Jews and Jewesses are still alive, who have been working, during the action, with the units who had employed then previously. Even in the future, the largest Jewish labor force will be in Minsk, since the centralization of armament industries and the burden on the railways lakes this necessary for the time being. In all other areas the number of Jews utilized for labor by the BD and myself will be fixed at 800 at the outside, but at 500 if possible, so that after the completion of the action 8,600 Jews rail remain in Minsk, and approximately 7,600 in the ten remaining territories, including the territory Minsk-Land which is already free from Jews.

The danger that the partisans will, in future, derive any important support from the Jews will then have ceased to exist. I myself and the SD would certainly much prefer that the Jewish population in the District General of White Ruthenia should be eliminated once and for all when the economic requirements of the Wehrmacht have fallen off. For the time being, the necessary requirements of the Wehrmacht, which is main employer of the Jewish population, are still being considered. The clear anti-Jewish attitude of the SD and the difficult task of the units in White Ruthenia to deliver again and again new Jewish transports from the Reich to their destination, both put an undue strain on the physical and spiritual strength of men of the SD and diverts them from their real purpose, which lies in the White Ruthenian region itself.

"I should therefore, be grateful if the Reichs commissar could sec his way to stop further Jewish transports until the partisan threat has finally been overcome. I must make 100% use of the SD against partisans and against the Polish resistance movement, both of which demand the use of the full strength of the SD-units, which are none too strong as it is.

"After the collusion of the anti-Jewish action in Minsk, Dr. Strauch, SS-Sturmbannfuehrer, reported to me tonight, with justifiable wrath, that without any order from the Reichsfuehrer-SS and without notification of the Commissioner, a transport of 1,000 Jews has suddenly arrived from Warsaw for use in this air fleet area, I should like to ask the Reich Commissar, who has already been advised by teletype, in his capacity as the. highest authority. in the Ostland, to stop such transports. The Polish Jew is, exactly like the Russian Jew, ail enemy of all that is German, He represents a politically dangerous factor, the political danger of which exceeds by far his value as a specialized worker. Under no conditions must Wehrmacht agencies of the Army or the Luftwqffe be allowed to import, without the approval of the Reichcommissar, into an area under civil administration, Jews from the Government General who might endanger the entire political work and security of the district General.

I an in full agreement with the Commander of the SD in White Ruthenia, that we ere to liquidate every Jewish transport which has not been ordered or announced by our superior offices, so as to avoid further unrest in White Ruthenia."

SD's plan for genocide, The prosecution has charged in count 3 ox the 1-D of Article 2 of Control Counsel Law No. 10.

Exhibit 106. This is Document NO-2966, the personnel record of the defendant Strauch.

In the second paragraph, we see that the defendant 623392.

He has been a member of the SS since 1 December 1931 with see that Strauch has been a full-time member of the SD since August, 1934.

That is in the fifth paragraph.

"Since August 1934, Strauch has been engaged, on a full-time basis, in a leading position at the SD/Reichsfuhrer SS."

This concludes the prosecution's case, in chief, against the

MR. FERENCZ: May it please your Honors, we will now proceed to in Einsatzgruppe B. Einsatzgruppe B began its operations in June of 1941 and followed the German army with the other Einsatzgruppen.

gruppe C was renamed and redesignated as Einsatzgruppe B. It is this Einsatzgruppe B with which we shall be concerned.

Exhibit 61 in Document Book II-B on page 22, page 23 of the German, document NO-2844 discloses that in addition to the group staff, Einsatzgruppe B consisted of Sonderkommandos 7-A and 7-B. They are loosely termed Vor-kommandos 7-A and 7-B and Einsatzkommandos 8 and 9, as well as the Vorkommando or Advance kommando Moscow. This is shown also on the chart now before the Court. That there was in addition a special kommando for Smolensk will be shown shortly in the affidavit of the defendant Naumann. Gomel, Riansk, Wjasma and neighboring places, as a brief study of the reports will disclose. Only the leaders of the gruppe staff under Kommando 7-A and 7-B and a Vorkommando Moscow are available to us as defendants, and we will therefore concentrate our examination on activities which concerned these men.

Responsibility of the defendant Naumann: The defendant Naumann, your Honors, is the third man in the first row from my left-hand. He is 42 years old, is a Brigadier General in the SS, and is charged with numerous crimes while he was in command of Einsatzgruppe B. His own affidavit, Document NO-4150, is offered in evidence against him, of prosecution Exhibit No. 112. This is found in Document Book III-B on page 1 of the English and German.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, as I indicated yesterday, it would help us considerably if you started with the larger unit first. That is, the book, then the page, then the exhibit number, then the paragraph.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Now which book was that?

MR. FERENCZ: This is Document Book III-B, page 1, Exhibit No. 4, now offered as Exhibit 112. The affidavit explains that as early as 1929, Neumann became a member of the Nazi party.

In 1935, he became a full-time SS leader and a member of the SD as charged in count 3 of the indictment. Naumann also explains that from the end of this year, he, an SS general, was working as a farm hand moving from farm to farm under the assumed name of Rudolf Biegen. Einsatzgruppe B from the end of November, 1941, until February, March, 1943. This, we shall show, is not quite accurate. prosecution Exhibit 113, which is Document 10-2970, This is Naumann's SS personnel record and confirms his membership in the SS and SD. The defendant was awarded the Iron Cross First Class as well as numerous other decorations. It also tells us on page 11 that he became chief of Einsatzgruppe in Poland in 1939 and that He became chief of Einsatzgruppe B in Russia on 1 November 1941 and not at the end of November. in January 1942 and we must therefore accept that as the more accurate date. This is further confirmed by Document in Document Book II-C, page 20, page 23 of the German. That was prosecution Exhibit 72 and is Document NO-2830. Naumann is listed on that report as chief of Einsatzgruppe B and it is dated 12 November 1941. of the German. This is hiw own affidavit, Document NO-4150, and I will reed from paragraph 4:

4.) I know that, while I was its chief, Einsatzgruppe B or, other units under its control, carried out executions.

I am un able to state the total number of executions.

There was no longer Police and the SD and by my predecessor.

I did not revoke the 6.) In my period of service, ghettos no longer exist

7.) I am aware that the administration chiefs collected execution.

The money and valuables were remitted to the Mini stry of Finance."

Naumann's connection with executions is further shown by an affidavit of the defendant Ott. This is in Document Book II-B, page 64, page 57 of the German copy. This is the affidavit of the defendant Ott. Ott swears, and I quote from paragraph 4 -- this is on page 57 of the German copy:

para. 4." During the time I was Kommando head of the Kommando 7b, about 80 to 100 executions were carried out by this Kommando. I remember one execution which took place in the vicinity of BRYANSK. The people to be executed were handed over to my unit by the local commandant. The corpses were temporarily buried in the snow end later buried by the army. The valuables which were collected from these people were sent to Einsatzgruppe B. This was ordered by command of NAUMANN, the head of Einsatzgruppe B, and the same was true for other executions." to show the crimes committed by Einsatzgruppe B during the period from November 1941 to March 1943 when Naumann admits he was in command. I refer to a document in Document Book II-B on page 12, page 10 of the German copy.

This is prosecution Exhibit 59, Document NO-2825. This is a report made two weeks after Naumann took command of Einsatzgruppe B. It describes the murders of thousands of persons of both sexes and of all ages as well as the liquidation of 83 persons for being, and I quote from page 14 of the English, page 13 of the German, "racially inferior elements with an Asiatic strain."

Naumann assumed command but inasmuch as it reported the liquidation by Einsatzgruppe B of more than 45,000 persons, the defendant Naumann must have known the nature and functions of the organization whose command he accepted and held. 31 of the German, This is prosecution Exhibit 62, Document NO-2324, and is the report of 19 December 1941. It describes on pa 30 36 through 39, 36 through 38 of the German copy, fifteen separate special actions in sixteen different localities by Einsatzgruppe B which re sulted in the shooting of a total of 17,202 Jews, both male and female, and including the deliberate killing of 16 Jewish and Russian children in a children's home. Document Book III-3 on page 15 of the English, page 17 of the German, and it is now offered as prosecution Exhibit 114. I quote from page 19 of the English, page 22, last half of the page of the Germany copy. "During a screening of the prisoner of war camp in Witebsk, 207 Jews were arrested. They were shot.

"Further special operations had to be carried out in Sloboda, Polozk, Biskatowo and Bytschicha, because the Jews sabotaged the orders of the German occupation authorities. All together, 266 Jews were shot.

"In Gorodok the Ghetto had to be evacuated because of the danger of an epidemic. 394 Jews were shot.

"During a screening of the prisoner-of-war camp in Wjasma a total of 117 Jews were seized. They were shot." German, we have prosecution Exhibit 66, Document NO-3276. This document reports executions by each of the kommandos of Einsatzgruppe B for the period between 6 and 30 March, 1942, giving a total of thousands of persons killed. In many instances, a reason is given for the killing such as "because of theft or attempted murder or sabotage or spying," but those are very few and the vast majority are listed as killed with a simple explanation "Jews" or "Gypsies" or "Membership in the communist part."

Naumann's personnel record in the operational reports cannot be denied. The thousands of murders we hive described were committed by Einsatzgruppe B while the defendant was its commanding officer. defendant Blume. The defendant Blume is seated in the first row, fourth seat from the right-hand side. He is 41 years old and was an attorney. His affidavit has already been received in evidence in Document Book I as Exhibit 10. It is on page 37 of the English, page 43 of the German in the first document book. There he explains his rise and activities in the SS. In 1933, He jointed the nazi party. In 1934 or 1935, he became a member of the SS where he achieved the rank of colonel. In 1945, he was working for Office 4 of the Reich Security Main Office. the defendant with membership therein in count 3 of the indictment. termination of hostilities concealed his activities with the Security Police and went to work as the servant to a farmer. This summer he was apprehended. been unable to deny. He tells us in the first paragraph that in June of 1941 he was assigned to Dueben where the Einsatzgruppen were organized and until approximately the middle of August he was chief of Sonderkommando 7-A in Einsatzgruppe B. In paragraph 3, he swears that during May or June he heard lectures by Heydrich and Streckenback on the duties of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos. He says in paragraph 3, and I quote:

"At this time, we were already being instructed about the tasks of exterminating the Jews."

And further on he says: "I heard another speech by Heydrich in the Prinz-Albrecht-Palais in Berlin, in the course of which He again emphasized these points." his assignment. We turn again to has affidavitNO-4145 to learn of his activities during the months of terror while he was in command, I read from paragraph 4 of his affidavit, found on page 38 of the first document book, page 45 of the German copy:

"4. As Chief of the Sonderkommando 7 a I carried out one execution in the course of my duty. I remember one occasion on which between 70 and 80 people were executed in Witebsk and another occasion on which A similar number were executed in Minsk. On the latter occasion I only received a directed order from NEBE, Chief of the Einsatzgruppe B, to fine out whether this execution had taken place. I was not present during the whole execution, but convinced myself that it was carried out. In both cases a kind of trench was dug; the persons destined to die were placed front of it and shot with carbines. About 10 people were shot simultaneously by an exectuion force of 30 to 40 men. There was no doctor present at the execution, but the leader of the execution force who was responsible made sure that the people were dead. Coups de grace were not necessary. Neither was there in my unit any specialist in the art of shooting in the neck. I did not take part in any further mass execution.

5. I received all orders regarding executions, direction and duties of Sonderkommando 7 a, which was subordinate, to me in Dueben or in the Prinz-Albrecht-Palais in Berlin. During the campaign I never received any further orders." 7-A in the field was controlled solely by its commanding officer, the defendant.

Tribunal and the defendant some executions he neglected to mention, I offer his personnel record found in Document Book III-B, page 21, page 25 of the German. This is Document NO-3245 and simply corroborates his position in the SS and SD after 1939 as charged in count 3 of the indictment.

Mr. FERENCZ: Your Honor please, the defense counsel is asking to see the document. The document was introduced yesterday as an exhibit, and it is now in the court archives where it may be examined, and the defense counsel may raise objection to this at any time if he so sees fit.

DR. LUMMERT: (for defendant Blume) I would like to reserve the right to raise an objection against this, because it is not clear from where these personnel records originate, or from which agency they come. Furthermore, I believe I remember that the document has not been submitted yet. I am surprised by this.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, was that the document submitted into evidence?

MR. FERENCZ: I beg your pardon, Your Honor, the document was not submitted. This is in Document Book III-B, and the document is now here, and it has been just now handed to me.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you now introduce it?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor. I was about to introduce it as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 115.

THE PRESIDENT: Vary well.

MR. FERENCZ: It is in Document Book III-B, on page 21, and it is simply a corroboration of the defendant's position in the SS and the SD after 1939 as charged in Count III, of the Indictment. page 20 of the German Prosecution's Exhibit No. 116. This is Document NO-4537, and is an operational situation report. It shows that Einsatzkommando 7-A killed an unspecified number of Jewish and Russian Communist Party functionaries on 3 July in Wilna, The numbers are not given, and even if the Einsatzkommando killed only one it was murder.

The report further states that Einsatzkommando 7-A is trying to push forward to Minsk as fast as possible. English, and page one of the German. Prosecution's Exhibit No. 57, Document NO-2937. This is another report where under the Einsatzgruppe B heading the report shows that in Minsk the Einsatzgruppe was screening all male inhabitants, and had executed 1050 Jews, with others being executed daily, including officials, and Asiatics. They further state that in-Wilna, and we saw in the last document that Kommando 7-A was in Wilna on 3 July. Up to 8 July Einsatzkommando had liquidated 321 Jews.

DR. LUMMERT: Dr. Lummert for the defendant Blume. So far as the document last mentioned is concerned, I would like to point out an obvious mistake. In the place just quoted, the German document book III-B, page 37, English Document Book - - - one moment, please, page 31, on top, and I quote: In Wilna the local Einsatzkommando liquidated 321 Jews up to 3 July." Sofar as this local kommando is concerned, they did not mean the Sonderkommando 7-A, which was commanded by the defendant Blume, but they mean Einsatzkommando. 9. This mistake is very evident when you look at the previous document --- may I draw the attention of the Court to document No. 4537, in the German document book, page 33, in the English document book, page 28, in the middle of the page there it says: "Einsatzkommando 9, location Wilna", this location Wilna is mentioned as the local Einsatzkommando in the other document book. The defendant Blume, therefore, has nothing to do with the paragraph in the Document Book NO-2937, and this is very obvious.

MR. FERENCZ: May it please Your Honors, I think the point of defense counsel is a reasonable one to make. However, the last of his statement, "This is very obvious" is not exactly accurate, because on the same page where he pointed it out that Einsatzkommando 9 was in Wilna on 3 July, the very same page 28 in the document book III-B, it also says Einsatzkommando 7-A was in Wilna on the same day. When I referred to the other document, five days later describing the execution in Wilna, it gave the total killed by the Einsatzkommando, without stating which Einsatzkommando it was. I concede it could have been one or the other, but it certainly has probative value to show what the Einsatzkommandos were doing, and that the Einsatzkommando 7-A was in that place five days previously.

DR. LUMMERT: If I may add another thing to this. I don't want to discuss this matter as such. I merely raise this objection, because so far as I think there is an obvious error here, for the local Einsatzkommando could never be a Sonderkommando, because the Sonerkommando had the mission, as is well known, to follow the troops and never had any headquarters.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, your objection and observation are now on record, and they will be available to you when you present your client's case.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes.

MR. FERENCZ: We have been showing, Your Honor, that Einsatzkommando 7-A was in Wilna on 3 July, and was trying to push forward to Minsk as fast as possible. We had referred to Prosecution's Exhibit No. 57, showing that in Minsk, report dated 13 July, thousands of people were executed for being officials, Jews and Asiatics, and, we have just shown that "A" kommando in Wilna had executed hundreds of people five days before the report shows that Sonerkommando Seven was there.

of the German, and offer Document NO 2954-E as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 117. Here under the heading "Einsatzkommando 7-A in reports from Witebsk", the report states and I refer to: "By appointed Jewish Council so far about 3000 Jews registered. Badges for Jews introduced. At present they are being employed with clearing rubble. For determent, 27 Jews, who had not come to work, were publicly shot in the streets. The Ruthenian part of the population has approved of this. Large scale execution of Jews will follow immediately." referred to executions, which he witnesses in Witebsk. I refer now to Document Book III-B, page 37, page 60 of the German, and I offer document NO 2949 as Prosecution Exhibit No. 118. Here under the heading Einsatzgruppe-B the report dated 5 August 1941, describes how various groups were rendered harmless in thirty different named localities, and that Einsatzgruppe executions by 31 July had reached 11,084. of the German. This was Prosecution Exhibit No. 58, Document No-2837. This is a report dated 29 August 1941, describing the numerous killings by Einsatzgruppe-B including on page 10 of the English, page 7 of the German, "In Witebsk also actions against the Jewish intelligentsia were continued," and, "In Minsk 615 more persons were liquidated in the course of the combing-out-action in the civilian prisoner camp there What could the defendant have been doing while all of his comrades were so busy.

the German. This is Document NO-3842, the affidavit of the successor of the defendant Blume. This is the affidavit of the defendant Steimle, and offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 119. Steimle states in the middle of paragraph 2, and I quote: "From talk by members of the Kommandos, I know that SS-Standartenfuehrer Dr. Blume, my predecessor in this Kommando in White Ruthenia, carried out shootings of Jews besides fighting against partisans." And further, Steimle states in the middle of paragraph 3, page 67, of the German copy, page 41 of the English: "SS Standartenfuehrer Dr. Blume: From Office I, Reich Main Security Office, later Commando-in-chief of the Security Police in Greece. Finally with the Waffen-SS, Led the EK 8a from the beginning until September 1941. Carried out shootings of Jews and partisans and partisan warfare on the march through white Ruthenia. Character, weak and bureaucratic."

COURT IIA CASE IX we Lave Document NO. 2844, Prosecutions Exhibit No. 61. This gives us some further indication of what Blume was doing. It reports on page 27, page 29 of the German, that by the 20 August 1941, Sonderkommando 7-A, very loosely termed, Vor-Kommando 7-a, liquidated a total of 996 persons. The defendant did not deny carrying out at least one execution, but he might have us believe that the more than nine-hundred executions, which he forgot to mention in his affidavit, occurred in a few days after he relinquished command of Sonderkommando 7-A in the middle of August, we rely on the judgment of the Tribunal. Steimle. The defendant Steimle is the last man in the second row of the dock on the righthand side. III-B, on page 44, German Book page 71, as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 120. It is Document NO-4459, and is the second affidavit of the defendant Eugen Steimle to be introduced. We see from the affidavit of Steimle, that Eugen Steimle, is thirty-eight years old, and in 1932 he joined the Nazi Party, and four years later he joined the SS where he achieved the rank of Colonel. In September 1936, he was appointed leader of the SD in Stuttgart. Like so many of his friends Steimle hid under an assumed name after the end of the war until he was arrested in October 1945. The defendant's membership in criminal organizations, as charged in Count III of the Indictment, is further confirmed by his SS personnel record. This is in Document Book III-B, on page 46, page 74 of the German, Document NO-3247, offered as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 121. His personnel record also contains a letter of recommendation from the COURT IIA CASE IX Reich Main Security Office, Berlin, and I quote from page 51 of the English, and page 80 of the German in the middle of the page, I quote:

"SS-Obersturmbannfuehrer Steimle has proved his ideological and political dependability already during the time when National Socialism fought for its existence. He is a man of absolute integrity and an SS-leader conscious of his responsibility. His mental capacities are above average, and he has a talent to negotiate skillfully and is showing great assurance. Endowed with a good political instinct and corresponding psychological abilities, he made himself in relatively short time throroughly acquainted with the secret message communication service, and started first of all to solve with great success the problem of the gathering of intelligence information. He is pursuing with greatest tenacity and energy his aim to establish a well functioning secret communication service in Western Europe. During his assignment in the East as leader of a Sonderkommando he has shown excellent qualities in leading and treating the men entrusted to him. Especially during the winter combat 1942/43 the Kommando participated frequently and sucessfully in combat-actions. With the exception of his age, Steimle is meeting the conditions of the SS-order of 15 November 1942. Because of his whole personality, his performance and his official positions, we are asking for his extraordinary promotion to SS-Standartenfuehrer, inspite of the fact that he has not yet reached the minimun age of 36, which is required by the Reichsfuehrer SS for such a promotion." End of quote. of Sonderkommando 7-A from the beginning of September 1941, until the middle of December 1941. Paragraph 3 on page 44, page 72 of the German, goes on to say that the defendant COURT IIA CASE IX Steimle received instructions for executions early in October at a conference with Nebe who was then Chief of Einsatzgruppe B. Nebe told him that Sonderkommando 7-A, when fighting Jews, so far had not been shooting women and children, Nebe insisted, however, that henceforth Sonderkommando 7-A would shoot women and children as well.

The defendant Steimle tells us that he received these instructions from his superior officer. In the next breath he denies he ever passed on this order, He likewise denies in both of his affidavits that his kommando shot any Jews. of the German, NO-3842, where he even denies that workers were sent to Germany while he was in command, He admits that his unit had a gas van or gas chambers as he called it, and he just adds to it that it was never used. He does admit in his second affidavit that he carried out executions, in fact, he says, they numbered between 100 and 250, but the persons executed were partisans, persons suspected of being partisans, and members of the Russian Army, who had refused to surrender. He was quick to point out however, that even in those executions orders never came from him but were already in existence. The defendant Steimle also said in Document Book III-B, page 45 of the English, page 73 of the German, "It can be assumed that a Captain or 1st Lieutenant folt is in Sonderkommando 7-A, had been shooting people but it was on his own initiative. The defendant does not know that Foltis carried out executions of Jews," anyway. All of this makes interesting reading, However, let's now turn to the facts. page 71 of the German, we have Steimle's affidavit NO-4459, which was Prosecution's Exhibit No. 120. It tells us that COURT II CASE IX he was in command of Sonderkommando 7-A until the middle of December 1941.

page 63 of the German, we have prosecutions Exhibit No. 107, Document NO-4533. This report gives the correct listing of the leaders of the kommando, and clearly list Steimle as commander of Sonderkommando 7-A, on 1, February 1942, two months after Steimel swears he was back in Stuttgart. This is further corroborated by the following document in Document Book III-B on page 53 of the English, and on page 82 of the German, I offer Document NO-4784 as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 122. This report again show Steimle as commander of the Sonderkommando 7-A 30 January 1942. In Document Book II-A, on page 104 of the English, page 112 of the German, we have Exhibit No, 51, which was Document NO-3278, and shows Steimle in command on 12th of January. page 42 of the German, we have prosecution's Exhibit No. 64, NO-3143, which is the report of 23 September 1941, and states on page 53 of the English, and page 47 of the German, that executions totaled for Sonderkommando 7-A up to 13 September 1941, were 1011. English, and page 15 or the German, which is Document NO 3156, which is prosecution's Exhibit No. 60.

This report states on page 18, page 17 of the German, "The Sonderkommando 7a also reports of juvenile communists who were liquidated as they had had the intention of blowing up a railway bridge, nearing completion. Explosives had already been supplied and were at hand.

"In Welikije Luki a group of juveniles who had the intention of blowing up a railway bridge was also rendered harmless. The ringleader of the group had persuaded the others to participate." executions by Sonderkommando 7a, up to 28 September 1941 as 1252, an increase of almost 250. man. This is Prosecution Exhibit 63, Document NO-3403, This report dated 26 October 1941 gives the execution total for Sonderkommando 7a as 1344 persons. man. This is Prosecution Exhibit 59, Document NO-2825, here on page 14, page 13 of the German. After a long description of liquidations by Einsatzgruppe B for trivial offenses the report states that'Sonderkommando 7a carried out 173 liquidations during the report period.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, would it be convenient for you to suspend at this point.?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom please take your seats.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, before you begin I should like to make an announcement to defense counsel. Yesterday afternoon two of the attorneys, I presume speaking for all of the defense counsel, came to my chambers and again requested for some time in which to prepare the defense and the opening statements. The Prosecution has proceeded much more rapidly than I originally thought they might so that we will have some time available, and your request is not an unreasonable one. What is reasonable is apparent to the world and what is unreasonable is also apparent to the world, so therefore, we will allow you the balance of the week after the Prosecution terminates its presentation, which, it seems possible, may even happen this afternoon. In fact we will remain in session until the Prosecution has finished today so that, therefore, you will have Wednesday, Thursday and Firday and Saturday, of course, and Sunday also, to make whatever preparations you need to proceed with the case next week. before them, it is necessary that at least eight of the opening statements be ready by Friday afternoon. Now, eight attorneys, and it will be most convenient naturally, if they ware the first eight defendants, if those attorneys could have their speeches ready by Friday afternoon, they will be delivered to Room 106, to Mr. Hodges, who is the head of the translation section. The balance of the opening statements will be ready by Monday noon and will also be submitted to Mr. Hodges in Room 106. not have his opening statement ready by either one of those two dates? I hear no comment. Therefore, the Tribunal will assume that by Friday afternoon, by that we mean no later than four o'clock this Friday, the first eight opening statements will be in Mr. Hodges' hands, and the remainder in his hands by Monday afternoon.

than we will proceed to the taking of evidence on behalf of the defendants.

MR. FERENCZ: Before I proceed, your Honor, I would like to make an additional request of defense counsel. Yesterday the question was raised about having the original documents available to the defense counsel so that they might compare them with the photostatic copies. The Prosecution received permission from the Deputy Military Governor to have the original documents which were used in the case brought here by Colonel Helm, who is the custodian of the documents and the commanding officer of the Berlin Document Center. These documents are now in my office, but they must be returned to Berlin as quickly as possible. Inasmuch as considerable care is exercised with those documents and they must be guarded at all times, I would therefore request the defense counsel come to my office this afternoon if possible and compare the documents with the photostats to assure themselves that all the photostats are true copies and have not been altered in any way so that Colonel Helm may return to Berlin with the documents tomorrow if possible.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, would it be agreeable to Colonel Helm, who is the custodian of these documents, to allow them to remain in Nurnberg for ome more day, that is to say, all of tomorrow? Defense counsel will then be free to make whatever comparisons they desire, and then he could leave on Thursday if that is satisfactory.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honors, I see it is satisfactory to Colonel Helm to leave on Thursday with the documents.

THE PRESIDENT: Then defense counsel will understand they will have all the rest of today and all tomorrow to make those comparisons. The documents will not be available after tomorrow night, and the Tribunal will not after that time hear any complaint about comparisons between photostats and originals.

MR. FERENCZ: To continue, your Honor, we were discussing the responsibility of the defendant Steimle, and I have referred to Document Book II-B, page 12, page 10 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 59, where on page 14 of the English, page 13 of the German, there is a long description of liquidations by Einsatzgruppe B for trivial offenses, and the report states that Sonderkommando 7a carried out 173 liquidations during the report period. The total number of executions by Einsatzgruppe B up to the 14th day of November 1941 is then given as 45,467 and the total for Sonderkommando 7a as 15l7. This is on page 15 of the English, page 14 of the German.

Now by comparing Exhibit No. 64 with Exhibit No. 59, we can see that from the 13th day of September 1941 to the 14th day of November 1941, which is only part of the period during which the defendant Steimle admits he was in command, the total of executions increased from 1011 to 1517 giving an increase of over 500 persons killed in that time. In his affidavit the defendant Steimle conveniently forgot more than half of that.

Book 11-B, page 30, also page 30 of the German. This is Prosecution Exhibit 62, Document NO-284, This is the report of 19 December 1941, describing the general activities of Einsatzgruppe B without breading it down into particular units and describes executions in 14 different localities, resulting in the death of over 17,000 Jewish men, women, and children, but the Defendant, SS Colonel Steimle says he knows nothing about this. This is Prosecution Exhibit 65, Document NO-3160. In this report, dated the 25th of October, 1941, at a time when the Defendant Steimle was admittedly in command, it was reported that Sonderkommando 7-A gave special treatment to 63 communists, functionaries, NKBG agents, and agitators.

The description of the Kommando's activities follows in numerical order and it also states on page 54, page 48 of the German --Sonderkommando 7a and before its description of Sonderkommando 7a -- that -and I quote on page 48 of the German.

"The Jews partly resisted the turning of the village of Belowschtschina into a ghetto for the Jews of Sadrudubs and 272 Jews and Jewesses were liquidated consequently, most of them members of the Communist Party, publicaly dangerous elements and political agitators, amongst them a political commissary who had instigated the Jews in their opposition." parted by a document in Document Bock II-A, page 46, page 45 of the German, This was Prosecution Exhibit 39, Document NO-2656 and was an activity report sent by Heydrich, confirming these facts. The Defendant Steimle firmly denies that Jews were ever shot by his Kommando. I will not take up the time of the court by going into a lengthy examination of Steimle's activities as Commander of Sonderkommando 4a. It is clear that he was held in sufficiently high esteem by his superiors to assign him to that important position from 25 August 1942 to 15 January 1943.

part but in paragraph 4 of his affidavit, Document NO-4459, which is in Document Book III-B, on page 44 of the English, page 71 of the German, and prosecution Exhbit 120, he says that a deputy leader, Major Schmidt, was attached to Colonel Steimle and directed the executions independently. from the Defendant Blobel will be shown in greater detail in the presentation of the case against Blobel. It will be in the light of this total picture of death, despair, and destruction that the credence of Defendant Steimle's statement must be weighed.

We come to the responsibility of the Defendant Ott. Ott is seated fifth from the left in the second row of the dock. His affidavit was introduced previously in Document Book IIb, page 64, page 57 of the German. It is Document NO-2993 and prosecution Exhibit 67. It tells us that he became the commanding officer of Sonderkommando 7b on the 15th of February, 1942, and remained the head of this Kommando until about a year later in January 1943.

Let us turn to the defendant's own words to see what occurred while he was head of Kommando 7b. I quote from paragraph 4 of his affidavit, which is on page 64 of the English, page 57 of Document Book IIb. Quote:

"During the time I was Kommando Head of the Kommando 7b, about 80 to a 100 executions were carried out by this Kommando. I remember one execution which took place in the vicinity of Bryansk. The people to be executed were handed over to my unit by the local commandant. The corpses were temporarily buried in the snow and later buried by the army. The valuables which were collected from these people were sent to Einsatzgruppe B. This was ordered by command of Naumann, the head of Einsatzgruppe B, and the same was true for other executions."

In Document IIIb on page 66, page 124 of the German, we have Ott's SS Personal record. We offer that document, NO-4747, as prosecution Exhibit 123. I will read from page 71, which is a sketch of his life history prepared by Ott himself in 1934.

Ott states:

"In fall 1922 I joined the Party. I was an SA man until I resigned, together with a number of comrades because of the irregular conditions and the discord in the continuously changing administration of the Ortsgruppe at that time. I rejoined the Party on 1 September 1931. Since then I have been permitted to serve my Fuehrer also in the SS. During the period of my temporary withdrawal I remained faithful to Adolf Hitler's ideals. I have been a National Socialist since 1922 and never belonged to any other party. job with the SD of the Reichsfuehrer SS. The defendant's membership in the SS and SD has been charged against him in Count 3 of the indictment.

I refer now to a document in Book II-A. on page 66, page 92 of the German. This is Document NO-3236 and was Prosecution Exhibit 109. This report gives us the location and leaders of the Kommandos as of 27 March 1942 and clearly shows Ott as Chief of Sonderkommando 7b, located in Bryansk with detachment in Orel. This confirms the defendant's location and position in connection with his admis sion of executions in Bryansk; Document NO-3276, which is Prosecution Exhibit 66.

This states on page 62, page 56 of the German, that Sonderkommando 7b gave special treatment to -- which means executed -- 82 persons during the period 6 March to 30 March 1942. I quote:

"19 among them for collaborating with partisans, 22 for engaging in Communist propaganda and for proved membership of the Communist Party, 14 for making incendiary remarks, 27 Jews."

This was one month after the Defendant Ott took command. In this report also, each of the Einsatzgruppe Kommandos of Einsatzgruppe B reported executions totaling thousands of persons killed including thousands of Jews given special treatment. 80 to 100 executions. We have corroborated the fact that he was in command of 7b in Bryansk here he directed one execution. we have in addition presented the official report of another execution by Ott's commands while he was responsible and during which 82 persons were killed, some for membership in the Communist Parties, others merely for being Jews. We accept Defendant Colonel Ott's own statement of 80 to 100 executions committed under his command as adequate explanation of his later activities. is seated sixth from the left in the second row. I refer to Document Book III-B, page 57, page 112 of the German copy, and I offer Document NO-4235 as prosecution Exhibit 124. This is an affidavit of the Defendant SS Major Waldemar Klingelhoefer. In it he tells us that he joined the Nazi Party in 1930 and became a member of the SS in 1933.

DR. ASCHENAUER (Attorney for Defendant OHLENDORF): Your Honors, I am sorry to interrupt, but the exhibit number did not come through,

MR. FERENCZ: Exhibit No. 124. Party since 1930 and his membership in the SS since 1933. In Document Book III-B on page 61, page 116 of the German, we have Klingelhoefer's SS personnel record. This is Document NO-4809 and offered now as Prosecution Exhibit 125. Here the defendant in 1944 sketched his life history and tells us further on page 65 of the English, page 123 on the bottom of the page of the German translation, quote:

"Since 1 December 1934, I have been doing full time duty in the Security Service (SD) of the Reichsfuehrer SS." Count 3 of our indictment. different times a member of one Sonderkommando, the leader of another Kommando, and finally a staff officer of Einsatzgruppe B Headquarters. His affidavit states that he became a member of Sonderkommando 7b when the Einsatzgruppe was formed in Dueben. The major says he was assigned as an interpreter. He remained with Sonderkommando 7b until August 1941 when Nebe, who then commanded Einsatzgruppe B ordered him to replace the Defendant Six. As the leader of Vorkommando Moscow, Klingelhofer tells us that Vorkommando Moscow disbanded for a short period in September 1941 and in October, it was reformed in two parts, one of which was commanded by Klingelhofer until December 1941. On the 20th of December, 1941, Major Klingelhofer was assigned as an interpreter, he says, to the staff of Einsatzgruppe B and he held that position for the next year. doing when he was not serving merely as an interpreter. I read from paragraph 3 of his own statement found in Document Book II-B, on page 58, page 113 of the German. Quote:

"..... 3. While I was assigned by Nebe to the leadership of the Vorkommando Moscow, Nebe ordered me to go from Smolensk to Tatarsk and Mistislawl to get furs for the German troops and to liquidate part of the Jews there. The Jews had already been arrested by order of Hauptsturmfuehrer Egon Noack. The executions proper were carried out by Noack, under my supervision. Those Jews, who were going to be executed, were led to the edge of a pit, which had already been prepared for this purpose, and shot from behind while they were standing there. There was no physician present during these executions. Due to their standing position at the edge of the pit these people mostly fell into the grave after they had been hit by the bullets. In case it was noted that someone in the pit was still alive, he received the coup do grace. Approximately 50 Jews were shot during these two executions."

"..... 4. Approximately one month later, at the end of September or the beginning of October, Nebe ordered me to go again to Tatarsk for the purpose of a Jewish action, because the remaining Jews had left the ghetto in Tatarsk contrary to orders given them. Nebe ordered me to establish an example. When I arrived in Tatarsk I found out that this report was correct."

"Thereupon I had the remaining Jews, approximately 30, shot. I carried out this order to prevent these people from joining the partisans. Although I had orders to shoot women and children too. I did not comply with this part of the order." apparently have escaped the defendant's memory. Let us recall that from August 1941 to September 1941 he admits having commanded all of Vorkommando Moscow and from October to December he admits having commanded part of it. In Document Book II-B, on page 26, page 27 of the German, we have Document NO-2844, as Prosecution Exhibit 61, and I quote from the bottom of page 27 of the German, on page 26 of the English, quote:

"The Vorkommando 'Moskau' was forced to execute another 46 persons, amongst them 38 intellectual Jews who had tried to create unrest and discontent in the newly established Ghetto of Smolensk." German, that the staff of Einsatzgruppe B and the Vorkommando Moscow by the 20th of August had liquidated 144 persons. I refer now to Document Book II-B, page 47 of the English, page 42 of the German. This is Document NO-3143, which was Prosecution Exhibit 64. On page 53 of the English, page 47 of the German, it gives the execution total for Vorkommando Moscow up to 13 September as 312, an increase of more than 150 persons executed since the 20th of August. Document NO-3156, which is Prosecution Exhibit 60. This is an Operational Report of 9 October 1941 and states on page 18 of the English, page 17 of the German and I quote from paragraph 3:

"Operations against functionaries, agents, persons committing sabotage and Jews. ding to reports by the Russian population, tried to create a panic by spreading false runours to the effect that the Bolchevists were supposed to be advancing. They furthermore threatened to take revenge after the return of the Bolchevists. The FKM thereupon sent a Kommando and liquidated 114 Jews." the total liquidation by the Group Staff and Vorkommando Moscow by September 28, 1941, increased to 2,029 persons killed. This represents an increase of about 2,000 since the 20th of August and during the time the Defendant

Klingelhofer was in command. Document NO-3160. This is Prosecution Exhibit 65 and gives us the official report dated October 25, describing the execution of the Jews in Tatarsk.

The defendant told us about this execution in his affidavit. His statement there that contrary to the orders he had received, he did not shoot women and children is refuted by the official report that at least three Jewish women were shot. I quote from page 54 of the English, page 43 of the German:

"The Gruppenstab and the Vorkommando Moscow (Advance units) undertook an action against the Jews in Tatarsk. The Jews had begun to leave the Ghetto on their own authority and to return to their old quarters trying to expel the Russians billeted there in the meantime. The village was combed through systematically and the Jews were herded together on the market square. Some of them had fled and had to be driven out of the nearby woods. As punishment for not following the orders of the German Security Police all male Jews and three women who were in Tatarsk at that time were shot." 45 of the German. This is Prosecution Exhibit 79, Document NO-2656. This is an Activity and Situation Report of the Einsatzgruppen sent by Heydrich to Ribbentrop and confirms exactly on page 50 of the English and page 50 of the German the quotation given.

have Document NO-3403. This is Prosecution Exhibit 63. It reports that the total executions by the Gruppenstab and Vorkommando Moscow as of 2 6October, 1941, increased to 2, 457. There is nothing in the reports to substantiate the defendant's contention that the Vorkommando Moscow was divided into two parts; or, that his authority was at any time limited to only one part of this commando.

Thus, we have seen even the defendant has been unable to deny.

Klingelhoefer in his preter in Sonderkommando VII-B. We will not contest his role there for 22, page 23 of the German.

This is Document No. 2844, and is Prosecution Exhibit 61.

This report, dated 4 September 1941, gives the execution total for Sonderkommando VII-B as 886.

Can the defendant Major Klingelhoefer deny that he was connected with those crimes?

was a member of the Einsatzgruppe B staff. All of the crimes attributed We come now to the responsibility of the Defendant Six.

The Defendant Six is seated in the first row, fifth from the right.

DR. ULMER(Attorney for the Defendant Six): as it admittedly contains, in contrast to the photo copies which are in my hands, questionable remarks. It is not quite the photostat of the original itself; it does not quite agree with it.

MR. FERENCZ: I wish Defense Counsel would make it clear what the remarks are that do not agree with the original.

THE PRESIDENT: Please be a little more specific.

DR . ULMER: I wish to express that I question the probative value of this document as far as my defendant, my client, is concerned.

THE PRESIDENT: If you are merely questioning the probative value, that is something which the Tribunal will determine in due course; but, if you wish to point out some discrepency between the photostat and the German reproduction in your book, that is another matter and I shall be glad to hear from you on that score.

DR. ULMER: The photostat of theoriginal, which is in my hands at the moment, contains no entry concerning the promotion to Brigadefuehrer, while the document itself which has been introduced as Document 4807 contains such an entry.

THE PRESIDENT: MR. Ferencz, you have both sheets before you. Will you please clarify this situation?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor. I am introducing this document at this point to show that the Defendant Franz Alfred Six was a section chief in the SD headquarters in 1941. On the first page of the photostatic copy of this record, which comes from the official German archives in Berlin, it says that this is the record of Dr. Six and shows him as being Amtchief, which is Section Chief, in SD Hauptamt, which is the SD main office. That is the reason why this document is offered. I am not sure that I understand the objection to it.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you note any discrepancy?

MR. FERENCZ: There is no discrepancy between the English translation on this point and the German copy. I think the objection is to the point of Brigadefuehrer, the rank of the defendant which is not shown here. It shows him as Oberfuehrer. However, that is not the point we are making.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ulmer, if the Prosecution does not make the point against which you have an observation to make, then no harm results.

DR. ULMER: I have merely this one objection to this document, and I would like the Tribunal to allow me to come back to this when my case is beginning.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that right will be reserved to you.

DR. ULMER: Thank you.

MR. FERENCZ: Returning to tis Document NO-4806 - 4807, I beg your pardon, it is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 126, and shows that the defendant was a section chief in SD headquarters in 1941. have Document ND-4546, which is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 127. This is the affidavit of the Defendant Six. In in he tells us that he became a member of the Nazi Party in 1930, when he was only twenty-one years old. Five years later he joined the SS, after having been a member of the Brown Shirted SA. In 1935 he became a member of the SD, and four years later became head of an SD office in Berlin. Count III of our indictment charges the defendant with his membership in the SS and SD. Then, like many of his associates, the Defendant Six, too, acquired a sudden interest in agriculture; and at the end of the war assumed an alias and went to work as a farm hand. The defendant admits that in June, 1941, he was ordered to Berlin where Heydrich, chief adjutant, assigned him to Vorkommando Moscow. He admits that he was the commanding officer of Vorkommando Moscow until the 20th of August, 1941; and that the kommando operated in Smolensk and Tolotshino.

We saw in the affidavits of several of the other defendants the nature of the instructions and orientation lectures given to Einsatzgruppe Kommando leaders in Berlin in June of 1941. General Six tells us, however, that his kommando was much different from the others. General Six was only supposed to collect files and documents, he says. a document which through an error is not in the document book. I have the document, NO-2956, here in loose form, and it is ready to be introduced as an exhibit. We wish to introduce it solely to corroborate the defendant's statement that he was in Tolotshino at a certain time, and to give the total executions of Einsatzgruppe B at a certain period. With the Court's permission, I would like to introduce this now loosely, and I will distribute it to the defense counsel at this time and to the Court at this time.

THE PRESIDENT : Very well. You may introduce it.

MR. FERENCZ: This document, NO-2956, is now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 128. Here under the heading of Einsatzgruppe B it lists the Vorkommando Moscow and gives its location as Tolotshino, confirming the defendant's statements. It also says that the total liquidations carried out by Einsatzgruppe B up to the time of reporting, 23 July, 1941, was 7, 620, with 3, 386 of these having been killed between the 14th and 19th of July. we have Document NO-2949, which is Prosecution Exhibit 118. This gives the location of Einsatzgruppe B as Smolensk, and we recall that the defendant deposed that he was stationed at Smolensk. It also states on page 38 of the English, page 62 of the German, that the Einsatzgruppe execution total up to 31 July was 11, 084, which meant that Einsatzgruppe B and its units killed about 4,000 people in eight days.

There is no mention of archive collections. German, we have Document NO-2837, which was introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 5 8. I noticed in checking the document that it is an extract and one pert has been omitted, which I would now like to include. The original exhibit, of course, is the complete document, and is in the record. However, I have an errata sheet which includes a small portion giving the location of Vorkommando Moscow, and, with the Court's indulgence and permission, I would like to distribute that to be added before the document on page 7 of Document Book II-B. This document, which is Prosecution Exhibit 58, is the report dated 24 August. It shows us on the errata sheet that Vorkommando Moscow, located in Smolensk, is listed under Einsatzgruppe B, and that the Wehrmacht had turned over to the Vorkommando Moscow 740 persons, presumably partisans, who had been arrested on the highways. There still is no mention of any collecting of documents.

Vorkommando Moscow. This is in Document Book II-B, page 27, and is Document NO-2844, introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 61. This gives us, on page 27, page 29 of the German, the numbers executed by every unit under Einsatzgruppe B. It gives us the total liquidation for the groups up to the 20th of August, 1941, and the defendant admits he commanded Vorkommando Moscow 'till then, and it shows that Einsatzgruppe B executed 16,964 persons up to the 20th of August; and a total for the Gruppenstab and the Vorkommando Moscow together was 144. On page 26, page 27 of the German, of this document, this is further broken down and shows clearly that Vorkommando Moscow executed 46 persons in Smolensk, and I quote: "The Vorkommando Moscow was forced to execute another 46 persons, among them 38 intellectual Jews who had tried to create unrest and discontent in the newly established Ghetto of Smolensk." Still no mention of document collections. Vorkommando Moscow, It is interesting to note, however, that Vorkommando Moscow, which the defendant swore was only an archive collecting unit, reported that the execution total had gone up -- I will repeat. It is interesting to note, however, that Vorkommando Moscow which the defendant swore was only an archive collecting unit, reported that its execution total had gone up to 312 by 13th September. This was in Document Book II-B, page 47, page 42 of the German, in Document NO-3143, which was Prosecution Exhibit 64. Prosecution Exhibit 60, which gives the total executions by the Gruppenstab and the Vorkommando Moscow up to 28th September, 1941 is over 2,000 persons killed. have Document NO-3403, which is Prosecution Exhibit 63, and gives the total executions up to 26th October for the Gruppenstab and Vorkommando Moscow as 2,457 persons killed.

hoefer, who took over the command of Vorkommando Moscow after Six, we gave numerous illustrations of executions by that unit. The defendant Klingelhoefer apparently was not aware of the fact that Vorkommando Moscow was -- as Franz Six would have us believe -supposed to collect documents. In view of the extermination function of all Einsatz units, the pattern of whole-sale murder, and the number of executions shown to have occurred in Vorkommando Moscow, while the defendant Six was in command, we submit that his contention that he was merely there to collect archives is quite incredible. individual responsibility of the defendant in Einsatzgruppen B. Court chooses to recess.

THE PRESIDENT: It is so close to the recess period, that we will now take the noon recess and reconvene at 1:45.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: In order that there may be no misunderstanding about the preparation of the opening statements, please let me repeat that the first eight speeches must be in the hands of the Director of the Language Division in Room 106 by Friday afternoon of this week; and so that it may not be left to chance, as to who the first eight defendants will be, I will enumerate them: and Blume. defendants will be in the hands of the Translation as indicated. The speeches for the others, namely: Haensch, Nossko, Otto, Strauch, Klingelhoefer, Fondler, von Radetzky, Ruehl, Schubert, and Graf -- will be in the hands of the same Chief of Translation Section on Monday by noon.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal - I beg your indulgence for a moment. Yesterday in the prosecution's presentation of the case in chief against the defendant Sandberger the prosecution noted that an excerpt was missing from its book, namely, Document Book I, Document NO-3279. I have learned that it was in all other books except the Prosecution's. I wish to make this a part of the record Sandberger. With the Tribunal's permission I will read it. It is on page 78a of the English, 108a of the German, already included under the heading, "Location Krasnowardeisk", also under the heading of "Communism" it states:

"With the exception of one, all leading communist officials in Esthonia have now been seized and rendered harmless.

The sum total of communists seized runs to about 14,500. Of these about 1,000 were shot and 5,377 put into concentration camps. 3,785 less guilty supporters were released."

DR. HOCHWALD-HORLIK: If the Tribunal please, before I present Document Book No. III-C, which deals with the individual responsibility of the defendants who were active in the Einsatzgruppe C, I want to inform the Tribunal that we tried to get Dr. Surholt, who represents the defendant Rasch -- and the prosecution has been informed that Dr. Surholt left for Berlin without leaving any substitute here. So I do think, as Dr. Surholt was duly informed by the Tribunal that the case will start on Monday, and as Dr. Surholt was present at the arraignment of the defendant Rasch, the prosecution should be permitted to now present its case against the defendant Rasch now.

THE PRESIDENT: The prosecution will proceed - and from this incident let me state when the Tribunal informs all counsel that any session will take place on any particular day, automatically counsel must realize that he will be present on that day or the case will proceed in their absence.

DR. HOCHWALD-HORLIK: Thank you, your Honor.

May it please the Tribunal. I shall now proceed with the presentation of Document Book III-C. The documents contained in this document book refer to the individual responsibility of the defendants who were active in Einsatzgruppe C. In most instances it will be necessary to refer to evidence that has already been presented in earlier stages of the trial. Your Honors will find the document numbers and their descriptions of the documents in the order in which I shall refer to them in the list -- with the reading in the order of presentation.

II-C, page 46 of the English, page 52 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 78, Document NO-2934, which shows the change. This document shows also the defendant Rasch as commander of Einsatzgruppen B and C, respectively. Einsatzgruppe C operated, in the time in which the crimes particularized in paragraph 8 of the Indictment were committed, in the Ukraine. The defendant Ohlendorf stated, in paragraph 3 of his affidavit, which is in Document Book I, page 22 of the English, page 23 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 5, Document NO-2890 - that Einsatzgruppe C had the Ukraine except for the part occupied by the Einsatzgruppe D. At a later time when the Einsatzgruppe D advanced towards the Caucasus, Einsatzgruppe C was in charge of the entire Ukraine insofar as it was not under civil administration.

that Einsatzgruppe C operated at a time which mainly concerns our presentation, in the area of Shitomir, Khiev, Lemberg, Sloviansk, Rowno, Stalino, Nikolajew, and Poltawa. area directly on the chart -- it is just behind the witness box. to refer briefly to Document Book I, page 89 of the English, 121 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 23, Document NO-3154, which is Operational Situation Report No. 80, dated 11 September 1941. This Operational Situation Report describes the tasks of Einsatzgruppe C as follows, and I quote from page 1 of the English translation, under the heading, "Observation made and measures taken by the Security Police":

"Beside the thorough liquidation of the Party organization and the operations to clear the country of Jews who constitute the most evil disintegration factor, the executive operations by Einsatzgruppe C at present also include, above all, the fight against the partisan nuisance." times and in different positions, commanders or members of Einsatzgruppe C and Sonderkommandos and Einsatzkommandos, were the defendant Rasch, Schulz, Blobel, Steimle, Biberstein, Haensch, Fendler, Radetzky and Graf. Steimle, who was commander of Sonderkommando 7a of the Einsatzgruppe B from September to December 1941, and commander of Sonderkommando 4a of Einsatzgruppe C, from August 1942 to January 1943, has been already discussed during the Presentation of Document Book III-B, and I shall here avoid repetition.

The responsibility of the defendant Rasch. The defendant Rasch -- in paragraph 1 of his affidavit dated 13 August 1947, which is in Document Book III-C on page 1 of the English, page 1 of the German, Document NO-4749, which I offer as Prosecution Exhibit 129 -- admitted having been commander of Einsatzgruppe C from May to October 1941, but he omitted to state that he was, for a short period, at the end of October and the beginning of November 1941, commander of Einsatzgruppe B. This is proved by the Operational Situation Report No. 126, Document Book I, page 28, 31 of the German, Document NO-4134, which is Prosecution Exhibit No. 7. This Operational Situation Report shows Rasch in charge of Einsatzgruppe B on the 29th of October. Another Operational Situation Report, which is in Document Book II-D on page 10 of the English, 8 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 85, Document NO-3159, lists him in the same position on the 5th of November. However, it is apparent from Operational Report No. 132 -- Document NO-2830, in Document Book II-C on page 21 of the English, 23 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 72, that after this short service he returned to Einsatzgruppe C as its commander, as this report shows him in this position on the 12th of November 1941. I do not want to take up the Tribunal's time by quoting all the documents in evidence which prove the thousands of murders and atrocities which were carried out by the units of Einsatzgruppe C during the time when Rasch was in command. But I might be permitted to refer to some of the Operational Situation Reports in evidence.

Operational Situation Report No. 128, Document Book II-C, page 1, Document 3157, Prosecution Exhibit 68, shows -- and I am quoting from pages 3 and 4 of the document:

"As to the purely executive matters, approximately 80,000 persons were liquidated until now by the Kommandos of the Einsatzgruppen. Among these are approximately 8,000 persons through investigations convicted of antiGerman or Bolshevistic activities. The remainder was liquidated as a retaliatory measure. Several retaliatory measures were carried out as large-scale actions. The largest of these actions took place immediately after the occupation of Kiev. It was carried out exclusively against Jews with their entire families. The difficulties resulting from such large-scale action - in particular concerning the seizure - were overcome in Kiev by requesting the Jewish population through wall-posters to move. Although only a participation of approximately five to six thousand Jews had been expected at first, more than 30,000 Jews arrived who until the very moment of their execution still believed in their resettlement, thanks to an extremely clever organization.

some of the facts which this report reveals. Of 80,000 persons - only 10% of the total, as it is stated here, were convicted through investigations, - which means, in other words, that they were murdered without so much as a semblance of a trial. The remaining 90% - 72,000, were executed as a retaliatory measure. We cannot imagine crimes of such magnitude which would justify the killing of 72,000 people in retaliation, and it is even beyond imagination how the powerless civilian population could have been able to permit such crimes.

Operational Situation Report No. 106, which is in Document Book I, page 122 of the English, page 149 of the German, Document 3140, Prosecution Exhibit 30. You will find, in the middle of the page, a note which reveals that approximately 35,000 Jewish inhabitants of Kiev were actually exterminated on the 29th and 30th of September 1941 by Sonderkommando 4a under the command of the defendant Blobel, at the time when Rasch admittedly was commander of Einsatzgruppe C, to which Sonderkommando 4a was subordinate.

Operational Situation Report No. 132, which is in Document Book II-C, on Page 23 of the German -- and I want to refer to pages 23, 24 and 25 in the English -- reads, in connection with Einsatzgruppe C, as follows:

"The number of executions carried out by Sonderkommando 4a meanwhile increased to 55,432. Among those executed by Sonderkommando 4a in the second part of the month of October 1941 until the date of this report, in addition to a comparatively small number of political functionaries, active communists and people guilty of sabotage, etc.

, the larger part were again Jews, and a considerable part of these were again Jewish prisoners of war who had been handed over by the Wehrmacht. At Borispol, at the request of the Commander of the Borispol Prisoner of War Camp, a platoon of Sonderkommando 4a shot 752 Jewish prisoners of war on 14 October 1941 and 354 Jewish prisoners of war on 10 October 1941, amongst them some commissioners and 78 wounded Jews, handed over by the camp physician." the first paragraph of this page, your Honors: "Another platoon of Sonderkommando 4a was active at Lubny and, without any interference, executed 1365 Jews, Communists and partisans, among them 53 prisoners of war and a few Jewish riflewomen." I do expect these were Jewish women carrying weapons. It is obvious that the 55,432 executions were not carried out in a few days, but that is the number of total murders committed by Sonderkommando 4a.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, it will be assumed by the Tribunal that once you introduce an exhibit, even though you only read a small portion of it the entire exhibit is in evidence.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Your Honor, I was only referring now to documents which are in evidence, and we always put the complete report in.

THE PRESIDENT: I only want to make this statement so that defense counsel may feel free to refer to the other parts of the exhibit. Naturally, you are only reading a fragment of the exhibit, but the entire exhibit is evidence and will be regarded as being in evidence.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: That is correct; and we have always submitted a photostatic copy of the complete report.

(continuing) These executions were carried out with Rasch as commander of Einsatzgruppe C by Sonderkommando 4a, which was a Sub-unit of Einsatzgruppe C. your Honors -- page 25 of Document Book II-C, the same document from which I quoted, 28 of the German, paragraph 1 of this page:

"Sonderkommando 4b is stationed at Poltawa, according to a report dated 16 October 1941. Slaviasnk is to be the next location. The work of Sonderkommando 4b, influenced partly by weather and road conditions, was mainly limited to the town area of Poltawa. In the week from 4 October 1941 to 10 October 1941, a total number of 186 persons was executed, among them 21 political functionaries, 4 people guilty of sabotage and looting and 161 Jews. In addition, the task of the Sonderkommando included searches and pursuits of former leading Communist Party functionaries and members of the executory committee of the Poltawa district." 3, page. 19 of the original, your Honors, page 29 of the German, just under the heading:

"The number of people executed by Einsatzkommando 5 amounted to 15,110 on 20 October 1941. From this number, 20 political functionaries, 21 people guilty of sabotage and looting and 1,847 Jews were shot between 13 October 1941 and 19 October 1941. On 18 October 1941, 300 insane Jews of the Kiev lunatic asylum were liquidated, which represented a particularly heavy mental burden for the members of Einsatzkommando 5, who were in charge of this operation."

the same page, your Honors:

"137 trucks full of clothes, made available in connection with the campaign against Jews at Shitomir and Kiev, were put at the disposal of the National Socialist People's Welfare Organization - NSV - for further disposal. The greater part of these articles, after necessary disinfection, were distributed among German nationals. From this stock a field-hospital of the Waffen-SS, among others, was also able to meet its requirements of woolen blankets etc." Report No. Ill, Document Book 2a, page 44 of the English, page 40 of the German, Document No-3155, Prosecution Exhibit 38 -- it is on page 2 of the translation, the third paragraph from the bottom of the page:

"In the period between 7 September and 5 October, 207 political officials, 112 saboteurs and looters as well as 8,800 Jews were liquidated by Einsatzkommando 5.

"Special Kommando 4b, in the period between 13 and 26 September, executed 103 political officials, 9 saboteurs and looters and 125 Jews.

The report No. 133 which is on page 15, 13 of the German, which is dated on the 14 November 1941-- it is on page 15 of the document book, 45,407 executed by the same unit. In this number of persons killed by Sonderkommando 4-B, Einsatzkommando 9 and Vorkommando Moscow which belonged to Einsatzgruppe B were not in 2-B. Nevertheless, the increase shown in this period between 26 October and 14 November is 8,273. As Rasch was in charge of Einsatzgruppe B at least from 29 October-5 November, he is in charge and responsible for this. by affidavits of some of his co-defendants. I refer to Document Book III-A, page 10 of the English, page 17 of the German, your Honors. Document NO-3872, prosecution Exhibit 110. This is an affidavit of the defendant Sandberger dated on the 19th of November, 1945. This document lists Rasch under paragraph 5-B as responsible for the persecution of Jews in the Ukraine. No. I on page 97 of the English, 134 of the German, Document NO-3644, prosecution Exhibit 26 reveals that Rasch informed Schulz in Lemberg that Jewish officials and other inhabitants of this town were alledgedly guilty of murder. 2,500 to 3,000 persons were arrested and most of them were killed. It was Rasch who informed Schulz that according to an order of the Fuehrer not only guilty but also strongly suspected persons were to be shot as a so-called reprisal. Einsatzkommando 6, he was personally present at the executions. Schulz was ordered to take part in the execution by Einsatzkommando 5 and it was Rasch who handed down the order to Schulz that all Jews were to be shot. Exceptions were to be made only in cases where the Jews were necessary for forced labor. Rasch also ordered that Jewish women and children were eventually to be shot, together with the male Jewish population so that no avengers could survive.

Document Book III-C on page 60 of the English, page 98 of the German, Document NO-3341 which I offer as prosecution Exhibit No. 130. In this document, Schulz in paragraph 6, the second to the last paragraph on page 2 of the document, your Honors, it states that Rasch distinguished himself by extraordinary ruthlessness. He also ordered that the commanders of the individual units of Einsatzgruppe C should personally take part in the killings. on page 129 of the English and 159 of the German, prosecution Exhibit 31, document NO-3824 - and I am referring to paragraph 3, 6 and 7, 8 and 9 of the document--it states that when Blobel joined Einsatzgruppe C as chief of Sonderkommando 4-A in June 1941, Rasch was in charge of Einsatzgruppe C. That is in paragraph 5. Rasch was personally present during the execution of 700 to a thousand persons near Korosta which took place in August or September, 1941. book, your Honors, Blobel's unit which was one of the units of Einsatzgruppe C and was directly under the command of the defendant Rasch, also killed women and children. In September or October, 1941, Blobel received from Einsatzgruppe C a gas wagon and one execution was carried out by using this gas wagon. At the end of September 1941, the group staff of Einsatzgruppe C participated in the mass execution of Jews in Kiev. When Blobel was ill, Rasch or Radetski replaced him and Blobel knows that during that time executions were carried out. on the 1st of September, 1939, a member of an organization declared to be criminal by the International Military Tribunal, namely the SS, the Gestapo, and the SD. I refer to document book III-C, page 3 of the English, and the German, and offer Rasch's SS personnel file, Document NO-3253 as prosecution Exhibit 131. This document proves that Rasch was a member of the SS and the SD from 1936 on.

in the American army, and in the SS he was a leader of the regional area of Fulda Werra from the 1st February 1939 on. And rose to the rank of inspector of the Sipo and SD Security Police and Security Service which is a high ranking position in the Gestapo too. In the Gestapo he was attached as Brigadier General of the police to the Gestapo Koenigsberg from the 1st of December 1940 on.

Page 8 of the document book, your Honor. He received a high SS decoration--the death head and the sword of honor. Membership in Criminal organization is also proved by his own affidavit to which I have already referred. That is in Document Book III- C, page 1, prosecution Exhibit 1 to 9, document NO-4749. Sonderkommando 4-A, the case of the defendant Blobel. I refer to Document Book I, page 130 of the English, 159 of the German. This document is NO-3824, prosecution Exhibit 31, an affidavit of the defendant Blobel dated 6 June, 1947. In this affidavit, the defendant Blobel states that he was commander of Sonderkommando 4-A from June 1941 to January 1942. It was Blobel and Sonderkommando 4-A who exterminated approximately 35,000 Jews in Kiev on the 29th and 30th of September 1941.

Operational situation report No. 106, which is in Document Book No. I, page 118 of the English, 149 of the German, Document NO-3140, prosecution Exhibit 30, shows that Blobel arrived at Kiev -- and this is on page 3 of the document, paragraph 2 under the heading of I--Kiev.

Blobel arrived at Kiev already in the 21st of September. I would like to correct no error which appears in the English translation. In the document, the name of Blobel is not written out but your Honors will find on top of the document in a later sheet referring to this particular sentence and there it is shown that the name of Blobel appears in the original document. 21st of September.

II-C on page 21 of the English, page 23 of the German, Document NO-2830, prosecution Exhibit 72, about the location Sonderkommando 4-A under Blobel on the 4th of November, 1941, Rasch discloses that he personally was in command of the Kiev action. Book I, page 118 of the English, 149 of the German. This is Document NO-3140, prosecution Exhibit 30. I quote from page 124 of the document book, page 155 of the German.

Partly because of the better economic situation of the Jews under the Bolschevist regime and their activities as informers and agents of the NKWD, partly because of the explosions and the resulting fires, the public feeling against the Jews was very strong. As an added factor it was proven that the Jews participated in the arson. The population expected adequate retaliatory measures by the German authorities. Consequently all Jews of Kiew were requested, in agreement with the city commander, to appear on Monday, 29 September until 8 o'clock at a designated place. These announcements were posted by members of the Ukrainian militia in the entire city. Simultaneously it was announced orally that all Jews were to be moved. In collaboration with the Gruppen staff and 2 Kommandos of the police regiment South the Sonderkommando 4a executed on 29 and 30 September 33771 Jews. Money, valuables, underwears and clothing were secured and placed partly at the disposal of the (Nazi Party Public Welfare Organization) NSV for use of the racial Germans, partly given to the city administration authorities for use of the needy population. The transaction was carried out without friction. No incidents occurred. The "Resettlement measure" against the Jews was throughout approved by the population. The fact that in reality the Jews were liquidated, was hardly known until now, according to up - to - date experiences it would however hardly been objected to. The measures were also approved by the Wehrmacht. The Jews who were not yet apprehended as well as those who gradually returned from their flight again to the city were in each case treated accordingly. Simultaneously a number of NKWD officials, political commissars and partisan leaders were arrested and liquidated." I skip the next three paragraphs and quote from the last paragraph on page 10, page 156 of the German under the heading-it is ten of the document, your Honors.

After the confinement of the Jews to a restricted area which had been carried out by the Feldkommandantur following a suggestion of the Sonderkommando 4a, a considerable calm was noticed, e.g. at the markets and so forth. Simultaneously a number of until new persistent rumors died down and it seemed as if also a communist propaganda had lost much ground through the confinement of the Jews. It appeared however already after a few days that a mere spatial confinement of the Jews without construction of a Ghetto was not sufficient. and that the old troubles started again. Complaints were received in many offices about the insolent attitude of Jews on their working places. It was established that the Jewish district was the origin of an active propaganda among Ukrainians saying that the red army would soon reconquer the territories taken from it. The local militia was shot at from ambush at night and also at day. It was further found out that Jews exchanged their belongings for money and left the town in order to settle in the Western Ukraine - that is, in territories already under a civil administration. All these facts were observed, the Jews in question however could only be arrested in very few cases, as they had sufficient means to escape apprehension. Therefore a conference on this matter took place on 18 September 1941 with the Feldkommandantur, in which it was decided to liquidate the Jews of Shitomir completely and radically, as all warnings and special measures had been up - to - date unsuccessful: On 19 September 1941 the Jewish district was evacuated starting at 4 o' clock in the morning, after having been surrounded and closed the evening before by 60 men of the Ucranian militia. The transportation was carried out by 12 trucks which had been place at the disposal partly by the Feldkommandantur, resp. the city administration of Shitomir. After the transport had been carried out and the necessary preparations had been done with the help of 150 prisoners a total of 5145 Jews were registered and executed.

50.000 - 60.000 Pds of underwear, clothing, shoewear, cooking ustensils and so forth could he transferred for use to the deputy of the NSV in Shitomir, BOSS. Confiscated valuables and money were transferred to the Sonderkommando 4a." of the German: Exhibit 73, NO-3151, which is operational situation report No. 86 dated 17 September 1941, this report reveals that already before the murder of the Jews in Shitomir up to the 17th of Sept. in 1941, Sonderkommando 4-A had exterminated 6,584 persons described in the report as Bolshevists, Jews and asocial elements. on page 23, the document starts on 23 in the German, Document NO-2836, prosecution Exhibit 72, second paragraph from the bottom from page 23, proves that on the 12th of November, 1941, of the activity of approximately four-and-a-half to five months, and I quote:

"A number of executions carried out by Sonderkommando 4-A meanwhile increased to 55,432." 4-A. I would like to refer further to page 5 of the same document which I have already quoted when discussing the responsibility of the defendant Rasch. This entry proves that a platoon of Sonderkommando 4-A executed 1,365 Jews, Communists and saboteurs. "In Kiev, Sonderkommando 4-A regularly carried out interrogations and arrests which in most cases led to executions. Here almost without exception we were concerned with active communists who had worked for the communist party. It is worth mentioning that in several cases by way of incriminating statements made by witnesses, communists could be arrested who had just been released from prisoner-of-war camps because they had stated that they had never taken any active part in politics before.

One of them had been a functionary of the communist party since 1925. Another one had been a member of the party for 15 years and had served as a politruk in the Soviet army. English, 61 of the German, Document 3405, prosecution Exhibit 42. This document reveals the details of the activities of Einsatzkommando 4-A in a time when Blobel was in command. I quote from page *9 of the English translation, second paragraph from the "bottom of the page. It is page 65 of the document book, 69 in the German, under the heading of: Line 27 onwards: the Jewish population had been requested by means of posters to report on the previous day. Altogether 1,538 Jews were shot. Their clothing was handed over to the mayor if Poltawa, who gave special priority to ethnic Germans when distributing it.

This documentary evidence is corroborated by Blobel's own affidavit and by affidavits of his co-defendant Steinle and Radetzki. I refer to Document Book I, page 130 of the English, 159 of the German. The quote is on 161 of the German, Document NO-3824, prosecution Exhibit 31. This is an affidavit of the defendant Blobel dated 6 June 1947. He admits that Sonderkommando 4-A under his command carried out several executions of communists, saboteurs, Jews and other undesirable elements. executed but presumes that approximately 10 to 15 thousand were executed under the collaboration of Sonderkommando 4-A. He himself does not claim that this number is even approximately correct and the evidence which I have just referred to and other documents before the Tribunal manifestly prove that the number of the victims of Sonderkommando 4-A during the time when Blobel was in command was approximately 60,000.

In the same affidavit, Blobel admits that not only men but also women and children were shot by Sonderkomnando 4-A when he was in command. C which was, as he says, then under Rasch. One execution was carried out by means of this gas van. He admits in paragraph B of the affidavit that Sonderkonmando 4-A participated together with the group staff of Einsatzgruppe C in the Kiev massacre but stated that the number of the victims given in the various reports is 33,771 is too high and claims that only approximately half as many persons were killed. some of the killings and he Was often absent from his unit for reasons of health. During the time of his absence, either Rash or Radetzki were in command of Sonderkommando 4-A and some executions were carried out under the command of these two defendants. an affidavit of the defendant Radetzki which I offer into evidence as prosecution Exhibit 132. On 27 of the German, I refer to page 21 of the document book, in this affidavit Radetzki declares that he was officially informed of the fact that Sonderkommando 4-A participated in execution and that Blobel ordered the execution. The affidavit of the defendant Steimle which is in Document Book III-B on page 39 of the English, 64 of the German, Document NO-3842, prosecution Exhibit 119, reveals on page 40 of the document book, the shooting of Jews and other atrocities were carried out in the Ukraine by Blobel. blatant and unmitigated rogue, There is conclusive evidence that the persons connected with Einsatzgruppen were well aware of the criminal nature of this activity Gruppenfuehrer Mueller, the chief of Amt 4 of the RSHA, which was the head of the Gestapo, assigned to the defendant Blobel in June 1942 the task to remove the traces of evidence of the mass killings by the Einsatzgruppen by burning all the corpses of the victims of these units.

Document NO-3947. That is on page 22 of the German - an affidavit of the defendant Blobel which I offer into evidence as prosecution Exhibit 133, Your Honors.

DR. HEIM: Dr. Heim for the defendant Blobel. Your Honor, I object to the submission of this Document NO-3947. It is an affidavit of the defendant Blobel of the 18th of June, 1942. I object to this because this document is irrelevant to the evidence. The affidavit of the defendant Blobel related to his activity after he was active as a leader of the Einsatzgruppe E, of the burnings of the corpses of the mass graves in the East; neither in the opening speech nor in the speech by the prosecution did the prosecution refer to this. This is a completely new point of view which is not liable to punishment because this refers to the burning of corpses which were not executed by the defendant Blobel.

MR HORLICK_HOCHWALD: I offer this document NO-3947 as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 133, Your Honor. In this affidavit Blobel admits that he received this assignment from Mueller. He also stated that he went in June 1943 to Kiev, and was present at the burning corpses and destruction of the mass graves, he was not in a position to carry out this task as the German troops had to retreat and to abandon the area in which the mass graves were l ocated, and, in this affidavit Blobel corroborates that statement of the camp commander of the Auschwitz concentration camp, Hoess. English, page 25 of the German, as Document NO-4498, and I offer it as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 134.

DR. HEIM: Dr. Heim for the defendant Blobel. Your Honor, I object to the introduction of this affidavit of this evidence. It is not an affidavit which is either sworn to nor certified to, nor signed by any Allied Officer, I point out that this document had already been introduced before in case 4 by the Prosecution, and on that occasion, on my intervention, this document was not admitted in evidence by the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Where was this document obtained?

MR. HORLICK*HOCHWALD: Your Honor, sofar as I do know this is a deposition of Hoess who was condemned to death by the Polish War Crimes Court before the Polish judge, but sofar as I do recall, I am not sure, but I can make certain this document or at least a part of this document was admitted in evidence in the Pohl case, but I am not certain.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, at the time in the Pohl case, just in regard to the defense of the defendant Blobel, I objected to this document, and this document was refused.

THE PRESIDENT: We will admit the document only provisionally, and Dr. Heim will be permitted to renew his objection when his client takes the stand.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Yes. I further would like to offer a document in corroboration of this proof, and I turn to Document Book III-C, page 19, Your Honor, Document NO-4467, which I offer as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 135. It is on page 26 of the German. This is a corroborative report of one SS-Untersturmbannfuehrer Jackel, which refers to the same subject of which the gentleman has been soeaking. The affidavit of the defendant Schulz. This is in Document Book III-C, on page 60 of the English, page 98 of the German, and Document NO-3841. It was admitted in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No.130 It states that Blobel had the task of removing traces of mass graves of killed persons. Blobel's membership in the SS and the SD is proved by his personnel record, Which is in Document Book III-C which is on page 11 of he English, and page 1? of the German, Document NO-3197which I offer as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 136, This document shows that he entered the SS and SD in 1935.

DR. HEIM: (for defendant Blobel.) Your Honor, I object to the introduction of this document in this form. You can not sec from the copy what is being printed, or what was later written inhandwriting and - or on the typewritten, and the Tribunal may easily get the Impression that, for example, that the defendant Blobel is holder of the blood badge. In the middle of the document it says "blood bagde" and it can not be gathered from this whether the word "blood badge" is printed in there, or whether the word was later put in there.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you not on comparison with the photostatic copy resolve that question?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, yes, it would, but in the courtroom it is not known what was actually put in by hand on the copy, what Blobel said, what position he held, and what actually was printed in that form. For example it is printed, "Decoration blood badge. Gold party Badge." You could get the impression that Blobel, certainly held all of these decorations, Sofar as I can see, the Prosecution would have to make a special remark -- a written remark about this.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, solong as the document before us is a copy of what appears in the original document, it does not matter what impression is gathered from it. The impression will have to be whatever logic compels. Your objection can only go to whether the document is relevant, whether it is authentic, and, whether it is true fascimile of the original. You have the opportunity to see the original Dr. Heim.

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor, I know that the decorations are held by him, and what he did not hold, in these forms certain decorations were merely printed in there, and the possession of these decorations were latter written in, but in the copy the Tribunal can not see what was this form, which decorations were printed in there and which actually applied to Blobel, and which did not apply to him. I personally know the original has not.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you have the opportunity to tell us when Blobel takes the stand.

MR. HORWICK-HOCHWALD: May I draw the attention of the Tribunal to the fact that why it is completely immaterial as there is a sign on the photostatic copy which Dr. Heim obviously overlooked, which shows exactly what kind of decoration Blobel received.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, proceed.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I then offer Document NO-3197 as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 136. This document shows that Blobel entered the SS and SD in 1935, and in the SS he rose the rank of Standartenfuehrer (Colonel), on 30 January 1941, and was a Fuehrer in the Hauptamt, head of the Office of the SD. He received this promotion as his personnel service record and corroborated by Blobel's own affidavit, which is to be found in Document Book 1, page 129 of the English, and page 159 of the German, which is Prosecution's exhibit No. 31, Document NO-3824, in which is shown the responsibility of the defendant Radetski, who was also an officer in the Sonderkommando 4-A. He admits in his affidavit, which is in Document Book III-C, on page 20 of the English, and page 20 of the German, which was admitted in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 132, Document NO-4438, that he was a member of Sonderkommando 4-A from June 1941 to December 1942 and he admits having been in June and July 1941 in Group Ludzk, Groskow and Shitomir, in Ludzk he says he was with the Teilkommando a sub-unit of Sonderkommando 4-A; from December 1941 to March 1942 he allegedly was on leave and returned to Charkow as commander of Sonderkommando 4-A, in March, at Charkow.

He said further in this affidavit that he had official knowledge of Sonderkommando 4-A took part in a number of executions within the area assigned, and that Standartenfuehrer Blobel ordered executions. English, and page 47 of the German, document NO-4765, which I offer as Prosecution's exhibit No. 137. This is an affidavit of Gustav Kraege, dated 21 August 1947, Kraege himself was a member of Sonderkommando 4-A, in a partcommando -- that is a Teil-Kommando Sonderkommando 4-A arrived in Ludzk on 28 June, and that SS-Hauptsturmfuehrer Kadetzki was the highest ranking officer in this advance; this, of course, applied to nothing else but that he was the commander under Radetzki, and I would like to quote from para- 3 of the document, page 30: "During my service with Einsatzkommando 4-A, I took part in the march of the unit from Schmiedebot to Russia. We arrived at Cracow on the 25th or 26th of June where we stayed for only one night.

Some days latter we reached the former Russian frontier in Sokal, where the Kommando was held back for several hours due to attacks from the air. In Sokal a Vorkommando was formed consisting of 20 to 25 men, among whom I was myself, and was given orders to proceed to Ludzk, and to prepare quarters there for the remainder of the Kommando. We arrived at Ludzk on 28 June. After having been billeted in a bank building the Vorkommando was sub-divided in smaller groups with orders to pry open strong boxes in various buildings, and to seize documents. Part of the Vorkommando consisting of Waffen-SS and interrogators remained in the billets. The Vorkommando was headed by three leaders, namely, SS-Hauptsturmfuehrer Waldemar von Radetzki and two Obersturmfuehrer whose names I do not know any more. I remember that one evening a conference was held during our stay at Ludzk, in the course of which Waldemar von Radetzki, as senior leader, gave orders to the assembled subleaders to seize documents, and other important material from certain buildings, At that time I had the impression that Radetzki was the head of the Vorkammando, although he had never been pointed out to me as such. Radetzki questioned Ukrainians from among whom he selected several to cooperate with the Sonderkommando 4-A, The main part of the Kommando arrived at Ludzk in early July. I did not witness any executions during our stay at Ludzk. But when we were putting the documents of the office in order some days later in Rovno, a number of about 20 reports and records of interrogations came to my hands from which I learned that people had been executed in Ludzk and Sokal."

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, might this be a convenient time to take the afternoon recess.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will recess fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. KOESSL: Dr. Koessl for the Defendants Ott and Schubert. as Exhibit No. 134. The question of the admissibility of this document interests all the defense counsel. As this document is obviously inadmissible. The affidavit of Rudolf Hoess is not sworn to. If it had been sworn to it could not be submitted because he is not alive any longer and therefore he cannot be corss-examined.

THE PRESIDENT: Is this the one that Dr. Heim spoke of?

DR. KOESSL: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we have already ruled on that.

DR. KOESSL: In my opinion Dr. Heim did not raise the question of the admissibility of this document.

THE PRESIDENT: Whatever question he raised the Tribunal said that we would admit it only provisionally in order to retain its continuity and then you will have the privilege of attacking it on any point when your case comes up.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If your Honors please, before the recess I referred just to the responsibility of Radetzky in connection with the activities of an advance commando in Ludzk. I only want to refer in this connection to Document Book II-A, Page 76 of the English, 79 of the German, Prosecution Exhibit 44, NO_2938, which shows that an advance commando of Sonderkommando 4a arrived in Ludzk on the 27th of June. Your honors will remember that Kraege says in his affidavit that this advance commando arrived the 28th of June and that by this advance commando 300 Jews and 20 looters who had been arrested were shot on the 30th of June. 1160 Jews were shot as a reprisal for the death of 10 Germans on the 2nd of July. The report goes on, "Finally, it was possible to discover altogether 50 Polish agents and spies who were liquidated also." Thus Radetzky carries responsibility for the killing of 1460 Jews, 20 saboteurs and 50 Polish agents and spies. That Radetzky replaced Blobel when the latter was ill is confirmed by Blobel's own affidavit, Document Book No. I, Page 129 of the English, page 159 of the German, Document NO-3824, Prosecution's Exhibit 31.

Moreover, Radetzky, as I have already pointed out, admits himself that he had official knowledge of the fact that executions were carried out by Sonderkommando 4a. He admits having been in Rowno and Shitomir where mass killings were carried out. This is proved as to the town of Rowno by Operational Situation Report No. 19 which is in Document Book II-C on Page 46 of the English, 52 of the Germen, NO-2934, Prosecution Exhibit 78. This report states that Sonderkommando 4a had shot 240 Bolshevists and Jewish officials, and in respect to the activities of of the Sonderkommando 4a in Shitomir I want to refer to Document Book I, Page 127 of the English, 149 of the German, Document NO-3140, which is Prosecution Exhibit 30. This documents. proves that on the 19th of September, 1941, 3145 Jews were executed by Sonderkommando 4a. Radetzky further admits having joined Sonderkommando 4a after absence for illness in Charkov in March. 51 of the German. This is Document NO-3237 and will be Prosecution's Exhibit 138. Your Honors. This document proves that Einsatzgruppe C executed in Charkov 193 persons and 64 Jews. like to offer from Document Book III_C, Page 22 of the English, Page 30 of the German, Document NO_4771, which will be Prosecution's Exhibit 139. This document proves his membership in the SS from December 1939. his assignment to the Sonderkommando, Security Police and SD in May 1941, and his membership in the SD is proved by teletype which is on Page 8 of the document. These facts are also corroborated by the own affidavit on the defendant which is in Document Book III_C on Page 20 of the English, 27 of the German, Document 4438, which I have already introduced at Prosecution Exhibit 132, your Honors. responsibility of the Defendant Haensch. I refer to Document Book III-C on Page 20 of the English, 27 of the German, Document 4438, which I have already introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 132, your Honors.

responsibility of the Defendant Haensch. I refer to Document Book III-C, Page 35 of the English, 54 of the German, Document NO-4567, which I offer as Prosecution Exhibit 140. There Haensch admitted he was a commander of 4b from the middle of March until approximately the middle of June 1942, but he claims that he actually stayed with the Einsatzkommando only for about seven to eigh weeks. Somewhat contradictory to this statement is an admission on the next page, the second page of the document, Page 36 of the document book, that he was appointed as leader of Sonderkommando 4b by Heydrich in the beginning of 1942. He describes then his official functions, and I will skip this and only refer to Page 9 of the document. Page 43 of the document book, where he states that he watched three or four executions. Page GO of the English, Page 61 of the German, Prosecution's Exhibit 42, Document NO-3405, which is dated 16 January. This document proves that Haensch at that time was in command over Sonderkommando 4b. On page 4 of the original, Page 4 of the translation, Page 6 of the document book, the name Braune which originally appeared as commander of Sonderkommando 4b is crossed out and replaced by the name of Haensch in handwriting. On the same page the name of Blobel, which appears as commander of Sonderkommando 4a is corrected to Dr. Weinmann. This undoubtedly proves that Haensch had been replaced by Braune, no, that Haensch had replaced Braune and Weinmann had replaced Blobel at the time when this report was made That is on the 16th of January, 1942. This date is of certain importance, of the English, this is Document No_3340, Prosecution Exhibit 22, it shows the following entry.

I quote from Page 2. "Einsatzgruppe C; Location, Kiew: "During the period 14 January to 12 February 1942, 861 persons were shot by order of summary court by the Sonderkommando 4b. Of this number 649 were political officials, 52 saboteurs and partisans, and 139 Jews." your Honors find Document NO_3240, which is Prosecution Exhibit 80. There it is stated that Sonderkommando 4b executed a total 1317 persons. These two entries prove that Haensch did not only execute 861 persons, bu order of a Summary Court who sentenced these persons to death in a period of less than one month, but also used his own discretion for the execution of 1,317 people. of Document Book III-C, Page 51 of the English, 85a of the German, Document No_3261 which will be Prosecution's Exhibit 141. Your Honors, this is the SS personal record of Haensch and proves that he was a member of the SS and SD, both, after the 1st of September 1939, and that he received the death-head ring and the sword of honor.

I turn now to the case of the Defendant Fendler. I offer from Document Book III-C, Page 55 of the English, 89 of the German, Document NO-4144, which is Prosecution's Exhibit 142, where Fendler admits he was a member of Sonderkommando 4b from May to October, 1941. As to his position in the Sonderkommando, I do not Want to quote Paragraphs 3,4 and 5, but I shortly refer to the fact that he said here that he was the second highest ranking officer in this unit and that he often carried out the functions of a deputy to the leader of the unit. He further states that he never was officially informed that the execution had taken place by Einsatzkommando 4b at the time when he was in charge there, but he by no means denies that he unofficially knew that executions were held.

He admits having been in Tarnopol. In this connection I would turn to Document Book II-A, Page 81 of the English, 79 of the German. Your Honors. Document NO-2938, Prosecution's Exhibit 44 which shows on the bottom of the page that by Sonderkommando 4b 180 Jews who were used for excavation of corpses were slain afterwards by this Sonderkommando. Jewish residences were destroyed by members of the Waffen-SS by hand grenades and setting of fires. Honors, 52 of the German, Document NO-2934, Prosecution's Exhibit 78, which shows that in Tarnopol Einsatzgruppe 4b carried out 127 executions and liquidated 600 Jews by inducing a program which killed these 600 people. Fendler further admits in an affidavit that he was in Poltawa. In this connection. I would like to turn to Document Book II-C, Page 25 of the English, 23 of the German, Document NO2830, Prosecution's Exhibit 72, your Honors, which shows that the Sonderkommando 4b in Poltawa killed 186 persons cut of which were 161 Jews. the English, 40 of the German, Document 3155, Prosecution's Exhibit 38, which states that Special Kommando 4b executed another 103 political officials, 9 saboteurs and looters and 125 Jews.

COURT II-A CASE 9 to Document NO-4144 which is in Document Book III-C, on page 55 of the English, 89 of the German, which I have already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 142, and offer out of Document Book III-C, Page 57 of the German, page 92 of the English, I am sorry, Page 57 of the English, your Honors, 92 of the German, Document NO-4958, which will be Prosecution's Exhibit 143, the SS personal record of Fendler, in order to prove his membership in criminal organizations. to take up the Case of the Defendant Schulz. In this connection I have to refer to Document Book I, Page 96 01 the English, 134 of the German, prosecution's Exhibit 26, Document NO-3644, where he admits that he was commanding officer of Einsatzkommando 5 from May until the end of September, 1941. The affidavit further reveals that Schulz in the Einsatzkommando participated. in mass executions which were carried out in Lemberg by various units of the Einsatzgruppe C by order ot the Defendant Rasch. Schulz admits that he was informed by Rasch that not only guilty but also strongly suspected persons were to be executed, and that also Jewish females and Jewish children Were to be killed. In another affidavit of Schulz which is in Document Book III-C on Page 60-

DR. DURCHOLZ: Dr. Durcholz for the Defendant Schulz. is supposed to be proved by exits document of the Defendant Schulz, I should like to say the following: In the index of Document Book III-C, on page II of the index, with reference to the document NO-3644 Exhibit 26, the following is contained in the last Sentence, and I quote: "Jewish women and children were also executed." This is the end of COURT II-A CASE 9 Quotation.

I have to correct this: In the affidavit of the Defendant Schultz of the 26th of May of 1947, which is supposed to contain this sentence, in Document Book I, Page 134, I don't know, the English page number, under No. 7 the last Sentence contains the following, and I quote: "Jewish women and children would have to be shot in cases if necessary, so that there may be no avengers."1 This is the end of my quotation. From this document it becomes evident as is Seen from the context, that the defendant Schultz made known an order and decree issued by the Reichsfuehrer-SS, which also becomes evident iron the documents, at the beginning of August in Shitomir, that in future women and children would have to be shot. But on no account had this order already been issued in Lemberg, as it can be concluded from the index. That under the leaders of the Defendant Schulz women and children were never shot, I shall, when the case of the Defendant Schulz comes up, give evidence to that effect.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors Please, I do think that what was just introduced by Defense Counsel for Defendant Schulz could be better placed in His presentation of his case-in-chief than in this instance.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, he explained it in the last sentence, that he said he would present it when his case comes up.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: I just referred to another affidavit of Schulz Which is in Document Book III-C, which is on page 60, your Honors of the English, 96 of the German, Document NO-3841, which I shall introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 130. This document reveals that even Streckenbach, Heydrich's deputy in the RSHA considered the activity of the Einsatzgruppe to be murder.

DR. DURCHOLZ: Your Honor, to this also 1 want to say a few words. In this document-

THE PRESIDENT: Just lot me Say this. If you have an objection to the authenticity of the document make it; if you have an objection to the relevancy, make it; but if you are merely commenting on its discrepancy with some other document, then the objection is out of order. You will have an opportunity when your client takes the stand end when you make your argument to point out ell the discrepancies. You may attack the; document from any side, any angle.

DR. DURCHOLZ: I shall, when my case comes up, make the necessary correction, but I should like to say that the indices which are added to the document books to us are not always in agreement with the actual content of the document books. Therefore a correction would be necessary. That was the purpose of my coming, up here.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that is something you can do at the appropriate time,

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If your Honors please, I only want to add the order of presentation is by He means a part of the evidence. It was only to aid the Tribunal and the defense counsel in order to follow our presentation of the case in chief and to make it easier for the Tribunal and the defense counsel to follow.

THE PRESIDENT: Very Well, proceed.

MR HORLICK HOCHWALD: The evidence presented by the Prosecution gives a clear picture of Einsatzgruppe 5 at the time Schulz was in command. I would like to refer to Document Book II-C, Page 25, your Honors, Prosecution's Exhibit 72. It is on Page 23 01 the English, Page 41 of tile German document, NO-2030. In this document you will find that the number of people executed by this Einsatzkommando COURT II-A CASE 9 amounted, on the 20th 01 October, 1941, to 15,110.

Schultz was, according to his own admission in charge of this unit until the 26th of September of thesame year. Page 44 of the English, Page 40 of the German, Prosecution's Exhibit 38, Document NO-3155, Which shows in the period from 7 September to 5 October 8800 Jews were liquidated by Einsatzkommando 5.

As to Schulz' membership in the SS and the SD and the Gestapo, I offer from Document Book III-C, on Page 63 of the English, 103 of the German, Document NO-4298, as Prosecution's exhibit 144, your Honor. This document proves Schultz's membership in the SS, SD and the Gestapo, and his higher rank of a brigadier general in the police. These facts are also corroborated by his own affidavit, Which is in Document Book I, on Page 97, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 26, Document NO-3644. Book I, Page 111 of the English, 145 of the German, Prosecution's Exhibit 29, Document NO-4314, which is the affidavit of the Defendant Biberstein, where says that he was commander of Einsatzkommando 6 from Juno 1942 until June 1943. He alleges in his affidavit that his actual departure to Russia was delayed and that he did not arrive there earlier than in September. He further admits, and I quote from Paragraph 3 of the document, "2000 to 3000 executions Were performed in the area of my Einsatzkommando. I personally superintended an execution in Rostow which was performed by means of a gas-truck."

I do not want to take the Tribunal's time by quoting further from this interesting document, but I want to refer here to Document Book III-C. No, I want to offer here from COURT II-A CASE 9 Document Book III-C, Page 72 of the English, 116 of the German, the Document NO-2901, which will be Prosecution's Exhibit 145.

This is an SS personnel record, and there we find the correspondence between the Kommando of the Secret Police of the SD, Ukraine, and Biberstein. I only Want to quote Very shortly from this correspondence. There is a teletype, radio message of the 23rd May, 1943 to SS Sturmbannfuehrer Gottwald.

"The leadership of Enisatzkommando 6 was conferred upon me by the decree of the RSHA (Reich Main Security Office) dated 14.7.42 I A," and so forth. "Subordination. of Einsatzkommando 6 under Commander Rowno can only of accomplished, if the RHSA repeals the above decree and thus revokes my appointment. Since there is no report on this Here, I request immediate clarification." Signed by this defendant. the Einsatzgruppen and their units had one foremost task, to kill, to exterminate. Spoliation slave labor assignment were additional duties, Which were accomplished only as Secondary tasks in the frame of their main duties, to round up Soviet officials, commissars, and Jews for execution, and to carry out these executions. In the light of this evidence the guilt of Biberstein is amply corroborated.

Book I on page 112 of the English, page 145 of the German, Document NO-4314, Prosecution Exhibit 29, Biberstein admits having been a member of the SS and SD. He also was a leader in the Gestapo in Oppeln. These facts are confirmed by his SS personal record, which I just introduced in evidence. Document Book IIIB, page 70, of the English page 116 of the German Book, prosecution Exhibit 145, Document NO-2901, which proves that he was a member of the SS and the SD from November 1936 on and was active in the Gestapo office in Oppeln.

DR. FIGHT: (Attroney for the defendant Biberstein) I object to the submission of this last document. This is an excerpt from the personnel files and individual letters, especially the letter which was quoted by the prosecutor in which Biberstein objects to the submission to another command; it is not signed by him. It cannot be seen from the copy whether actually those letters were signed by the defendant. It is typewritten. It is initialed, but it is not signed.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, I referred to the document as being a radio message, A radio message cannot be signed, and I only want to state here that this is a captured document perfectly admissible.

THE PRESIDENT: I think that is correct, Dr. Ficht. Your objection is overruled.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I turn to Document Book III-C, Your Honors, page 74 of the English, 123 of the German, which is Document NO-4855, and which I offer as prosecution Exhibit l46, the affidavit of the Defendant Graf, where he admits that he was a member of Einsatzkommando 6 from the end of May, 1941, until approximately 15 October, 1942.

already in evidence, first to Document Book II-C, page 60 of the English, 65 of the German. This is Document NO-3240, Prosecution Exhibit 80; then to a document in Document Book II-A and on page 67, Your Honors, 61 of the German, the document starts, -- this is NO3405, Prosecution Exhibit 42, and to Document Book I, page 86, 87, to 88 of the English, 119 of the German, which is Prosecution Exhibit 22, Document NO-3340. All these documents refer to executions carried out by Einstazkommando 6 in the time when Graf was a member of this unit. 125 of the German, Graf's SS personnel record, which is Document NO-4801, as Prosecution Exhibit 147, in order to prove his membership in the SS and the SD with which he is charged in the indictment. Mr. Walton will now proceed with the presentation of Document Book III-D.

MR. WALTON: May it please Your Honors, Document Book III-D has to do with the personal responsibility of the defendants of Einstzgruppe D. Einsatzgruppe D operated in the period of time in which the crimes set forth in paragraph 9 of Count 1 of the indictment were committed. The area of operations in which the criminal acts occurred was roughly the coastal plain of the Black Sea and the Crimean Peninsula. This area has been more precisely stated by the Defendant Ohlendorf in his affidavit of 24 April 1907 in Document Book I, page 20, Document NO-2890, which has already been offered as Prosecution Exhibit 5. Paragraph 3, which states the boundaries of this area is found on page 22 of the English and on page 24 of the German Document Book. The many Operational Situation Reports and Activity Reports put into evidence by the prosecution in previously introduced document books confirms the fact that Einsatzgruppe D was active in this area during the period of time alleged in the indictment. The personal responsibility of the Defendants Otto Ohlendorf, Willy Seibert, Dr.

Dr. Werner Braune, Gustav Nosske, Felix Ruehl, and Heinz Schubert, for specific criminal acts will now be shown by documentary proof offered in evidence in the order of the defendants named. To speed this phase of the Prosecution's case, the documents implicating those defendants veil be offered without regard to the chronological order in which the various crimes were committed.

The case against the Defendant Ohlendorf: Ohlendorf is the No. 1 defendant in the dock. In paragraph 1 of his affidavit, dated 2 April 1947, the Defendant Ohlendorf states that he was a Commanding Officer of Einstzgruppe D from June 1941 to the end of June 1942. This document is in Document Book III-D, page 1, German Document Book Page 1, and is Document NO-2856, which is now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 148, In Paragraph 4 of this affidavit of 24 April 1947, which has been previously cited in Document Book I, page 20 in the English, 23 in the German, and isDocument NO-2890 already introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 5, the defendant shows that Einsatzgruppe 1) was composed of the Sonderkommandos 10-A, 10-B, 11-A, 11-B and Einsatzkommando 12. In an affidavit dated November 5, 1945, which is found in Document Book I, page 35, and is Document 2620-PS and found on page 40 of the German Document Book I, already offered asProsecutions Exhibit 9, Ohlendorf describes the activity of his organization as follows:

"When the German Army invaded Russia, I was leader of the Einsatzgruppe D in the southern sector and in the course of a year, during which I wasleader of the Einsatzgruppe D, it liquidated approximately 90,000 men, women, and children. The majority of those liquidated were Jews, but there were among them some Communist functionaries too." in detail the methods of performing these executions and this act is a concise and. graphic detail of the activities of the group. I will refrain from quoting from it. It's already in the document book.

MR. WALTON: This statement as contained in the paragraph just referred to by this defendant is reaffirmed by Ohlendorf in his affidavit made on 2 April 1947, which is in Document Book III-D, page 1, German pages 2 and 3, and is Document NO-2856 and was offered as Prosecution Exhibit 148. Ohlendorf in paragraph 3 thereof discusses his obedience to the orders of the RSHA and the Reichsfuehrer SS to execute certain undesirables of the civil population. He states, quote:

"A number of undesirable elements composed of Russians, Gypsies, and Jews and others, were executed in the area detailed to me. All Jews who were arrested as such were to be executed within my area. It was my wish that those executions be carried out in amanner and a fashion which was military and suitably humane under the circumstances." is slightly on the conservative side is shown by an official report of the activities of Einsatzgruppe D, which states, in effect, that its number of executions of Russian Nationals to the end of March 1942 was 91,678. The Tribunal's attention is called to the fact that this was approximately three months before Oldendorf relinquished his command. over Ohlendorf's statement is in Document Book II-D, page 1, Document NO-3359, and it is on page 7 of the German Document Book, It has already been offered as Prosecution Exhibit 84. How these numbers reached such staggering totals is shown by several documents. Document Book II-D, page 9, German Document Book II-D, page 8, Document NO-3159, already offered as Prosecution Exhibit 85 shows on page 18 of the English and on page 21 of the German that the Operational Situation Report No, 129, dated 5 November 1941, accounts for 11,037 Jews and 31 Communists as having been executed by the whole group. The total number of executions given to the date of reporting amounts to 31,767.

page 25 of the German, Document NO-2828 already introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 86 shows that by the middle of December 1941 the total number of executions performed by Einsatzgruppe D had risen to 54,696.

of Jews, Krimtchakes, Gypsies, and Communists. Krimtchakes were people of Jewish extraction who had lived in this area for several hundred years, but were classified as undesirables by the Einsatzgruppe. By 2 January 1942 when this report was published the total of executions of Einsatzgruppe D had risen to 75,881, as shown in Document Book II-D, page 22 of the English, page 27 of the German, and it is Document NO-2834which was offered as Prosecution Exhibit 87. The point referred to can be found on page 2 of the English Document Book and on page 33 of the German Document Book.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a little more slowly, Mr. Walton, because of the interpreters.

MR. WALTON: 17 days later Einsatzgruppe D reported a total of 80,160 persons executed, which is shown in Document Book II-D, page 29 of the English, page 34 of the German, and is Document NO-3338 (a). It has been offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 88. The point referred to can be found on page 31 of the English Document Book and on page 35 of the German. as Prosecution Exhibit 149 a summary or, conclusion of the condition of the areas of all the Insatzgruppen in the occupied territories of the East is given. The point referred to can be found on page 9 of the English copy and on page 11 of the German copy. It states in paragraph "C" headed "Jews":

"The solution of the Jewish problem which can be considered as almost solved and settled in the Ostland, continues in the remaining occupied territories of the East. The concentration of Jews in Ghettos has generally been carried out. Again and again the Jews who do not obey the official orders are seized and shot. In order to avoid the further spreading of the danger of epidemics, shootings of Jews became necessary at different occasions."

committed on those who we re mentally ill. In Operational Situation Report No. 45, dated 23 March 1942, which is found in Document Book II-A, page 124 of the English, page 138 of the German and is Document NO-3235, already introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 54, it is shown on page 126 of the English and 140 of the German that Einsatzgruppe D reported from its headquarters of Simferopol, quote:

"In the territory south of Karasubasar investigations for the preparation of extensive actions on the part of the Wehrmacht were carried out by the Kommando stationed there.

"The removal of asocial elements led to the fact that 800 gypsies and insane people were rendered harmless." 140, there is a typographical error, which says that 500 Gypsies and insane people were rendered harmless. I have taken the liberty, since this was in the archives of the court to have it brought into court and it is ready for inspection and the correction from 500, which is in the German Document Book, to 800 should be made. Counsel can satisfy themselves that the document has that number.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, defense counsel is so informed.

MR. WALTON: So that there would be no confusion in the RSHA or to anyone to whom these reports were distributed, the concluding paragraph of this report, which can be found on page 127 of the English and 141 of the German Einsatzgruppe D, in the manner of a summary or a recapitulation stated:

"During the period covered by report, 2,010 people were shot; amont these there were 678 Jews, 359 Communist officials, 153 partisans, and 810 asocial people, Gypsies, insane people, and saboteurs." summarily executed in Document Book III-D, page 11 of the English, page 12 of the German, Document NO-KW-604 is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 150.

This document is a report from Sonderkommando 11a, a sub-unit of Einsatzgruppe D, on a case of one Waldimir Romanenko, a Russian National who was arrested for sabotage. This report isdated 10 September 1941. On investigation, these charges against him were found to be without merit and the report concludes:

"As Romanenko seems to be a feeble-minded person who according to his own statement was already sent three times to a medical establishment, he was executed on 9 September 1941 for hereditary biological reasons." helpless victims and non-combatants, is shown by a signed report from Ohlendorf, dated 13 February 1942, which details the disposition that was made of money and Watches taken from unfortunates who were to be executed is shown in Document III-D on page 16 of the English, page 17 of the German and is Document NO-4489, just now introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 152. This is an excerpt from Operational Situation Report No. 103, dated 4 October 1941, wherein it is mentioned that Einsatzgruppe D put Jewish homes and their furniture at the disposal of the German settlers. religious grounds, the alternative was slave labor. Einsatzgruppe D contributed its efforst toward rounding up, registering, and committing to forced labor Jews and other persons. In Document Book III-D, page 17 of the English, page 30 of the German, Document NO-4538 is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 153 and this document shows that a kommando of Einsatzgruppe D on its own initiative caused a ghetto to be established at Kichinew and the Jews there were used for slave labor. An excerpt from Operational Situation Report No. 64, dated 26 August 1941, which is found in Document Book III-D, page 24 of the English, page 46 of the German and is Document NO-2040, I now offer as Prosecution's Exhibit 154. This document shows that Einsatzgruppe D in the vicinity of Mogilev put approximately 6,000 Jews who had been previously deported by the Roumanians into labor camps and forced thorn to work.

Jews who were re executed. In support of this allegation, the prosecution cites Document Book III-D, page 14 of the English, page 15 of the German, Document NOKW -631, and now offers it as Prosecution Exhibit 151. same transaction, the prosecution cites the affidavit of Heinz Schubert, which is in Document Book I, page 108 of the English, Document NO-3055. This document appears on page 141 of the German copy and paragrapsh 3 and 5 of that document. This document has already been introduced as Prosecution Exhibit 28. Schubert states that after having been ordered by Ohlendorf to supervise an execution carried out by a sub-unit of Einsatzgruppe D, he relates in detail the action he took concerning the property of those persons who were executed. The events narrated by him occurred in the vicinity of the Russian city of Simferopol some thime in December 1941. He states that among his duties and responsibilities involved in these executions were to supervise the collection of money, jewels and other valuables of people who were to be shot and to see that none of the SIPA and SD men converted them to private use but that they were forwarded to Einsatzgruppe D Headquarters for transfer to Berlin. Now he goes on in paragraph 5 to detail how this collection was made and the time it was made of the Jews on to the execution of the condemned, There is no point in reading this language.

Records before other Military Tribunals show only too well the hapless lot of the slave laborer under his German master. Of those who escaped immediate execution, or who were in German custody, either in the Ghettos or slave labor camps, they always were confronted with imminent death in the form of executions in reprisal for actions of others not apprehended by the Germans. Any act which the Germans denominated as "an act of sabotage" could bring immediate death to persons selected for a reprisal execution. Hundreds of Russian nationals, usually non-combattants were summarily executed on the slightest pretext. In Document Book II-C, page 17 and 18 of the English version, page 18 of the German version, Document NO-2952, already offered in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit 71 shows that a sub-unit of Einsatzgruppe D, in a report dated 29 July, 1941, from the Russian district of Belzy, reaped a terrible vengeance on Jews. An excerpt from paragraph 5 of this same document, which is a report from Einsatzkommando 10-A stated that the commando appropriately treated the Jewish counsel of elders in Belzy and other Jews totaling 45 for failing to comply with security police directives. It does not require a vivid imagination to deduce what happened to the 45 Jews who were, in the language of the report, appropriately handled. An excerpt from an operational situation report No. 45, dated 7th August, 1941, which is in Document Book II-D, on page 35 of the English, page 57 of the German, and is Document NO-2948, already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 89, shows that sub-units 10-A, 10-B, and 11 have reported. Einsatzkommando 10-A reports: "On account of riots and attacks against the Wehrmacht, raids were carried out against Jews. In the course of this 97 Jews were shot, and 1756 hostages were taken. Hostages are taken in each new place and they are executed on the slightest pretext.

Nine Jews ware shot in Jampol." quoting further from this same document, Einsatzkommando 11 reports from the Russian town of Kischinow: "Up to now 551 Jews have been liquidated, 151 of whom were liquidated because of participating in sabotage acts, and 400 as reprisals for shooting at a German medical truck, and for setting up signal flares for Red aviators, Jews are confined to the Ghetto, if they have not gone away." on page 43 of the German, Document NOKW-641 is not offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 155. This is a report forwarded by Seidel to Army Obercommando 121, and contains a letter from a SS second Lieutentant which carefully points out that the group under his command carried out executions exactly as ordered by Einsatzgruppe D. These documents constitute the Prosecution's case-in-chief against the defendant Ohlendorf, and all show dates within the time he was in command of Einsatzgruppe D. In support of the allegations as set forth in Count III of this indictment, charging Ohlendorf with membership in the SS and the SD, orgainzations declared to be criminal by the judgment of the International Military Tribunal, the Prosecution offers in Document Book III-D, page 27 of the English, page 48 of the German, Document NO-3146, correction -- Document 3196, as Prosecution's Exhibit 156. This document shows certain excerpts from the SS service record of the defendant Ohlendorf; gives his rank in the SS on page 29 of the English, on page 48 of the German; his membership in the SD on cage 27 of the English, and on page 49 of the German; his party and SS serial numbers on page 30 of the English and on page 51 of the German; and other pertinent information about his life history. Corroborating evidence about these facts concerning his life history and his professional activities is contained in his affidavit of 1 April 1947, which is in Document Book III-D, page 32 of the English, page 46 of the German, and is in paragraph 2 of Document NO-2857. It is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 157.

10 in the dock, which is next to the last man on the front row. The defendant Siebert was chief of Ohlendorf's staff for security questions and since he was a senior officer present, he acted as deputy for his chief when that individual was absent. At all times the defendant Siebert had access to the secret files of Einsatzgruppe D. This is shown by the affdavit of Ohlendorf which is in Document Book III-D, Document No. -- sorry, page 1, German, and Document Book page 1; and is Document NO-2856, which was offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 148. As co-defendant and fellow member of the group staff in Einsatzgruppe D, Heinz Schubert considered him in fact to be Ohlendorf's deputy. In Schubert's affidavit, which is in Document Book I, page 108 of the English, page 141 of the German, and is Document NO-3055 already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 28, Schubert so states. Seibert, in his own affidavit, says that in certain matters he was a deputy of Ohlendorf, and that one of his main tasks was the writing of the situational and activity reports. Seibert's affidavit is in Document Book III-D, page 34 of the English, page 60 of the German, and is Document NO-2859. This information is contained in paragraphs 1 and 2, and this document is offered now as Prosecution's Exhibit 158. page 65 of the German, which is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 159, there is a report, dated 9 October, 1941, made to AOK-11 by this defendant. In this report, Seibert asks for a time to be fised for an oral report on 11 October, the time to be agreed upon with the liaison officer.

This report is signed by Seibert with the title, with a designation of deputy. It shows clearly that Seibert was in full charge of Einsatzgruppe D during the absence of his regular commanding officer. page 69 of the German, Document NOK W 628 is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 160.

DR. ASCHENAUER: (Attorney for the Defendant Ohlendorf): Your Honor, I should like to admit this document only according to its probative value.

THE PRESIDENT: That will be so recorded.

MR. WALTON: This document is a 12 page report to army commander 11, which shows the activities of Einsatzgruppe D during the period from 1 February to 16th April, 1942 in which accounts of the executions of communists are given. Five of these executions were by hanging in public for the "purpose of intimidation" to the rest of the civilian population. This point can be found on page 42 of the English document book, and on page 73 of the German. This same report goes on to state that because the village Laki, L-a-k-i, had collaborated with partisan forces, it was evacuated of all those who were not immediately shot and was burned to the ground in reprisal. interest in the executions performed by Einsatzgruppe D is shown by his own affidavit, made on 1 April, 1947. This affidavit is in document Book III-D, on page 34 of the English, page 60 of the German, and is Document NO2859. It has already been introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 158. In paragraph 3 thereof he states "Ohlendorf took a number of inspection trips during the time I served with his group.

He accompanied me -- he was accompanied by me on almost all of these trips, and, if I remember rightly, executions took place on at least two of these trips. I was a witness to these executions but I was not assigned to supervise them. I also made inspection trips alone and reported the facts to Ohlendorf." in his affidaivt of 4th February, 1947, which is in Document Book I, page 17 of the English, page 19 of the German, and is Document NO-2716, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 4. In paragraph 8 of this document Schubert confirms the statements made by Seibert in his affidavit. The statement of Seibert that he never supervised any executions is contradicted by the affidavit of his former chief Ohlendorf, made on 2 April, 1947. In this affidavit, which is in Document Book III-D, page 1, and is Document NO-2856, already offered into evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit 148, Ohlendorf states in paragraph 3 thereof "The only people whom I generally assigned to inspections were, except for Schubert, Willy Seibert and Hans Gabel. The latter was Hauptmann of the Protective Police and Commander of the Protective Police Company attached to me. Details, such as whether and to which executions I sent the two last named, I can no longer remember."

Seibert was, of necessity, so close and complete in every detail, and since this defendant knew even the top secret natters in which Einsatzgruppe D was engaged, every document which deomonstrates the implication of Ohlendorf likewise names his executive officer and deputy, additionally, however, even in Ohlendorf's absence, and on his own initiative, he issued the necessary orders for the murder and illtreatment of Russian citizens. The responsibility of these two codefendants is the same, The forgoing documents show this co-responsibility. The documents referred to in the Prosecution's case against Willy Siebert all bear dates within the period when he was a deputy to Ohlendorf and, constitute the Prosecution's case in chief under Count I and II of the indictment. by Count III of the indictment, is shown in Document Book III-D, page 48 of the English, page 81 of the. German, and is Document NO-2858, and is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 161. In this affidavit the defendant Seibert states in paragraph 2 that he was a member of the Nazi Party, the general SS, and in paragraph 1, that he rose to a position of a subchief in the Reich's main office of the Security Service or SD.

DR. GAWLIK: (For the defendant Seibert) Your Honor, as far as the Prosecution his made statements saying that Seibert gave orders, I object to the statement, and I should ask for these statements to be striken from the record, as it does not become evident from either of the documents that the defendant Seibert gave any such orders. I am of the opinion that these statements have nothing to do with the case of the Prosecution.

THE RESIDENT: Upon do you base your statements, Mr. Walton?

MR. WALTON: I am sorry, sir. I want to know what document the Counsel for the Defense is objecting to. At the moment I waa stopped. I was talking about Seibert's affidavit with regard to his life history.

I don't quite the connection, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, do you refer to any particular document?

DR. GAWLIK: No, I am not referring to any particular document, but the general statement of the Prosecution which do not become evident from any document. The member of the Prosecution made the statement to the effect that it becomes evident from the document that the defendant Seibert gave orders for the murders, and I object to these statements as they do not become evident from any document.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, please always keep in mind that any statement by counsel is of itself not evidence. It must be supported by either a document or by the testimony of a witness in court, so if Mr. Walton made that declaration and it is not supported by any document, it of course can in no way affect Seibert; and you will have ample opportunity to challenge anything which Mr. Walton or any of the Prosecution counsel said.

DR. GAWALIK: I realize that as far as the probative value is concerned, but the general practice is to the effect that the Prosecution also objects to our statements, if during our case, we make any statement and we are always told that we must only submit the actual material evidence and that any statements: are a part of the plea. Therefore, I object new to the statements of the Prosecution, and, therefore, I would like this to be stricken from the record because I am of the opinion that it does not belong to the submission of these documents.

THE PRESIDENT : If Mr. Walt on makes any objections similar to the one which you are making now, I will tell him the some thing which I am now telling you.

DR. GAWLIK: Thank you. Your Honor.

MR. WALTON: At the time I had offered into evidence, Document Book III-D, on page 48 of the English, and on page 81 of the German, Document NO-2858, which I offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 161. In this affidavit, the defendant Seibert stated in paragraph 2 that He was a member of the Nazi Party, the General SS, and, in paragraph 1 that, he rose to a position of a sub-chief in the Reich's main office of the Security Service or the SD.

This statement is confirmed in Document Book III-D, on page 50 of the English, page 83 of the German, by Document NO-2969, now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 162. This latter document contains excerpts from the SS Service Record of Willy Seibert, now a defendant in this case. It shows his SS rank on page 50 of the English, page 83 of the German; his membership in the party on page 50 of the English, on page 83 of the German; his membership in the SS on the same pages, and his position in the SD on page 50 of the English, on page 87 of the German. Other and further facts of his life history are also shown.

The case against the defendant Dr. Werner Braune. Dr. Braune is seated No. 13 in the dock, second man on the second row from this end. According to paragraph 1 of his own statement, made on 8th July, 1947, the defendant Werner Braune was from 9th October - sorry- from October 1941 until August or September, 1942, chief of Einsatzkommando 11-B. This statement of Braune's is in Document Book III-D, page 54 and 55 of the English, and page 94 and 95 of the German, and is Document NO-4234, and is now oeffered as Prosecution's Exhibit 163.

DR. RIEDIGER(For the defendant Braune). Your Honor, as far as this document is concerned, Your Honor, I should like to draw the attention of the Tribunal to a mistake which was evidently made in the copying of the document, of the affidavit of Werner Braune. On page 4 of this affidavit it says that the defendant Wartenburg has sworn to this affidavit; that the defendant Braune has sworn to this affidavit. This statement has been signed by Mr. Wartenberg. Evidently this is incorrect, as becomes evident from the proceeding page, from the bottom of the page. I quote: "As I have made a statement not under oath, but only having given my word of honor, therefore I am prepared to make these statements the Tribunal under oath." I do not assume that Mr. Wartenberg did to this purposefully but I rather assume that this is a mistake; but, at the same time, I should like to have this mistake corrected before the Tribunal; and the statement does not only refer to the contents of the document, but also to the form in which it was submitted.

THE PRESIDENT : Mr. Walton, are you ready to give us any clarification of this?

MR. WALTON: If Your Honors please, according to my notes, from which I was reading, according to paragraph 1 of his own statement, I did not call this an affidavit. I am sure that it was an oversight on Mr. Wartenburg's part, but the prosecution does not consider this document any more than a statement of the defendant.

THE PRESIDENT: With that explanation, I presume, everything is cleared up.

DR. RIEDIGER: Yes, that is clear, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Walton.

MR. WALTON: In this document, in paragraph 3, he states that during the time that he was chief of Einsatzkommando 11-B a number of Jews were executed and that he can remember exactly an execution which took place in Simferopol a few days before Christmas. He also goes on to state how this execution was carried out, and what was done with the property and the clothing of the victims that were executed. He admits in this same document that gas vans were assigned to him for executions but he denies that they were used by him. His chief, Ohlendorf, in his affidavit, of 2nd April, 1947, which is in Document Book III-D, page 1 of the English, page 3 of the German, and is Document NO-2856, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 148, confirms this statement when he says in paragraph 3 that he, Ohlendorf, personally inspected executions which were carried out by Commando 11-B under the direction of Dr. Werner Braune.

The Operational Situation Report, No. 145, dated 12 December, 1941, which is in Document Book II-D, page 20, and is Document NO-2828, already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 86, it is shown that Einsatzgruppe D was credited with 2,929 executions, 19 of which were communists, and the rest Jews.

These were carried out in the Simferopol area in which at that time Einsatzkommando 11-B was located.

Another Operation Situation Report, which is No. 150, dated 2 January, 1942, in Document Book II-D, page 22 of the English, page 27 of the German, and is Document NO-2834, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 87, shows that at this time Einsatzkommando 11-B had its headquarters at Simferopol with parts of the command in Aluschta, Karasubar and Eupatoria. Under the report from Einsatzgruppe D, the fourth sub-head, on page 28 of the English, page 33 of the German, it is denominated Jews and the following is stated: "Simferopol, Jewpatoria, Aluschta, Karasubasar, Kertsch and Feodosie and other districts of the Western Crimea have been cleaned of Jews. From 16 November, through 15th December, 1941, 17,645 Jews, 2,504 Krimtschaks, 824 gypsies and 212 communits and partisans have been shot.

It goes on further, to quote:

"Rumors about executions in other areas rendered action at Simferopol very difficult. Reports about actions against Jews gradually filter through from fleeing Jews, Russians, and also from unguarded talks of German soldiers." was attached was performing its share of executions in this area, and the fact of executions was known not only to the German soldiers but was generally known to the population of that area. The often-cited document in Document Book I, pages 108/109 of the English, page 141 of the German, which is Document NO-3055, has already been introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit 28. This is a Schubert affidavit of 24 February 1947, which shows in paragraph 3 that he witnessed an execution inthe Simferopol area in December 1941, of between seven and eight hundred persons and that Einsatzkommando 11b was in charge of the execution. German, Document NO-3339, was offered as Prosecution Exhibit 93, and is an Operational Situation Report No. 170, and shows that, quote:

"From 9 January to 15 February more than 300 Jews were apprehended in Simferopol and executed. By this, the number of persons executed in Simferopol increased to almost 10,000 Jews, about 300 more than the number of Jews registered. In the other Kommando areas as well, 100 to 200 were still disposed of in each instance." And it can be easily deduced from these reports that Einsatzkommando 11b contributed to these executions. However, the prosecution does not wholly rely upon these documents by which to implicate this defendant. Direct documentary proof, showing Braune's actual participation and command function in carrying out executions is available.

German --- Document NOKW- 1863, is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 164.

This document is an Operational Order signed by Braune for Sonderkommando 11b and dated 12 January 1942. This orders his command to conduct a surprise raid with the aim of seizing unreliable elements such as partisans, saboteurs, possible enemy troops, parachutists in civilian clothes, Jews, leading Communists, etc. Furthermore, it states that the leader of Sonderkommando 11 b, Dr. Braune, will be in charge of the Operation. This Order admittedly does not show its own execution. However, Dr. Braune will soon have ample opportunity to relate the final results of the raid. is in Document Book III-D, page 62 of the English, page 104 of the German, and is Document NOKW-584, is now offered as Prosecution Exhibit 165. This document describes a certain reprisal action which occurred in Eupatoria on 7 January 1942. The Wehrmacht officer was in charge of the operation and to assist him, Einsatzgruppe D headquarters assigned three SS Fuehrers, among them Dr. Braune. courtyard. 1184 men were selected from thisgroup, marched off and shot. This report specifically states that Dr. Braune gave the order for the execution detail to fire. in paragraph 9(F) under Count One of the Indictment, and the documents so introduced all apply to the period when the defendant Braune was in command of Einsatzkommando 11 b. in Count Three of the Indictment, is contained in an already cited document, in Document Book III-D, page 54 of the English, page 94 of the German, and is Document NO-4243, which is Prosecution's Exhibit 163. In paragraph 2 thereof Braune's membership in the Nazi Partyand the General SS is shown.

member of the Security Service of the SD and the Gestapo. These statements are confirmed in Document Book III-D, page 64 of the English, page 106 of the German, in Document NO-3249, which is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 166. This document shows excerpts from the SS Service Record of Dr. Werner Braune. It shows his SS rank, his membership in the SD and the GEstapo, his Party and SS serial numbers, and other pertinent facts of his life history. in Document NO-4146, now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 167, in paragraph 1 of this document, Nosske states that he was in command of Einsatzkommando 12 from June 1941 to March 1942. In this same affidavit, in paragraph 4, he states that he was assigned to duty in Berlin for the purpose of a taking over the staff command of Security Police and SD. However, because of the killing of Heydrich, Chief of the Security Police and SD, the formation of this organization never occurred as planned. He does, however, state that as a senior officer present, he took charge of the weekly meetings of the Referents of the RSHA, in which matters concerning the occupied Eastern territories were discussed and appropriate action taken. So far as it is known, he was in B erlin until shortly before the collapse of the Third Reich. German, Document NO-2841, has already been offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 94. In this document there is an excerpt from Operational Situation Report No. 61, dated 23 August 1941, which shows the activities of Einsatzkommando 12 during the month of August 1941. It states that in the Babtschinzy area, resistance was partially shown to an orderly havesting of the crops. This resistance was said to be instigated by Jews. As a counter measure or reprisal, 94 Jews were executed.

German, Document NOKW-634, is offered as Prosecution Exhibit 168. This is a report from the defendant Seibert, as the executive officer of Einsatzgruppe D to the AOK 11, dated 9 October 1941. In this report it is shown that 11 parachutists were "rendered harmless" by Einsatzkommmando 12. German, Document NO-3147 has been offered as Prosecution Exhibit 96. This is an excerpt from the Operational Situation Report No. 95, and is dated 26 September 1941.

satzkommando 12 was located at this time, several Soviet party officials and eight NKWD officials were rendered harmless: This report also shows that in less than a month the total number of executions for the group was 8890 Jews and communists, and that all told the group had at the date of reporting liquidated 13,315 persons. It seems reasonable to think that Einsatzkommando 12 contributed its share to these totals. Document NO-2837 which was offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 56; this document is an excerpt from an operational situation report number 67, dated 29 August 1941, and shows that approximately 27,500 Jews had been driven back into the Rumanian area, that 1265, mostly young Jews, were shot by units of Einsatzgruppe D. is in Document Book III-D, page 76 of the English, page 121 of the German, and is document NO-4149, we now offer as Prosecution's Exhibit 169. Ruehl confirms in part the facts in the operational situation report No. 67 just offered.

DR. LINCK: (Dr. Linch for the defendant Ruehl.) - The objections to this document and its submission are on the same line as were raised yesterday for Document NO-4314, Exhibit 29, by my colleague Dr. Bergold for the defendant Biberstein. We refer to the history of the affidavit as a part of a longer statement; as it has been mentioned yesterday, I may come back to this to take care of my case but I should like to make the following two statements. as it says in the English as well as in the German document book, but on the 26th of June, which a look into the original will prove. I do not emphasize this because I want to be righteous but because I want to state that it might be of importance during the taking up of my case.

The second thing is the following. There is a translation mistake which is not without significance; in the english document book page 77 in the middle of the page, on page 123 of the German document book IIIb, it becomes evident from this that the statement of the defendant Ruehl in the reports to Ohlendorf where he asks for a decision has been translated by "we decided" -- "Wir entschlossen." from that that Ruehl had any power of decision.

THE PRESIDENT: What should the word be instead of "we"?

DR. LINCK: "It was decided" that means Ohlendorf, of course.

THE PRESIDENT: You may recall that to the Tribunal's attention when you take up your client's case.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Court, the Prosecution desires that the official translator render an official translation of the contested part of this affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: You mean now?

MR. WALTON: No, sir. When it becomes necessary for the Court to consider it.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that is right. That right will be reserved to the Prosecution.

MR. WALTON: Ruehl in paragraph 3 of his affidavit relates that he delivered a large transport of Jews to the area occupied by Einsatzkommando 12. In his affidavit which is in Document Book III-D, page 69 of the English, page 114 of the German, and is Document NO-4146, has already been offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 167, this defendant relates what assignment he received when he reached Berlin. Thus, the defendant Gustav Nosske is shown to be personally implicated in the crimes through active command of Einsatzkommando 12. His criminal liability for the crime charged in paragraph 9-G under count 1 of the in dictment is shown.

Einsatzgruppen in Berlin as shown by the documents dealing with these activities while on duty at the RSHA there. As in the other cases, documents introduced by the Prosecution against this defendant, all refer to the period in which he was commander of Einsatzkommando 12, or as chief of the Kommando staff of the RSHA in Berlin. minal as charged in count 3 of the indictment is shown in Document Book III-D, page 69 of the English, page 114 of the German, Document NO-4146already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 167. These statements are confirmed in Document Book III-D, page 80 of the English, page 126 of the German by Document NO-3505 which is now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 170. Nosske. It shows his SS rank, his membership in the SD, and the Gestapo, his party and SS serial numbers and other pertinent facts of life history.

The case against the defendant Felix Ruehl. In Document Book III-D page 76 of the English, page 121 of the German, Document NO-4149, has already been offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 169. This is the affidavit by the defendant Ruehl. In paragraph 1 of this document, Ruehl states that from May until October, 1941, he was assigned to Sonderkommando 10-B in Russia. In paragraph 4 of this document, he states and I quote:

"Immediately after the arrival of Sonderkommando 10-B at Czernowitz, approximately 50 inhabitants were delivered to the Kommando with the order to shoot them, as they were said to have participated in a surprise attack against Rumanian troops, when these arrived at Czernowitz."

"Sturmbannfuehrer Alois Prestera refused at first to carry out the executions but in the end he gave into the wishes of the Rumanians and had 12 or 15 of these people shot by the Kommando.

Additional 20 or 30 persons were then shot by the Rumanians, later. The executed people were Jews for the most part. I did not attend these shootings but got my official notice thereof in the time of my service."

In this connection and in confirmation that the defendant's statement is credible, the Prosecution cites Document Book II-D, page 45 of the English, page 48 of the German, Document NOKW-587 already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 92. This document, dated 9 July 1941, is a report of the commanding officer -- sorry, report to the commanding officer of Army group South and shows that on 6 July 1941, this Kommando 10-B reached the city of Czernozitz. However, the defendant's contention that only a few Jews were shot is not borne out by this report.

This report minces no words when it says "Immediately after arrival we contacted the competent commander, Military Police Major Luzansky, as well as the other Rumanian posts which were present here, and started a search of the town for politically suspected elements. On the 7th of this month, the arresting of the communists and Jews on the basis of the search lists that were already made out and of the newly made up lists. On the 8th instant a major raid was carried through, in the course of which the Jewish leadership could be caught almost completely. The following day about a hundred Jewish communists were shot by the Kommand, together with the execution of Jews by the Rumanian Army and police force, a total of over 500 Jews have been shot in the course of 8 and 9 July. One kommand was sent to Hole for a search. A report has not yet been received."

Five days later, by operational situation report No. 22, dated 14 July 1941, this Kommando was able to report on events that took place in the town of Katyn or Hodyn.

cution's Exhibit 91. Kommando 10-B reported that in this town all intellectual Jews were arrested and treated accordingly.

May it please the Tribunal the words "arrested and treated accordingly" do not appear on the English translation. That will be on page 43. However, a check of the German copies shows that that phrase appears in German in their books.

It should be where his word "and" is, and next to the last sentence -- the third sentence from the bottom, and the word "and" should come out, and the period be substituted, and in the previous sentence "Arrested and treated accordingly" should be added, to that previous sentence.

THE PRESIDENT: You are sure that those words do appear in the German text?

MR WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, I have had three German speaking persons checking on that.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, in that event I think we can take the liberty of adding those words. to the English text.

MR WALTON: To the English, yes, sir. After all details were in, and more evidence was avilable, operational situation report No. 40, dated 1 August 1947, which is in Document Book II-D, page 37 of the English, page 40 of the German, and is Document NO-2950, already has been offered as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 91. This shows the activities of Einsatzgruppe D to B --- correction, may it please the Tribunal, it should be Prosecution's Exhibit No. 90, Document NO-2950. And I quote: "In cooperation with the Rumania Police there have been shot dead in Czernowitz 682 of the approximately 1200 arrested Jews." And in the further paragraph it says and I quote: "In the area of Czernowitz, Hotin has been passed, whereby 150 Jews and Communists have been liquidated." The defendant Ruehl, SS-Hauptssturmfuehfer, or captain, shows was in a position of staff responsibility, even second in command of Einsatzkommando 10-B, in accordance with his own statement compared with his commanding officer as representative of Sonderkommando of Einsatzkommando 10-B. the German, Document NO-4149, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 169, he gives an account of his conferences with his commanding officer, and the action which he took following the conference with his Chief, Ohlendorf.

Two things can be noted, his position, at least in this incident entitled him to command function so that he could confer with the general, and give orders to Obersturmbannfuehrer Lippert, a man who held a higher rank. Second, that this incident here related by the defendant took place in the Mogilew-Podolsk area. situation report No. 45, dated 7 August 1941, which is in Document Book II-D, on page 33 of the English, and page 27 of the German, and is Document NO-2948, already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 89. This document shows that Sonderkommando 10-D was then stationed in the Mogilew-Podolsk area, and prevented the mass departure of Jews into territory under the domination of Germans.

The next operational situation report No. 64, dated 26 August 1941 which is in Document Book III-D, page 24 of the English, and page 46 of the German, and is Document NO-2840, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 154, shows that Mogilew-Podolsk area, Godasr area, approximately six-thousand Jews who had been deported from Rumania, were interned and forced to work. This report further shows that plans were already made to concentrate the Jews in Mogilew in a separate part of town. In this proof which shows that the defendant Ruehl had command functions in Sonderkommando 10-B, during the time the offenses occurred, as shown by the documents I cited here, and, upon these facts the Prosecution charges him with criminal responsibility; only Rosterer had outranked him in this sub-unit of Einsatzgruppe-D. The membership of this defendant in criminal organizations as charged in Count 3 of the Indictment, is shown by paragraph one and two, of Ruehl's affidavit, which is above cited document, and is found in Document Book III-D, page 76 of the English, being Document NO-4149, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 169. This information is confirmed in Document Book III-D, page 90 of the English, and page 136 of the German, and is Document NO-4808, now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 171.

That latter document shows excerpts - -

DR ASCHENAUER: Mr. President. I beg your pardon, Your Honor, if at this time I interrupt you in asking would it be possible for the Prosecution to come to its end as quickly as possible, considering the shortness of our preparation and lack of time for our submitting our case, it is absolutely necessary that at six o'clock we should speak with the defendants, which is hardly possible if the proceedings are not finished before six o'clock.

THE PRESIDENT: It was only to allow you additional time to prepare your case that we thought that if we were to terminate the prosecution today, because if they finish today, then you have all of tomorrow, Thursday, and Friday and Saturday for preparations, whereas, if we must come back tomorrow, naturally, you lose just that much time for your preparation. I don't think Mr Walton has very much more.

MR WALTON: Three pages.

THE PRESIDENT: I think we will finish very quickly.

MR WALTON: Only the case against the defendant Schubert, Your Honors, and then I will finish.

MR WALTON: I was quoting from Document NO-4804, which is found on page 90 of the English book, and page 136 of the German book, and is Prosecution's Exhibit No. 171, which are excerpts from the service record of Felix Ruehl, which gives his rank in the SS, his membership in the Gestapo, his Party and SS serial numbers, and other pertinent information about his life history. Case against the defendant Heinz Schubert. The defendant Heinz Schubert was assigned for duty in Einsatzgruppe-D in October 1941; his co-defendant Otto Ohlendorf as his commanding officer made Schubert his adjutant and this defendant served in this capacity during the entire time Ohlendorf remained in command, until June 1942. Schubert left for Berlin when Ohlendorf relinquished command of Einsatzgruppe-D. It is shown by paragraph 2 of Schubert's affidavit, dated 24 February 1947, which is Document NO-3055, in Document Book I, page 108 of the English, page 141 of the German, and is already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 28.

I might also point out there, if it please the Tribunal, that there is a typographical error in the German which states that Schubert was on duty with Einsatzgruppe-D until June 1944. It whould be 1942. Authority for same is as stated previously.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR WALTON: The duties of the adjutant of the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe-D are described several documents. In Document Book III-D, page 34, Document NO-2859, which has been introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 158 in paragraph 2 of this document, which is an affidavit by Willy Seibert, it shows that the defendant Schubert composed certain reports of Einsatzgruppe-D from time to time. His duties as adjutant, are however, clearly outlined in Paragraph two in the affidavit of Ohlendorf, made on 2 April 1947, which is in Document Book III-D, page 1, Document NO-2856, already introduced as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 148. There is no point in detailing his duties.

THE PRESIDENT: No.

MR WALTON: That can be skipped. Occasionally, however, the adjutant of Einsatzgruppe-D was assigned to more important duties. In paragraph three of the same document just cited Ohlendorf states that he sent Schubert as his representative to inspect executions. The inspections of an execution is admitted by the defendant Schubert's own affidavit of 24 February 1947, which has been often cited before.

that he sent Schubert as a representative to inspect executions. The inspection of an execution is admitted by the Defendant Schubert's own affidavit of 24 February, 1947, which has been often cited before. For the record it is in Document Book I, Page 108 of the English, Page 141 of the German, Document NO-3055, Prosecution's Exhibit 28, in which he states in December 1941 he witnessed an execution near Simferopol. I should like to call the Tribunal's attendion to Schubert's assertion in Paragraph 7 of his affidavit of 4 February 1947, which is in Document Book I, Page 17 in the English document book, Page 19 of the German, and is Document NO-2716, already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 4, in which he states that the precise totals of executions were not known to him. However, I am speaking of the contents of the reports concerning activities of the group that were regularly sent from his headquarters to Berlin. He states that these reports contained exact details and desreiptions of the places which the actions had taken place, the courseof the operations, losses, the number of places destroyed and persons killed, arrest of agents,report on interrogations and reports on the civilian sector. criminal as charged in Count 3 of the indictment is shown by Paragraph 3 of the Defendant's affidavit of 4 February 1947, above cited as being in Document Book I, Page 17 of the English, Page 19 of the German, and which is Document No-2716 already offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 4. Statements of this Defendant concerning his membership in these criminal organizations are confirmed in Document Book III-D, Page 99 of the English, Page 146 of the German, and is Document NO-3244, now offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 172. This document shows certain excerpts from the SS service record of Heinz Hermann Schubert, a defendant in this case. It shows his membership in the SS and in the SD, his party and SS serial numbers, and other pertinent facts about his life history.

Document Book III-D on the personal responsibility of the defendants in Einsatzgruppe D.

MR. FERENCZ: May it please your Honors, I would like to thank the Tribunal for their patience in remaining longer than the usual session, and I would like to point out that we have only one more item in the presentation of our case in chief. This is a documentary film which is now ready to be shown in Courtroom I, and which lasts about thirty minutes. In order that the defense counsel may be given full opportunity to confer with their clients and to meet their objection that an additional running of the court at this time would prevent that, I would like to join in their request that the court be in recess for a period of several days after the presentation of the Prosecution's case in order to enable them to have sufficient time to prepare their defense, and I would like to request the court to remain for another thirty minutes so that we may conclude our case.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, do you intend to show that exhibit in this courtroom or Courtroom No. I

MR. FERENCZ: We expect to show it in Courtroom No. I, your Honor, and we would first like to introduce just the certificate which precedes the showing of this exhibit.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, just before you do that I would like to ask, have you presented all the documents in all the document books?

MR. FERENCZ: We have, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. GAWLIK: (For Defendants Naumann and Seibert, your Honor, I object to the showing of this film, and I would like to ask the Prosecution to tell us what the probative value of this film would be? This film has been shown, and in my opinion this film has no probative value whatever.

THE PRESIDENT: You say it has been shown?

DR. GAWLIK: The film has been shown to the defense counsels last week in order to give them opportunity to raise objections.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, we invited the defense counsel to see a showing of the film before we cut some of the film, inasmuch as part of it had no relation to this case. We are introducing this film for the purpose of showing some of the mass graves which were found by the Russian soldiers when they returned to territories which had been occupied by the Einsatzgruppen. The films were taken by Russian troops of places where the Merman troops had been, and they opened the mass graves in the cities in which we charge these defendants with having committed crimes.

THE PRESIDENT: It would appear to the Tribunal from what you have said that this exhibit could well form part of the res gestae of the case, and whatever comments you wish to make on it later, of course you are free to do so. whether you may not have the opportunity of seeing your clients after the showing of this picture, even if it is one-half hour later, and I have been assured that this may be done. I would like to know in which room you usually interview your clients so that the necessary arrangements can be made.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, in Room 57 and in the gymnasium, in Room 57 and in the gymnasium.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I have another suggestion about the film. I should like to suggest that the film should be shown without any commentary, as a mute film, because any oral statements can only be introduced by witnesses, or by the way of witnesses, or there should be a witness who explains the film so that we have the opportunity to crossexamine this witness. We do not know who this person is who explains the film or who makes the statements, and we have no opportunity to rectify these statements. Then this film should be shown as is done by a silent film, without any commentary.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honors please, this film was introduced as an exhibit before the International Military Tribunal. The Tribunal there accepted it with the English commentary. I believe the Tribunal is in a position to judge what is evidence and what is not evidence, and we ask therefore that the film be shown as it was accepted by the International Military Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: I can assure Dr. Gawlik that the Tribunal will not be emotionally disturbed by any commentary made by any narrator. We will merely view what is shown to us, and whatever is to be said about the film can be said by defense counsel and by Prosecution. It would require too much of a mechanical alteration to attempt to remove the audible accompaniment to the film at this time, and I think it will be much simpler if we will now recess and reconvene immediately in Courtroom No. I. Is there anything further to be said?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honor. I would just like to offer the exhibit which is the certificate preceding this film. I offer now as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 173 Document No. USSR-81. This is the certificate of the Russian cinema operators and has already been given to the defense counsel in German. The English copy will be made available to the Tribunal very shortly.

DR. FICHT: Dr. Ficht for the Defendant Biberstein. original of these documents are only available until tomorrow exclusively, because after that they will be transported to Berlin. It appears to me that on the basis of today's proceedings it seems necessary that stipulations about various points should be made with our clients, and I should like you to make it possible for us to keep the documents, the original documents, a little longer, at least a day longer.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know whether Colonel Helm would object to remaining over one more day, Mr. Ferencz?

MR. FERENCZ: Unfortunately, your Honor, Colonel Helm is not here. I know that he has important business in Berlin. However, I believe I can persuade him to leave the documents here one day longer if necessary.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will recess only momentarily and reconvene in Courtroom No. I. The defendants will be escorted there, of course, under guard.

THE MARSHAL: THE Tribunal is agian in session.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honors please, the translating system is not functioning and we will therefore translate directly from the floor to the defense counsel. The sound track is in English and the defense counsel have a German translation of the sound track in their possession. Therefore, it will not be necessary to translate as the film is being shown. We have a copy of the the sound track for the Tribunal and it will be in English.

THE PRESIDENT: Very Well.

MR. FERENCZ: The prosecution is now ready to show the next document.

(prosecution Exhibit No. 173 was then shown.)

MR. FERENCZ: If Your honors please, that is the conclusion of the prosecution's Case-in-Chief.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now recess and reconvene next Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock in Courtroom No. 11, Room 581. The Tribunal will now rise.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 6 October 1947, at 0930 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: For the purpose of the record, it will be noted that Otto Rasch and Eduard Strauch, because of illness, are not present in Court and will be excused from today's session. and reconvened in Courtroom No. 1, Dr. Gawlik, I think, made an objection to the showing of a motion picture exhibit, which was about to be projected in Courtroom No. 1. We overruled the objection, because by the very nature of things, it was impossible for the Tribunal to know just what the exhibit consisted of. We did witness the motion picture and we ere now convinced that the objection was in order and should have been sustained. It was not apparent to the Tribunal how this motion picture exhibit in any way implicated individually any of the defendants. Therefore, the objection is now sustained and the motion picture will have no effect upon the disposition of this case.

I might add, personally. that I could not in any way use that exhibit in the disposition of this case, because I closed my eyes after the first five minutes.

Dr. Aschenauer, you may now proceed with the opening statement.

Mr. President High Tribunal! the Case of the United States versus Ohlendorf, at al, it will be the task of the Defense to make their comments concerning the documents themselves. The Defense will be able to point out errors, to make clear to the Tribunal points which are contradictions in themselves, thus destroying in some cases the value the documents possess as evidence, as well as reducing the value of the entire evidence brought forth by the Prosecution.

However, all this does not alter the fact that executions took place. It is therefore the duty of the Defense to discuss how this gruesome drama in the East come to pass. they committed I. The acts with which they are charged

a) in presumed self-defense on behalf of a third party(so-called act for the presumed protection of third parties (Putativnothilfe) is the established technical term of the German legal language).

b) under conditions of presumed emergency to act for the rescue of a third party from immediate, otherwise unavoidable danger (socalled "Putativnotstand" according to German manner of speaking). This defense is legally of importance as there exist no national legal code and no national penal system in which the exonerating reasons advanced by the defendants do not carry some weight. How these reasons are designated in the terminology of the individual national penal systems is irrelevant; irrelevant is also, for the time being, to what extent these reasons constitute exemption from punishment or extenuating circumstances, whether they can be regarded as eliminating the prerequisite of unlawfulness, as eliminating the prerequisite of guilt, or as extenuating circumstances; essential at the moment is only the very general assertion that these reasons may influence "whether" and "how" to punish and must therefore be examined. possible when the legal principles have been clearly established according to which the conditions and consequences of the reasons for exoneration from guilt or instigation of punishment are to be judged. This point must be cleared up first. 1) The so-called General Regulations of Law No. 10 laying down the constituent elements of a crims. On the contrary, every national penal code contains a great number of regulations which determine the general conditions which make an act a punishable offense, conditions which are fundamentally common to all crimes, be this in the form of a definite decree, be it in the form of a common law brought into a system by decisions of trial courts or by publications of members of the legal profession.

Into this group fall among others the regulations pertaining to causality, intent and negligence, attempt and preparatory acts, perpetration itself, and mere participation, soundness of mind and age limit, periods of limitation, further, which is of importance for the following, the regulations concerning self-defense, including presumed self-defense (Putativnotwehr) and the regulations concerning acts committed for the protection of other persons in danger, including the cases where this danger is only presumed.

None of this applies to Law No. 10. Apart from instituting by implication the principle "nulla poena sine lege poenali praevia" to the negative, it merely contains regulations stipulating the nonlimitation of certain acts, the legal irrelevance of the fact that the acts were committed by responsible officials and the instigating fact that the acts were committed upon orders. Other regulations which normally form part of the "General Regulations" of every penal code are not contained in the law.

There can be no doubt (and on the occasion of actual cases the Military Tribunals themselves made statements to this effect) that the silence of Law No. 10 is not to be interpreted in such a way as if the reasons, circumstances and conditions which make an act a punishable offense or exclude punishment should have no bearing. There is no question of that. Circumstances such as the regulations concerning soundness of mind, age limit as far as guilt is concerned, selfdefense and acts committed under the pressure of emergency, etc. regardless of whether they are ruled by written law or by common law, are simply indispensable.

The question is merely which sources are to be drawn open for the problems not settled by Law No. 10.

If Law No. 10 were a so-called special national law, it would be very simile to answer this question. One would only have to fall back on the general regulations of the Penal code of that country which enacted this law, just as the so-called penal by-laws of the German law forge "General Regulations" of their own and refer to the corresponding general regulations of the German Penal Code. However, Law

No. 10 is barred from the use of this possibility. The reason is that this law, owing to its origin, is an international agreement, made by the four signatory powers for the detailed implementation of the Moscow Declaration of 30 October 1943 and the London Declaration of 8 August 1945. However, this agreement was made by four sovereign powers of equal rights, each of which had its own penal system. Thus it is impossible simply to use the pertinent regulations of the Code Penal, the Soviet penal Code 1926, the English or American Penal Law as "General Regulations" of Law No. 10. 2) Which legal system is to form the basis of the "General Regulations" of Law No. 10?

Here the following fundamental possibilities exist:

a) Applicable is the law of this state which administers justice in the actual case. In the case at hand the Tribunal would therefore have to draw upon the general regulations of the penal law of the United States of America to fill the gaps of Law No. 10.

This solution would have one undeniable advantage: namely, an exact knowledge of the applicable laws on the part of the Tribunal which will make the decision. On the other hand, these advantages are outweighed by considerable disadvantages. There is, first of all, the question whether Federal Penal Law or the penal law of one single state would be applicable. As the latterpossibility is excluded, the gaps of Law No. 10 would have to be filled by the Federal Penal Law of the USA. To judge acts under the pressure of emergency end in self-defense in accordance with the Federal Penal Law of the USA, however, calls forth the same doubts as those which speak against the supplementary use of the Angle-American legal system when judging European continental legal conditions.

The doctrine of these legal systems on the rules governing acts of selfdefense and acts committed in a state of emergency, rules developed by Case Law, would be so alien to European legal thought, that it is bound to produce misleading results if applied to the conduct of the Defendant. According to American law, the scope of the rules governing acts of self-defense is extremely narrow, if compared with the European concept; the principles of the rules governing acts committed in assumed self defense are not even elucidated. Similar to English law, selfdefense forms part of the constituent elements of a crime and, therefore, does not carry the same comprehensive and fundamental importance as it has in European law. Therefore, the closing of gaps left in Law No. 10 with American statutary or common law, would no doubt violate the predominant principle that an act can only be completely judged if presented in its social and legal context; it would not be in conformity with the principle of material justice, as postulated in Law No. 10, if principles alien to the German and European concept of law were applied, in considering legally relevant varieties of conduct, such as acting in emergency or in presumed emergency, acting in self-defense or in presumed self-defense. supplement application of the legal code of the nation by which the Court is formed in the case. The evaluation of the Defendant's actions would differ - and this would have effects contrary to just punishment if each Court were to fall back on its own national law. For in that case it would be unavoidable that the interpretation of the concept of mental sanity, by e.g. a French court should differ from the one, say, of an English Court.

The result would he that, given identical cases the difference in age limits would also have to be considered - one Defendant would have to be acquitted, while the other would have to be sentenced, because he happened to be handed over to a Court of a different Allied nation. The supplementary application of the LEX FORI does not therefore lead to a satisfactory solution.

b) The national law of the defendant should be applied. In order to close the gaps left in Law No. 10 in the field of general regulations, the general part of the German Criminal Code would therefore have to be applied in case this doctrine is followed. the Court is A PRIORI not familiar with that law. This, however, is outweighed by considerable advantages. The general part of the German Penal Code is (as are the Austrian, Swiss, and Russian Laws) a characteristic representative of the European legal system with its tendency to lay down firm, and at the same time general rules, especially in respect to acts committed in a state of emergency and in self-defense. Furthermore, that law could in fact, and not only in hypothesis, be considered the guiding principle for the conduct of the Defendant. The Defendants are also psychologically forced to admit the validity of these law statutes against themselves to their full extent; they do not have the excuse that they are being judged according to "foreign penal law". Finally also International Law speaks in favor of applying German Criminal Law in a supplementary fashion; for, as the Defendants committed their acts in occupied enemy territory, these acts have to be considered, according to a theory popular on the Continent of Europe, as committed within the borders of Germany within the meaning of the Criminal Code.

c) The law of the place of the crime should be applied. As the offense of the Defendants is "geographically defined" within the meaning of the Moscow Declaration of 30 October 1943, that law can easily be ascertained; in the case under review, it is the Penal Code of the Soviet Union (Penal Codes of the Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic of 1926, of the Ukrainian Republic of 1927 and any Special All-Union Laws). The following considerations speak in favor of the supplementary application of that law.

Firstly, according to the Moscow Declaration of 30 Oct. 1943, (which according to Article I forms an integral part of Law No. 10) the law of the place of the crime (Law LOCI) rules the adjudication of crimes which can be geographically defined; the perpetrators "will be sent back to the countries in which their abominable deeds were done in order that they may be punished according to the laws of these liberated countries". Furthermore, the applicability of the LEX LOCI is explicitly stressed in the indictment itself; this must, naturally, be true not only for the arguments of the Prosecution, but also for any exonerating or justifying circumstances. Finally the application of the LAW LOCI also conforms to the idea of justice.

d) Finally: the law of the victim State should be applied - in this case again, the Penal Code of the Soviet Union. The facts which favor the principle stated in c) also apply here. That theory is further supported from the point of view of legal systems, by the principle of punishing acts committed in a certain country according to the laws of that country and for the protection of that country, a principle recognized in International Penal Law; it is supported, from the point of view of territorial applicability, by the fact that above all other solutions, it stills the justifiable desire for retribution on the part of the primarily injured state. The following will show that in the first place the Soviet Penal Law and, failing that, the German Penal Law, should be used to supplement "general regulations" in order to close the gaps in Law No. 10 and that this solution is preferable by far to any other possibility.

That choice brings with it another very important advantage. For the problems under discussion in the present case, namely evaluation of acts of self-defense end pets of emergency, the two legal systems show striking similarities, as both are exponents of the characteristic European concept of Penal Law, with its tendency to systematic generalization and adversity towards Case Law.

This can be easily explained on historical grounds. For the Penal Code of the Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic of 1926 is largely based on the old Russian Penal Code of 1903; the latter's origin, however, was decisively influenced by the German doctrine prevalent in about 1900. When we compare the German and Soviet rules governing acts of self-defense and acts committed in an emergency, we can arrive at that "cross-section", that "average rule", a result unobtainable by comparing the Continental European and the Anglo-Saxon Penal Laws, owing to the difference between these two legal systems. A Court called on to decide a specified case is only then able fully to evaluate the arguments of a defendant, if their evaluation is based on the so-called European "cross-section" of the rules governing acts of self-defense and acts committed in en emergency. The rules have to be discussed in the following, and the arguments brought forward for the defendant have to be judged according to these rules. and in presumed self-defense. according to European legal conception. The prerequisites of these two legal concepts first have to be examined separately, according to German and according to Soviet Law; subsequently it has to be ascertained which prerequisites are common to both legal systems; the result will form the above-mentioned "cross-section", on which the actual evaluation of the defendant's actions has to be based. I. Self-Defense 1) According to German Law.

a) Self-defense is considered (Article 53 of the Penal Code) a so called justification; where self-defense is established there can be no question of an act being unlawful:

the act is not only excused but even approved by the law. The prerequisite for self-defense is an unlawful attack, i.e., an attack which the attacked person does not have to tolerate. The attack need not yet have started. Self-defense is also admissible in the face of an imminently threatening attack. Acts in defense of all protected interests come under self-defense which is not limited to acts in protection of life and limb. Therefore, also the state as such, the existence of a nation, the endangered vital interests of a nation, can be defended in self-defense. The protected interests are thus much more numerous then in Anglo-Saxon Law.

b) Not only the person attacked, but any third person, is allowed to act in self-defense. This is important, particularly with respect to the so-called self-defense on behalf of the State. For selfdefense in favor of the State always constitutes an act for the protection of a third party, can therefore only be carried out by a third person. No comparison in the value of the protected interests is being drawn in the case of self-defense, neither does it exist, therefore, in the case of defense of the State. The only measure for the defensive action always is the intensity of the attack.

c) Presumed self-defense and acts for the presumed protection of a third party. Although these concepts are not formulated in the law, they are generally recognized in theory and jurisdiction. They exist where the perpetrator erroneously presumed an "unlawful attack". If the error was unavoidable, the presumed state of self-defense serves as justification; if, however, the error could have been avoided. the legal importance of such self-defense is contested; according to one opinion, the defendant cannot be sentenced for having acted with intent; while according to another less widespread opinion it constituted a factor mitigating the guilt, while accountability for intent remains.

According to both opinions, it is, however, impossible to hold the Defend and responsible to the full extent for this criminal guilt, if, owing to a factual error, he believed his act to be justified. 2. According to Soviet Law.

a) According to Soviet Law (Art. 13, par. 1 of the Penal code of the Russian Society Federal Socialist Republic and the other Republics of the Union of the year 1926) the concept of self-defense conforms essentially to the German concept. Self-defense can apply to the State too, and particularly to the Soviet organization as such. In contrast to German law, the Soviet law even states VERBIS EXPRESSIS that selfdefense may be also exercised in favor of the State (compare for details Maurach, Systematic Treatise on the RUSSIAN PENAL LAW of 1928, p. 101). As in the German law, there is no provision for fixed proportions between the clashing interests. It is not clarified in professional publications whether an act committed in aid of a third person constitutes justification or only an excuse.

b) Presumed self-defense and acts for the presumed protection of a third person. As in the German law, this is not laid down by law, but is recognized in jurisdiction and literature. It is treated in the same manner as a factual error. It excludes intent, the guilt is at least considered as mitigated; it is immaterial whether or not the error was avoidable. II. State of Emergency 1) According to German Law The regulations concerning the state of emergency (Notstand) found in the existing laws are insufficient, not codified and given for individual cases and situations.

The fundamental decisionof the Reich Supreme Court clarified the position. According to this the following applies:

a) A distinction is made between a state of emergency as justifica tion for an act end a state of emergency merely precluding guilt.

A feet com on to both is that an interest protected by law must be in imminent danger, which danger can only be averted by the violation of another interest protected by the law, having no connection with the first one. If the threatened interest is found to be of greater value, then the state of emergency constitutes grounds for justification; if the interests cannot be weighed and if there is a threat of danger of life or limb of the perpetrator or a relative then the state of emergency constitutes a reason precluding guilt.

b) National Emergency is in principle recognized within the same limits as assistance to the State in case of emergency ( Staatsnothilfe). According to the decision of the Reich SupremeCourt of 3 April 1922 File II, 791122, a situation of acute danger is constituted particularly by underground activities of resisting elements of the population of an area and the increasing insecurity of that area resulting therefrom". Furthermore, the Reich Supreme court has in No. 60, 318. recognized the so-called permanent state of emergency and has stated that the permanent danger which a particular person presents to the community could, in certain circumstances, justify his elimination by killing as an act of emergency. The question of whether national emergency allows the killing of a man was, on the other hand, left open by the Reich Supreme Court. The question has been widely discussed, especially in the period following the first war, but was never definitely decided.

c. Presumed state of emergency. The law gives no definite ruling on this, but it is recognized according to common law in doctrine and jurisprudence. In principle it is treated in the same Way as presumed self-defense.

3. Results of comparison of both legal systems. If the elements common to both legal systems are examined, a wide similarity will be found in the conceptions of these legal terms:

a. Self-defense. All protected interests may be the subject of self-defense, particularly the survival of the state and the vital interests of the nation represented by the state. If the existence of the state or of the nation is directly threatened, any citizen -- and not only those appointed for this purpose by the state -- may act for their protection. The extent of the self-defense or of the act for the protection of the third party (Nothilfe) varies according to the severity of the attack and does not exclude killing. An error concerning the prerequisites of self-defense or of an act for the protection of a third party is to be treated as an error about facts and constitutes, according to the avoidability and also the degree of gravity of the individual error, a legal excuse or, at the very least, a mitigating circumstance.

b. State of emergency. In accordance to both legal systems, a state of emergency is always of a subsidiary character - thus it is a so-called last resort.

All legal interests can be in a state of emergency, especially also the state and its institutions as well as the welfare of the nation. A state of emergency is recognized where the threatened legal interest is of considerably greater value than the interest attacked by the perpetrator. A presumed state of emergency is, on principle, treated as a grave error - that is, it is treated in the same manner as presumed self-defense. of a legal clause. On the basis of the examination of the European "cross-section" of the legal position assumed by the defendant Ohlendorf, it must be established to what extent the actual circumstances under which the defendant acted correspond to the prerequisites of a criminal case as described above. Before, however, reference must be made to the method to be applied. the real conditions were given for a case of action in defense of the endangered nation (Staatsnothilfe) or participation in the self-defense of the state (Staatsnotwehr). But they do submit that in view of the special situation in which they found themselves and in which they were called upon to act, they assumed that the conditions were given for the above-mentioned legal concepts. There is no need to examine the questions whether there actually existed a situation calling for an act of self-defense or of emergency. and which discusses the objective conditions for an act of self-defense and in a state of emergency. Such an examination is necessary in order to find out where, precisely, the defendant Ohlendorf committed the error concerning the permissibility of his action; because the greater the extent to which the objective situation corresponded to the defendant's conception, the weightier his defense that by mistake he considered his action justified or necessary.

After this introduction, and on the basis of the defendant's statement, the examination may be arranged according to the following points of view:

1. Objective conditions, i. e., conditions which existed not merely in the defendant's mind but were actual facts: the nature of the war against the Soviet Union.

2. Subjective conditions. i. e., conditions Which were not actual facts, the assumption of which could, however, have brought about the defendant's error about what would constitute the conditions for action in defense of the endangered nation or in a state of national emergency; the East European Jewish problem as part of the problem of Bolshevism; origin and import of the defendant's obsession that a solution of the problem - Bolshevism versus Europe - could only be brought about by a "solution" of the Jewish problem, and, in their particular sphere, only by unreserved execution of the Fuehrer order. tions, - that is, the question of the cause for the above-mentioned obsession, I call upon the expert witness Professor Dr. Reinhart Maurach. does not justify extraordinary actions prohibited by written and common international law from the point of view of self-defense, and a state of emergeny. If this were the case, international law would be a mere illusion, for at least one of the parties waging wax would be able to claim to have acted in self-defense - whereas both parties would be at liberty to plead the existence of a state of emergency. or state of emergency. But a preliminary condition is that there is really war in the strict sense of international law, an armed clash between two states; but if the armed clash has from the outset an aspect considerably exceeding the measure of war and its limits, if, in other words, the war aims and war methods to be definitely expected from one of the opponents are so "total" that, in relation to them, the tradi tional conceptions and limits of international law cannot be applied, it will not be possible to refuse resort to self-defense and to a state of emergency - even within the war - to the opponent of such a state.

given the qualification of such an enemy - proper enemy in the sense of international law. The character of the Soviet Union as a state, and, consequently, as a potential belligerent can, it is true, not be denied. But the question is Whether the Soviet Union, according to her own ideology and to the ideas which are its basis, has not to be considered as such a belligerent who, considering the war aims and methods of the Soviet Union, puts the presumptive adversary ipso facto into the position of war self-defense admissible in international law.

II. In addition, the defendants refer to the orders given and the state of emergency caused by these orders. As to this question Dr. Gawlik is going to give detailed explanations. Concerning this problem of superior orders contested by the statute here, and by Law No. 10 of the Control Council, I only want to give some quotations of passages from English - not German, works:

Professor Oppenheim has stated in his book, "The Law of Nations":

"Violations of the rules of warfare are war crimes only if they are committed without order of the belligerent government in question, If members of the armed forces commit such violations by order of their governments, such violations are no war crimes and cannot be punished by the opponent; the latter can, however, take reprisals. If members of armed forces are ordered by their military commanders to commit violations - the members cannot be punished - for the commanders alone are responsible and the latter can, therefore, be punished as war criminals after being captured by the enemy." writes in the article, "The Legal Nature and Punishment of Criminal Acts of Violence Contrary to the Laws of War";

"The principle that members of the armed forces of a country are not personally responsible and can, therefore, not be punished for acts contrary to the rules of warfare and committed by them by order, or with approval, of their governmental or military superiors, is not part of the codified law on warfare.

Nevertheless, this seems to be a recognized principle of this law, at least, this principle has been drawn up in the war manuals of the powers as a rule of the common law on warfare since 1914." the supervision of the Judge Advocate General published by the U. S. War Department in 1940, and today still in force, states - after enumerating the possible war crimes:

"Individuals of the armed forces are not to be punished for these war crimes if the latter were committed by order, or with the approval, of their government or commanders. The superiors who ordered such acts or under whose authority such acts were committed by their troops, can be punished by the belligerents in whose hands they fall." British authorities in the British Manual of Military Law. Its Article 443 went on, after enumerating possible war crimes:

"It is, however, important to note that members of the armed forces who commit such violations of the recognized rules of warfare that have been ordered by their governments or commanders are not war crimes and can, therefore, not be punished by the enemy. He can punish the officials or commanders responsible for such orders if they fall into his hands, otherwise he can only take the other measures dealt with in this chapter." published in the English Year Book for International Law 1944:

"Although Chapter XIV of the Military Manual was not given statutory powers it contains, in general, a statement of the rules of written and common international law as they are understood by Great Britain."

man was to disobey the order of the Fuehrer, if is necessary to illustrate the situation in its historical development by a written expert opinion.

III. When Fieldmarshal Keitel defended himself and the OKW at the trial before the IMT, he tried to convey a picture of the distribution of power in the National Socialist regime, according to which the SS represented the will which governed the state - whereas the Wehrmacht and its leaders were in a state of unqualified subjection to this "fact". Wehrmacht and any leading institutions and supreme representatives of the State and Party, we must always remain conscious of the fact that the Wehrmacht enjoyed at all times a privileged position which was unique. claimed a central position in a comprehensive sphere of activities, was at the beginning of the war excluded from the Wehrmacht and from the occupied territories under the command of the Wehrmacht. (Example: The first groups of the Chief of the Security Police and of the SD (Security Service) marched into France camouflaged and under a false designation,) It was only before the Russian campaign that an agreement was concluded, after difficult negotiations, which regulated the tasks of the State Police and of the SD outside the troops. High Command of the Army and the Chief of the Security Police and of the SD which led to a written agreement which was signed by Quartermaster General, General Wagner, and by the then Chief of the Security Police and of the SD, Heydrich. Schellenberg kept the minutes. The agreement contained the basic order of the Fuehrer, that the Security of the fighting troops must be guaranteed by all means and that units of the Security Police and of the SD must be employed in support of the Army units.

The Chief of the Security Police and of the SD was given immediate authority to issue pertinent instructions to these units and an independent channel for receiving and transmitting reports which was outside the jurisdiction of the Wehrmacht. These units by no means formed a special "political theater of operations" hut they were attached to the Army units - this was laid down in the second part of the agreement - and generally had to carry out tasks for the Army units within their areas, which had hitherto been handled by the Army units themselves. The second part contained an exact regulation of commands and subordinations. "In the Front or combat areas the Einsatzkommandos of the SIPO and of the SD were in all tactical and service questions that is completely - put under the command of the Army." In the operational areas they were under the command of the Army as far as service matters were concerned; orders resulting from tactical considerations had precedence over all other orders. If it was required by the military situation, the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos could be used for military tasks regardless of other orders. The third part of the agreement explained the concepts "tactical" and "service".

In accordance with this agreement and the "Barbarossa-Order" to the Army units, which was based on it, mobile units designated "Einsatzgruppen" and "Einsatzkommandos" were attached to the Army Groups and Armies in the East, Army Group North got Einsatzgruppe A. Army Group Center got Einsatzgruppe B, and Army Group South got Einsatzgruppen C and D. (Einsatzgruppe D was originally intended to serve with an Army Group which was to operate in the Caucasus.) In spite of the intended official designation of the leaders of these units as "Representative of the Chief of the Security Police and of the SD with the commander of the Rear Area of Army Group......, Einsatzgruppe....", what happened in practice was that at once, at the beginning of the Eastern campaign whole Einsatzgruppen or the larger part of such groups were attached to Armies by order of the Army Group in question. Einsatzgruppe D was, from the first day and for the entire period which is of importance for this trial, attached only to the 11th Army and had no connection with the Commander of the Rear Area of the Army.

(Kommandos) each to the Commanders of the Rear Area of the Army and to three individual Armies, the detachments (Kommandos) of Einsatzgruppe C were at the disposal of the Armies only. That the Commanding Generals of Armies themselves attached great value to having the detachments in their operational area is proved by the subsequent alteration of the order for Sonderkommando 4a. This Kommando was assigned to the Commander of the Rear Area of the Army, but was attached to the 6th Army on the personal order of Field Marshal von Reichenau.

For "Marches" and "Rations" the Einsatzgruppe was subordinate to the Command Headquarters, which means that the Army units were competent for 1. Determining the location of the staff of the Einsatzgruppen and of the Kommandos, which included fixing the strength of the staffs and kommandos as well as the length of time to be spent in one location.

9. Telecommunications. carried out in practice in the East we may form the following picture of the actual and. legal situation, which is typical for the manner in which orders were given:

1. The Einsatzgruppen and their subordinate units were fully motorized mobile units which were militarily equipped and organized.

Members of the State Police, of the Criminal Police, of the SD and units of the Ordnungspolizei and of the Waffen-SS were assigned to the Einsatzgruppen. They were thus units composed of a minority of specialists of the Security Police and of the SD and of units of the Ordnungspolizei and of the Waffen-SS. This unit was at the disposal of the Representative of the Chief of the Sipo and of the SD for his tasks in the operational area of the Command headquarters, to which he was attached. The special position of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos manifested itself also in the fact that they were not called Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos of the Sipo and of the SD, but simply Einsatzgruppe A to D, or Kommandos 1 to 12. Their primary task being of the kind normally handled by the Security

Police and by the SD, the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos were led by leaders of the Sipo or of the SD who were specially assigned this task.

2. The Representatives of the Chief of the Sipo and of the SD with the Army groups and with the Armies were attached to the Commanding Generals and subordinate to them in the functions which were most important for their work.

3. As regards technical instructions the powers of command of the Commanding Generals and of the Chiefs of the Security Police and of the SD were not clearly separated. The question had been deliberately left open and left to practice. But it was certain - and expressly mentioned in the Barbarossa order - that every order of the Army Group or of the Army, "for reasons of operational necessity" had precedence over the orders of the Chief of the Sipo and of the SD. Whenever it was necessary in the military situation, the Army units could on their own responsibility and at their own discretion make the Einsatzgruppen and the subunits subordinate to themselves for military tasks.

Defense Law of 4 September 1938. In Article 2 we read: "Once an operational area has been determined, the declaration of the state of defense confers on the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and the Commanding Generals of Armies without special order the right to exercise executive power in this operational area. This right to give orders has precedence over instructions given by other superior agencies..."

Concerning, "competencies to issue orders in the operational area of the Army" the OKW moreover issued an order on 11 April 1940 which states under No. 3 with reference to the Reich Defense Law: "... in their exercise of executive powers the Commanders-in-Chief of the Army and the Commanding Generals of the Armies are entitled to issue directives, to set up special courts and to issue instructions to the authorities and agencies in charge of the operational area, with the exception of the highest authorities of the Reich, the highest authorities of the Prussian State and the Reichsleigung of the NSDAP. This right to issue instructions has precedence over instructions of other superior agencies." and by an order of the LKW shows, that the right of issuing instructions to the higher SS-and Police Chief and the SS-and Police units under his command is gradually more firmly established. Thus on 7 September 1943 the OKW issued a "service instruction for the higher SS-and Police Chief in Greece", in which it is laid down among other things: "The Higher SS-and Police Chief is an agency of the Reich Fuehrer-SS and Chief of the German Police, which for the duration of its service in Greece is under the command of the Military Commander Greece"..... The Higher SS-and Police Chief receives directives and instructions for the field of activity assigned to him from the Reich Fuehrer-SS and Chief of the German Police and carries them out independently while making current and punctual reports to the Military Commander Greece, as far as he gets no restricting orders from the latter. The Military Commander must be informed in time of the reports submitted by the Higher SS-and Police Chief to the Reich Fuehrer-SS and Chief of the German Police". gypsies prima facie as elements of insecurity in accordance with the order of the Fuehrer at the beginning of the Russian campaign.

be noted that it was carried on under the jurisdiction of the Commanding Generals to whom these groups were attached. Therefore, in all tasks, including these which belonged in a stricter sense to the Security Police and the SD, this jurisdiction had to be respected, which means that these tasks could be carried out only with the express will or with the tacit consent of the commanding generals. This applies especially to the commanding general's capacity as supreme judicial authority for the population in his area of jurisdiction. It is true that the use made by the commanding generals of this capacity varied considerably in their dealings with the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos; in certain areas the organs of the Army invariably gave their consent to all executive acts affecting the population. In other operational areas the fact that the command authorities occasionally interferred in pending proceedings or gave orders for special measures concerning the population, showed that the commanding generals were not only conscious of their superior jurisdiction and position, but also made use of it.

It is with deep regret that we clarify these points. For the Defense, however, they are of great importance with respect to the possibility of disobeying given orders. The leaders of the Einsatzgruppen and Kommandos were executive officers with instructions. Their authority as to decisions started only with the very execution of their orders. For them there was no real possibility at all to prohibit the execution of orders themselves. Actually, there was merely the theoretical possibility for the Army Commanders to examine at their discretion - an account of their authority and their task concerning the security of their operational area, on account of their responsibility for safeguarding the front-line operations - the question of whether the actual killing of the people selected endangered their tasks.

If they had come to this conclusion they would have "been authorized to give instructions to prohibit liquidations. Likewise it is clear that, again theoretically, only intervention of the Commanders-in-Chief with the Fuehrer was possible. Defense is going to prove: 1.) the continuous close cooperation of the Army groups with the Einsatzgruppen and Kommandos. Orders of the Army Commanders to secure objectives, to carry out inspections, etc., and also other military tasks, e.g. investigations concerning anti-partisan measures, recruitment of Tartars for front-line service, will show the close connection between the Commanding General and Einsatzgruppe or Kommandos.

Finally, evidence will be submitted for the following: quently, also Supreme Military Judiciary authorities. (Oberste Gerichtsherren) for their areas, i.e., they made decisions affecting liberty, life and death. That they were conscious of this fact in relation to the civilian population is clearly shown by individual facts already mentioned or still to be mentioned. mentioned by the Prosecution were known to the responsible Commanding Generals. Written or oral reports were given in many cases about such executions by Einsatzgruppen and Kommandos to the Commanding Generals. executions, or took part in them, or gave special orders in individual cases.

IV. The prosecution has charged the defendants not only with crimes against humanity and with war crimes but also with membership in an organization that has been declared criminal.

Under Count 3, Mr. Ferencz stated:

"The judgment of the International Military Tribunal established the fact that the SS, the Gestapo, and the SD are criminal organizations." In reaching its decision, the Tribunal made frequent reference to the acts of the Einsatzgruppen. In the face of this, the Defense, will demonstrate the following: "SD", even by official authorities of the NSDAF and of the State, by all military authorities up to Adolf Hitler himself, a completely false conception as to the Actual meaning of "SD" arose among wide circles of the German people, especially during this war, above all, however, abroad, and especially among the occur, occupation authorities.

The error is based on the fact that the term "SD" had the two following meanings:

A. It is the term for a special news service organization, which collected, evaluated, and Submitted. reports to the appropriate authorities of the State and of the Party. This news organization which did not have any executive police powers either before or during the war, exercised its functions within the SS, that is within the Party its members were employees of the The party and were paid by the latter, just as in general, the entire budget was met not by the State but by the Party, that is, the Reich Treasurer.

THE PRESIDENT: May I interrupt, please, If you say that Hitler himself mis-used the term SD --

DR. ASCHENAUER: I would like Your Honor to repeat what he said. The system was out of order.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. I understood you to say that Hitler himself misused the term "SD"?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, that is so.

THE PRESIDENT: If that is so, won't we then run into many complications as to the meaning of this term, because the Tribunal has been led to believe, and, with the Tribunal the rest of the world, that Hitler's word was law in Germany. Therefore, if he used the term "SD" in any particular way, wouldn't that of itself then make his meaning official?

DR ASCHENAUER: No, Your Honor. This is not a matter of the general mis-use, it just occurs in one particular decree in a sentence which was used here.

THE PRESIDENT: It would appear to me that from what we understand of Hitler's power, that if he called the SD a "PQ" that then it become "PQ" from that moment on.

DR ASCHENAUER: I don't think I have understood what Your Honor meant.

THE PRESIDENT: Whatever Hitler said was law, and if he used the term "SD" in any way opposed to your definition of "SD", Hitler's definition would be the law, would it not?

MR ASCHENAUER: No, Your Honor. That I quoted it here is one certain decree, which is erroneous, a mistake which has been made once, and all the other decrees which are being offered to the Tribunal, and submitted to them, who that what is said in this one sentence is a mistake.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, it was for purpose of clarification that I had asked it. (interruption) Will you please repeat Dr. Aschenauer, it seems that it got into the wrong channel.

DR ASCHENAUER: The error is based on the fact that the term "SD" had the following meanings:

A. It is the term for a special news service organization which collected, evaluated, and submitted reports to the appropriate authorities of the State and of the Party. This news organization which did not have any executive police powers either before or during the war, exercised its functions within the SS, that is, within the Party; its members were employees of the Party, and were paid by the latter, just as in general, the entire budget was met not by the State but by the Party, that is, the Reich Treasurer. If, therefore, the SD is referred to as an organization with a special assignment, that is an organization with certain tasks, only the above-mentioned news organization, with its clearly delineated duties, its installations and its personnel carrying out this task can and should be meant. Any other duty, or the assumption of a function is a false implication.

B. All wearers of the SS uniform with the SD marking on their left jacket sleeve were also characterized as "SD". From the beginning of the war, the SS uniform with the SD marking was worn by almost all of the members of the Secret State Police (Gestapo) including the Border Police, Criminal Investigation police, and especially all members of the Stapo and Kripe on combat assignment, were SS uniforms with the SD insignia. It is, therefore, easily understandable that everybody considered all men wearing this uniform to be "SD". Another result was that this term was not only applied to all those wearing those uniforms with the SD insignia but also to the organizations to which these men belonged. These were the SD offices in the actual sense of the word and the offices of the State Police and Criminal Police. For the sake of convenience and the desire for simplification and abbreviation, all of them were now called "SD". Thus the Wehrmacht, when dealing in enemy country with "commanders of the Security Police and of the SD" and with "Commanding Officers of the Security Police and of the SD"--that is what these agencies were officially called --, referred to them briefly merely as the "SD" only, for all members of these organizations were the SD insignia. Thus the French or the Norwegians referred briefly to these organizations and their personnel, all of whom were the SD insignia, as SD only, and usually they meant the State or Criminal Police. Actually, how could he know that the "Commander of the Security Police and of the SD" was an organizational term that could be traced back to the "Chief of the Security Police and SD," that even in these organizations there existed not always an SD news service set-up, or that in such organizations there were actually three completely independent and separate organizations included:

1. A news organization of the Party or of the SS, that is the SD in the real meaning of the word, as the organization with a special news service function.

2. Two authorities of the State Executive, that is of the Police (Stapo and Kripe), which in their special duties and activities, stood on an equal feeting completely independent one of the other, and were merely held together by purely organizational ties and by the fact that the same individual held, a lending position in both. (In this connection, see enclosed sketch.) mutually shared uniform (SD) finally went so far that even the Fuehrer in his "Commando Order" of 18 October 1942, ordered that the arrested commando troops be given over to the "SD" even though, in this instance, beyond all doubt, he meant the police executive, the State Police. It would not have occurred to any office in the Wehrmacht or the German Police to deliver members of an enemy commando, if they were arrested in the Reich, to an SD sector, for everyone know that this was exclusively the concern of the State Police. Kripe were this uniform and this SD insignia, even though they had nothing to do with the actual SD news service itself, as far as their duties were concerned? The answer to this requires a brief description of the development.

The "SD" as a news service originated in 1932, when HIMMLER commissioned HEYDRICH, a former naval officer, with the establishment of a news service, in order to combine uniformly the local "political information service" (P.I.) which had here and there arisen due to political necessity. This P. I. had the task of gathering information about the other political parties, their plans, and aims, in order to be able to utilize it in the struggle against the other parties.

include the gathering of information about all opponents of National Socialism, their organizations and their activities. The actual hour of birth of the SD, however, was in 1934 when a few old National Socialists who came from all circles of the movement and were thus clearly not recruited from the ranks of the SS alone, recognized the following to be true: The old parties of all shades of opinion, together or banned by the State. Any additional activity by these organizations is illegal and is therefore to be dealt with by the police, and the police is therefore authorized to fight, together with the Information Service, against such illegal opponents. This in itself proves that from the very beginning the SD (Security Service) was not at any time given such executive powers which rested exclusively with the police organs of the State. (Even at that time the SD was mainly engaged in the research and study of ideological contrasts and their effects on National Socialism.) Furthermore, they relized that A. Gradually, ever since 1933, all public criticism in parliaments, press and radio had been abolished. B. There was a growing tendency to misuse the Fuehrer principle and to push through orders, permitting no criticism. C. There existed the common tendency always to stress to higher authorities only the positive aspect of one's own field of activities, but to conceal in a shamefaced manner all unfavorable developments, mistaken measures, danger points, etc. only a completely distorted picture of the development and situation in the individual vital spheres (Lebensgebieten) (Law, administration, education, economy, etc.) They could no longer have a clear perception of the resulting reaction among the public and professional circles concerned. From this they concluded that an authoritarian state, by its every nature, needed an organization which would be willing and capable of presenting to responsible central agencies an objective and undisguised picture of the general position and developments without having any administrative responsibility itself.

In 1934/1935, this task was assumed by the SD with out explicit orders to that effect from any party or government authority, therefore, illegally, (For the authorization and legitimation of the SD as sole permissible news service of the NSDAP covered only the collection and transmission of news relating to counterreforms, their efforts and aims.) This explains why in 1934/1935 this part of the SD at the SD Main Office in Berlin consisted of a mere handful of men. Easter, 1935, for example, it consisted of a man who also worked as legal and administrative expert, 4 or 5 younger jurists, who had not finished their professional training and only worked part-time at the SD in addition to their other work, and 3 or 4 assistants. plete lack of agencies in the country and the necessity to build up this news service for vital spheres in a more or less illegal manner, because every reference to it caused sharp protests by the Party and above all by government authorities against this type of work. It was regarded by all these people as an inadmissible encroachment upon their own jurisdiction. Thus, for example, until 1936, the time when Ohlendorf entered the SD, the entire field of economy had hardly been dealt with. Only after that were systematic efforts made to win suitable specialists who were able to handle the individual vital spheres (Lebensgebietsarbeit) in an expert manner. At this juncture, it may already be said that from this work in purely vital spheres done by the Zentralabteilung II/2 the Amt III was subsequently developed under OHLENDORF, this is today considered the SD in the proper sense. "Chief of the German Police" with the official designation "Reich Fuehrer SS and Chief of the German Police at the Reich Ministry of the Interior" in the process of another governmental reform and the centralization of the police which had hitherto been under the direction of the Laender.

Under him were Daluege as "Chief of Police and Heydrich as "Chief of the Security Police" Thereby, Heydrich simultaneously held a post in the administration of the SD as news service of the Party and of the entire German Security Police. This two-fold function explains the subsequent title of "Chief of the Security Police and SD" from which derives the designation "Commander" (or in command) (Befehlshaber) bzw. Kommandeure) of the Security Police and the SD in the occupied territories. Whereas until 1936 probably only a few members of the police, mainly the State Police, belonged to the SS, partly to the SD and partly to the General SS Himmler, from 1936 on, endeavored to have the SS take over the whole police organization. Thus from 1936 to 1939 many members of the police force who were eligible for the SS, were taken over into the SS, starting with the State Police and Criminal Police. Heydrich brought it about that the transferred members of the Stapo and Kripe began to wear SS uniforms. They were the SD insignia on the left sleeve, although they were never in any way connected with the SD as news service and as organization for a special task but remained, as hitherto, members of the state executive. Neither common service nor esprit de corps tied them to the SD. The uniform clothing of the Stapo and the SD, the distribution of which was started at that time, gave the uninitiated the first cause to designate on bloc as SS, members of two organizations of totally different fields of activitywork of a news service for vital spheres and executive work of the Security Police - merely becuase of their uniform outer appearance that is to say the SD uniform with the SD insignia. This misleading collective name led to the habit, of calling SD men not only the members of both organizations but of designating the offices and field of activity of both institutions simply as "SD". In fact, 90 percent of the people wearing SD uniforms had nothing to do with the actual work of the SD news organization. On the other hand, the SD of the RFSS, purely as news service, was not connected with the state executive (State Police and Criminal Police), either by subject matter or by its duties.

In spite of this fact, it was also called SD in common usage and especially also during the war in official announcements, decrees and orders (see Hitler's commande order). (Besides, in the NS-State there were numerous such 'personal unions' (one person being the holder of two or more jobs) as for instance in the person of Goering, the Minister President of Prussia, Reich Minister for Air, Supreme Commander of the Luftwaffe, Plenipotentiary for the Four Year Plan, Reich Chief for Hunting, etc. Nobody would dream of it to call all this one organization on account of the 'Personalunion'.) produced. There we see two completely different organizational and actual spheres of office - one of them the Party, the other the State. But the men working in these two completely independent and different set-ups are wearing the same uniform: The SS-uniform with SD. These were the first decisive causes for the above-mentioned complete confusion. the Party news service and the State Police were, on account of wearing the same uniform, mistakenly looked upon as one uniform entity, whereas from the very beginning they also showed very relevant actual differences among each other. These differences were the cause that already in 1937/38 some spheres of work Were completely taken away from the SD (II/i) and were handed over to the Secret State Police Office, namely Communism and Marxism. The 1938 decree concerning the division of functions (Funktiens-Trennungs-Erlass) already made it quite clear that the SD had nothing whatsoever to do with the comprehensive intelligence Service in enemy territory. These differences were ultimately settled when, urged by the State Police in 1938, another reorganization was effected, the result of which was the establishment of the "Reichssicherheitshauptant" (Reich Main Security Office.) Thus it was ultimately made clear that the dealing with the enemy in its entirety as far as intelligence service and actions resulting from it were concerned, belonged to the competence of the Secret State Police, that is to say, Amt IV of the RSHA.

This reorganization terminated the former Zentralabteilung II/1 (Central department) (Enemy research) ("Gegnerforschung") in the framework of the SD as a news service organization, and from that time onwards the SD's exclusive sphere of work was that of a mere news service organization, exclusively occupying itself with "Lebensgebietsarbeit" (matters concerning vital spheres). The former Zentralabteilung II/2 (Lebensgebiete) became the AMT III of the RSHA, and its employees were branded as members of a criminal organization in the IMT verdict. The SD, however, which organization was declared to be a criminal one, is according to its development the leading Zentralabteilung II/2 (Lebensgebiete), which at no time has had any contacts whatsoever with the tasks and the activities of the State Police (Stapo).

As from September 1939 the following set-up was given:

The Reichssicherheitshauptamt (Reich Main Security Office) (RSHA) consists of 7 - seven - Aemter:

Amt I: Organization and Personnel Amt II:

Administration and Economy Amt III:

SD - Home Front (Lebensgebiete) Amt IV:

Secret State Police Amt V: Criminal Amt VI:

SD-Ausland (Foreign News Service) Amt VII:

Scientific Research problems of the Sipe (Stapo and Kripe) (State Police and Criminal Police) and of the SD in one organization. As far as their objectives are concerned they remain separated in the Amt, as for instance all the personnel problems of the SD (Amt II, VI and VII) Were handled in Referat I A 4 by men of the SD, of the former SD-Main Office, that means employees of the Party. They are exclusively concerned with SD, that is Party personal data, which have nothing to do with the problems concerning civil servants (Stapo and Kripe).It is the same in AMT II.

The administration of the budget funds is handled completely separately in Amt II. And this by necessity, for the administration has to concern itself with;

A. The budget funds of the State (Stapo and Kripe)

B. The budget funds of the Party (SD). Here completely different directives are followed, for not only the salaries and wages were entirely different, but so were also the whole of the accounting system of the Party and of the state. its tasks, AMT III was a hundred percent identical with the former Zentralabteilung II/2 (Lebensgebiete) of the SD-Main Office. Therefore, it is exclusively a Party office, its men are employees of the Party, they receive Party wages, have no civil service rights and duties, are exclusively subordinate to Party orders, and for this reason only they cannot have any State executive powers. If individual men, as will be commented on later, were detached for executive tasks, then they were used as individual persons. They worked by order of the State (Stapo and Kripe) and not as SD and in pursuance of its tasks: to be the Party news service without any executive functions.

AMT IV takes ever the tasks of the Secret State Police. Therefore, its special tasks are exclusively those of the State Police as an executive agency of the State. One might say that Amt IV is identical with the Secret State Police Office. Reich Criminal Office, which is also a purely State executive organism.

AMT VI (Foreign News Service) takes over the tasks of the former Zentralabteilung III/2 (Foreign News Service) therefore it is also a more SD (Party) office, its members are Party employees and do not possess any executive powers.

AMT VII (Scientific Research) is also a mere SD (Party) office without any executive powers and without any regional agencies. It did not have any real predecessor in the SD-Main Office. Its task is philosophical historical scientific research in the sphere of "Weltanschauung" which is laid down in a series of publications. This task too, did no longer exist during the war, so that it really only constituted a library and archives office. was a clear and unequivocal separation of mere news service tasks (Amt II, VI and VII) on the one hand, and of the State Executive (Amt IV and V), so that at the beginning of the war there is no longer any overlapping of competencies. Verdict that the SD after 1939 were an auxiliary organization of the Government's Executive Branch. The only factors which these different offices had in common with each other were three:

A. The same uniform.

B. The same chief (HIMMLER AND HEYDRICH).

C. The merely technical junction effected by the organizational structure of the RSHAL, which, however, only exists in the main office, because regionally, the Stapo offices, themselves entirely self-contained and independent from each other on the one and, on the other hand the SD sections continued to exist. The Security Police Inspectorates and the SD Inspectorates are offices with no executive duties but only with supervising and organizational tasks without any departmental competence and power of command. The Stapo office received its directives for its work exclusively from Amt. IV of RSHA, the SD sector exclusively from Amt III and VI of RSHA.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, I think this might be a convenient time to take the morning recess. Before we actually recess, let me indicate to the defense counsel that Mr. Wartenberg, the interrogator, who took most of the statements of the defendants, will be available this afternoon for cross-examination on the part of defense counsel with regard to the manner of taking of the statements.

Of course, this is an opportunity which you may avail yourselves of, if you desire. You don't need to cross-examine if you have nothing to examine him about, but in view of the fact that Mr. Wartenberg will ver soon be departing for the United States, it is necessary if you intend to raise any questions at all about the manner in which the statements were taken, that you raise these questions now, so this afternoon when we reconvene after the noon recess, Mr Wartenberg will take the stand, and he will be available to all defense counsel for any questions which they desire to put to him. We will now recess for fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: Take your seats, please.

DR. ASCHENAUER: In the occupied territories, however, the merely technical junction was created in a manner corresponding to the RSHA, Consequently there exists at the headquarters of the Regional Commander of the Chief of the Security Police and the SD, the offices I-VI corresponding to those of the RSHA, and that is one of the reasons which have led to misconceptions concerning the SD. But here too nothing has changed in regard to the departmental duties of the various offices. It has to be added that office VII had branch offices neither in occupied territories nor within the Reich. And not in all occupied territories did Amt III have branch offices in operation. differently organized. The usual organizational structure of the Security Police and SD cannot be compared with them. They are not government offices which constitute branch agencies for offices III, IV, V, and VI, but militant units whose organizational structure is evolved out of their special task, which they are to execute within the executive powers of the commander-in-chief of Army groups and armies. on operational duties and subject to military law. Force, the Stapo, the Kripo (Criminal Investigation Police), the SD, of emergency inductees and volunteers from conquered territories. They are organized for the commissioner of the Chief of the Security Police and the SD at the headquarters of the officer commanding the organizations behind the lines. Their activities change with the requirements of the situation in the zone of operations and are, as a rule, therefore, not those of Offices I, II, III, IV, V, or VI.

All these problems will be clarified by hearing Dr. Spengler as witness. These problems form the basis for the question: What was Ohlendorf's position to Himmler and Heydrich the leaders of the SS? During the presentation of evidence, it will be revealed that Ohlendorfs work was in direct contrast to that of Himmler, Bormann and Ley.

Ohlendorf caused the following: dence pointing out, for example, that "the small fry gets caught, but the big fish get away," and, incidentally, attention was called to the interference of the Party into judicial matters. A further report criticized the overlapping of the system of fines which the economic associations Wintochaftsverbaende could impose and the procedure before the regular criminal courts, which had caused an intolerable discrepancy in the severity of penalties inflicted. further attacks on schools and school teachers were prohibited by Goebbels, that the importance of scientists was officially adknowledged, that interference with school life by the H.J. as discontinued, the H.J. activities reduced, the school children excused from collections of all kinds, etc. of motion pictures and succeeded in supporting the role of the motion pictures against the will of Goebbels. The seventh Kulturkammer which already had been proclaimed by Ley was stopped by appropriate SD reports. In contradiction to the political policy of coordination (Gleichschaltung), private association were sponsored. In long reports, Amman's publishing and press policies were criticized and thus a number of publishing firms and newspapers were saved from closing down or from being transferred to the Eher Publishing firm. political publications. On the other hand, the publication of good classical novels and worthwhile new novels was aided. cluded from the measures for waging total war, although a decision to that effect had already been reached. The evidence presented was so convincing that the Party Chancellery changed their opinion and, satisfied by the documentary and statistical evidence, brought forth by the SD exerted its influence for the continuation of work at the universities.

zation with reports supported by evidence. five Gaues.

These facts correspond with the description of the "SD" in the "C.I. Handbook Germany," published by the "Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, Office of Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, Counter Intelligence Sub-division." It reads here under number IV, "The German Intelligence Service," as follows:

"Amt III, with its regional offices, is the Party Intelligence Service inside Germany. To this end, it maintains networks of agents in all walks of German life.... who are drawn from all classes and professions. The information supplied by these agents is made up into Lageberichte (Situation reports) which are sent up to RSHA by the regional offices. These reports are extremely frank, and contain a complete and unbiased picture of German opinion and morale." of Ohlendorf. The picture of a man will arise which, in purpose, intent and actual work stood in opposition to the terrible events in the East. vice since 1938, gets into the terrible situation, the effects of which are visible today, through the announcement of the mobilization. Before his assignment in Russia, he had a war assignment of the Reich Group Commerce. After he had refused twice this war assignment was cancelled upon order from Heydrich. Ohlendorf was drafted for the Reich Fuehrer SS. This fact is also proven by the Indictment, No. 3196, page 5 of the original. Ohlendorf now clearly belonged to a military, hierarchic organiza tion.

Ohlendorf did not agree with the execution order. The assembled leaders of the Einsatzgruppen protested unanimously against Streckenbach who announced the Fuehrer order in the name of Himmler and Heydrich. Streckenbach agreed with the opinion expressed through that protest, but he declared that in a similar cases in Poland he had already tried everything in order to have the order not executed.

Himmler supposedly refused flatly. At the beginning of October 1941, Ohlendorf approached Himmler at Nicolajew, with regard to the execution order, although the latter in a speech before the leaders and men of the Einsatzgruppe and of the Einsatzkommandos called together, had again repeated the strict order of the Fuehrer. Ohlendorf in speaking to the Reich Fuehrer SS emphasized the inhuman burden. He did not even receive an answer. He could not make Himmler revoke the order. There was no possibility for him to prevent the practical execution of the order, which was his endeavor. There is no possibility for him to evade the order. He is in an unheard-of conflict of duties. Ohlendorf has no possibility to make any appeal, since any attempt to get to Hitler personally always had to be made via Heydrich and Himmler, Since it is Bormann who is behind the order, any attempt to surpass Himmler and Heydrich would have failed at the latest when it got to Bormann. Bormann's actual role in that unequaled European tragedy, the story of who he was, will be recorded by some future historian. If one assumed any other possibility for Ohlendorf to gain influence, one would forget, that he was only a Standartenfuehrer, without any political powers, i.e. without any position in the Party based on political powers. He knows neither Hitler nor Bormann. No Reichsleiter or Gauleiter or any other politically influential personalities are his acquaintances, let alone on his side. All he could do was to interpret the order in as limited a way as he could possibly do and to try to execute it as humanely as possible under the given circumstances, contrary to the interpretation of the indictment not only in the interest of his men but first of all in the interest of the victims, since the protection of the men against brutalization is a protection of the victims against brutalized men.

Ohlendorf's entire life shows that in spite of all setbacks and threats his fight was not only directed against the tyranny of Nazi leaders within the Reich, but that immediately after his return from the Einsatz he starts fighting against the exponents of extermination and colonial power politics in the East, especially against Koch, Globotschnik and Einsatzgruppenfuehrer, SS-Gruppenfuehrer Thomas. Ohlendorf continues in this fight, even though Himmler treatens him not only with liquidation of his office in case he should continue with this kind of reporting, but also threatens to arrest him. In that moment it becomes evident that, as soon as there is no purely military relationship where no resistance is possible, Ohlendorf makes use of the slightest opportunity in order to actively intervene against the policies of power and extermination. by the defense. The tragedy of Ohlendorf's life will become clear to every man. taking part in the session this afternoon and tomorrow morning.

THE PRESIDENT: In order that Dr. Aschenauer may have an opportunity to prepare the defense of the defendant Ohlendorf, Ohlendorf will be excused from attendance upon the trial for the rest of the day and for all of tomorrow.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Your're very welcome.

DR. SCHWARZ: (Attorney for the Defendant Joost)

THE PRESIDENT (Interposing): Just before you begin, I presume you would want to leave, Dr. Aschenauer; you would like to leave the Court now and you would like to have the defendant Ohlendorf available from this moment?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: "Will the defendant Ohlendorf be escorted from the courtroom so that he will be available to his counsel. Just a moment please, Dr. Schwarz.

Dr. Aschenauer, may I suggest to you that if you wish to put any questions to the interrogator, Mr. Wartenburg, that Mr. Wartenburg will be available this afternoon; and, any time you care to come in, we will make him available to you so that you may not lose any time in getting back to your client.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I have no questions to address to Mr. Wartenburg.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Dr. Schwarz, you may proceed.

In these regions, which were under civilian ad at the time of Jost's entry upon his appointment.

These The Prosecution submitted an essay on basic conditions within the SS, the SD, the Gestapo, the Reich Security Main Office, and the Einsatzgruppen, dated 29 September 1947, which assumed, especially with respect to the enclosed photostatic copies of the drawings, the presence of certain actual conditions, which, at the time of JOST's entry upon his appointment, were already obsolete.

We shall refer to it later.

c) The joint statement of the Defense will also deal with the problem of how far the measures taken by the Einsatzgruppe A in the course of their military duties can be thought justified from the point of view of international law in view of Russia's behavior.

d) The occurrences, with which JOST was charged in the indictment under I S and T, were not initiated by units of the Einsatzgruppe A. submitted by the Prosecution in the course of this proceeding.

e) Apart from his appointment as Chief of Einsatzgruppe A, JOST also was Commander-in-Chief of the Security Police and the SD Ostland in the Reich Kommissariat Ostland. In this capacity, his activities were restricted by HEYDRICH, since his duties chiefly concerned the organizational structure of the offices of the commander-in-chief within the sphere of the Reich Kommissariat Ostland and within the framework of the civil administration, and because matters of an executive nature and those dealing with the Einsatzgruppe were to be excluded.

The problem of executive orders became acute when JOST at the end of April 1942 received instructions by HEUDRICH to the effect that all Jews with the exception of the age groups from 16 to 32 should be subjected to "special treatment". In this connection, it is necessary that the relationship between JOST and HEUDRICH is clearly outlined. After having been active since 1934 in the SD for seven years, JOST left the Reich Security Main Office at the end of August 1941, after having had most serious disagreements of a professional, political, and personal nature with HEYDRICH. From the beginning JOST tried with every means at his disposal to make HEYDRICH revoke his appointment as Chief of Einsatzgruppe A. Up to then, HEYDRICH had been considerate of JOST's attitude by not having issued executive orders to him. the above mentioned order or taking the consequences of insubordination, JOST decided not to relay this order but to have it rescinded, and to make the attempt to talk to HEYDRICH and see that this order would be annulled. At the same time, JOST again handed in his resignation. them act more in line with his way of thinking, and by this saved the lives of approximately 40,000 Jews. view with regard to the shooting of Jews against SS Obergruppenfuehrer JECKELN, with special emphasis on the fact that his men could not be expected to carry out such orders. novardeisk command to the effect that the inmates of the insane asylum in Krasnovardeisk be liquidated since the asylum was needed for billets. of freeing Ostland from Jews, and thereby contributed toward saving these people.

During Jost's command from March until August 1942, no executions were carried out upon his order or with his sanction.

g) This attitude that JOST displayed merits emphasis even more because he is as such not one of the most robust of men, and besides because of illness he never was in possession of his full strength and natural resistance, either physically nor psychologically. He suffered and still suffers from thyroid disease, from disturbances of the vegetative nervous system, and from an artrosis deformans of the spine. This is the reason for his frequent disability, and especially after Easter 1942, he was 1 me and confined to bed for 12 days. more than he could possibly have been expected to do. was phrased in the judgment of the IMT as the question of whether or not a choice corresponding to a code of morality was possible at all. (Chapter 5 at the end). The American Military Tribunal II in their judgment against Erhard MILCH said the following on page 96 of its opinion: "It was never our intention, and it has never been suggested by us, that he (MILCH) should have chosen any course of action which could have culminated in the loss of his life." And this was the great danger in JOST's case.

h) With this attitude that JOST exhibited it was inevitable that he was taken to task for it by the people then in power. After JOST's efforts towards being recalled from his post as Chief of Einsatzgruppe A were finally successful in August 1942, HIMMLER, at the beginning of March 1944, caused him to be inducted as Unterscharfuehrer into the Waffen-SS, without regard to age, health or previous training. HIMMLER wanted to get him out of the way.

2a) JOST's duties at the SD after 1 September 1939 as Chief of the Office VI, SD Ausland, at the Reich Security Main Office, consisted in getting information from foreign countries for the respective competent Reich authorities. Office VI never had anything directly to do with either the persecution and liquidation of the Jews, atrocities and murders in concentration camps, excesses in the Administration of occupied territories, the execution of the forced-labor program, nor with ill-treatment and murders of prisoners of war.

b) JOST's membership in the SS was forcibly dependent upon his job in the SD. He was not an SS-Fuehrer in the main office. He was on the payroll of the Police as Brigadier General (Generalmajor).

DR. GAWLIK: Dr. Gawlik for the Defendant Naumann. defendant Naumann who is represented here by me, are very severe. thoroughly the facts and their juridical implications. evidence submitted by the prosecution, it becomes already apparent that this evidence is not sufficient to establish Naumann's criminal responsibility for the actions with which he has been charged.

The incorrectness of the prosecution's assertions already arises in part out of the submitted indictment. I shall make further corrections in my submission of evidence. Naumann's character which is different from the interpretation as presented by the prosecution in the Opening Statement and throughout its submission of evidence. beginning of its activities in Russia. Until the end of November 1941 the leader of Einsatzgruppe B was the then commanding SS Gruppenfuehrer Nebe, chief of Amt V of RSHA. already were at the Einsat and Special commandos, because they already had been issued in June 1941 at the beginning of the war against Russia.

whatsoever for all executions which occurred before his taking command of Einsatzgruppe B. This concerns the following documents submitted by the Prosecution:

NO-2934, Exh. 78, Vol. II C, P. 52 NO-2844, Exh.

61, Vol. II B, P. 44 NO-3156, Exh.

60, Vol. II B, P. 15 NO-3160, Exh.

65, Vol. II B, P. 48 NO-3403, Exh.

63, Vol. II B, P. 39 reports (Ereignisberichte) which originated between July and October 1941. But the same is also true of documents NO-2825, Exh.

59, Vol. II B, P. 10 and NO-2656, Exh.

39, Vol. II A, P. 45.

The transmission of these written reports from the locations in the heart of Russia to Berlin took several weeks, particularly in view of the great transportation difficulties. This also explains why the operational situation report of 22 December 1941 (Doc. NO-2833, Exh. 114) relates events of 18 and 21 November 1941. The executions mentioned in the operational situation report of 19 November 1941 (Doc. NO-2824, Exh. 62) must, therefore, refer to an even earlier date. can thus not be the responsibility of the defendant Naumann for the simple reason that they date from a time when he was not the Commanding Officer of Einsetzgruppe B.

By submitting Document NO-2830, Exh. 72, Vol. II C, Page 23, the Prosecution wants to prove that Naumann was Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B as early as 12 November 1941. This document constitutes an operational situation report of the same day which does not contain reports of Einsatzgruppe B, which, however, names the defendant Naumann as Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B in the beginning under the list of location and lines of communication. In this connection I point once more to the fact that these operational situation reports were compiled at the RSHA (Reich Main Security Office) in Berlin where also the decisions concerning the assignment of personnel were made and where also the latest reports of the assignment of personnel were known. On 12 November 1941 it was known at the RSHA (Reich Main Security Office) that Naumann was assigned as Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B.

But at that time Naumann had not yet assumed duty. At that period he even was not yet in Russia. deduced for the executions carried out in November 1941 in the area of Einsatzgruppe B.During the time of Naumann's activity as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B we have, therefore, only the operational situation report of 21 April 1942, which has been submitted by the Prosecution as document NO3276, Exh.

66, and which contains data on executions in the period from 6 to 30 March 1942. for the executions mentioned there. I shall base my argument on the legal principles laid down already by Tribunal II in its judgment in the Milch Case and also by the Supreme Court in the Yamashita Case. the following questions can be answered in the affirmative beyond any reasonable doubt:

1. Did the defendant Naumann personally take part in executions?

2. Were these executions carried out under his direction or under his command?

3. Had he any knowledge of the executions before they were carried out?

4. If so, did he have the power or the opportunity to prevent them or stop them?

5. If this is the case, did he fail to act, and did he, in this way, become particeps criminis and accessory to the crime?

I shall prove: As to 1 1. The defendant Naumann personally did not take part in any executions. He himself did not kill any of the persons named in Document No-3276, Exh. 66, Vol. II B, p. 66. 2. The defendant Naumann did not give any instructions or orders for the carrying out of these executions either. Nor did he pass on any orders to the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos under his command for the carrying out of these executions. The orders given by Hitler for these measures were already in the possession of the Einsatz- and Sonder kommandos when Neumann took over.

These orders had been transmitted to the Einsatz-and Sonderkommandos by Naumann's predecessor, the then SS-Gruppenfuehrer Nebe. As to the legal significance of these orders I shall give detailed explanations in my Closing plea. 3. It is not contested that it was known to the defendant Naumann when he assumed duty as Chief of the Einsatzgruppe B, that the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos under his command had been given orders for the carrying out of executions. Neumann's criminal responsibility. This has already been decided by Military Tribunal II in the trial against Milch and by the Supreme Court in the Yamashita Case. opportunity to prevent the carrying out of these orders and to stop them, and have failed to do so. the opportunity to prevent the carrying out of the orders given by Hitler and passed on by Himmler and Heydrich, which were in the hands of the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos. Naumann would not have failed to prevent the carrying out of the execution orders if he had had only a vestige of power to do so. This is proved by his conduct when he was Chief of the Security Police and of the SD in Holland. If Neumann were the type of person as described by the Prosecution, Neumann would have rendered himself guilty of some sort of war crimes or crimes against humanity also in Holland. However, the opposite is the case. The defendant Neumann endeavored in Holland to lighten the burden of occupation whenever he had a chance to do so. He took steps to have Dutch hostages released, to have a number of Dutchmen discharged from concentration camps where they had been put for suspected acts of sabotage against the German occupying power; he saw to it that the Dutchmen confined in prisons for political reasons were provided with sufficient food so that their distress was relieved.

All this Naumann did though he was not competent to do so, and though he exceeded his competence by these actions and acted contrary to existing orders. execution orders issued by his predecessor to the Einsatz- and Sonderdommandos, if he had had the power to do so. But to do so was outside Naumann's sphere of power - for these were orders of Hitler, Himmler and Heydrich - three persons - who concentrated all power in Germany in their hands and ruthlessly saw to it that the orders issued by them were carried out.

I shall prove that Naumann's activity during his service in Russia. did by no means consist of carrying into effect Himmler's and Frank's ideas in their speeches cited by the Prosecution, on the extermination of inferior races, Naumann was, first of all, a soldier - and his main activity as Chief of an Einsatzgruppe consisted in the safeguarding of the zone of communications in the East against the numerous raids by Partisans. I shall prove in my argument, that this activity claimed his entire strength, so that he was in no position to supervise the work of the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos in the carrying out of the execution orders given by Hitler, Himmler and Heydrich. This explains also why Naumann never took part in any execution.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, while you are here we want to call your attention to a motion made by Dr. Schwarz asking that the order in the presentation of his case he delayed because of the fact that he was not engaged as counsel until September 17th. His request does not seem to be - Oh, I did not have my key up - shall I repeat what I said: Yes, you may wonder what this has to do with you but you will see in a minute. Dr. Schwarz, who represents, Jost, the defendant who precedes your client in the order in which they are seated in the box has asked.

that he be allowed to present his case in a later order because of the fact that he was only engaged as counsel on September 17th. He would appreciate therefore, if you would present your case immediately following the case of Ohlendorf, so that Dr. Schwarz will have, let us say, approximately thirty days from the time that he was appointed for the presentation of his case, so if it is agreeable with you when Ohlendorf's case is finished, you will proceed with Neumann's?

DR. GAWLIK: Very well.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much.

DR. SCHWARZ: Will you pardon me, Your Honors, may I ask the Tribunal in order to have more time to prepare the defense of Jost that you excuse him from being present in the Courtroom?

THE PRESIDENT: From this moment you would like to have him excused, from this moment?

DR. SCHWARZ: Certainly.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. In order that the defendant Jost may be available to his counsel he will be excused from, attendance on this proceeding for the rest of the day and for tomorrow al so?

DR. SCHWARZ: I would like to ask that he do so.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the request is granted. Will the Marshal escort the defendant Jost from the Courtroom?

DR. SURHOLT: Your Honor, the prosecution -

THE PRESIDENT: Might you indicate your name and the client you represent for the purposes of the record?

DR. SURHOLT: Attorney Surholt for the Defendant Dr. Rasch. The Prosecution charges the defendant Dr. Otto Rasch with

I. Crimes against Humanity

II. War Crimes

III. Membership in Criminal Organizations (SS, SD and Gestapo). The defendant pleaded "not guilty" in the arraignment of the Tribunal. To motivate this and to contest the indictment, the Defense will submit the following:

1. The Einsatzgruppen were established in the early summer of 1941 in accordance with such principles as are generally recognized as admissible from the view point of international law in the event of war. The forces selected for this assignment received a special but purely military training. The instructions given to them in view of the tasks with which they were to be charged shortly in the course of the assignment pertained solely to a security of the "military zone in the rear". This security was to be attained by rendering harmless saboteurs, by fighting partisans, and in general by fighting all such elements as, according to general war experience, endanger the safety of the fighting troops in areas already occupied by them. Any form of training or even an indication for an assignment of such a nature as the Prosecution is now quoting under the name of Crimes against Humanity and War Crimes was not given, neither could it be surmised. Thus the defendant Dr. Rasch had no reason to reject the command over Einsatzgruppe C with which he was charged.

2. Accordingly, the assignment of the Gruppen, or at any rate that of Gruppe C headed by Rasch, was motivated by military necessity. The orders he passed on to the subordinate Kommandos were based on adequate prerequisites. Executions were only to be carried out if the actual facts of the crime were established, they had thus to be limited to cases involving persons who had participated in murders, looting acts of sabotage, etc.

3. Things changed only when new orders came out to the effect that in the area to be made safe by the Einsatzgruppe the Jews including women and children, were to be annihilated. The defendant Dr. Rasch can no longer recall the exact date of this order. It may have been in August, but also in September 1941. The order was transmitted to Rasch by SS-Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln. This order seemed so incredible to Rasch that he immediately left for Berlin to obtain a direct explanation. The first evening he got as far as Cracow from where he reported to SS-Gruppenfuehrer Heydrich by telephone to consult him in this matter. The latter confirmed the contents of the order as binding pointing out explicity that it came from the Fuehrer himself and was to be carried through under all circumstances. he received to the units under his command, although he personally not only disagreed with these orders, but rejected them. Although he was a high SS-leader, yet he had no possibility directly to refuse compliance with that order without exposing his own person to immediate grave danger. Like a number of other high SS-leaders before him, he would first have been sent to a KZ and then to one of the so-called "lost battalions" (Verlorener Haufen), whose members were assigned to especially dangerous tasks and thus systematically annihilated. It was moreover evident from the situation that a refusal would not have prevented or even hindered the execution of the order. Therefore, without refusing to comply with the order as such, he attempted to obtain release from his command on grounds which appeared to have no bearing on the matter. Consequently, he was relieved of his function and sent on leave in October on his own request because of his health and divergencies in opinion with Reich Commissioner, Gauleiter Koch. duties as higher SS and Police-leader in France and Northern Italy. IN view of his experiences, Rasch gave ill health as a reason, in order to be excused from further duties.

He looked around for a civilian job; at first he intended to return to the legal profession but then changed over into industry by joining the Continental Oel A.G. He remained with that firm to the end of the war.

4. The Defense is going to prove the facts stated up to the present partly from documents presented by the Prosecution, partly through witnesses, and particularly through putting the defendant into the witness stand in his own case. intends to show that the defendant Rasch obstructed hindered the aims and measures of the Party on several other occasions as well. In that way he opposed the Party in their endeavors to interfere in the normal communal administration, consciously risking and losing his position as Lord Mayor of Wittenberg. He further saved political and also racial persecutees from the concentration camp and even from death, without being prompted by any but purely humane motives. In that he even went as far as to use his rank for giving orders to subordinate agencies, to which he was not authorized in the course of duty. Evidence to that effect will be given through witnesses and the submission of defense documents.

5. With regard to the legal position, the Defense is fully aware that, according to Article II 4b of the Control Council Law No. 10, the fact that an action was committed under orders does not exempt a person from responsibility for a crime and can, at most, be taken into consideration as a mitigating circumstance. It is, however, the opinion of the Defense that the written law is always subordinate to the recognized laws of nature. No man can be denied the right to defend himself in a state of necessity. It will be the task of the Defense to elaborate on this idea in detail, at the conclusion of the hearing of the evidence.

6. Rasch was a member of the SS and the SD - not, however, of the Gestapo (Secret State Police). In that respect, however, he denies having had the intent necessary for his conviction in accordance with the rules laid down by the verdict of the IMT.

May I make some explanation? The preparation of the defense of Dr. Rasch, owing to the sickness of my client, during the decisive days of the last week -

THE PRESIDENT: Slowly.

DR. SURHOLT: On the other hand, however, in particular, during the decisive days of the last week for the reason that I was sick myself, and also my right hand was badly burned -- owing to that, I have not proceeded very far in preparing my case as yet, and, in particular, I have not yet discussed the case of the prosecution in detail with the defendant. I therefore ask, that the case of Rasch be not heard yet. I ask, therefore, that the case of Rasch be put back for the moment, as I am not quite ready yet. Quite apart from the fact that the Tribunal has not yet decided as regards my motion to separate the case of my client.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't quite understand what you mean by your request that the case of Otto Rasch not be taken up for the moment, because there is no possibility that his case will be called for the moment. We have first all the opening statements. Then we will have Ohlendorf's defense. Then there will be Naumann's defense, and then the Joost defense, and Rasch won't be reached for some few days.

DR. SURHOLT: Yes, I repeat, I cannot see how long it will take. I only say since my predecessors are not present, I will not have sufficient time.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, at the present moment, you are not threatened with any immediate presentation of your client. Let's wait and see what develops. As the situation at present presents itself, I do not see where you have any problem at all. If in the matter of three of four days you seem to feel that you are being pressed unduly for time, then your motion to the Tribunal and we will rule upon it.

DR. SURHOLT: Thank you very much.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of the lateness of the hour, perhaps we won't take up another opening statement, but will now recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please take their seats.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, the Prosecution was informed by the Tribunal that it desired to hear the testimony of Mr. Rolf Wartenberg concerning affidavits and related matters, and that it make him available for cross-examination by the Defense. If the Tribunal desires to hear him at the present time, he is available.

THE PRESIDENT: I think it might be well to call him now so that his intended trip to the States will not be retarded.

MR. WALTON: Mr. Wartenberg is just outside the door.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes; you may call him to the witness stand.

DR. GAWLIK (Counsel for defendants Naumann and Seibert): As a result of the fact that the witness Wartenberg is being called now, we are in a somewhat difficult position. We only found out about this today, and we had no possibility--at least I had no possibility--to discuss this with my client. Therefore, I should like to have the Tribunal grant us the possibility of having the witness called again tomorrow. If I have the opportunity to speak to my client tonight about this, we should call him tomorrow. I am of the opinion that during the examination of one or the other defendants it might be necessary to call the witness Wartenberg again. I also would like the Tribunal to grant us that.

THE PRESIDENT: Were you here this morning, Dr. Gawlik, when I made my announcement concerning this witness?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, I heard it this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, I would like to suggest to Defense counsel that when an announcement is made by the Tribunal, if any of counsel have any observations to make, that they be made then, When I said this morning that Mr. Wartenberg would be called this afternoon you did not inform the Tribunal that you were not prepared to question him this afternoon.

No defense counsel suggested in any way that they were not entirely pleased with that arrangement. Now, we have brought Mr. Wartenberg in, and now you tell me that you are not ready to proceed.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I think there must be a misunderstanding. When the announcement was made this morning I was not here. I only heard about it from my colleagues this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, you did not answer my question correctly when I just asked you if you were here this morning.

DR. GAWLIK: I beg your pardon, I had to adjust my channels. They were not adjusted to the German language.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, let me repeat, for your benefit, Dr. Gawlik, what the situation is. Mr. Wartenberg is an interrogator, and you know that he took many--if not all--of the statements of the defendants. He is soon returning to the United States and must be leaving Nurnberg during the next two or three days. He may not be called, as you suggested a moment ago, intermittently, as defendants take the witness stand. He must be interrogated now--or not at all. I do not mean this very moment, but very quickly. now, whatever you want to put to him, we will see about having him appear a little bit later in the day, or possibly tomorrow morning. But you must absolutely dismiss from your mind the thought that you can call him later on, because he will not be here. He will not be in Europe.

DR. GAWLIK: I understand, Your Honor; and I do not know whether that would be required at all. I only wanted to reserve this right.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, would it be convenient for Mr. Wartenberg to be here the first thing tomorrow morning, just so that Dr. Gawlik will have an opportunity to talk with his client?

MR. WALTON: Your Honor, I have not conferred with Mr. Wartenberg on that particular point, but if the Tribunal will ask him I am sure that it can be settled now.

THE PRESIDENT: I will ask you, Mr. Wartenberg: Could you appear here tomorrow morning?

MR. WARTENBERG: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Very well then, Dr. Gawlik. I hope you have the right channel working. Mr. Wartenberg will be here tomorrow morning at nine-thirty, available to all Defense counsel for examination on the subject matter which I have mentioned. So we won't need you this afternoon. I am sorry to have brought you in, Mr. Wartenberg.

DR. DURCHHOLZ (Counsel for defendant Erwin Schulz): of the Prosecution, and to the reading of documents by the Prosecution may I make the following statement. Erwin Schulz replied by pleading "not guilty" to the question of the Tribunal, whether he pleads guilty or not guilty to the grave charge preferred against him, this reply sprang from his innermost conviction. This reply was by no means a matter of course which was expected with a certain irony; especially it wasnot intended as two empty words implying a cowardly flight from any responsibility to the world, whenever such responsibility might be established. The defendant rather wanted to express to the Tribunal competent to judge his actions that he can, in his conscience, take the responsibility for what he has done in his life. He has consciously declared that he feels absolutely guiltless in face of the monstrous charges brought against him.

May I demonstrate in my argument on what this feeling is based? right and justice while pleading before this Tribunal. I shall endeavor to assist in clarifying all acts and in establishing all facts which will be of importance for the defendant's course of action.

I may assure the Tribunal that I shall represent the interests of the defendant without passion and in all frankness in order to establish the truth. Crimes Against Humanity, in which he is supposed to have participated in some form defined in Control Council Law No. 10, in actions representing murder, extermination, imprisonment, and other inhumane acts, committed on political, racial and religious grounds, actions which are said to be part of a systematic program of genocide, having as its aim the destruction of foreign nations and ethnic groups by murderous extermination. having by the same actions committed war crimes, acts which are said to have been committed in violation of the laws and customs of war, such as murder, ill-treatment of prisoners of war and of the civilian population of countries and territories under the belligerent occupation or otherwise controlled by Germany, as well as wanton destruction not justified by military necessity.

Under Count III of the Indictment the Defendant is charged: 1.) with having been, after 1 September 1939, a member of the Schutzstaffeln of the NSDAP--(SS) and 2.) with having been a member of Amt IV of the Reichssicherheitshauptamt (Gestapo); that is, of organizations declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal and by paragraph 1 d of Article II of Control Council Law No. 10, but only under definite conditions, which have, however, also been proved beyound doubt. fulfilled by asserting under paragraph 8, letters Q to W of the Indictment, that the defendant, asleader of Einsatzkommando V within the Einstazgruppe C, murdered a considerable number of human beings, in the period from 22 June 1941 to 24 January 1942.

In this I must start from the assumption that "murder" is to be understood as the concept--at all times common to all civilized peoples and always remaining the same--of killing a human being for joy in killing, avarice, or for other low motives, treacherously, cruelly, or perhaps by methods which constitute a public danger.

following objective and subjective evidence by presenting affidavits of witnesses, by verbal examination of witnesses by verbal examination of witnesses, by documents and by hearing the Defendant as witness in his own case: 1) Concerning his so-called "Russland-Einsatz": The defendant Schulz was from 23 June to 24 August and from 15 September to 22 September 1941 in the so-called "Einsatz Russland" as leader of Einsatzkommando 5 within Einsatzgruppe C. In the time from 24 August till 15 September 1941 the Defendant was in Berlin or on trips to and from Russia. of his Detachment to his successor, the then SS Obersturmbannfuehrer (Lt.Colonel) MEYER, who had been appointed by the Chief of the Security Police and of the SD. made responsible for his acts, whatever their nature, only for the period, during which he held the actual command and responsibility for Einsatzkommando 5. did not order such a murder nor did he in any form participate in it; on the contrary he opposed such murders and any sort of brutality, any atrocity, any maltreatment of a human being, to whatever political or religious creed or to whatever race he might belong, he always proved his own humane attitude and endeavored to educate others in the same humane attitude and always exercised only the best influence. As far as shootings were carried out by members of his detachment, they were in no case executed on his order. Apart from the fact, that he had learned of unqualified killing orders only after having spent some time in "Einsatz Fussland" - he was likewise not present at the alleged preliminary conferences, at which such orders for killings or extermination are said to have been issued - and that he would have been obliged to have such orders carried out by his detachment, it was he, who on his own responsibility imposed a limitation on such an unlimited order.

He withheld such an order and passed it on only insofar as he made it an express condition for any possible execution, that clear evidence of a guilt constituting a recognized common crime must be established. Such crimes were in fact committed, as may also be seen from the documents presented by the Prosecution. But in addition there had to be absolute military necessity, because after all there was a war. The Defendant SCHULZ commanded no liquidation unit, nor did he usurp the right to decide on the fate of human beings and to spread only death as an intended consequence of his power and contempt. By his orders he prevented the execution of such a command. He did not call helpless civilians partisans or helpers of Partisans and he did not cause them to be executed, he did not organise murder, he did not select human beings in order to exterminate them, he did not destroy life behind the front. Nor did he ever take Part in killing sick and insane persons in hospitals and lunatic asylums or in having them killed. As far as he was ordered to kill also women and children, he never carried out such an order and never communicated it to the men under his command. His men would have refused to comply with such an order. But whenever the Defendant had to pass on an execution order, it was only done, if real, grave, capital crimes justified such a measure.

Under Defendant SCHULZ' command no victims were simply liquidated, no prisoners of war were killed, neither living or dead persons were deprived of their possessions, no foreign property was wantonly destroyed, in no place big drives were started to herd parts of the population together because they were destined to be killed, nowhere did he carry out man humts or give orders for or execute a socalled "resettlement". There was no gasvan for killing purposes in his unit. In particular I shall prove in this connection, that the times, places and numbers of executions alleged by the Prosecution in order to establish the Defendant SCHULZ' individual responsibility, are not correct. I shall prove, that the Defendant SCHULZ opposed with the means at his disposal any orders for harsh measures, which were in his opinion illegal, immoral and ruthless, and that this brought down on him the displeasure of his superior authorities. Hitherto he had known only of one purpose for his assignment: the security of the fighting troops as it was rendered necessary by war conditions. His own activity and the activity of his men was confined to this. I shall prove to Your Honors that he felt duty-bound to frustrate more farreaching intentions of his superior authorities and to refrain from the activities alleged by the Prosecution, whenever such were demanded from him. It was due to this fact that the Defendant SCHULZ succeeded in being relieved of his command after only a short and interrupted term of activity in the Einsatzgruppe, because he had been subjected to demands for which he could not assume responsibility. 2) Concerning his other activities:

It will be proved. that the Defendant SCHULZ did not commit any crimes against humanity or any war crimes in the "Einsatz Russland". It will moreover be proved that also before and after that time he never rendered himself guilty of such a crime against humanity.

In this way I shall also convincingly refute Count III of the Indictment concerning membership in organisations declared criminal. It should certainly be assumed, that a member of an organisation, who has worked only in the sense of this charge, is a criminal. But for this purpose it must be proved that he has objectively and subjectively participated in war crimes and crimes against humanity, at least by being an accessory to them. I am in the fortunate position to prove the following concerning the professional career of the Defendant and his activity in the police by menas of Affidavits of witnesses, by verbal examination of witnesses as well as by the hearing of the Defendant as witness in his own case: a) Having been a member of the police since 1923 the Defendant was transferred to the SS in 1935 in the course of the general assimilation of grades. Promotions in the SS were automatic consequences of his promotions in the police force and were in no way consequences of special merits in this organisation. b) In this work the Defendant was only guided by motives of humanity, helpfulness and tolerance. He took stops against any form of excess and maltreatment, against all unjustified arrests, especially for political, religious and racial reasons, regardless of personal consequences for himself. In numberless cases it was he who gave a helping hand to people in protective custody and their families, to procure work and bread for them. Numberless orders for protective custody were not carried out owing to his intervention. He gave bail for such persons and did many more similar things. He always endeavored to have due respect for other people's convictions. c) The Defendant was no favorite of the Party, he never engaged in Party politics and had earned no special merits in the NSDAP.

d) The Defendant SCHULZ had the reputation of being the ideal comrade and chief, who treated every subordinate equally well, who personally helped his fellow-men in their needs and troubles, no matter whether they were friends or enemies and whatever their political allegiance. He was without racial or national hatred, he was no representative of a ruling classwho wanted to force an opinion on unwilling people. He exclusively served absolute justice and therefore the law. To show this attitude I could already today out forward within the frame of my statemtne quotations from Affidavits forwarded to me, partly even without having asked for them. However, I shall reserve them for my detailed demonstration of the transparent and unchangeable personality of the Defendant SCHULZ. In conclusion I may mention that the Defendant SCHULZ in his clean attitude, when holding his last high position in the police at Salzburg Austria, did not misuse it as a member of an organisation declared criminal. It was definitely due to his energetic intervention that he dissuaded the Party, State and Wehrmacht from any senseless resistance. He contributed to preventing a horrible end of the final tragedy. He prevented chaos, senseless sacrifices and useless bloodshed on both sides and saw to it, that the city and an extensive district capitulated in an orderly manner. It was he who showed on this occasion, as already at all times before, his special concern for the welfare of a large number of prisoners of war and foreign workers. This was also recognized by the competent American officers. It was also his constant attitude, which finally obliged the Defendant to remain at his post to the bitter end, in order to act only in the interest of humanity. On the day of the capitulation he at once and without being requested put his person and his knowledge of things at the disposal of the American headquarters.

The Defendant shares the Prosecution's standpoint, that the human conscience is the basis of all law. Therefore he may demand a judgment in accordance with this conscience.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Mr. President, Your Honors, I would like to utter a request here at this point regarding the fact that the defendant Schulz will be called to the witness stand at a very early date, and especially regarding the fact that the two defendants, Jost and Rasch, will probably be taken on the witness stand at a later date, and as I need time for the preparation of my defense, I would like to ask that the defendant Schulz be excused tomorrow for the whole day, especially as only opening statements are to be heard tomorrow and I have no questions to put to the witness Wartenberg.

THE PRESIDENT: In accordance with the request of defense counsel, the defendant Schulz will be excused tomorrow from attendance at the station. informed by the Translation Section that there are still three opening statements not delivered - the opening statements for Sandberger, Nosske and Seibert. I hope defense counsel will get their statements in immediately.

DR. GAWLIK: (For the defendant SEIBERT): Your Honor, an opening statement has been submitted for the defendant Seibert this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know about the other two?

DR. MANDRY: (For the defendant Sandberger): My opening statement has been submitted this morning by me, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, is (defense counsel for Nosske here? Well, if any one sees him please Inform him what the Tribunal has just stated and we will take the next opening statement now for the Defendant Six:

DR. ULMER: For the defendant Six: Your Honors of the High Tribunal: The defendant, Dr. Franz-Alfred SIX has been accused on all three counts of the indictment, that is to say, in his capacity as leader of Vorkommando Moscow, he has been charged with criies against humanity and war crimes as well as being guilty by virtue of his membership after 1 Sept.

The defense completely disputes this accusation. The documentary evidence submitted by the Prosecution is not sufficient proof of his guilt for the crimes with which he has been charged. crimes committed by the Vorkommando Moscow:

DR. HEIM: (For the defendant Blobel): May it please your Honor: Before I occupy myself with the facts as presented by the Prosecution as far as it concerns the defendant Blobel, may I ask the permission to present a few ideas of a general character, for which there is reason in this trial, paradoxical as this may sound at first. I shall mainly limit myself to reproduce such ideas as originate from the pen of non-German authors and which sine ira et studio endeavor to solve the difficult task of prying into the depths and abysses of thepsychic characteristics of the German People. This survey may be a small contribution to the effort to explain the situtation from which it results that the defendants, and amongst them also Blobel, were "the cruel henchmen whose terror will be engraved in the darkest pages of the history of humanity" according to the Prosecution's assertion. The intention of my statements is to bring out a part of the underlying total connections of our time."

(Mitscherlich and Mielke, The Dictate of the Contempt for Humanity (Das Diktat der Menschenverachtung). to dispute or to whitewash any crimes which were ordered or executed under the National Socialist regime, but at the same time I would like to point out that during the war crimes were not only perpetrated by the members of the Axis but also by those of their military opponents. delicate sphere where there are opposed on one side: llyalty and absolute obedience - in the National Socialist State and equivalent to life and freedom - and personal guilt and atonement on the other side. has not become any more humane. It is to be regretted that the second World War has shown a retrogressive development in respect to the protection of the civilian population. This we were made to feel to a not too small extnet in our own country too. The apocalyptic horsemen have for many years haunted Germany too, and they left behing their ineradicable traces. Many German towns with a culture of almost a thousand years have perished under a hall of bombs and it will not be possible to restore them and in them innocent women, children and old people have lost their lives. It is unfortunate that especially when for yars it had been systematically fostered by utilizing all possible means of propaganda, hatred has resulted in wild orgies of cruelty. "War has always promoted such outbreaks ..." (Schenk, Letter from a Swiss to a German student in "Europa vor der deutschen Frage" (Europe faces the German problem).). It is further said in this volume that it is deemed the highest ethics in Germany "completely to renounce one's own individuality and to recognize solely the State as one's conscience above which there is no higher binding authority". And Schenk states also the causes which exist for it according to his idea, by declaring:

"It results from the specifically Prussian military Germany.

"The Frenchmen" as he goes on to state - and I want to add to it -- the American and the British -- will never understand that there are people who acknowledge an authority over them which may prescribe to them how to behave." This in itself regrettable and frightening character trait, to give one's individuality up completely and only to be a small wheel in the set-up of a clockwork, has become the theme of a critical essay by Robert d'Aarcourt "The mental perspectives of the Germans (Dis geistigen Perspektiven das Deutschen)" There it is being said:

"Resistance - this word means something disreputable to the Germans.

... They have superstitious veneration for opposition.

.. In thepresence of power, in the presence judgment in the Germans becomes befogged.

The ability of the word.

The only reaction to a given order is its acceptance and its execution.

.." the problem, how it was possible that decent and blameless people, according to the statements of the Prosecution, could so diligently and punctually given the National Socialist annihilation machinery, is given in the statement contained in the above-mentioned essay by D'Harcourt;

"There is no other nation that in its whole make-up is more removed from any public affairs than the Germans.

That in the second instance a citizen.

for his family predestinate him exactly to function in the prescribed sense in the authoritative State. And this State utilized the endlessly docile yielding disposition of a nation to which the security of the family meant more than the duty of the citizen who is conscious of his responsibility, to form it at will and to its own purposes. brought Blobel as well as the other defendants into the dock. Under 8 C-J the indictment charges the defendant Bllbel with the murder of nearly 60,000 people. Prosecution, the latter seems to consider the case as a simple case of murder, in which on theone hand there is the perpetrator andon the other hand there is the known number of people executed. But it is not quite as simple as the Prosecution seems to think, even if the actual facts are apparently sufficiently proven by documents. to another essential factor. The submitted documentary material to which the Prosecution had access, is definitely incriminating. However, it is so much easier for the Court to fulfill its difficult and responsible task of finding the objective truth, the more fully the material will be at its disposal -- the exonerating material as well as that which implicates the defendants. The documentary material which was found amounts to the immeasurable, and that which was made available to theDefense is only an infinitesimal part of it and besides exclusively the material which indicts the defendants. The war in the East was specially characterized by atrocities andcruelties on both sides, but the material which would show the other side also in its true light and would thus give a full picture of the situation in the East is not accessible to the Defense.

sub-detachments, which dealt independently with the security tasks assigned to them in the areas of the front-line divisions, resulted in Blobel having no influence on the reported events and was informed of them only subsequently or perhaps not at all, because the subdetachments reported immediately to the Einsatzgruppe through Army District Command 6. a detachment of altogether 52 men, from which number we have to deduct office personnel, mess personnel, interrogation staff and drivers, can attain the number of executions alleged by the Prosecution. This is simply impossible. Evidence will show, that the Chief of an Einsatzkommando or Sonderkommando had no power of command over units of the Ordnungspolizei, the Waffen-SS, the Wehrmacht and the Unkrainian Militia. Furthermore I shall prove, that, as far as parts of Sonderkommando 4a took part in executions, they were used by Blobel in consequence of orders received by him as chief of the Sonderkommando from the Einsatzgruppe or from Army District Command 6. Blobel had no occasion to consider the carrying out of the executions criminal and to examine whether these orders were in conformity with International law, because the Russian enemy hardly knew the concept of International law, had not signed International Conventions concerning warfare and did not in the least intend to comply with the customs of war. In this conception Bllbel was of necessity seconded by what he had experienced and seen, especially of atrocities committed on German soldiers. I shall prove what may perhaps appear incredible, namely, that the executions of women and children as carried out by Sonderkommando 4a, were by no means contrary to International law, since the Russians in their carefully organized and all-embracing partisan warfare, which was contrary to International law, ruthlessly employed also women and children for these purposes.

Apart from all that it has already been mentioned that in Germany, too, the war did not spare women and children, and in this repeat the prevailing rules of warfare have destroyed the doctrine of reprisals. I may point out in this connection that the Anglo-American conception of warfare -- in contrast to the one prevailing on the European Continent - sticks to the traditional concept of war, which regards every person resident in enemy territory as an enemy alien.

Through the principles involved in the subject, "order" have already been discussed by somebody else, I want to refer in this connection to Himmler's speech at Posen in October 1943 in order to underline what has already been said in the beginning. His statements as to loyalty and obedience left no doubt as to what an SS-leader had to expect in the event of noncompliance with orders. Himmler stated among other things:

"I want to lay down one directive. Should you ever we shall see to it that he 1 ses his life.

.. I want to make a clear and unambiguous statement.

It goes But orders must be sacred.

If generals obey, the Armies obey automatically.

.. The only commissar we have obedience.

.." Marwitz could refuse obedience in spite of his oath of allegiance, because thecarrying out of an order of the king would have meant for him a conflict with marality and conscience.

Marwitz' tomb bears the characteristic inscription; "He saw Frederick's heroic epoch and fought with him in all his wars. He chose disgrace, where obedience brought no honor." In Adolf Hitler's Germany men who refused obedience were either put in a concentration camp or shot dead, regardless of person and rank, as is proved above all by the measures against the participants in the events of the 20 July 1944.

the moral law; this applies also to the Defendant Blobel. For either he had to carry out the order or if he refused to do so, he lost his liberty, or he was even shot dead by a summary Court martial. In addition the National Socialist regime during the war introduced the truly devilish device of family liability, in order to eliminate the last remnant of a will to disturb the machinery of its system. The fear to endanger even the closest relatives made the internally reluctant man abandon every better motion of his conscience. But the legal conclusion to be drawn from this situation must be that the defendant was in a genuine emergency, at least in a presumptive emergency. But this is a justifying reason according to the general principles of penal law. Even if the Defendant Blobel, like so many other Germans, who have remained decent at heart, should be reproached with cowardice and egoistic self-preservation, the short statement may be sufficient, that this may not establish any punishable form of participation. made to the provision of the German Military Code, that the participant in the execution of an illegal order renders himself liable to punishment; to this we may object that the authoritarian State would have declared that every kind of resistance against the crime is in itself a crime. In addition terrorist and tendentious sentences did the rest to spread the conviction, that any sort of resistance was condemned to failure and therefore meant only a useless and consequently senseless sacrifice. in 1943 to open the mass graves in the East and to destroy the corpses completely, no argument for the Defendant is needed in this respect. It cannot be understood why the burning or the destruction of corpses is supposed to be a criminal act, no matter why and by whom the exe cutions were carried out.

Defendant Blobel the day after tomorrow, that is Wednesday, for the whole day, as it must be reckoned that he will be examined as a witness very soon, and I would like to prepare his examination.

THE PRESIDENT: The request of Dr. Heim is granted, and the Defendant Blobel will be excused from attendance in court, next Wednesday all day.

DR. HEIM: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: About how long is your opening statement?

DR. LUMMERT (For Defendant Blume): About fifteen minutes.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose we take the recess now. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

DR. LUMMERT: Lummert for Blume. Your Honor, I was prepared to examine the witness Wartenberg this afternoon. Would it be possible that the witness Wartenberg, in case he is in the building, could be called during the interval so that I could examine him after my opening statement? It would be an advantage if I could be excused tomorrow, I and the defendant Blume.

THE PRESIDENT: I shall inquire if Mr. Wartenberg is available. Mr. Glancy, can you answer that question?

MR. GLANCY: To the best of my knowledge and belief, sir, he is in the building. During the intermission I will make sure and inform the Tribunal upon our return.

DR. LUMMERT: would it be possible to ask the Witness Wartenberg to give us his documentary evidence about the interrogation of the defendant Blume, or to bring it along with him?

THE PRESIDENT: Will you so inform Mr. Wartenberg, Mr. Glancy?

MR. GLANCY: I didn't quite get that, sir. I am sorry.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Whatever Mr. Wartenberg may have with regard to the interrogation of the Defendant Blume he should bring along with him into court when he comes in.

MR. GLANCY: If the time allowed permits he will.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: Sir, might I ask at this time, are there any other defense counsel who are ready this afternoon to continue with the interrogation of the Interrogator Wartenberg?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that is a very good suggestion which Mr. Glancy makes. If there is anyone else who is ready to question Mr. Wartenberg and will indicate the name of his client, then Mr. Wartenberg will be instructed to bring along those papers also.

DR. FICHT: Biberstein.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you make a note of that, Biberstein. Anyone else?

(No response,)

THE PRESIDENT: Well, those two, We will recess.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. GLANCY: If the Tribunal please, the Prosecution hasnnow located Mr. Wartenberg, and he should be here within five minutes,

THE PRESIDENT: As far as you can, take advantage of those minutes; you may begin. I am sorry. I merely said we will begin with the opening statement.

DR. LUMMERT: (Attorney for the Defendant Blume) special desire for a speeding up of the procedure became evident. Particularly in the present proceedings the otherwise customary interval between the submissions by the Prosecution and the opening speech of the Defense wasnot allowed. I, therefore, request for indulgence that I shall only be able to do full justice to my duties as Defense Counsel in my final plea, when I shall argue the legal principles of the case. punishment for acts normally constituting murder and mass-murder can be administered to the individual perpetrator, if the murder was committed by order of the State? had to lose their lives, on the part of all belligerents. Killing in the course of military action does not count as murder. There is general agreement that the leaders of states and supreme military commanders have to observe the recognized rulesof war which are recognized among all civilized states. In case of violations, they may be held to account. But what is the position in respect to Criminal Law of the individual soldier and officer, if the supreme leadership of the State and of the Army violates the law of war and of nations by their commands? This is the crux of the present case. future World State. It is the hope of suffering mankind. Up to this time, the so-called states, those strange, highest forms of organizedsociety were and still are at the same time the supreme legislators.

They did and still do claim so-called sovereignty for themselves. With the courage of the legislator the verdict of the IMT anticipated the basic law of the future World State in that one sentence, which in my opinion is the most important one, but unfortunately also that sentence of the great Nuernberg verdict, which it is hardest to put into practice:

(Official text, vol I, p. 223) "On the other hand the very essence of the Charter is that individuals have international duties which transcent the national obligations of obedience imposed by the individual State." individuals, which find themselves in a position where their national duties of obedience clash with their international duties. It is the vocation of the United Nations to prepare that World State and step by step make it a reality. The difficulties of the negotiations of the United Nations in a nut shell are described by the question, whether the funda mental principlesof West or East are to be dominant.

After this general survey, let us now return to our trial. The acts for which the defendants are now held responsible here belong into the history of the era of transition from single states to the World State. I intend to take up in my closing plea on behalf of my Defendant Blume in detail the problem of whether or not a person can be expected to act in a certain way as a basis for excluding guilt. This reason for excluding guilt does not concur with either the so-called necessity (Notstand) arising from having received an order, nor with the general state of necessity as defined by criminal statute. It is rather the basic legal principle, acknowledged legal theory by science and practice in many countries, which is fundamental to all special statutory provisions concerning the state of necessity, but which is not entirely covered by them. The International Military Tribunal mentioned this basic principle in its discussion of Article 8 of the Charter; it is expressed in the following way (Official text, Vol I, p. 224): I quote:

"The true test, which is found in varying degrees in the criminal law of most nations, is not the existence of the order, but whether moral choice was in fact possible." organizations charged with being criminal. There it excluded from "criminal groups" those "who were drafted into membership by the State in such a way as to give them no choice in the matter" (Official text, Vol. I, p. 256 and 273). give a complete and true picture of his participation -- which was on the whole very slight -- in those acts carried out in the East by order of the political and military dictator Hitler. I shall show exactly and in detail how the Defendant Blume almost never carried out this order, which he himself felt to be altogether impossible, how in two cases he could not altogether evade the order when exposed to the strongest immediate mental pressure on the part of his superior Nebe, which left him no other choice, and how he was relieved and sent back to Berlin already after about seven weeks in the middle of August 1941, because Nebe was highly dissatisfied with him and found him too "soft" and too "burocratic". carrying out of the order, he bad only the choice to forfeit his own life at once for non-compliance with orders or to carry out the order. But this was no choice in conformity with the moral law. I legal duty to suffer martyrdom is universally rejected. In conformity with this, the Presiding Judge of this Tribunal, Judge Musmanne, said in his concurrent opinion on the conviction of the former Fieldmarshal Milch (text of Judgment, English, p. 84, German p. 96):

"We never intended, nor was it suggested, that he should take any action, which would result in the forfeiture of his life."

stand on his general educational background and on his professional career and his activity asofficial of the Security Police in the years before and after the middle of 1941. witnesses and by the presentation of a number of documents. This evidence will concern both the activity and conduct of the Defendant Blume and the general picture of his character and personality. Finally, I shall submit some documents concerning legal rules and legal questions in order to facilitate the task of the Tribunal. Defendant Blume will show that it will be possible to consider him worthy of a mild judgment. Tribunal, in agreement with my colleagues, to be permitted to make a short separate statement on the question of criminal membership (Count III of the Indictment), because I have dealt with the offense of membership in a "criminal group" already during the IMT trial and recently again in legal opinions.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Wartenberg has now arrived, and he will please take the stand.

ROLE WARTENBERG, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows: BY THE PRESIDENT:

Mr. Wartenberg, will you please repeat after me the following oath: I swear that the evidence that I shall give shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help me God.

(The witness repeated the oath)

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, do you want to address a few questions to the witness as some sort of a preliminary for the cross examination?

MR. WALTON: Your Honor, only insofar as qualification is concerned.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY MR. WALTON:

Q What is your name? War Crimes? of this Office.

MR. WALTON: We submit, Your Honors, that he is qualified to be cross examined by the Defense on the subject of interrogation.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. LUMMERT (Attorney for the Defendant Blume): Q Witness, I have a few general questions to address to you in connection with the affidavit NO-4145, Exhibit No. 10. It is in Document Book I; in the German on page 43, in the English - I don't know the page number, but it could easily he found.

May I ask you, witness, do you have the original or a copy of this affidavit in front of you"?

A Is that affidavit dated 29-6-47?

Q Yes, it is. May I ask, witness, when was Defendant Blume interrogated which is the basis of this affidavit? On the sane day, the 29th of June; or, previously? to 1500 hours. affidavit, the signature to the original affidavit; or was it the first interrogation? the Defendant Blume during the interrogation; was there anything particular obvious about him?

A I don't recall anything particular about that. he may rise. Blume, a short time only before that interrogation, was arrested and the persons who arrested him ill-treated him very badly; and, that afterwards he tried twice to commit suicide which only did not succeed because the putties which he used for this purpose tore twice; and that the strangulation marks which resulted from, his attempted suicide could be seen quite clearly on the right and left side of his neck. That he apart from that showed signs of the ill-treatment on his face?

MR. WALTON: If Your Honors please, I think the witness would give clearer answers if Counsel for the Defendant Blume would ask him one question at the time. The natters which he is going into at the present time are not material to the issue of taking of affidavits and the conducting of interrogations; and I think that the time is certainly being wasted With this type of questioning.

I ask the Tribunal to have the Counsel for the Defense ask him direct questions so that he can give direct answers.

THE PRESIDENT: I think you can be a little more specific in your BY DR. LUMMERT: Blame during the interrogation had signs of attempt of suicide on his neck? particularly his lips which were bleeding?

A I do not recall these marks. It is possible, but I do not recall it. Defendant Blume was exhausted and depressed? that particular date?

A I think so. I do not have any reason to believe why a certain dry should be of a disadvantage for interrogation.

Q May I ask you about the course of the interrogation. First of all, a stenographic report was taken while you were asking and he was making his replies? the shorthand record, write the affidavit NO-4145?

A I have, after the interrogation; I prepared the affidavit. I do not recall if I used the stenographic record or if I dictated the material out of my memory. Anyhow, it was, as far as I recall, not done in the presence of Blume.

The affidavit was shown. later on to him and in one of the copies I have in front of me he had made his corrections. submitted to him the affidavit prepared by you, that he might sign it, objected that his informations which he had given to you about his attempts to evade the carrying out of that order as far as possible, had not been recorded by you? the background or acts of a defendant have been omitted in the shorthand record. had omitted something, to make an additional record? because you had no time; and that you told him that he himself should write down the supplementary evidence?

A I do not recall such an incident. In case that I would have asked an interrogatee to write certain things down I would have them available in my files. The only records which I have, besides the affidavit and the first interrogation is the record at the time when Blume signed the affidavit. receive a letter by the Defendant Blume in which he wrote down the supplementary statements and asked you that this supplementary statements would also be recorded and submitted to him to be signed? Did you receive that letter?

A I did. not. I have no other record in the file of Walter Blume than the first interrogation, the copy of his affidavit dated. 29 June 1947, and. a record taken at the time from the proceedings while signing the affidavit.

which I have in front of me. It is dated 29 June 1947. That is the same day when the affidavit, NO-4145, was signed. I now ask you, witness, is it possible that the original letter, on the way from the prison to the Prosecution, might have got lost?

A I cannot answer that question. I do not have the mentioned letter. is not contained in the documents of the Prosecution?

A I am sorry; I have no other material, with the exception of an affidavit from Dr. Walter Blume, made on the 23 - made on the 25th of June in Iselheide, of which I have a copy; but, I have not a letter of the Defendant Blume.

DR. LUMMERT: These interrogations in Iselheide occurred before that date, didn't they? I have no further questions now. I only ask the witness to look in the documents of the Prosecution on Case 9 to have another look no at the documents you have here, but perhaps at other documents, to see whether or not the letter may have been received after all. I reserve the right to make an application to the Tribunal to ask the Prosecution to submit that letter.

THE PRESIDENT: When you return to your office, Mr. Wartenberg, you may look for any such document and then when you come into Court tomorrow, you may report on the result of your search.

THE WITNESS: Right, sir.

MR. WALTON: One question, please.

THE PRESIDENT; Yes, Mr. Walton. BY MR. WALTON:

Q Mr. Wartenberg, have you from time to time received letters or notes from witnesses and defendants in the jail in Nurnberg? and I am keeping those letters always in the file which has the name of the writer, together with other papers. a letter that you never received?

DR. BELZER (Attorney for the defendant Mathia Graf): With the permission of the High Tribunal, I would like to address a question to the witness, referring to an affidavit of the defendant Graf, submitted by the Prosecution in Document Book III-C. It is Document NC-4855, Exhibit No. 146. It is in Document Book III-C, German page 123. I am afraid I don't know the English page. It is the document before the last in the Document Book III-C. After this document there is only one more document.

THE PRESIDENT: Page 74.

DR. BELZER: Document 4855. BY DR. BELZER: defendant Mathias Graf at the and of July, 1947, in my presence? and submitted to the defendant Mathias Graf? which reads, "In the year 1933 I joined the Party. My membership number is about 3,700,000. In 1933 I joined the Allgemeine SS. My membership number is 77,431." I would now like to ask you whether you can remember that the defendant Mathias Graf in that connection asked you to and to enter into the affidavit that in the year 1936 he had left the SS? to the defendant that he was not necessary to make any additon here, because there was the possibility that while the defense of the defendant was being brought up, this fact would be mentioned then?

DR. BELZER: I have no further questions then. BY DR. FICHT (Attorney for the defendant Biberstein):

DR. FICHT: Your Honors, this concerns the affidavit of the defendant Biberstein, which is contained in Document Book I on the English page 111.

made? front of me, could you give me the date of the affidavit you mentioned? you only make statements based on the documents in front of you? from 1000 hours until 1115. I have the stenographic record of this affidavit in front of me. ments in front of you concerning that affidavit? Iselheide in front of me.

Q Did you take that in Iselheide yourself?

Q How was this affidavit of 2d of July made? If I may say in short, in order to make the answer more easy, was the affidavit of 2 July 1947 based on the questions mentioned by you on 29 June or was it based on the questions of the interrogation of 25 June? had also at that time knowledge of the affidavit of 25 June, and it is possible that I have used certain statements out of that affidavit, to which the defendant Biberstein had sworn to. Iselheide of 25 of June, which you mentioned last, was much more detailed and also cites certain reasons which might be in form of the defendant? affidavits again and check line against line. The information, as far as I recall, which is contained in the affidavit of 2 July is contained in the interrogation of 29 June, 1947.

Q May I for that reason ask a more precise question? Did the defendant, when signing this affidavit of 2 July 1947, did he not ask you that further circumstances contained in the Iselheide affidavit be recorded here also? Do you remember something like that?

A It is possible, but I do not recall that fact. I cannot deny it, but I don't recall it. contained in the Iselheide affidavit, then there would be an opportunity later on to record those?

A No. Basically, I never made these statements in an interrogation, unless I intend to take another affidavit from a defendant. That happens only if during that last interrogation, additional material has been given by the defendant. You don't particularly remember how you acted in this case?

Q Now I have a few other questions. Did you ask the defendant before he signed this affidavit of 2 July 1947 and inform him that he could refuse to give evidence which would incriminate him?

A.- At that time the Defendant Biberstein had not been handed an indictment - and as such I did not consider him a defendant. I did not inform him that he can refuse to answer.

Q.- Is it correct that you swore in the Defendant Biberstein at the very beginning, as stated in the affidavit?

A.- That is correct.

Q.- On your previous statement that you did not inform the defendant that he did not have to give evidence, I presume you did not inform him either that he could refuse to swear an oath?

A.- I did not inform him to that effect.

Q.- You did not inform him, either, in what capacity he is making those statements - as a defendant or as a witness -- or, -- I withdraw my question. It is not correct. Did you explain to the defendant that he had to make his statement as a witness, or did you point out to him that he could expect an indictment?

A.- I did not inform the Defendant Biberstein that he was a defendant; I did not know it myself at that time; and any person who has not received the indictment is usually sworn in as to the correctness of the statements unless that person objects against it.

DR. FICHT: Your Honors, I have no further questions. I like only to reserve the right to address another question to the witness - if the affidavit of Iselsheide, for which I have asked the Tribunal in writing when I have looked at it, in case the witness Wartenberg is still available at that time.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, Dr. Bergold's office has received a copy of this affidavit on the 3rd of October, so that Dr. Ficht must have in his possession a copy of the affidavit by now.

DR. FICHT: I am sorry I cannot confirm that. Perhaps there is some mistake - but Dr. Bergold could only look into the other documents; but concerning the other documents for which he has asked he did not get a copy.

He could only look at them - but the Iselsheide affidavit he did not have an opportunity to look at. That is why I wanted to reserve the right to ask.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: The Prosecution is not adviced that Dr. Bergold has had the right to look into the interrogations of the Defendant Biberstein. If that happened, it happened by mistake..... of course, we would object to the surrender of transcripts of interrogations, but the Prosecution has in its possession a slip, a note, from Dr. Bergold's office that the copy of this affidavit was received on the 3rd of October.

DR. FICHT: I cannot make any further explanations to this because I have already done so.

THE PRESIDENT: In any event, Dr. Ficht, please inform yourself when the Court recesses today whether you do, or do not, have this document. If you have it, be prepared to ask any questions that you intend to ask, tomorrow morning. If you do not have it, then contact the Prosecution's office to see if you can get another copy of it. In any event, tomorrow morning will be your last opportunity to question Mr. Wartenberg on this or any other document.

DR. FICHT: Very well.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Wartenberg, I understand that you did not inform the defendant that He could refuse to answer your questions. Did you in any way suggest to him by word or act that he was compelled to answer your questions and to make a sworn statement?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, after the defendant, whom at that time I considered only as a witness, entered the room I asked his name, and I took him under oath. Then I asked him the questions; and at no single moment did he say he would refuse to answer at question. Then, after I had prepared the affidavit, I showed it to him and he made five corrections on the affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you say, then, that his attitude throughout the entire interrogation was a wiling one?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Does any other defense counsel desire to question Mr. Wartenberg, this afternoon?

DR. LINK (For the Defendant Ruehl): May it please the Court, I would like to address a few questions to the witness Wartenberg. I refer to Document NO-4149, an affidavit of the Defendant Ruehl, in Document Volume III-D, German Copy page 121, Exhibit 169.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Link, - this is not of any great importance but I would like to repeat to you what I said to the prosecution counsel several days ago - that when you refer to a document try to give us firts the document book number, because when you give that last, by the time we look at the book we have forgotten the exhibit number, the document number, and what it is all about.

DR. LINK : Yes, Sir.

May I start?

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. BY DR. LINK:

Q.- Witness, may I ask you, do you have this affidavit in front of you, the affidavit of the defendant Ruehl? It is in the German and English document book, shown with the date, 26 May, 1947.

A.- No, I do not have that document in front of me.

Q.- Do you, perhaps, have an affidavit of the 26th of June, - or don't you have any documents concerning the Defendant Ruehl at all?

A.- I have at present no documents concerning the Defendant Ruehl here.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, the message that I received from the Tribunal was to the effect that Mr. Wartenberg should bring with him the records which he has in his office concerning the Defendants Blume and Biberstein.

I repeated that message, and so he did not come prepared. Also, he felt that tomorrow morning he could have his records with him; and it would be necessary, if counsel for the Defendant Ruehl goes on, that we obtain these records on the Defendant Ruehl before he asks questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Neither did the Tribunal know that Ruehl was going to be the subject of inquiry.

DR. LINK: Certainly, Your Honor, it is my mistake. I was merely encouraged to address these questions already today because my colleague, Belzer, who - as far as I know - didn't report either, - came to the desk; - so I came to the conclusion that the witness had brought all documents with him. I will then take the liberty of asking questions tomorrow morning.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Mr. Wartenberg, that will be all this afternoon. We shall appreciate your being here tomorrow morning at nine thirty will all necessary documents that may be required going into.

WITNESS: Yes, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: "We will take up the next opening statement now.

DR. LUMMERT (For the Defendant Blume): Your Honors, I ask for permission that the Defendant Blume be excused tomorrow morning from session so that I can discuss and prepare his defense with him tomorrow morning.

THE PRESIDENT: Only for tomorrow morning, or all day?

DR. LUMMERT: For all day, please.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, the Defendant Blume will be excused from attendance in Court all day tomorrow.

DR. LEIS (For the Defendant Eugen Steimle): Your Honors, may it please the Court.

at the first glance so unambiguous and clear that the Defense seems to be deprived of every chance to make even one single defendant appear in a light different from the one in which he has been put by the Prosecution. No objection can be made to the statement of the Prosecution, that the law must not remain silent where persecution is carried out on a national scale and makes life intolerable to large groups of human beings or is even intended to exterminate them. But I believe that we must not overlook that today - two and one-half years after the end of the second World War - we are certainly in a quiet position to ascertain in retrospect, clearly and objectively, the terrible results and the facts leading to them, but that at the time when the acts were committed no such glance into the future was possible. Not even for the defendants who did their duty not as leaders, but as subordinates. For, though, it is admitted that some of the defendants were high SS-leaders, the orders which they had to obey did not emanate from their own spehre of power but from the highest authority of the state and were de facto to be regarded as laws according to the character of the Dictatorship prevailing in Germany. We must try to imagine ourselves back in the period spoken of by the reports submitted in order to examine from this standpoint the question of guilt or innocence of the individual defendants. Only an accurate knowledge of the actual facts can create the conditions for a just judgment. I completely agree with the Prosecution's opinion that we must know and convict the motive, if we want to fight the crime. of the motive does not touch the defendants, but those in whose brains the plans and commands originated, and who today can no more be made responsible because they either punished themselves or have already been convicted by a Tribunal. It is equally clear that in the last resort the defendants were only tools, and in this respect we must only put the question whether they were willing instruments or not.

But it arose only for him who did not work himself spontaneously and in full accord with the aims of his leaders. I therefore consider it to be my task as counsel for the defense of the defendant Steimle to explain from what social background the defendant comes, in what ideas he was educated, and what his opinion was concerning his task as Chief of the SS-Leitabschnitt (SS Administrative District) Stuttgart, I think it is necessary in submitting evidence to show the Tribunal also, as briefly as possible, the field of activity of the defendant Steimle in this SS Administrative District, In this way it will be seen that Steimle when he was sent to Russia, was transferred to a world that was entirely foreign to him not only externally, but particularly also as far as the essence of his task was concerned, He tried, therefore -- also in the new field of his activity -- to put into the foreground his intelligence service which he had given up at Stuttgart, I want to show hereby, in what conflict of conscience particularly he was bound to come when, after taking over his Kommando 7a in the Einsatzgruppe B, he got to know the existing orders, and in what way he tried to find a solution compatible with his conscience. led by the defendant only from 7 September 1941 to 10 December 1941, because at that moment he was given leave of absence to Germany, From this leave Steimle did not return any more to Kommando 7a. He cannot be charged any more with the events that took place after his departure to Germany because he had, of course, no influence insofar -- apart from other possible points - for purely external reasons. Hereby it is interesting to state that Steimle who, for the period of his leave, with the approval of his superiors handed over the Kommando to a deputy, was definitely superseded as leader of the Kommando in the days between 10 and 15 January 1902, Nevertheless, he is still mentioned as Kommando leader 7a in the report on events No. 186 dated 13 February 1942, Exhibit No. 107. This can easily be explained by the fact that the appointment of another Kommando leader was delayed by some weeks, that the Kommando was led by a deputy, and that during this period Steimle remain registered -- merely formally on paper -- as leader of the unit.

Only by the way it may be said that the documents submitted must only lose part of their probative value by the statement of such facts. place while he was Kommando leader -- as far as they can be ascribed to him -- concerned partisans and saboteurs. Before, by detailed interrogations, the fact which, without any doubt, was punishable according to War and International Law, had been ascertained in detail. Hereby it will become clear that the main task of the Sonderkommando 7a under Steimle had to consist just in safeguarding the German troops - engaged in serious fights -- and their rear communications from the continuous partisan raids. The special nature of the fight in the East, which was particularly characterized by a partisan war -- organized systematically by the Red Army - made other tasks of the Sonderkommando 7a less important during this period. Above all, the plan of the enemy had to be thwarted who made use of the whole population in the rear area and, in this way, intended to create an intolerable situation for the German troops. The frustration of this intention was a justified security measure and cannot be called a crime by saying that there had been only camouflage of an extermination policy concerning anti-social elements, or elements that were, racially, of inferior value. in which, the defendant Steimle was Chief of Sonderkommando 4a in Einsatzgruppe C. Steimle had commanded the Sonderkommando from about the end of August 1942 to 15 January 1943. On the witness stand he will give a truthful explanation of the tasks carried out by his Kommandos (Detachment) during this period. value of the reports on events (Ereignismeldungen) presented by the Prosecution. In this we will have to pay special attention to the fact that these reports contain no description of the facts by the defendant himself, but that they are combined reports written in the Reich Main Security Office, which were based on individual reports of the Einsatzgruppen, which, in their turn, were summaries of the reports of the Kommandos.

At least in the Reich Main Security Office this work of utilizing reports was done by men unfamiliar with the local combat area and who already for this reason were prone to mix things up, often in the crudest manner. Therefore, if we want to ascertain to what extent each single defendant took part in all the actions in question, it is of decisive importance to examine whether, and how far, he had altogether any share in the events described in the reports concerning him. The mere contents of reports on events can by no means be of decisive importance in this connection. difficulty. On the one hand we find horrible and cool figures which cannot be explained away though they are not correct in every single case; on the other hand we see the men in the dock who, enmeshed in the net of the machinery of a Dictatorship, were put in their position by an inexorable order and are now made responsible for things they have not devised and which did not originate in their own responsibility. May the Defense in its case in chief succeed in establishing the facts in accordance with the truth, and thus assist in facilitating a just verdict of the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of the lateness of the hour, I doubt the succeeding counsel would be able to finish his opening statement before recess time, which is 4:30, so the Tribunal will now be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is in recess until 0930, tomorrow morning.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 0930, 7 October 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A, is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Will the Marshal ascertain if the defendants are present in Court?

THE MARSHAL: May it please your Honors, the defendants Rasch and Strauch are absent because of illness. The defendants Ohlendorf, Jost, Schulz and Blume are absent at their own request.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The record will so indicate.

MR. WALTON: Your Honors, yesterday during the session it was stated by counsel for the defense that they had not received a copy of the affidavit of Biberstein, which the Prosecution contends was served on them by specified date, in obedience to direction of the Tribunal. I am ready to produce a signed receipt by an employee of the office of Dr. Bergold, with a copy in the German language that the affidavit of Ernst Emil Heinrich Biberstein made on the 25th day of June 1947 at Iselheide, has been received by that office on the 3rd day of October. I shall be glad to show this to the representative of Dr. Bergold's office, or Dr. Bergold if he is present.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. WALTON: If the Court desires to see it I will present it to the Court.

THE PRESIDENT: It will not be necessary for us to see it. Your word is sufficient. I think both Dr. Bergold and Dr. Ficht are absent this morning. In fact they asked me to allow them to present their opening statements at a later order.

When their representatives do arrive I will appreciate your showing it to them.

MR. WALTON: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Now we are ready to proceed with the further interrogation of Mr. Wartenberg by counsel who desire to avail themselves of that privilege.

DR. HEIM: (For the defendant Blobel). German text, there is Document No. NO-3824, Exhibit 31, an affidavit by defendant Blobel of 6 June 1947.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, did youcheck this affidavit of defendant Blobel on the 6th of June 1947. 6 June 1947, signed by Paul Blobel. interrogation of defendant Blobel? gation, make this affidavit yourself, or rather had it made by another gentleman of the Prosecution?

Q Witness, did you make it yourself? Blobel to sign, is that correct? state that he wished to alter this affidavit submitted to him on various points, or rather to complete it?

I am just looking for my record. On the 6th of June 1947, the day when that affidavit was signed, I had the defendant Blobel in my office, I checked his identity, and then I told him that I consolidated his interrogations of 26 and 27 May, and I told him to read it. through, to make all corrections he wanted to, and to sign it. This was in the morning between ten and eleven hundred. My record further shows that the witness read it and trade corrections, and because of a number of additions this declaration was rewritten and presented to the defendant Blobel on the very same day at fourteen thirty for signature I want to indicate by that, that the defendant Blobel had all possibilities to make changes. I have changes of this particular interrogation in my files. text as it stood should not be changed in principle?

A I doubt that I have made such a statement; and I want again to refer to my record - that between ten and eleven hundred this statement was presented to the defendant Blobel as I first put it down; that he made his corrections; that I had it rewritten; with all his alterations; and in the afternoon of the same day it was again presented to him. I think that shows to you that the defendant Blobel had every chance of making the alterations he wanted to make.

Q Witness, you did not answer my question. I asked you, did you explain to defendant Blobel that the affidavit as submitted to him should not be changed in principle? I ask you to answer this question. just said: That I presented him an affidavit in the morning, when he did make the changes. If I would have told the defendant Blobel that he was not permitted to make any changes in that affidavit there would not have been any reason to rewrite it and present it to him the afternoon of the very same day.

to defendant Blobel that also according to American law He had the right to refuse to sign as witness concerning statements which would incriminate himself? defendant Blobel, he was for me just an interrogatee, and I never have instructed an interrogate that he may refuse testimony. law-- it is not the same as in German law that a witness may refuse to act as witness if he incriminates himself by his testimony?

MR. FERENCZ: He is asking Wartenberg questions about American law which he is not qualified to answer.

THE PRESIDENT: That may be. Very well, what did you want to say? Dr. Heim?

DR. HEIM: In my opinion it was the duty of Mr. Wartenberg, to inform the defendant that according to procedure practized here, i.e., to American law he had the right to refuse testimony concerning facts which might incriminate himself. If Mr. Wartenberg interrogated Blobel American law and he should know about it.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, this is a legal argument which in due time you may present to the Tribunal.

You have Mr. Wartenberg here for the purpose of ascertaining the facts. Ascertain just what physically and objectively happened. And if, from these facts, you fell that you have been aggrieved - well, of course in due time you will address yourself to the Tribunal. But this is not the time to argue a question

DR. HEIM: Thank you.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, if I understood you correctly, the defendant Blobel was not informed by you of the right to refuse testimony? testimony?

testimony, but the defendant Blobel did not refuse to answer any questions I put to him.

THE PRESIDENT: Was there at any time, Mr. Wartenberg, any indication from the interrogatee that he was reluctant to converse with you on any subject which you introduced for discussion?

WITNESS: At the first interrogation I had with the defendant Blobel, according to my information he was lying. He did not give me the proper indentification of his units, and so on. During the second interrogation he changed his mind and gave me his full story of the units, without any reservatiob, as taken down in the affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: You did not answer my question. I said, during the time that you talked with the defendant - at that time not a defendant - did he indicate, or evince any reluctance to converse with you on any subject which you presented for the purpose of discussion?

WITNESS: No, Sir, he did not.

BY DR. HEIM: defendant Blobel a swear word such as "pig"?

A I told him that in my opinion he is a liar. I do not recall having used the word "pig." did you explain to him that the points mentioned were taken out of the context by you, and that further explanations were still necessary?

taken, an additional interrogation; and after that additional interrogation a further affidavit had been prepared. So the defendant Blobel had ample time to add, for the preparation of the second affidavit, any points not covered in the first one. entirely with the so-called Action Water Cases, that is, the action of the Foereign Office No. 5. It has nothing to do with the first affidavit of 6 June.

I would like to ask you, at the time did you explain the defendant Blobel that he would still have an opportunity to correct the affidavit of 6 June; and if so, did you give Blobel the opportunity to make the corrections Blobel requested?

additions; but even in case he did he could have requested to put certain questions which have not been properly explained, into the affidavit of 18 June 1947. mentioned, also an except of a longer interrogation of the defendant Blobel?

Q Did you also make out this affidavit of the 18th of June? did you ask defendant Blobel, about the facts which were subjects of the interrogation, for the affidavit of 6 June 1947? chance to speak up and tell me if he wanted to have any additional points in it.

Q That will be enough. Witness, under figure 7 of the affidavit of 6 June, on page 162 of the German document book No. 1, it reads in the second line, and I quote:

"In September or October 1941 1 received from Einsatzgruppe C under Dr. Rasch, a gas van, and execution was carried out by means of a gas van." to you that the gas van of SK 4a was never used, but that he, that is Blobel - had seen the gas van used with another unit?

because I do not recall every single item off-hand, which was mentioned in any of the affidavits I have taken; but even if that would have been the fact, as you stated, counsel, then Blobel had the chance of making the corrections. I definitely have given every single man who wanted to make additions or corrections to the affidavits the chance to do so.

Q Witness, do you have the affidavit in front of you? on page 161, Document Book 1 in the German text. It there reads, I quote:

ordered to direct the executions. In August or September 1941 an execution took place near Korosten, where 700 to 1,000 men were shot, and there Dr. Rasch was present." Korosten, did you wish to explain that these executions were conducted could assume that. affidavits. I just repeated the statements the defendant had made during an interrogation. If he told me exactly as it is stated here, that there was an execution, and Dr. Rasch was also present - then these are the facts he told me. That is what I put down. I do express my own opinion ... if Dr. Rasch was present, or if Dr. Rasch was in charge, or if Blobel was in charge.

Q Witness, I believe you misunderstood me. If one look at the gether. I would like to ask you - did you, when making out this affidavit, take individual sentences within the long interrogation of Blobel and put them together?

the defendant said. of that interrogation, in Germna, to bring out the points:

Question 73: "Were you also present during an execution?

"A Yes, by Korosten."

"Question 86 of the same interrogation, on the same subject.

"Who gave the command for shooting?

Q And you supervised?

A Yes, I watched it, and avoided excesses."

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I believe if the witness gives us sentences from the interrogation of Blobel taken out of the contest, in my opinion the same/is given as is given in the affidavit. I would like co ask the Tribunal, and make a special request, that the interrogation of defendant Blobel, on which the affidavit of 6 June is based, questions arise out of that to be put to the witness.

MR. WALTON: I would like to be heard here before the Tribunal makes its decision on that request, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

MR. WALTON: At this time another request is entered with the Tribunal to have the stenographic transcription of an actual interrogation. To grant this request, your Honors, would be in effect throwing open the files of the Prosecution to the entire defense counsel. We believe, first of all, that such applications for the prosecution's records of pre-trial investigations should be denied on principle, because these investigations concern others, besides defendants in the dock, and these others may be those against whom indictments are contemplated, Also, it will prejudice the Prosecution's case against the present defendants unduly, and it goes far beyond the statutory time of notice.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, let me interrupt. I would like to suggest to defense counsel the following: He has before him the interrogator, and he has at his disposal the interrogatee. He can question his client at length whenever he desires, and he has the witness here who conducted the interrogation, and defense counsel may put to him any questions which he desires. Defense counsel has, in addition, the document, which is the only piece of evidence before the Court, namely, the statement, so we see no reason why it is necessary to go into collateral matters when the whole field of inquiry is open before you. We have no desire, and will not permit, that the defense counsel not be given every opportunity in the world to present their defense, but at the same time we don't want the proceedings to be unnecessarily protracted with questioning and investigations which will, in the end, produce no more than what is before us.

Wow, you have Mr. Wartenberg here before you. You can put any questions before him which is relevant, which you desire.

DR. HEIM: Thank you.

BY DR. HEIM: of you, I would like to ask you that while looking at the interrogation to answer me the following questions: In Figure 6 of the affidavit there are contained two sentences which I have read. You have read the sentences; you have these sentences in front of you. Can you tell me whether these two sentences are excerpts from an interrogation of Blobel which occured in immediate succession, or, whether Blobel made these two statements concerning the executions at different stages of your interrogation. Blobel only at a later time wanted certain names added to the interrogation. I do not recall exactly how it was at this point, but I recall that in the first affidavit which was presented to him in the morning of the 6th of June that we made changes by adding several names on which the defendant Blobel insisted. I cannot definitely tell you if it was also at this point, but as far as I can see right now on my interrogation report he did not mention at that time the presence of Dr. Rasch.

Q Witness, may I interrupt you. Not being able to look into the interrogation of the defendant Blobel, and since the Tribunal permitted me to address questions in that respect. I would like to ask you to answer my previous question, It is based on the interrogation of Blobel. Can you determine whether Blob el concerning the two first sentences under Figure 6, said these two sentences in his affidavit in immediate succession or whether the two sentences are taken out of two different stages of the affidavit.

A They are taken out of two different stages. As I said before, when he spoke during the interrogation of that execution) I have not the name of Dr. Rasch mentioned, and as far as I recall it, Blobel insisted later on after he was presented with the first affidavit to add a number of names.

if you will answer the following question: Are these individual sentences taken out of different parts of the interrogation and did you then put them together? Rasch not mentioned at this place of the interrogation.

Q Witness, you did not answer my questions. I asked you in general concerning this affidavit of 6th June, did you state the individual sentences of the defendant Blobel and join them in this statement?

Q Then, I only have a few more questions to you. Did Defendant Blobel tell you that the figures concerning the executions in Kiev were not correct as seem from the operation report? sentence expresses that fact. the figure maintained by the Prosecution of 60,000 executions as stated in the operation report SKVA, was not correct? too high. In the last paragraph, the last sentence of paragraph 5 of his affidavit he states that the figure is between 10,000 and 15,000 persons which were executed by Sonderkommando IV-A, and in the last sentence of paragraph 8 in regard to the figure of Kiev he states that according to his opinion only half of the figure would be correct.

the figures given by him of ten to fifteen thousand was the figure which SK IVA was at all connected with? "According to a superficial estimation, the correctness of which I cannot guarantee, I think that the number of people executed in participation of Commando IV-A was somewhere between 10,000 and 15,000. taken down in writing which Blobel made, you don't remember? sick in the hospital. the first sentence reads; I quote: "Sonderkommando IV-A also shot women and children." can you still remember whether Blobel gave this explanation concerning the entire activity for all the time of Kommando IV-A; or, whether he told you during the interrogation that this statement merely concerned Kiev. when I took the affidavit, I did not consider it important if that happened only once or if it happened more often. I was concerned with the fact that the Kommando had killed women and children. As to the defendant Blobel's statement how often, I will try to find out right now. I asked him the question: "were women and children also shot?" his answer was: "on one occasion women and children were also shot." statement of Blobel's refer -- which occurrence?

A That statement was made in general; not on a specific incident, because just before we were talking about they way of preparing reports.

Q Witness, now one more point. The figure 9 of the affidavit of the 6th June; was the defendant Blobel asked by you who during his absence was Blobel's deputy?

Q Can you still remember the reply Blobel gave you? of the second part of paragraph 9, because on this point I definitely recall it that the defendant Blobel insisted on adding certain names to the affidavit. As far as I recall right now, offhand, the names mentioned here, namely, Dr. Rasch, Radetzky and Dr. Bayer. Either all three of them or part of them had been added by Blobel when the affidavit was presented to him in its original form in the morning of the 6th of June, I recall this incident definitely that he stated he wants to have these names in. the senior leader in the Sonderkommando IV-A after Blobel?

Q Do you still remember the reply?

A I don't recall it, but may be you can help me with the facts and may be I can confirm it. have been Radetzky? Radetzky was his deputy during his absence; did he say that expressly? I cannot find this passage right now in the interrogation, but I think that he mentioned the name of Radetzky; he definitely asked me to put the name of Radetzky into the affidavit.

Q One more question, please, witness. Did Blobel express to you during the interrogation the possibility that Radetzky was Blobel's deputy during Blobel's absence?

Q Now, my last question. Under Figure 9 of the affidavit of the 6th June, at the very end, during Blobel's absence three different persons were his deputies. I quote: "Under their command a number of mass-executions were carried out." Witness, do you know for sure that Blobel explained this to you, at the time, because in my opinion he could not have learned who was his deputy at Sonderkommando IV-A during his absence? there during his absence, but I would like to point out that I did not believe that Dr. Rasch, the commanding officer of an Einsatzgruppe would be the deputy of a Kommando-leader; but anyhow, as the defendant Blobel wanted to have that point in his affidavit, it was put in, although I figured it improbable; but anything whatever a defendant or at that time an interrogates wanted to have in his affidavit was put in.

DR. HEIM: Thank you; I have no further questions.

MR. WALTON: I have one or two questions to ask on the Blobel interrogation.

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly. BY MR. WALTON:

Q Mr. Wartenberg, when you took certain facts which the Defense Counsel for Blobel has spoken of as sentences from the interrogation of the interrogates Blobel, did you do anything at that time any different than you did from other interrogations?

submit these sentences or facts in the form of an affidavit to the now defendant Blobel?

Q Was he allowed to make corrections and changes as he so desired? willingness to sign the changed or corrected, affidavit?

Q Did he sign it?

Q Did he demur or object to signing it after he had corrected it? BY DR. HEIM:

Q Witness, I have one more question. Did you let defendant Blobel make any corrections he wished to make? ly as it stood?

A No. As I have explained before, because he had a number of objections, we re-wrote the whole affidavit; and I am not quite sure, it is very possible, that I dictated the new affidavit even in his presence, but I am not sure on that point, But anyhow, as he did not accept the first draft of the affidavit, a new affidavit was prepared in the afternoon and that was just done to the effect that the defendant Blobel could make all corrections he wanted to. second draft of the affidavit?

DR. HEIM: Thank you. I have no further questions. BY DR. KOESSL (Attorney for the Defendants Ott and Schubert): which is the last document, in Document Book II-B, as Exhibit 67, MO-2993. Witness, was this affidavit Ott of the 24th July, 1947, formulated by you?

Q Was it formulated by you?

A Yes. it was. previous interrogations?

Q When did this interrogation take place? February 1947? the records of the interrogation? interrogation than in the affidavit?

A Yes. Usually the interrogation is much more detailed end after certain points which were not quite clear had been always cleared, basically, they were put into the affidavit in a clear and precise form. about his start of the work and the time when the Kommando was actually taken over by Ott? I ask this in connection with Figure 3 of the affidavit. from the 15th of February, 1942 until January, 1943, mainly with headquarters in Orel.

about a line of training when he was not yet in charge of the Kommando?

A I do not understand that question. Could you express it a little bit clearer? 1942 he was not immediately put in charge of the Kommando, but only after a period of training lasting about four weeks?

A I am sorry, Counsel, I cannot find any point of that. If you want to, I will read to you this paragraph where he says word by word what he did. "I was also in Russia, from the 15th February 1942 until January 1943, mainly in Orel." "With which unit there?" "Einstazgruppe B, Soncerkommando VII-B." "Thank you." I cannot find in addition any paragraph where he refers to any training. put in charge of the Kommando. interrogatee at that time. I asked him in the same connection: "Who at your time was in charge of Einsatzkommando VII-B?" "I commanded it myself; my predecessor was Obersturmbannfuehrer Rasch."

Q Thank you. What statements did Ott make on the operation Eisbaer?

A He stated that this operation was under Colonel Ruebsam; that it was in different locations; that it lasted from the middle of February to May; and that at this tine he went on leave; and then he continues to talk about executions.

Q May I ask what is your opinion about executions; is that in connection with the operation Eisbaer?

A I don't think so, but I cannot say because I have just here in the record that he states that before he went on leave, it might have been twenty to twenty-five persons.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Mr. Walton.

MR. WALTON: Your Honors, this type of examination is going far beyond the affidavit which is now in evidence before the Tribunal.

It is used as a device to bring out information Contained in interrogations which the Court felt should not be turned over to the Defense Counsel. The Defense Counsel has a perfect right to ask what the interrogation said concerning the statements said in the indictment, and the Prosecution believes that it has a, right to ask about any of the facts concerning the signing of the affidavit or the holding of interrogations; but we wish to object to going beyond such facts in order to bring out everything that was said at this interrogation, We don't see that it is material or relevant at this time.

THE PRESIDENT: I might suggest to Defense Counsel that the only thing before us, the only thing that the Defense Counsel need to worry about, is what is contained in the affidavit, Even if the defendant should have in his conversation with the interrogator admitted many other things which are not in the affidavit and not before the Court, he does not have to answer to that. So, therefore, it seems to me entirely unnecessary to go into things which are not before the Tribunal.

DR. KOESSL: The purpose of my question will be shown clearly by my next question. BY DR. KOESSL: of interrogation there are not statements contained as to executions in connection with the "Operation Eisbaer." I, therefore, would like to ask you how does the sentence: "Within the Operation Eisbaer I also carried out executions of band leaders and partisans or persons suspected of being partisans", got into the affidavit draft. That is the sentence which the defendant Ott has crossed out after signing it. I have made a mistkae by putting down: "Within the Operation Eisbaer" a number of executions carried out, and he said it was not so, he had a perfect right to cross it out and initial it.

Q Did he not say that during the interrogation? is not very clear, because after talking of the "Operation Eisbaer", he mentioned executions and therefore when I took the affidavit out of the material Ott had given me during interrogations, I was at that time under the impression that executions were carried out during that "Operation Eisbaer", but when he lateron stated it was not so, he crossed it out and initialed it.

Q Thank you. Now I have a few more questions from Document Book No. 1, the affidavit of Schubert, the German page 151, Exhibit No. 28, NO-3055, the affidavit of Schubert of 24 February 1947. Witness, when did the interrogation take place on which the affidavit of Schubert of 24 February 1947 is based?

4th of February, and on 23rd of January, and, I myself have interrogated Schubert still during my Army career sometime in December 1945, and out of all information I personally had obtained the affidavit was made. February 1947 is based was on the 18th of February, is that correct? the interrogation of 23 January, so I will not say that it was done only on one particular interrogation, but on a number of them. interrogation of 18 February, was put into an unheated single cell in the defendant is wing of the prison? there, he was not allowed to go for walking any more? possibility which I do not recall definitely, but I am quite sure that I am informed the prison authorities after that confession he made that there is a possibility of suicide, and I have no knowledge which or what kind of precautions the prison authorities are taking in such a case.

THE PRESIDENT: I assume, you mean "were taking"?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor. BY DR. KOESSL: was handed the affidavit to sign in which Schubert made at least one dozen corrections?

arose about the words "Intend" and "Supervise" because these words, according to Schubert, do not adequately give the meaning of the actual order? but I have over here particularly the copy of the draft, and Schubert made eight corrections, and as I thought that the document would not look very neat and clean, after he had made the corrections, I had the whole affidavit re-written and presented to him on the 24th February. "intend" ? find the point you want to make. If you would give me a little bit more of the information I will try to find the point you want to bring out, counsel. about twelve, I only ask whether one of these corrections which can be discovered easily concern the word "intend"?

A In what connection, please?

Q In connection with the description of Schubert's tasks in the Action Simferopol? that all the money and valuables, which were taken away from those people earmarked for execution were delivered to Einsatzgruppe-D, but the correction which Schubert made later-on is that they went to the administrative officers and their deputies, as you said "Beauftragte" for sending them to the Einsatzgruppen. Is that the point you wanted to stress?

DR. KOESSL: I believe the Prosecution will permit me to look at the corrected record of 21 February. If so I think I can save myself asking other questions on that point.

THE PRESIDENT: Have you any observation to make on that, counsel?

MR. WALTON: If your Honor please, the witness is here, and he has offered to aid him in any way, The counsel for Schubert has a copy of the affidavit before him, and Mr. Wartenberg has the original draft and a copy of the affidavit before him, I think as to this particular word, if he will read the context in which it was used, Mr. Wartenberg can locate it without making a search.

DR. KOESSL: In that case I would like to ask the witness to tell me every single correction made in the affidavit draft of 21 February?

A I will read these corrections in German. The word "Town" was crossed out and replaced by "Free and Hanseatic City in the Reich" (Freie und Hansestadt im Reich). The figure containing the number of people shot of about "700 to 800" was added in handwriting. "Einsatzgruppe D" was crossed out, and "Administration Leaders and their commissioners for transferring to Einsatzgruppe D" ("Verwatlungsfuehrer und deren Beauftragte zur Weiterleitung an Einsatzgruppe D") replaced instead, "Gypsies and other national groups" was crossed out. "Under my supervision was the whole" was crossed out and replaced by: "Among other things I also convinced myself that he ..." paragraph 6: added "and rifles". Paragraph 7 was cancelled. BY DR. KOESSL:

Q May I ask for paragraph 6 again. In paragraph six what is the word?

A It was added "For the executions not only machine pistols were used but also rifles."

Q The next correction? with the disposal of the corpses, and was cancelled, because Schubert claimed he was not present. As a matter of fact, that was only in the draft, because I did not put in the numbers and so on.

Q Why was this paragraph entered in the affidavit? Schubert the idea that he knew something about the disposal of the corpses, but he stated when he was present with the affidavit that he did not have any knowledge to that effect, so I cancelled the whole paragraph.

Q The next corrections?

A These were all the corrections. Only in the affidavit itself in paragraph 3 it reads: "In January or February 1942" and he changed the date there to "December 1941". the effect that a discussion about the contents of the order and Schubert's being authorized to carry out inspections is contained therein?

A No. I have started over here a record of 21 February, but I think as we were busy in correcting the copies that my secretary did not take everything down during that interrogation because at the time we were only concerned with the different corrections which we made in handwriting, as a matter of fact, in Schubert's own handwriting.

MR. WALTON: The Prosecution fails to see the materiality of this line of questioning. The Defendant Schubert can relate any detail everything that took place at this interrogation. Mr. Wartenberg has testified to the essential facts which took place. He has delineated a number of corrections, and I see no reason in pursuing this line of questioning, Your Honors, unless it is for your own information.

THE PRESIDENT: It has only incidentally brought out a very important item, and, that is, the care with which the affidavit was made out, and the entire opportunity and extreme latitude allowing the interrogatee to make changes, so to that extent it has shed a great deal of light on the entire procedure, so we would say this has been very illuminating to the Tribunal.

DR. KOESSL: For that reason, Your Honor, I notice that on the main point itself this generosity did not exist.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't quite grasp the point. What do you regard as the main point?

DR. KOESSL: Nothing seems to be contained in the interrogation record concerning the considerable objections of Schubert on the question whether he ever made use of his right of intention ("Beabsichtigungsrecht"). Considerable discussion on that point took place. That is to What my entire questioning was directed, to find out whether the record of interrogation on this most important point mentioned anything, and, whether the record of 21 February mentioned anything about that, in particularly whether alterations of Schubert's on that point were carried out. All other corrections are, of course, only of irrelevant nature and in my opinion cannot prove very much generosity.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, the corrections were not considered irrelevant by the interrogatee, because he made the corrections himself, and it must be understood that this interrogation did not intend to be the entire story of the defendant's case. That will come in the trial which we are now, of course, conducting, and the defendant will be given every possible chance and opportunity to tell his entire story.

DR. KOESSL: Yes. BY DR. KOESSL: Defendant Schubert that the co-defendant Siebert incriminates him, and give him the responsibility for it? I had numerous inquiries with Schubert, starting in November or Decem ber 1945, and of these interrogations I have no record because they were conducted in the vicinity of Frankfurt, and not by this office for which I am working right now.

I cannot answer you that question. you blamed the defendant Schubert on this point, you told the secretary not to write down this part of the interrogation? interrogations that I am telling to my secretary not to take down a certain point, because it happens that some of the interrogatees are asking me personal questions in regard to leaves, or in regard to movement to another wing, and, these questions are usually not taken down, but questions to facts are always taken down. page 19, of the German, wherein Schubert affidavit, Exhibit No. 4, No. 2716, of 4 February 1947 is contained. Can you remember, witness, that Schubert objected to the formulation of this affidavit in a few parts, and considered it to be ambiguous, and you confirmed to him that he would have plenty of opportunity to clarify the sense of such paragraphs. It concerned mostly, but not entirely, the figure 7 of this affidavit, which at the end says something about "the civilian sector" and of "burning" in any case which is not quite clear in its formulation. will take at a later date an additional affidavit, and that points which are not clear could be clarified then. I have taken a later affidavit, but I do not recall that Schubert, while taking the additional affidavit, referred to this paragraph 7 of the affidavit of February 1947. If I have told him that he has a possibility to clarify it, it is possible, and, according to my records, I have continued to interrogate him, and I have continued to take affidavits from him. If he had certain points which he, at a later time, wanted to bring out, he could have done so, as on the 21 of February he was given the draft of an additional affidavit which was completely changed, and re-written, so even if he had the intention to add anything he had the chance there.

of the place in the Eastern territories where actions took place, and that the "course of operations" contained the number of losses, number of locations destroyed and persons killed, arrest of agents, reports about interrogations, reports on civilian sectors. Can you confirm to me that this "course of operation" speaking of losses, number of towns destroyed, only and exclusively concerned fights of the Wehrmacht against partisans?

cerned fights of the Wehrmacht against partisans?

A I don't think so, because I asked Schubert sofar as I recall at that time what was in the reports his unit forwarded to the Reichssicherheits Hauptamt in Berlin ; and he claimed that these things were in it, and I had the feeling that the reports of the Wehrmacht would go through the Wehrmacht channels, and not through the channels of an Einsatzgruppe. I had the impression that these were the actions of the units. How far the Army was connected with it, that is a completely different thing. Schubert explained to me his position that he was something like a file clerk and adjutant to Ohlendorf, that he filed the reports away, and that is what he saw in the reports. this particular Wehrmachts area?

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel, I am afraid that now we are getting into a discussion on the facts themselves, and not of the affidavit. You may inquire as to whether the affidavit represents what the interrogatee said, but to go into the merits of the facts themselves is a little beyond the scope of this present inquiry.

DR. KOESSL: If Your Honor please, I only come to talk about it because this place in this affidavit is not quite explicit in the German, at least, it is not at all to be understood.

THE PRESIDENT: If it becomes meaningless, then, of course, it is Meaningless. That is what the defendant signed, and that is the only thing he will be charged with sofar as that document is concerned, naturally.

also later, Schubert was interrogated by you. time.

Q Did you also interrogate him on 14 March?

A What year?

Q '47. the Defendant Schubert? the mission of Siebert.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose you look for that during the recess, Mr. Wertenberg. We will now recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: Take your seats, please.

MR. WALTON: The Prosecution at this time desires to object to the line of inquiry into the interrogation of 14th of March, 1947, which was made some eighteen dry subsequent to the signing of the affidavit under discussion. We object for the some reasons, that it is not materiel. It is a device to pry into the files of the Prosecution. We feel that it is a matter totally irrelevant to the signing of the affidavit, and for matters of relevancy we object.

THE PRESIDENT: Let's hear what question you will present, and then we will rule.

BY DR. KOESSL:

Q Witness, in the affidavit of the 24th of February under No. 3, you have said the following: "In December 1941, 1 don't recall the exact date, I was ordered by Ohlendorf or Siebert,", etc. In connection with this formulation a discussion developed as to whether the addition of Siebert may be adopted in the affidavit. Do you recall this?

A I have this in my draft of 21st of February. I have already both names in, "Ohlendorf or Siebert", and I am right now under the impression that the Defendant Schubert did not know who gave him the order to attendance, but I cannot tell you off-hand if we had a discussion about the point or not.

Q Wasn't it the object of all the discussions which took place about the position of Siebert? can check it. You referred before to the interrogation of 14th of March. and the following affidavit of 21st of February, and the affidavit of the 24th which followed from this and the interrogation of the 18th of March which again is in connection with the previously mention ed one.

MR. WALTON: I renew my objection, Your Honors, to any interrogation subsequent to the signing of the affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: This does seem perhaps a, little rambling and a little undecisive.

DR. KOESSL: Yes, sir; Your Honor. I would like to formulate my question somewhat differently. BY DR. KOESSL: Schubert discussions took place about the question of whether Siebert gave an order to Schubert at all?

A I have questioned Schubert on the position of Siebert. It is quite possible that in finding out the chain of command and the personnel in the unit and to find out their positions that I have asked him the question, "Did Siebert ever give you an order?" That is very probable.

Q Can you remember that Schubert said, "No, not Siebert but Ohlendorf gave me this order?" vit that Ohlendorf gave the order, but as in my mind on account of Schubert that fact was not stated definitely, I put both names down with the word "or" in between them. February; does this affidavit correspond with the one of the 24th of February verbatim? on the 24th of February in my presence, yes. As far as I can see right now, there might be a word changed, but in regard to the meaning, the statement of the 21st was the material for the statement of the 24th because there I showed him the affidavit, he made the corrections, it was re-typed and presented to him for signature.

of February also contained the formulation, "I superfised".

A In what paragraph, please?

Q The phrase, "I supervised", is contained several times in the affidavit.

A What paragraph, please?

Q Under No. 3 it says: "I was ordered to supervise the execution." Is this formulation also to be found in the affidavit of the 21st of February?

Q Then I have one final question. During the interrogation at Oberursel around November 1945, did you threaten the Defendant Schubert with a broom and tell him that you would, if necessary, help to refresh his memory?

DR. KOESSL: I have no further questions, Your Honor. BY MR. WALTON:

Q One question on the interrogation of the Defendant Schubert. Mr. Wartenberg can you recall whether you ever held any contraversial discussions with Schubert as to his position in Einsatzgruppe D? of the interrogation if it took place?

THE PRESIDENT: Next counsel. BY DR. HEIM (Attorney for Defendant Ruehl): sional preasons. I ask that I may be premitted to put a few questions to the witness, as his assistant. I refer to Document Book III_D, page 121, in the German, page 76 in the English text, Document No. 4149, Exhibit No. 169. This is an affidavit of the Defendant Ruehl.

Q Witness, may I ask you the following: According to the German and English document book, one would have to assume that the affidavit was made out on the 24th of May, 1947. At end of the document book it says that the affidavit comes from the 26th of June, 1947. May I ask you when the affidavit was actually given? that it was the 26th of June 1947 and on the English part also on the 26th of June.

to be a mistake, that is, the date of the 26th of May?

Q When did you interrogate the Defendant Ruehl for the first time? at that time?

A I don't think so, because, as I recall, this is the only affidavit I took of Ruehl.

Q Did you interrogate the defendant again, and when was that? between 1400 and 1530 and on the 24th of June between ten and tenthirty.

Q I did not get the last number, on the 21st of June? out which the Defendant Ruehl signed or was this affidavit made out as a result of the interrogation of the 9th of June?

AAs far as I can recall, I don't have these dates in my mind any more - what day I made out an affidavit, but usually an affidavit is prepared after all interrogations have been completed, unless some new items come out or the interrogatee informs me about some other interesting items and I have the feeling that this affidavit was made out after all interrogations. of the 24th of June expressed misgivings about the first draft of an affidavit? because in my record here I have the notification, which I will read in German, "I had the affidavit written out once again. Please read this and sign it."

of June, but on the 26th of June, is that correct? certain information or refusing the oath, may I assume that after you what you have already said, you have not done so in this case -

MR. WALTON: If it please the Tribunal, Counsel for Ruehl is now going into the subject of constitutional rights as regards the giving of testimony against one's own interest. Constitutional rights do not apply to these defendants. The defendant is presented with the affidavit. He can read it over and make what corrections he so desires, or he can refuse to sign it. There is no burden on the interrogator to inform him of any rights he may have, but there is no pressure on him to sign or not to sign. How any questions concerning the constitutional rights of these defendants are entirely irrelevant and of no material value to this case.

THE PRESIDENT: The Court disagrees with you, Mr. Walton, that the defendants are not entitled to constitutional rights.

These defendants are entitled to every right guaranteed by the United States Constitution as introduced in all subsequent agreements with other nations which brought about these trials. However, the Tribunal does not see up to this point that the defendants have been deprived of any of those constitutional rights. It would appear that, at least up to this point, that every opportunity was given the defendant to read, the statement which he signed and the statement itself indicates an opportunity was given for correction, so, therefore, the constitutional rights were protected, so it isn't that they are not entitled to constitutional rights. It is that those constitutional rights were preserved.

MR. WALTON: If I understood the question of Counsel for the defendant Ruehl, he asked him if Mr. Wartenberg informed him as to whether or not he could sign or not sign.

THE PRESIDENT: It is so obvious that anyone presented with a document to sign may sign or not sign; that question put in that fashion is entirely superfluous. If there is any discussion that the defendant refused to sign and then was threatened or was cajoled, or was persuaded, or was offered some definite gain, if he signs, then that is highly relevant.

MR. WALTON: I quite agree with you, Your Honor, but the question in its present frame, as I understood it, I am objecting to as superfluous and as irrelevant.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel, you have now heard this discussion, so please frame your question keeping in mind what the Tribunal has uttered.

DR. HEIM: My question did not refer to the signing of the affidavit. It was supposed to be formulated in the sane way as my colleagues have stated it.

THE PRESIDENT: Please put the question. that the interrogatee, namely, the Defendant Ruehl in this case, had a right to refuse to give testimony? to me that he does not want to talk about certain incidents.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you ever state to the defendant that he was compelled to sign any document which you presented to him?

THE WITNESS: Never, sir.

DR. HEIM: I thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Next counsel, please. BY DR. ERICH M. MAYER (Attorney for the Defendant Braune):

DR. MAYER: My questions refer to Document 4234, Exhibit No, 160, in the German Document Book III B, on pages 96 and 97. This is the interrogation of the Defendant Braune by the witness Wartenberg.

of the interrogation the defendant Braune refused to give his testimony Under oath? because he thought that this was equivalent to giving an oath? I repeat the question. Is it correct that after having refused to give an oath the defendant also refused to give an affidavit, because he was of the opinion at least according to his German legal conception, that such an affidavit was equivalent in form to the oath? Braune expressly contains the formulation that he did not make this statement under oath, while in your note under page 97, it says that the statement was made under oath? which is signed by me, which appears after the signature of Braune?

A I should like to state that on my copy the word "Eidesstattliche Erklaerung" at the end, the word, "Eidesstattliche" has been crossed out by me at that time. It is just a typographical error and if you will read the last paragraph before the signature of Dr. Braune, it states that he made the declaration in the German language and it does not say that it is a sworn statement. It further states there that this declaration is not made under oath, but under his word of honor which Braune gave me at the interrogation.

DR. MAYER: This explanation is sufficient. I have no further questions to put to the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any other questions to be put to Mr. Wartenberg by defense counsel?

Apparently not. If you have anything further, Mr. Walton, in connection with this witness -

BY MR. WALTON:

Q Mr. Wartenberg, a great deal has been said about your methods of interrogation. I should like to go a little further into your qualifications, Did you have prior to the time you became a member of the Office of the Chief of Counsel any experience in interrogations? experience before you became a member of the interrogation staff in the Office Of Chief of Counsel? Training Center and I observed there the School for interrogation in the German language. I had, later on, additional training with the British and American forces in England. I was assigned later on to Seventh Army Interrogation Center and the Theatre Interrogation Center at Oberursel and during all my army career, the basic element of my work was interrogations, with the exception of some short periods when I was used for other work.

THE PRESIDENT: What rank did you hold in the Army?

THE WITNESS: My last rank was Captain,

Q How long have you been on the staff here? else present? this building I have always a German stenographer present and in addition to that there is a guard. mistreatment of an interrogates, there would be witnesses to such action on your part, would there not?

He identifies himself by name. He is either taken under oath or reminded that he is still under oath. Then the interrogation is taken and, after I have the records from my secretary, I am going through those facts which I consider important. I write those facts out and then I recall the interrogatee. I remind him of his oeath, if he had sworn an oath before, and I present him with the affidavit. I ask him then to read it, to make all corrections he wants to, but to let me know beforehand So that we can do it together on all the necessary copies. After that, when the interrogatee has made all his corrections, he initials the corrections, and signs the affidavit in my presence.

by you were changed radically by the interrogates so that the whole affidavit had to be rewritten in order to comply with the wishes of this affiant? on the new draft?

A Certainly, they can make their changes. There is one case where an affidavit was written four or five times -- I am not sure about the number, but it was definitely more than three times, because the defendant was not satisfied with the draft and he has all chances to make all necessary corrections.

Q Do you remember the name of this then interrogatee? your draft of the affidavit unsatisfactory and drew up their own statements?

A Yes, that happened in the case of Haensch. After two interrogations, I had prepared an affidavit and he told me that I mixed up things; that I distorted facts in a way that he was not able to sign it. He insulted me also in the manner he talked to me and I told him, "Draw up your own affidavits." He did so and after I had it, I read the affidavit. I called him back. I had him initial each single page and sign this affidavit without any additions. you that the affidavit already signed by them was not complete and they therefore wanted to make a new statement or additional statements?

DR. GAWLIK (ATTORNEY FOR DEFENDANT NAUMANN): I object to this question, Your Honors, for the following reason. This is redirect. The redirect can only refer to the preceding cross-examination and, secondly, this question is completely irrelevant in this general form. The prosecutor would have to ask whether this refers to a defendant in the dock here, but I don't know what relevancy it has - what has happened in other cases, which do not have anything to do with this trial.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Gawlik, you and your brother counselors here have levelled a pretty steady attack on this witness' procedure so that now prosecution counsel is merely endeavoring to explain what is the procedure. Of course, if the witness is now speaking of interrogations of witnesses or defendants not connected with this case, that would be irrelevant.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: It is not apparent whether he is including in his answer generally the whole orbit of his manner of questioning or whether he is restricting it to the defendants in this case, and I would suggest in that respect, Mr. Walton, that he confine it to only those directly connected with the present case which we are trying.

MR. WALTON: I think we can clear that up in one moment, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q Mr. Wartenberg, during your contract with Office Chief of Counsel what other case or cases, if any, have you worked on, except this one?

when affiants informed you that the affidavits signed by them were not complete and that they wanted to make a new statement, what was your procedure? after some time after the affidavit had been taken, I discovered a typographical error in the date. I recalled the defendant Klingelhoefer, together with his defense counsel, because by that time the indictment had been served on him. It was stated to me at that time that certain points were not clear in the previous affidavit and I wanted to have it corrected and that Klingelhoefer will present me with a new affidavit. Some days later, he came up to the office. He handed me his affidavit. His defense counsel was present. We discussed certain points and at the end the affidavit was signed and handed over to the prosecution staff.

Q One further question. Let me direct your attention to the time when you interrogated the then witness, now the defendant Blobel. Do you recall whether or not that Blobel, at the time when he was represented by Deputy Reich or von Radetzky, or someone, do you remember whether or not he stated he knew executions were carried out in his absence?

MR. WALTON: No further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Mr. Wartenberg, you will be excused and we will take up the reading of the opening statements. I do not recall who is next in order. Who is ready to proceed?

You are ready, Dr. Gawlik?

(The witness was excused.)

DR. GAWLIK (for the defendant Seibert): My evidence--(interruption)

THE: PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please.

Dr. Gawlik, we are sorry that you may have to miss your turn. It appears that we don' have the translation of your Opening Statement. Would it be inconvenient, too troublesome, for you to allow the next attorney to read his Opening Statement, and then you can be called as soon as the translation appears.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, certainly.

THE PRESIDENT: Is Steimle's attorney here? Are you ready? Oh, yes; very well. Who is ready?

DR. MAYER(for the defendant Braune):

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, you may proceed, Dr. Meyer.

DR. MAYER: Your Honors, the defendant Braune, like all other defendants, is charged under three counts: first, Crimes against Humanity, Countl; second, commission of war Crimes, that is Count 2; and third, Membership in a Criminal Organization - Count 3. The Prosecution in a nine document books has submitted material and has emphasized in its Opening Speech in which manner the defendants including the defendant Braune, incriminated themselves. They have-

THE PRESIDENT: Oh - just a moment-- I am sorry. I thought that you had this translation. I am very sorry, Dr. Mayer, to interrupt. But you know it is quite a task to interpret extemporaneously. So we would like to proceed with those Opening Statements whose translations We actually have here. I will indicate the ones which are ready: Defendants Walter Haensch, Heinz Schubert, von Radetzky, Ott, Biberstein, and Grad.

Now, Dr. Bergold has asked me to allow him to read his statement this afternoon. So, who is ready, of the ones I have named?

DR. RIEDIGER (for the defendant Haensch):

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, you may proceed, please, Dr. Riediger.

DR. RIEDIGER: Your Honors, the defendant Walter Haensch was taken over by the SD with the rank of Unterscharfuhrer in May 1936, after he had been working as a civilian legal consultant with the SD since 1 August 1935.

1) It is untrue that Haensch in the period mentioned by the Prosecution was already responsible Chief of Sonderkommando IV b. The defendant did not assume his duties in Russia until about the middle of March 1942. In evidence I shall present documents, witnesses and the defendant himself, whom I shall call to the witness stand.

Also in this respect the facts will demonstrate that in view of the strict observance of the Fuehrer's Order Number I concerning "secrecy", the large distances between the individual Kommandos, between which there was no connection at all moreover in view of the fact that the purposes originally assigned were in the course of time radically changed, the defendant Haensch could obtain any knowledge only from his own activity.

DR. KOESSL (for the defendant Ott): Your Honors, the Prosecution's charge of systematic murder of nations comprises a complexity of guilt which can hardly be realized in its full scope, let alone can it be defended. of this trial if one considers it as detached from the individual personalities which fate has brought into the dock here. The trial here concerns humanity without God.

to the Tribunal, to proclaim the right of humanity to be allowed to live in peace and dignity without any consideration of creed or race, represents a redeeming aspect. The theory on which I shall base my defense does actually proceed from the idea that the concept of genecide was not born in the head of those defendants. Those who were mainly responsible have evaded this responsibility, as they lost their brave-heartedness, which they only too often requested from, their subordinates. Another circle of persons is already sentenced. Those were the "instigators" and the "main perpetrators" of the systematic genecide, if I do understand the nucleus of the indictment correctly. the Einsatzgruppen members of all ranks can only be judged under the viewpoint of subordinate forms of participation. Law according to International Law. The Prosecution, however, does not only rely on International Law but also on general principles of the Penal Codes of civilized countries and on the Penal Codes of the countries in which the crimes were perpetrated. On top of that it refers to Article II of Control Councillor Law No. 10. This multiciplicity of juridical arguments carries the seal of contradiction in itself. Considering the purpose of the Opening Statement I have to limit myself to indicating those legal problems only insofar as they might have any influence on the presentation of evidence. The nucleus of the, problem mentioned is to be found in the treatment of the objection concerning the acting on orders. This Tribunal is appointed to judge according to Internation Law and is only bound by International Law. According to International Law the acting on orders constitutes a fact, which in respect to war crimes is to be treated as a complete justification, even if in the national law of the individual States another principle is valid. Article 47 of the German Military Penal Code cannot be valid as applying against the defendants, this recording to German Law at that time the FUEHRER orders had legal powers and no authority was existing with which to lodge an objection against these orders.

the Einsatzgruppe seen as a whole, the more so the principle has to be applied that the penal guilt is a personal one, a principle which according to the statements of the International Military Tribunal, belongs to the most important legal principles. "Guilt", however, cannot only be applied to the criminal intent of the action of the person acting. Thus all those reasons for the evidence become essential which have a bearing on the complex of perceptions of the defendant concerning his position in the dictatorial Fuehrer State.

DR. KOESSL: May I be permitted also to make the Opening Statement for the defendant Schubert?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, go ahead.

DR. KOESSL: May it please the Tribunal. sibility upon the principles pronounced by the Supreme Court of the United States in the YAMASHITA Case and by Military Tribunal I in the trial against the German doctors, concerning the responsibility of military Commanders. authority which granted the defendant his rank amd position, and which included the duty of exercising control over its subordinates. the rank of a 1st lieutenant (Oberleutnant). SCHUBERT was not given any authority wither by his position or by his rank, and, furthermore, that defendant SCHUBERT belonged to no unit nor did he have any authority of command. the rights and duties of adjutants of associations organized in a military way, never included the leadership and supervision of the units subordinate to their commanders. A person who cannot issue orders is by the same token not in a position to stop them, and cannot stop them, even disregarding any sort of coercion or state of emergency. Prosecution had the role of defendant SCHUBERT at the only execution which he ever saw, presented in the light of a supervisory and commanding activity. will demonstrate SCHUBERT's actual functions in order to show the Tribunal the scope and the content of his work.

I shall, therefore, take advantage of the opportunity to show that SCHUBERT was assigned to the functions of an adjutant because of the very nature of his career, and that this function actually correspond to the career of an administrative official. sufficiently during the opening speech for defendant OTT. The theory of defense presented there also provides the method for my argument in the SCHUBERT case, in order to create the conditions for examining individual responsiblity by a just standard.

THE PRESIDENT: Any one else ready?

DR. LEID: (For the defendant Klingelhoefer): I don't know whether the Tribunal has the translation of my opening speech.

THE PRESIDENT: We do not have it. I am sorry, Dr. Leid. We have the Opening Statement for the defendant Mathias Graf. Is his attorney here? No? Ruehl. Those are the ones we have ready. Well, of course, most of those have been delivered, but -

DR. HELMS: I am in a position to give the Opening Statement for the defendant Ruehl.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, proceed.

DR. HELMS: May it please the Tribunal: of Germany volunteered to serve the American authorities. This happened in the consciousness that he would have to account for his political past. But this also happened in the firm conviction that the investigations which he had would be held, could not connect him with any kind of dishonorable or punishable acts. Therefore, he did not hide in the internment camps.

When the defense of the organizations before the IMT called him to be a witness against the Prosecution this was done by him without hesitation. After the collapse he thus got into a circle to which he had never belonged, and he heard of things which he had just heard from rumors, and thus he heard about happenings which he had never known before. with deliberate slaughter of more than one million defenseless men, women and children. What is it that brings this man, who has been brought up in simple surroundings, who has been a conscientious student soldier and official but not a fanatical National Socialist--what is it that charges him with murder? Where is the proof of his guilt?

The Prosecution has not answered this question. It wants to bring men into court, men who have committed murders, crimes and other inhuman acts. Everyone of the defendants held a leading position or a command post in an extermination unit. Each had the power to order executions by virtue of his position. See page 35 of the Opening Statement.) All had ranks and positions which included the power and the duty to control their subordinates. (Page 36 of the Opening Statement.) Not one of these criteria applies to the defendant Felix Ruehl. of evidence. A glance at the Indictment and at the Prosecution's documents will be sufficient. The only documents in which the Tribunal will find the name of Felix Ruehl are his own personal papers and his own affidavit. He is not mentioned in any report, neither as a superior nor as a subordinate, and no where is any reference made to him. Many of my colleagues had to present arguments of a legal and political nature which shall serve to solve the problems which cannot be ignored in these proceedings. I will be able to second them without having to lay claim to them. Many of my colleagues, if not all of them, will have to show factual proof refutes the contrary statements of the Prosecution and which reduces them to a sound basis on which alone a just verdict will be possible.

I will be in a position in the first instance to refer to the Prosecution's own documents and will only have to contribute to a very limited extent to their explanation and their correction, finally, many of the defendants may have to state personal reasons as extenuating circumstances which make their actions and their responsibilities appear in a different light. nothing to tone down or to extenuate. He has nothing more, and nothing less, to contribute to the material for the proceedings than the decent attitude of a mar who served where he was asked to servea service which was neither dishonorable nor criminal. belonged to Sonderkommando 10b within Einsatzgruppe D. This unti is mentioned once under Figure 9 C of the Indictment, where he is charged with having murdered Communists and Jews near Czernewitz. The defendant Ruehl did not at any time lead this Sonderkommando or any of its Teilkommandos. Even the Indictment does not contain such an assertion. It merely mentions the accused as one of the officers of this Sonderkommando. Evidently even the Prosecution takes it for granted that every officer and soldier does not automatically become a criminal if punishable offenses are committed in his unit. Therefore, it endeavors to establish as close connection as possible between the defendant and the command of this unit. This is the only explanation for the Prosecution's reference, in its opening speech, to my client as deputy of the late Kommandofuehrer Persterer (page 24), whereas on its map and charts it shows him correctly as an ordinary member of this unit.

In particular, it will be shown that in the Kommando, Ruehl did not even work as an export who had the opportunity to come in touch with executive measures; that he was, however, an expert for matters of personnel and economy, that is, a so-called administrative officer a position which could not concern itself with matters which constiute the object of the indictment. among the last of the defendants. There are one or two other ordinary members of a Kommando sitting together with him in the prisoner's dock. With regard to his position as administrative officer, and in view of the period for which he had been assigned to that post, he is actually the last. the Prosecution (page 25 of the Opening Speech), whereby it may be impossible to prove that some of the defendants ordered crimes or directly participated in them, beyond that, he is convinced that his activities do not connect him with any other form of participation in war crimes and crimes against humanity, within the scope of Control Council Law No. 10. NSDAP, which is the SS; and 2) a member of Amt IV of the Reich Security Main Office, the Gestapo. This does not provide conclusive reason for requesting punishment for membership in organizations which have been declared criminal by the IMT. SS and Gestapo is not a punishable offense in itself, - that this applies to groups within these organizations, and that the IMT precluded the punishment of individually innocent members by further reservations.

knowledge of the criminal aims, is punishable. The Prosecution cannot evade its obligation in this issue. that his active membership in the SS came to an end as early as 1939, when the defendant was transferred to the police. Further promotions in the SS were merely adapted to Civil Service promotion as a sort of assimilation of rank. Counter-Intelligence department. Thus he was engaged in work which in every civilized state belongs to the noblest tasks of the police or similar institutions. this defendant, inspite of his limited scope and slender possibilities without exercising influence, without intolerance, arrogance and, above all, without race hatred, assisted by word and deed those whose extermination, according to the Prosecution, was part of his program. This he did in conscious opposition to the National Socialist doctrine with great danger to himself. III of the indictment will not be justified. why the defendant Felix Ruehl in his and my convictions should not find himself before this Court.

THE PRESIDENT: Before we recess we would like to evince the situation as to the Opening Statements which we are ready for this afternoon's delivery. Naturally, this will be of no concern to those attorneys who have already spoken.

Mr. Hodges, Chief of the Translation Section, is here. Will you kindly stop to the podium, Mr. Hodges, so we can ascertain where we stand. It seems from the evidence before us that at the present time we do not have the Opening Statements in the English translated form, of the defendants Sandberger, Seiberg, Steimle, Nosske, Strauch Klingelhoefer and Fendler.

Will you please indictae to the Tribunal Mr. Hodges, what your position is in that respect?

MR. HODGES: I have just delivered to the Interpreters' Booth, all the statements on the part of defense counsel for each defendant, except Sandberger and Strauch. Those Opening Statements have been translated. The stencils have been cut, and they are, to the best of my knowledge, in Mr. Frank's office, Room 580, now.

THE PRESIDENT: Splendid.

MR. HODGES: There are no longer any translation problems with reference to those Opening Statements.

THE PRESIDENT: May I ask the Interpreters here. You have all the Opening Statements yet remaining, with the exception of Sandberger and Strauch?

INTERPRETER: Yes, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then there is no reason for delay this afternoon. We will move right along.

Thank you very much, Mr. Hodges.

The Tribunal will now be in recess until two o'clock.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1400) (The hearing reconvened at 1400 hours, 7 October 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, are you ready to proceed now?

DR. BERGOLD: Yes, yes.

May it please the Tribunal: case is a very difficult one. As it has hardly ever occurred before, the sentiments of the world are against the defendants and want to find them guilty before the proceedings have even come to a close. But in no other case was the wisdom of the law more to be admired which prescribes that every man must be defended, may the crimes for which he is accused be as obvious as they can be. In this particular case the defense can present deliberations which will have to influence the verdict. statement, discuss in detail the competency of the court. I assume that our opinion with regard to this question will be presented in time by the defense. The only point I want to refer to at this moment, is, that these very statements of the prosecution about the competency of the court prove that in this trial the legal situation not only resulting from Control Council Law No. 10, will have to be taken into account but especially that originating from the fact that all actions brought before court in this case have taken place in the territory of the USSR. If this Tribunal is to be an international one - and I do not intend at this moment to assume this without reservations - if any national tribunal should be in a position to punish actions of this kind, regardless by whom they were committed and where, the special legal situation prevailing at the place where the crime was perpetrated must also be taken into account, unless a trial held by a foreign court in a foreign territory must result in depriving the defendant a priori of his pleading justification for his acts.

with special care the fact that the USSR, as I have proved in the case of Milch, did not only not sign the last Geneva Convention, but that she even expressly withdrew from the former conventions, among which were also the Hague Rules of Land Warfare. Furthermore, it will have to be examined whether this did not also constitute a withdrawal from international law which up to that time had been valid without any codification, since otherwise, the cancellation of contracts representing only a codification of the already valid international law would appear as a senseless action which cannot be expected from the shrewd statemen of the USSR. ted by the defendants represent in part, or from the point of view of some of the defendants, only a retaliation for acts committed previously on German soldiers by nationals of the USSR in disregard of international law. This point of view is important for the defense of the defendant Biberstein because his activities with the Einsatzkommando 6 did not begin until October, 1942. Einsatzkommando 6, no more real mass executions took place, that no more executions with the purpose of annihilating Jews or political opponents were ordered, but that the executions which were carried out during the period of his activities were effected only after thorough investigations and that they represented retaliation for crimes and hostile acts for which the perpetrator would have been punished with death by any other state waging war.

the theory that the prosecution would not undertake the burden of showing the defendants' knowledge of all the crimes committed; nowhere on earth would the law - and those are the trends of thought of the prosecution - impose such a burden on the law. I consider such a statement unusual. If it were to remain uncontradicted in its absoluteness, a fundamental principle of all justice would be destroyed, namely, that every man is entitled to be presumed innocent. A complete rejection of the duty to show proof seems to be inhuman to me, because in this way Law would become an unescapable fate for everybody even for the innocent defendant. facie evidence is recognized, i.e. evidence on the basis of the first appearance of the facts. No legal theory of any civilized nation, however, means by this doctrine to relieve the prosecution completely of the burden of showing evidence which is its duty. It only means, that if a certain complex of facts is known, their first appearance may sometimes speak seriously against a defendant. If, however, the defendant on his proves - also only prima facie - that that special rule of first appearance does not apply in his case, the privilege of the prosecution resulting from the prima facie evidence becomes invalid and the prosecution will again be subjected to the most severe requirements for proving their case by evidence. For this reason, I solemnly protest against the prosecution's pronouncement of that legal principle. One must not, because of the especially serious indictment in this case, abandon the established rules for adjudication. There is a great temptation for any simple mind to deal tyrannically with accused tyrants. But just democracy demands that such temptation be resisted, for a democrary which abandons only one of its principles, and were it only temporarily, is already on the dangerous road to the abyss.

prosecution's onus probandi means, that it will have to prove separately and for his particular case, that such mass executions constituting a crime against humanity happened, namely shootings without any proceedings, for the mere reason that the victims belonged to a certain race or had a certain political conviction. The defendant Biberstein violently denies that shootings of that kind took place while he was serving with the Einsatzkommando 6. seems to me just as fatal as the complete rejection of the onus probandi. In the case of the defendant Biberstein, the prosecution was in a position to present only one real document of evidence, namely the affidavit of the defendant Biberstein himself. This affidavit was written in a way that at a first glance, an incrimination of the defendant Biberstein could be deducted from it. excerpt from the total statements of the defendant Biberstein. Biberstein gave a more detailed statement once before at Eselheide. During the interrogations preceding the drafting, of the two affidavits, the defendant stated in detail that he never took part in a criminal execution. He also stated that all executions which were carried out during his activities, were effected only after thoroughly conducted proceedings, during which the defendants had confessed all their criminal deeds, usually murders of German soldiers. Those exonerating statements were, however, not incorporated into the affidavit. Attempts on the part of the defendant to the effect to have his exonerating statements incorporated in the affidavit were - as far as I know - rejected with the misleading and only seemingly satisfying explanation that some other time and at some other opportunity the defendant would be in a position to submit his reservations and explanations. I am calling such an explanation misleading because any court is skeptical against later attempts by a defendant to amend statements and is liable to accept as truth only the first statement.

Finally, the defendant was not even informed, when the affidavit was taken down, that it would be used as evidence in proceedings against him. It has been neglected, to draw his attention to his basic rights to refuse to testify against himself, which basic rights exist in criminal proceedings of the world, especially however, in the United States. The defendant was misled into assuming that he was making this statement as a witness, because he had also been asked to take an oath before.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, excuse me for interrupting. You, of course, may proceed with your arguments, and I don't want to limit you in saying what you intend to say, but I just want to suggest that possibly that what you are giving us now is more in the nature of a final argument, rather than an outline of what you intend to produce.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, if you will continue to listen to me, you will understand why I make this explanation. It is not a final plea, but an opening statement because it refers to the coming evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

DR. BERGOLD: The German defendants are completely uninformed about their rights in the American proceedings which in themselves are entirely unfamiliar to them, so that the least that could be demanded from justice would be to explain things to those people before proceedings are started.

are presented to the court and on top of it taken out of their contents, if, furthermore the attempts of the defendant to make corrections in the wording of such an affidavit, are rejected with the misleading explanation such corrections could he made later on, and if, in addition to that, a defendant is not told that according to the rules of procedure he is entitled to refuse statements incriminating himself, I cannot refrain from stating my conviction that such procedure cannot be called fair any more. defendants, I received the impression that the manner in which affidavits are obtained from the defendants is a rather dubious one. The grievances which I have uttered here have been raised exactly in the same way and to the same extent by the defendants in all cases handled by me. If, however, as in this case, the prosecution presents only one real incriminating document, namely an affidavit obtained in such a manner from the defendant, the limit is reached and it becomes the duty of the counsel for the defense to point out those procedures and to raise his voice in warning and complaints. Tribunal I had a controversy with the Honorable Justice Jackson. At that time, I objected against the procedure of the prosecution to present only the incriminating parts of a large document, and to leave out the exonerating parts, which would have neutralized the incriminating ones. I pointed to article 160 of the German Code of Criminal Procedure and to the corresponding articles of the Austrian Code of Criminal Procedure where the law expressly stipulates the Prosecution's duty to gather also exonerating evidence and to submit it before the court.

The Honorable Justice Jackson replied to me that this could not be demanded, he could not serve two masters. Nevertheless, the International Military Tribunal instructed the Prosecution in such a case to present the document in full, i.e. including the exonerating parts and that from the start, without having been asked by the defense to do so. Only this wise ruling by the International Military Tribunal, a precedent for our case, is in accordance with justice. The point is not whether or not to serve two masters. We all here serve only one mistress, namely the truth. She is always the same. But is truth not in danger if affidavits which were obtained under such circumstances and with such restrictions are submitted? I do not hesitate to state that such an affidavit, if it is the only recall incriminating evidence against the defendant has no real and admissible value as evidence. other cases, as far as I know them, the prosecution was in a position to present objective evidence against the individual defendant and I prefer to conduct my defense without making trouble. The special situation here forces me to state my objections openly before you. You may be convinced that I have deliberated very seriously before I come out with all this. But who can go on keeping silent if he really wants to fulfill the duties of the defense? The duties of the defense are the duties of democracy to which all of us here have to live up. of the same sort as the men accused here. Only for a very short time, and against his own will, was he leader of an Einsatzkommando, and from the very beginning, when he received the command to take over the Kommando he objected to that order. He did not do that because he knew about the terrible things that had happened previously with Einsatzkommandos.

at the Reich Ministry for the Interior. I have already stated that during his time of duty the executions were carried out on the strength of a kind of sentences in certain cases for clearly defined actual crimes. If all this is taken into consideration, there is no proof for the defendant's guilt. Neither can be hold responsible for the manner of the procedure. There were regulations for the procedure and he had to observe them in order not to become liable to punishment himself, so that in this connection - as I am going to point out later on - the sentence of the Supreme Court in the case of Mac Intosh must be considered. It is obvious that, in view of the special position of the defendant, not only the incriminating parts of his statement are to be used as a basis for the verdict. Such a statement must be used in its entirety, and in favor of the defendant it must also be considered what he has to say for his exoneration, especially if the exonerating elements will present an entirely different picture of his action than that which the prosecution wants to depict. for many years. This fact alone makes it seem likely that the defendant could hardly have been a slaughterer of human beings and that he, more than anybody else, could become convinced that the executions carried out during his activities were justified and were taking place on the strength of an adequate and sufficient procedure. All this is much the more important since I am also going to prove that during those times of war serious crimes were committed against German soldiers by the Russian population, which could not find your approval either, gentlemen of the Tribunal; the legal principle that two wrongs do not make a right cannot be applied to this case, since the point is to prove that a death sentence has been pronounced against wrongdoers.

believed that he did not have to have a bad conscience. He was with the Kommando far such a short time that he hardly remembers the people who were there with him, and especially does not even know their whereabouts. This makes it difficult for the defense, so that the swiftness of the proceedings is harder on us than on other defendants. I therefore ask the Tribunal to stay favorably inclined towards me and not to hold it against me if, against my will, I may perhaps be compelled to submit some evidence somewhat belatedly. Situations are often stronger than the best of will, I am, however, fully confident that the High Tribunal will be just in every respect.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Dr. Hoffman, you may proceed.

I may point out the case against POHL et al. and state, that there may be fundamental difficulties prescribing a kind of Defense which is altogether different from the usual one.

Also in the case against POHL et al. the work of the Defendants had been brought into connection With inhumane acts and cruelties. However, in that case inhumane acts and cruelties developed from facts of the most various kind, and several of the Defendants knew nothing of their existence, even less participated in them. just as no one who is present in this room wants to lose his. by truth and Justice. advantages and disadvantages in going so far. such a murderous order as the one in the center of the Prosecution's Indictment. others by myself committing wrongs. spect, will also once be judged.

DR. MANDRY: Dr. Mandry for the defendant Martin Sandberger. responsible for measures of persecution taken against Jews and Communists, at the Sonderkommando la respectively during the period when he was commander of the Security Police and the SD for Estonia. reports, reports on activities and the situation. These reports are a compilation of individual reports not available in the original of several Kommandos subordinate to the Einsatzgruppe. From these general reports the clear and unobjectionable proof for criminal actions of certain persons can be deducted, For this reason the prosecution, taking three affidavits given by my client as a supplement in connection with these reports, drew the conclusion that SANDBERGER is guilty in the sense of the indictment. prosecution.

1) SANDBERGER's assignment in the East was effected upon order of his superior authority and constituted a war assignment in enemy territory.

He was subject to the laws of war like any soldier. It had become impossible for him to shun the carrying out of the orders given to him.

The verdict of the IMT (Page 16514 of the German transcript) takes this into consideration. The reasons on which the sentence is based with regard to this point are as follows:

"During the war a member of the Security Police and SD did not have a free choice of assignments within that organization and the refusal to accept a particular position, especially when serving in occupied territory might have led to serious punishment." committed under the compulsion of the laws of war in enemy territory and under the compulsion of orders and control measures issued by the superiors HIMMLER and HEYDRICH, the Amtschefs STRECKENBACH and MUELLER at the RSHA, as well as by the higher SS and Police leaders for Northern Russia (the SS Obergruppenfuehrer and generals of the Waffen SS PRUETZMANN and JECKELN) and also especially by the chief of the Einsatzgruppe STAHLECKER, SANDBERGER's immediate superior. I shall prove that in carrying out the orders he received STAHLECKER developed a great amount of energy and that JECKELN was just as hard and unpredictable a superior, who would have broken the slightest resistance with all means of the power at his disposal.

II) propaganda declared time and again before the beginning of the Russian campaign and during it that, in keeping with the ideology of bolshevism, the Soviet Union was on principle aggressively inclined, that it represented an acute danger for the life of the German people and the entire Western world, that it had planned an attack on the German people and that that was a matter of life and death for Germany. The Defendant who had been a National Socialist since his 20th year believed in these statements.

when the campaign in the East started: The Soviet Union had not joined the Hague Rules of Land Warfare and the Geneva Convention: neither did they feel bound themselves by other custons of war. For that reason the general international rules of war would not apply for the Germans either in their war against Russia.

III) STAHLECKER with the High Command of the Army Group North my client was destined for an assignment in Estonia. He was attached to the 18th Army. When he arrived at the territory of the assignment given to him, he was told the following: During the time of the occupation of Estonia by Soviet Russia in 1940/41 many Estonian citizens had been killed by Soviet authorities without any justification and without any proceedings; several tens of thousands had been arrested and had been removed from Estonia against their will. The entire property in real estate as well as the greater part of commerce and industry had been expropriated and the former liberty of the Estonian population had been destroyed. for years the republic of Estonia had prohibited communism by a law and that any communistic activities had been liable to serious punishment. He furthermore learned that the government of the Soviet Union had instituted an organization in Estonia, which had orders to carry out sabotage and espionage after the Red Army had withdrawn from Estonia and the country was occupied by German troops. The entering German troops were especially impressed when they learned that before evacuating the city of Derpat in the middle of July the Soviet authorities had shot all political prisoners of the Derpat prison, 250 of them, in the court of the prison. population, numbering approximately 4,500 persons, in general had gone over to the Soviet side during the time of the bolshevist occupation.

They were holding important offices in key-position of the Soviet state and party machine, especially in the secret police, the NKWD. the Jews in Estonia confirmed to the defendant all that he had been told at the beginning of the campaign in the East by the Fuehrer order and by the motivation for that order given him by his superiors. Especially in Estonia it was more evident than any where else that the Soviet Union had violated international law, the national laws of Estonia and the laws of humanity in general.

IV) of assignment seemed necessary for the protection of the territory assigned to that Kommando. Upon request of the Army High Command and upon order of chief of the Einsatzgruppen STAHLECKER its foremost task during the first weeks was to attach itself with Teilkommandos to the fighting troops and mostly to take care of tasks of the intelligence. In addition to that the field of activities of the Sonderkommando included the prevention of sabotage and espionage, which was carried out especially by Jews and communists. had never been active in the service of the police. He therefore had no experience in this field and personally was not especially eager to do that kind of work. His former activities in the SD never included andy police work, but during his membership in the SD he was occupied with making reports about German spheres of life. statements about the contencts of those reports, to which I refer herewith. perience of my client were in the field of political intelligence and in exploiting that for politics and administration, I will prove in detail that the authorities of the Wehrmacht as well as the official authorities of the now German civil administration and the Estonian authorities of the re-instituted sovereign administration claimed a great deal of the time of my client for their purposes and tasks.

He received especially trained, and indepently working specialists for the special departments IV and V, i.e. the Secret State Police and the Criminal Police. They were given special independence in their work. SANDBERGER's activity in connection with them was limited to inspecting their work. Teilkommandos were given full independence and responsibility of their own. The superior authorities, especially the chief of the Einsatzgruppen STAHLECKER had ordered that expressly. My client was anxious to respect at all times this responsibility and independence of his subordinates.

V) arrests and trasfers to camps and in a number of special cases in executions. In accordance with the above-mentioned orders of the chief of the Einsatzgruppen, the leaders of the Teilkommandos were responsible for the decisions in each individual case, and later on, after everything was centralized in Reval, the leaders of the departments State and Criminal Police were responsible.

While the fighting in Estonia was still in progress my client's own proper activity in this sphere consisted mainly of drawing up regulations in the frame work of the existing orders on the special jurisdiction in the Barbarossa territory according to the followingprinciples?

a) Individual statement of guilt and legal hearing: into the actual facts and statement of the guilt and without the accused having been given the opportunity to defend himself.

b). Problem of collectivity.

c). Executions were only permissible if the person concerned had been convicted of and had confessed to have perpetrated sabotage or espionage or if during the years 1940/41 of the Russian occupation he had committed crimes against the life of any Esthonian citizen.

d). The execution of all measures against the population and connected with the Security Police was effected by the Esthonian police and under the control of a member of the Sonderkommando, In doing so any harshness not necessary for the purpose of the measure should be evaded in its execution.

VI) in 1941, this did not happen under the responsibility of my client, but under the exclusive responsibility of STAHLECKER.

In order to be able to report as executed STAHLECKER's order, to free Estonia of the Jews immediately, however, without personally having to order the executions of Jews, finally my client in November 1941 had all remaining Jews in Esthonia brought from the internment camp at Revel to a camp near Pleskau.

Pleskau is situated outside Esthonia on Russian territory, but at that tine it belonged into the office district of my client. of 1942 in Pleskau, does hot come under the responsibility of my client, because it had been personally ordered by the Higher SSand Police Leader Jeckeln, who was the competent legal magistrate at the same time, pad to the execution of which a subordinate of my client had been forced, without my client having been present or having been informed of its execution. my client under the pressure of the orders given, but he had then retarded far beyond the time given already for the execution of the Jews. admissible according to principles of international law, analogous to the internationally approved measure of interning enemy aliens. not take actively part in the extermination of Judaism. As to the criminal responsibility concerning the internment of the Jews as caused by my client, it has to be considered that Sandberger as a National Socialist official had sworn an oath of allegiance to Adolf Hitler and to his superiors as appointed by him. Furthermore, he felt bound to his military duty of obedience and he had to decide either to contribute to the ordered extermination of the Jews or on his own initiative to alter and to interpret the measures ordered which at least for the time being saved the Jews from immediate death. There was no other possibility for my client in this terrible state of coercion. In this connection I shall extensively enter on the problem whether or not an open refusal to obey orders end the consequences this would entail could be expected.

the Einsatzgruppen in general and, with certain exceptions, in his Kommando, But there was no possibility for him to prevent these events, for they had been ordered by his superiors, If he would have taken any stand against these orders of his superiors and measures to prevent their execution, the consequences would have been that his superiors would have ordered his death, without anything having been altered in the events. in the East, respectively the Security Police and. the SD, were so Mechanical, that if one leader was lost, automatically a replacement took his place, who then had to see that the order was being immediately executed. My client was of the opinion that his successor would have executed these orders without any reservations. several tines the disapproval of his superiors in the Security Police, which I will prove.

As to point No. 3 of the indictment (membership in criminal organizations) I will show, that according to the IMT Verdict the prerequisites for sentencing my client are not given. Though Sandberger was with the SD after 1 September 1939, first of all he was only active in Department I of the RSHA. When later on in 1941 my client joined the Osteinsatz, he was ordered to do so, and it was not possible for him to get out. The same applies for his assignment in Offices III and VI of the RSHA. client I shall bring evidence by submitting documents, witnesses and statements of the defendant himself, whom I intend to call to the witness box.

DR. KLINERT: Deputy for Dr. Gawlik for Seibert. the case against the Defendant Seibert will be based on the legal principles laid down already by Tribunal II in its judgment in the Milch case and also by t he Supreme Court in the Yamashita Case. plained by me in my Opening Statement for the Defendant Naumann: 1. Did the Defendant Seibert personally take part in executions? 2. Were these carried out under his direction or under his orders? 3. Did he have any knowledge of the executions before they were carried out? 4. If so, did he have the power or the opportunity to prevent them or to stop them? 5. If this is also the case, did he fail to act and did he in this manner become a particeps criminis and accessory to the act? ad 1.) Seibert did not kill any of the persons mentioned, in the Documents presented against him. While he belonged to Einsatzgruppe D he never served in an Einsatz- or Sonderkommando, which alone had to carry out the executions. But just as little did he supervise the executions or participate in them in any similar manner. Such tasks were never assigned to Seibert in his capacity as Deputy to the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe. This is already impossible for the simple reason, that he never was Ohlendorfs Deputy. task it was not to carry out executions. Therefore he also never received orders for the carrying out of such measures, Nor was his field of work connectedin any way with such tasks. Seibert had been assigned to the Staff of the Einsatzgruppe only as Chief III (Leiter III).

In this capacity he had to make the reports. In all essential points this was the same kind of work that Seibert had to deal with, when he was in Amt III of the Reich Security Main Office in Berlin; this was also the reason, why he was assigned to the Einsatzgruppe. This task occupied Seibert's whole time, which is easily understandable in view of the enormous size of the area of the Einsatzgruppe. wise had nothing to do with the executions he is charged with. These tasks included especially liaison with the Army. Owing to this activity Seibert, acting for Ohlendorf, signed the reports to the High Command of the 11th Army, dated 9 October 1941 and 16 April 1941, which have been submitted by the Prosecution as Documents NOKW-629 and 628, Exhibits 159 and 160. It cannot be understood, how the Prosecution wants to deduct from the text of these Documents Seibert's responsibility for the measures mentioned in the documents. Ad 2.) orders for the carrying out of these executions. Nor did he ever transmit any orders to the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos under his command for the carrying out of these executions. He could not do this for the simple reason, that Seibert was not a Chief of the Einsatzgruppe D, who was invested, with the power of command; moreover, he himself never received such orders. I have already emphasized, that Seibert was merely specialist III in the Staff and entrusted with the writing of reports. Seibert had been assigned to the Einsatzgruppe only for this purpose. This follows from the mere fact, that, as I shall prove, Seibert never had anything to do with the executive, either before or after, not even as regards information. satzgruppe D. To this extent the statement of the Prosecution is incorrect, as I shall demonstrate in detail in my Case in Chief. As far as any doubts on that point might be possible on the strength of the documents submitted by the Prosecution, I shall clarify in my Case in Chief, that Seibert never was deputy of the Chief of Einsatzgruppe D and especially never commanded Einsatzgruppe D in Ohlendorf's absence.

gruppe neither by Ohlendorf nor by any other superior agency nor had he ever been entrusted in practice with the functions of such a position. Seibert could not hold such a position for the simple reason, that he was not the senior Chief with the Einsatzgruppe. In Ohlendorf's absence the Einsatzgruppe was led by the individualChiefs of Kommendos for their areas. Ad 3.) dommandos under Einsatzgruppe D carried out executions. However, this knowledge is not in itself sufficient to establish Seibert's criminal responsibility. To this extent I refer to my argument in my Opening Statement for Haumann. previous knowledge of the executions he is charged, with. establish criminal responsibility. The Prosecution moreover had to prove that Ad 4.) the carrying out of these orders and to stop them, and Ad 5.)

Already according to the Prosecution's own statement these conditions do not exist. D Seibert had neither the power nor the opportunity to prevent the the executions carried out by the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos under Einsatzgruppe D. Not even the Prosecution has asserted this and I therefore believe that the Prosecution will so far agree with me.

In any case the Prosecution had to show what the Defendant Seibert could do and would have had to do to prevent the carrying out of the executions. The Prosecution has offered nothing to that effect.

Einsatzgruppe D was under the Defendant Ohlendorf's command. The execution orders, in virtue of which the Einsatz- and Sonderkommandos acted, were based on orders of Hitler, which were transmitted by Himmler and Heydrich and the execution of which was supervised by these persons.

The Defendant Seibert had a *---*er rank than the Defendant Ohlendorf and was subordinate to the latter Sonderkommandos under him, which were partly commanded by men with a higher military rank than Seibert's.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now he in recess for fifteen minutes.

At the request of Sandberger's counsel the Defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in Court for the rest of the day.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for the Defendant Steimle.

DR. LUMMERT (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLUME): Your Honor, I would like to be permitted to ask the Tribunal whether it would be possible for the Defendant Blume to be excused from the session tomorrow also, because I have to prepare his defense with him.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Blume will be excused from attendance from court tomorrow in accordance with request by his counsel.

DR. LEIS (ATTORNEY FOR DEFENDANTS STEIMLE AND KLINGELHOEFER): Your Honors, I would like to inform you that I have received the opening statement for Steimle yesterday. Perhaps I can continue with the opening statement for Klingelhoefer. trial to establish the actual facts and to examine their connection with the individual defendant. The Defense will also have to examine factors not contained in the evidence of the Prosecution which are nevertheless of great, if not of decisive importance. There would be no difficulty in dealing with this case if one could assume from the beginning that everything contained in the action reports presented here, was done on the strength of the defendants own decision. One can hardly deny that such an opinion would be incorrect. The question arises therefore, what was the cause for the defendants' cooperation in the Einsatzgruppen, the Sonderkommandos and the Einsatzkommandos. The answer to those questions will necessarily constitute a considerable part in the work of the Defense. It will become evident that the defendants were not the instigators, but the executive organs, subject to the inexorable law of a command, not issued by some individual, but deriving from the highest state authority. May I refer in this connection to the statements which I have made already in my opening speech for the defendant STEIMLE. The case of the defendant KLINGELHOEFER is to be judged from the same point of view. He was a member of an Einsatz Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.gruppe without having the possibility to decide freely whether he ever wanted to become a member or whether he wanted to remain one.

His own attitude with regard to this membership was of no importance, he had to fill out the place where he was told to stand. as a starting point when examining how he behaved in this situation into which he had been forced. logical order, first a member of the Sonderkommando 7b, deputy chief of the Vorkommando Moskau, furthermore, leader of a smaller Vorkommando and finally member of the Gruppenstab of the Einsatzgruppe B. From about the middle of the year 1941 until December 1943 he was active in the Einsatz in the East. In the course of my argumentation I will first attempt to explain the actual positions held by the defendant within the Einsatzgruppe B, which Kommando he had led and which were his tasks in connection with that. is concerned, I shall explain that he was assigned to that Kommando on account of his command of the Russian language. The defendant was born in Moscow, the son of German parents, and spent the first fifteen years of his life in that city. This factor was the only reason, why, in 1935, he was taken into the SD. The description of his activites with the SD-sector Kassel will explain the nature of his activities for the period prior to his assignment to the Sonderkommando 7b. It will, however, also show the contents and goals of his field of activities, during the Einsatz Russia, and which in fact, did not change regardless of the positions he held. It does not seem to be surprising that a man who had a command of Russian and had gone to school in Russia, was especially suited for taking over the evaluation of the captured documents for the purposes of the intelligence service. no time charged with the independent command of the "Vordommando Moscow", Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.It will be seen that for a short time only he was formally reported as the deputy commander of that Kommando.

This was caused by the interval elapsing between the date, when the former head of the "Vorkommando Moscow" was recalled, namely Defendant SIX, and the date when his successor, SS-Obersturmbannfuehrer KOERTING arrived. The actual command over "Vorkommando Moscow" for this interval was taken over by the head of Einsatzgruppe B, NEBE, whose offices were located in the same building in Smolensk anyway. I shall produce evidence for the clarification of these organizational circumstances by submitting an affidavit by the Defendant, which was taken down by the interrogator of the Prosecution, Wartenberg, on 17 September 1947. the independent command of the Defendant and which were his duties there. In the course of this it will become clear that the "Vorkommando Moscow" was dissolved about the end of September 1941 and that KLINGELHOEFER was entrusted with the command over a newly formed unit, the socalled "Vorkommando Gruppenstab". The latter was to secure archives for the purpose of the intelligence service in case Moscow was taken, following directly behind the advancing German troops. In order to realize this intention, the "Vorkommando Gruppenstab" was called to Shatsk, where the Army High Command for this sector of the front was stationed. The Kommando remained there inactive until its dissolution in December 1941, as it was out of the question to take Moscow. of Einsatzgruppe B did not effect any changes in the type and purpose of his field of activity. The Prosecution did not produce any action reports for this period which extends to the end of 1943. In the witness stand, the Defendant will, however, give account of his sphere of activities during that time. It will be seen, that although he was incorporated into the organization of Einsatzgruppe B, he was one of those people who had to apply himself to the requirement of the intelligence service on the strength of his special knowledge of the Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.conditions in Russia.

It goes without saying that he was also serving as an interpreter during his entire term of duty in Russia. In spite of these facts, KLINGELHOEFER took part in two executions. The circumstances leading up to and the part he himself played in these events require detailed explanations by himself in the witness stand. Prosecution and Defense will have to screen them very carefully for their real probative value as far as it concerns the Defendant. For it is obvious that owing to the nature of these reports which covered a wide area and were a summary of a multitude of individual reports, errors occurred. They are not alone due to human inadequacy, but can and probably did originate from the generous tendencies of the reporting officers themselves. I know myself to be in concord with the Tribunal, that the Defendant shall only be charged with such acts, in which he actually participated in person and exercised decisive influence.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for the Defendant Strauch.

DR. GICK (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT STRAUCH): Your Honors, in order to facilitate a better understanding of my defense for defendant STRAUCH, it is necessary to make the following definitions which are of fundamental significance: created in order to protect the territorial gains of the Armies advancing in the East. the Army units.

Consequently, it follows that: 1.) The Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos were directly subordinated Groups and the Einsatzkommandos under the commanders of the Armies. 2.) Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos received their orders regarding Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.

3.) Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos existed only in areas under They were replaced by:

1.) The chief commanders (Befehlshaber) of the Security Police

2.) the commandants (kommandeure) of the Security Police and agencies of the Civil Administration. They had nothing to do with army units. They were agencies of the civil administration system which had been instituted in the East and which were headed by Reichcommissioners and higher ranking officers of the SS and Police for "Ostland". chief commanders lay within the civil administrative sphere. Their activities were exactly the same as those of the corresponding administrative authorities and police offices in the Reich, for example the observation and enforcement of laws and ordinances issued in the respective area under civil administration, such as the collection of political news, the prosecution of criminal offenses etc. structure consisting of six different sections. with the Einsatzkommandos. They operated, as described above, in the advanced army areas. Entirely different persons were used there as leaders who were with their units at the front. was similar. Only in so far did a certain connection of personnel Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.*---*st here, as the chief commanders of the Sipo and SD combined their positions with those of the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen through a personal union.

But as far as their work was concerned, they had nothing to do with each other, a fact which becomes clear through the following example: the chief-commander of the Sipo and SD Ostland had his headquarters in Riga, that is in the area of the civil administration, although his headquarters as Chief of Einsatzgruppe A was in Krasnowardeisk, that is directly within the Army area. hearing of witnesses and the presentation of documents. Einsatzkommando 2 of Einsatzgruppe A. I shall establish proof that defendant STRAUCH came to Latvia and WhiteRuthenia on March 22, 1942, that is at a time during which these territories already were under civil administration. Einsatzkommando 2, as, in fact, he was not. 1941 in the area around Leningrad. It seems that at that time this was Sturmbannfuehrer PLOETZ. Einsatzkommando 2 merely had a school in Riga for training purposes of the kommando. Their teaching staff comprised one leading and five subaltern officers who instructed one to two Latvian companies. Both, teaching staff and trainees, were exclusively under the command of the Chief of Einsatzkommando 2. Latvia, only for a few days. However, as I shall prove later he was transferred to White-Ruthenia as commandant of the Sipo and SD. Einsatzkommando 2 is erroneous. activities for which Einsatzkommando 2 must be blamed.

fact that Strauch for the period in which he is charged with the responsibility for the incidents as defined in the indictment, cannot even be considered the responsible commander of the Security Police and the SD. Although in the indictment STRAUCH is mentioned on November 4, 1941 as Commander of the Security Police and the SD; he only arrived in Latvia on November 10, 1941, and assumed his duties only from that date on.

Approximately one week after this date, however, i.e. around November 18, 1941, he became incapacitated due to a complicated fracture of his arm. He was replaced by a deputy commandant, a certain Dr. LANGE, who from this point on conducted all affairs entirely independently and without any possibility of interference from the side of STRAUCH, - and who remained in this position until he was formally appointed commander. chief commander of the Sipo and SD. appointed commandant of the Sipo and SD in White-Ruthenia in the meantime. had the same independent position as commander there as Dr. LANGE in Latvia. over the command in White-Ruthenia. He arrived in Minsk on March 22, 1942. Before that he never had been in White Ruthenia. independent and responsible one and is therefore not comparable with a mere substitution during an absence, STRAUCH cannot be made responsible for the events which occurred during the regime of his deputies, not considering the fact that these deputies were never in charge of the Einsatzkommando 2.

and presentation of documents. mentioned in the documents as lying within the area of the commandant of Sipo and SD of White Ruthenia, actually were not situated in that area. Consequently, a connection of defendant STRAUCH with the events that took place in these localities, cannot be considered. Kube-letter of July 31, 1942, submitted by the prosecution - Document 2829, Exhibit 111 - and through hearing of witnesses and presentation of documents prove this letter to be objectively incorrect.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for Defendant Fendler.

DR. LEHMANN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT FENDLER): May it please the Tribunal, in the case of the defendant FENDLER the prosecution has referred in all to six of the documents which it introduced into the proceedings. From these documents may be seen, according to the statements of the prosecution, that FENDLER belonged to Sonderkommando 4 b as an officer and during his membership in this Kommando he learned unofficially that executions had been carried out. According to the statements of the prosecution, such executions were carried out by Sonderkommando 4b at places where FENDLER was stationed at that time with this Sonderkommando. a member of the SS and also of the SD and thus considers as proven his membership in an organization declared to be criminal by the International Military Tribunal. guilt under counts 1, 2 and 3 of the indictment. course of the introduction of its evidence that during his membership in the SD the defendant FENDLER performed only duties connected with intelligence and information. Thus, for instance, during the time when Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.he belonged to the SD before the Eastern campaign commenced in 1941 he worked in various offices of the SD, dealing with the protection of industrial plants.

After he had become a candidate for executive rank in the autumn of 1940 and studied law, he was assigned to field duty in the summer of 1941 on the basis of his qualifications. He was assigned without any action on his part to Sonderkommando 4 b which had then been newly formed in Einsatzgruppe C. At that time FENDLER only knew that his Sonderkommando was to be an advance Kommando of the Einsatzkommandos of Gruppe C. He was not informed of the detailed orders which the officer in charge of the Kommando had received. Above all, he had no knowledge of the fact that Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos which had executive powers would have to perform deeds which would violate the laws of warfare and would include inhuman acts. He was even less aware that they were to take part in the so-called "final solution of the Jewish question". As early as 1938/9 FENDLER was engaged, with so-called Einsatzgruppen, in the occupation of the Sudetengau and Czechoslovakia and took part in the establishment there of offices of the SD. He could therefore only assume that on the Eastern front the Einsatzgruppen would have the same duties, as the only expert in intelligence service he was appointed expert adviser of Section III i.e. intelligence expert, in Sonderkommando 4 b. The intelligence section (Section III) within Kommando 4 b had no material connection whatsoever with the executive (Section IV). FENDLER's duty as SD-expert was to secure all intelligence material found in the occupied area and to screen it for relevant information. He also had to make reports on the economic, cultural and political conditions and on the morale of the population. He never at any time worked on the executive side either in accordance with orders or voluntarily. June 1941 until the 2 October 1941 on the Eastern front, therefore some of the documents presented in the case against him which refer to a later date, cannot incriminate him.

connected with intelligence and information, and as the defendant FENDLER in all the time he was in the SD until the end of the war never performed Counter-intelligence duties for the Executive (Gestapo), he knew nothing of the criminal character of the SD as determined by the IMT verdict. Furthermore, under them existing regulations, FENDLER was not able to leave the SD during the war. It can therefore not be said that FENDLER voluntarily remained in the SD during the war. Nor did he belong during the war to that group of persons in the SS declared to be criminal by the IMT verdict. and witnesses.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for defendant von Radetzky?

DR. RATZ (for the defendant von Radetzky): May it please the Tribunal: cases they may not show that the defendants gave explicit orders for the crimes committed by their Kommandos or that they directly participated in the same; however, the prosecution maintains their guilt to be just as great. of the defendant v. Radetzky, who was into the proceedings only subsequently included and of whom the Prosecution will not be able to prove that he gave orders for the crimes perpetrated by his Kommando, nor that he participated in them directly. However, I am not only convinced that the defendant's guilt is not equally great, but that the defendant's criminal guilt does not exist at all, as shall be proven by full evidence in the course of those proceedings.

I trust that already the first sketch of the case v. Radetzky, which I want to outline now to the Tribunal, will make the defendant's nonguilt already sufficiently clear.

When in 1939 Hitler's insane policy bore its first evil fruit, the defendant v. Radetzky was one of the first unfortunate ones who had to taste that fruit. On 15 October 1939 a treaty was concluded between Germany and Latvia, according to which the Baltic Germans Were to be uprooted from their native land and to be resettle in the Reich. From his hometown Riga, where he worked as Prokurist of an export firm, Radetzky came to Posen, together with numerous compatriots and fellowsufferers; there he was active at the advice Bureau for Baltic German immigrants and helped to ease the lot of many a resettler who felt already disappointed in some respects. Already in 1939 he received a second blow. On the occasion of a visit to Posen, Himmler at that time expressed his great displeasure at the independent existence of a representation of the Baltics in the form of their Immigrants Advie Bureau and ordered the transfer of that bureau to the Bureau for the resettlement of ethnic Germans, on SS outfit.

The staff of the immigrants' bureau, for their part, accordingly were incorporated into the SS; obviously this transfer was not effected for political or ideological reasons, it was not even voluntary; it was a purely organizational measure, due to Himmler's mania for unification. Yet another mania played a part in this, the uniform; it was thought that the staff of the Immigrants' Advice Bureau would gain in prestige and it would raise their morale all round, if they were dressed up in SS uniforms. The truth of those facts is proven by the following: Contrary to all tradition and regulations, these men did not have to produce proof of their Aryan descent; the very day Radetzky was received into the SS, he was promoted to SSUntersturmfuehrer, equivalent to the rank of a Lieutenant, without any examination as to his personal and professional qualifications. Radetzky subsequently were the SS-uniform, sometimes with and sometimes without the insignia of his rank, as the occasion demanded. Thus Radetzky belonged to that special category of "wearers of the SS-uniform", that could justly be termed the Quasi-SS. the preparations for the campaign against Russia in 1941, Radetzky had not been called upon - he who not only hailed from the East and had command of the Russian and other Slav languages, but also was an expert on conditions in Russia. Pursuant to the Decree No. 3 for the securing of labor for tasks of special political importance dated 15 October 1938, he was conscripted in May 1941 for service with the Reich Main Security Office. interest; hereby, the following points were essential, in general, and also concerned Radetzky: 1) this was a compulsory conscription, taking place without, and mostly against, the will of the- person concerned, 2) no employment contract was concluded between the person concerned and the now employer, but his previous employment was maintained; this follows, on the one hand, from the legal provisions which are explicit, but furthermore from the fact that the person in question, in our case the defendant v. Radetzky, did not get any salary at all from his new employer, the Reich Main Security Office, but merely a small "indemnity for personal expenses", 3) apart from the lack of voluntariness, a particularly typical feature of the liability for emergency service consisted in the usual transfer of the person liable for emergency service into a professional atmosphere which was quite unknown to him, so it was something quite common if, for instance, a manufacturer of picture frames or the professor at a girls' school became liable for emergency service as a police sergeant.

So the export merchant from Riga and former Latvian citizen v Radetzky came to the Reich Main Security Office, without having contributed to this fact by his free will even a single time in the chain of the facts that had caused this effect.

v. Radetzky came first to the border police school Pretzsch and, already after some weeks, in July 1941, to the Sonderkommando 4a set up at Schmiedeberg. v. Radetzky was not a specialist in the field of the Security Police or the Secret State Police; he had, in this respect, as little notion as any other ordinary citizen, he had even less any notion because lie had been a foreigner up to 1939; but v. Radetzky knew Russian and other Slavic languages, besides, and particularly, he was well informed about the Russian country and people; in addition, by virtue of his intelligent and distinguished objective manner, he was particularly gifted for initiating and cultivating relations, for observing correctly, investigating and penetrating human beings, circumstances and events. v. Radetzky became, therefore, with the Sk 4a, he went on with this task.

What is, then, meant by SD affairs? was: to safeguard the back of the fighting army, consequently to secure the rear area by police supervision, but, in addition, to improvise the war occupation of the areas from the standpoint of police and administra tion, until the occupying power could organize a proper administration.

The fact that the Einsatzgruppen and their individual units had actually this task, follows without difficulty, from careful reading of those parts of the so-called reports of events that were omitted by the Prosecution in their document books. Accordingly, it was part of the tasks of the Einsatzgruppen, 1) to study the economic, social and political conditions of the country and to elucidate the structure of the state and the party machinery of the enemy from the archives and the files of the enemy; 2) to observe the state of mind and the attitude of the population and their readiness for collaboration with the occupying power, furthermore, to investigate the enemy propaganda activities and the activities of the resistance groups and partisans and to report about these points to the central authorities of the State; 3) to ward off and to fight partisans who were in well-organized units or acted individually. all these points of view and tasks in a clumsy way as an occupying power. The section concerning observation and report according to what I just said, was "SD matter", and the field of the defendant v. Radetzky's activities was here. With Einsatzkommando 4a he followed the combat troops, the 6th Army, in their advance into Russia, but not as a commander or participant in the so-called executions, but as an expert SD-affairs. His special task was the safeguarding of important documents and flies of administrative authorities and institutes, the compiling of reports concerning agriculture and industry, the food situation and the existing conditions in the self-administration of the communities. It would be absurd if one wanted to maintain that such an exceptional person as v. Radetzky, a man whose mother tongue was German and who at the same time was fully conversant with the Russian language and conditions, would not have been employed for these purposes, or that the German Army leadership would not have been interested in the economic conditions, the food conditions, and the conditions concerning administra tion in the occupied territories.

pert qualifications of the defendant v. Radetzky. After he had proved him worth also in practical administrative work, such as organizing of the food distribution for the population, he was detailed as early as July 1941 to the AOK 6 as liaison officer, namely as liaison officer for the Sk 4a to the Army and liaison officer of the Einsatzgruppe C to the Army Group. the defendant pursued. The Tribunal will surely be astonished to learn, among other things, that it was v. Radetzky, against whom such severe indictments are brought, who was mainly responsible for averting a famine from the town of Charkow which was only 12 kms behind the front lines. Furthermore, I hope it will be proven to the full satisfaction of the Tribunal that the defendant v. Radetzky never participated in the dreadful executions, and that he also never was deputy to the commander of the Kommande. The latter may already seem evident now.

The further employment of the Defendant v. Radetzky is along a straight line too, and as a fact it proves more than all the statements made by witnesses and in documents, what he was found to be qualified for, for what was suitable and for what he could not be used. Since the summer of 1942 he was a liaison officer to the 2nd German Army and to the 2nd Hungarian army. In 1943 he was a liaison officer to the 8th Hungarian army corps and to the 2nd German army. On account of his knowledge of languages and his vast and profound knowledge of the whole conditions in the Russian territory v. Radetzky was transferred to Amt VI of the Reich Main Security Office by the end of 1943; up to that time, as has to be stressed expressly, he had not belonged to Amt VI of the Reich Main Security Office out to Amt I. As will have to be proven, the defendant had tried already numerous times to get a release from the straight-jacket of his national emergency service and to be transferred to the combat troops of the Army. He did not succeed, though he succeeded in repeatedly getting long leaves, and he furthermore succeeded in being less esteened as an expert; ultimately he was released from the immediate service in the Reich Main Security Office and he was being employed for further tasks of an informative nature. Then he once again became a liaison officer, namely with the Russian volunteer army of General Wlassow, which was no longer to taken seriously. There he prevented further follies and he caused General Turkul to surrender with his staff to the approaching American troops.

legal way, was driven out of his Baltic country. Then, without his will, he passively drifted into the claws of National Socialism. His characterization will be completed by describing how he fought for the rescue of his companions who were endangered by the racial and other basic principles of Nazi idealogy, opposing these very principles and thus endangering his own safety, and how he consequently gained grateful friends. once more to the "theory of individual responsibility," which the prosecution developed in the Opening Statement: the activities of a Sonderkommando is sufficient a reason for the establishment of the criminal responsibility of a defendant, because each defendant had the authority to order executions or to prevent executions. But Defendant Radetzky never possessed such an authority. This could only be assumed if the defendant would have been the commander or deputy commander of Sonderkommando 4a at one time or another, which actually never was the case. It is common knowledge that in military affairs there is no such thing as an authority over one's superiors, but only an authority over subordinates. Of course, there is a limited possibility to offer resistance to orders from military superiors or to cause them to change or withdraw their orders, Everybody familiar with military affairs knows well that such possibility decreases rapidly in direct proportion to the grade in the military hierarchy on which such a controversy may occur. Whereas, for example, a general may well be at variance with orders from his superiors and may express his counter-proposals in a courteous and diplomatic manner and, if necessary, even plead illness in order to evade the execution of an unsavory order, this was completely Impossible for a man of Defendant Radetzky's military rank.

For him contradiction or opposition would have meant a certain danger to life and limb. Such considerations are, however, totally unnecessary in connection with Defendant v. Radetzky and there is no need to plead, perhaps, that the defendant incurred no criminal guilt because he could not be espected to oppose criminal orders given him. For Defendant v. Radetzky never received or carried out an order for execution nor did he ever assist in any way in the carrying out of such an order. This leaves a mere knowledge. I believe I am in a position to state that it is already an established principle of the American Military Tribunal that criminal responsibility cannot be based on a mere knowledge of crimes.

Accordingly, trusting the Tribunal's justice, I hope to invalidate the charge brought against the Defendant v. Radetzky.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for the defendant Graf. You may proceed,

DR. BELZER: (Attorney for the Defendant Graf) May it please the Tribunal, the outside appearance of this case is marked by lack of space. The dock is terribly crowded and the seats of the counsels for the defense have grown, so to speak, into the tables of the judges. To whatever estent I feel personally honored to be seated at the table of the judges, so to speak, I must all the same say that at least this one place could have been saved if the prosecution had chosen the men whom it wanted to bring before the Tribunal in connection with the Einsatzgruppen from the same point of view which it maintained in the indictment and the opening statement. The inclusion of the Defendant Matthias Graf into the indictment of case 9 is a serious mistake of the prosecution.

Mentioned in the indictment at lest defendant is:

"Matthias Graf - (2nd Lt) in the SS, member Einsatzgruppe C." defendants, as officers or staff members of one or more Einsatzgruppen or subordinate units, had committed the crimes specified in the indictment.

this statement on page 1 by saying that the defendants had been commanders and officers of special groups known as Einsatzgruppen, that each of the defendants in the dock had held a position of responsibility or command in an extermination unit and each of them had assumed the right to decide the fate of men. Examining the individual responsibility of the defendants the proseuction states in the opening statement (p. 35 and 36 of the German translation) in addition: "Each of the defendants held a position of responsibility or command in an extermination unit. By virtue of his post he had the power to order executions." And further I quote: "As military commanders these men were bound by laws well known to all who wear the soldier's uniform, laws which impose on him who takes command the duty to prevent within his power, crimes by those in his control." Finally, the prosecution in its opening statement (p. 36 of the German translation) promised; "We shall show in this case that the rank and position of these defendants carried with it the power and duty to control their subordinates. This power, coupled with the knowledge of intended crime and the subsequent commission of crime during their time of command imposes clear criminal responsibility." about evidence; concerning the Defendant Matthias Graf, it has not proved anything at all as to participation, In any form whatsoever, in the crimes specified in the indictment.

It could not do so and can never do so. assigned to the Einsatzkommando C-6 from the end of May 1941 to about the middle of October 1942. During all the time of his membership in this Kommando the defendant had not the rank of an officer. At the beginning of the war with the war with the Soviet Union the defendant Graf had the lowest rank among all members of the Kommando. It can therefore not be said that Graf had held any authority of command or even only a position of responsibility in the Einsatzkommando C-6. Nor had the defendant Graf to do any police work with the Einsatzkommando C-6, nor had he in the least to do with the executions carried out by the Kommando. Graf was specialist III of the Department SD: His task consisted in reporting from all fields in the life of the population. These reports concerned:

ethnic questions and people's health, all diseases, whole of the time of his membership in the Kommando the work of the defendant Graf was within this framework. The fact, that the defendant Graf had no officer's rank in the Einsatzkommando C-6, results from the document submitted by the prosecution, NO-4801, Exhibit No. 147, in Doc. Book IIIC. This is the personnel file of the defendant. On page 1 of this document it is entered that Matthias Graf was appointed 2nd Lt on 20 April 44.

Consequently the defendant became an officer only after being away, again, from Einsatzkommando C-6 for nearly 2 years. that the defendant Graf was actually not a member of Einsatzkommando C-6 as officer, and was never a staff member of the Kommando or of Einsatzgruppe C, that, at no time, he had or exercised authority of command, at no time, did any police work and had nothing to do with any execution. The defendant Matthias Graf can never be connected with the crimes described in the indictment.

dants had been members of the SS and, in addition, the defendant Graf is enumerated among the members of the SD. Hereby Graf is charged with membership in organizations declared criminal by the judgment of the IMT. On the part of the defense it is objected in this respect that the defendant Matthias Graf withdrew from the SS in 1930. This fact results from the personnel file of the defendant, prosecution exhibit 147 in Doc. Book IIIC. On page 6 of the Document (page 3 of the original) the following time is given as period of membership in the SS; 1 April 33 - 15 March '37, and as rank; SS Sturmann Graf did not rejoin the SS. starting point that the SD was a voluntary organization, end states as a fact that all members of the SD joined this organization in a voluntary way. In the conclusion the IMT declared "as criminal in the sense of the statute, the group of those members of the SD....who became or remained members of the organization, although they know, that this organization was made use of for carrying out acts declared criminal according to article 6 of the statute, and who, as members of the organization, took a personal part in the commitment of such crimes." The conviction of a defendant on account of membership in the group declared criminal - of members of the SD is consequently dependent on two preliminary conditions:

(1) Voluntary joining of the SD and hereby membership in the SS or voluntary maintaining of membership and (2) Taking a personal part in the commitment of crimes mentioned in the statute and in the Control Council Law No. 10.

prior to 1 September 1939. It will be proved that Fraf never joined the SD voluntarily, but in January 1940, became liable for emergency service for the war period as auxiliary war worker.

That he was, first, employed in the SD intelligence service at home, was detailed, temporarily, to Einsatzkommando C-6, against his will, and, finally, was retransferred to service at home. Evidence will be submitted that Graf refused repeated suggestions to be taken over by the SD, and repeatedly tried in vain to get away entirely from the SD. The fact that the Defendant Graf obtained an SS rank for the period of his employment with the SD, did not mean new membership in the SS. The request of the prosecution concerning conviction of the Defendant Graf on account of membership in a criminal organization cannot be complied with -- apart from other points - because of the lack of membership in the SD or SS. It was already previously mentioned that there is no proof at all for any criminal activity of the Defendant Graf. indictment is completely unfounded in all three counts.

Your Honor, I would like to put a question to the Tribunal. In the opening session on the 15 September it was stated that motions for the calling of witnesses to be interrogated are to be put in. I have complied with this request. I have made my motions. If I only count one day for each of the defendants, my turn will come at the earliest four weeks from now. Yesterday the Defense Center already brought the witness Franziska Reimers from Bonn to Nurnberg, but I can not see why this lady who has a job today at homo has to sit idling in Nurnberg for four weeks. I, therefore, ask the Tribunal to permit me to tell this Miss Reimers to return to Bonn, and to stand ready to come back to Nurnberg at my call.

THE PRESIDENT: I want to thank you, Dr. Belzer, for your immediately and enthusiastic compliance with the request of the Tribunal -

DR. BELZER: I have not the connection, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: May be you don't have your earphones on correctly.

DR. BELZER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: And I want to congratulate the Defense Center for the speed with which it operated, as it would seem they have go ahead of all of us. I see no reason why this witness should be compelled to wait the period of time which you have estimated, so you have the consent of the Tribunal to release her, and to see to it that she is back here in Nurnberg in time to be called as a witness when you are ready for her.

DR. BELZER: Yes, Your Honor, Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: All the opening statements appear now to have been delivered, and I want to thank the Defense Counsel for their cooperation with the Tribunal in every respect, and we will now recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. Dr. Aschenauer will proceed with the presentation of the Ohlendorf defense. Do you have something to present?

DR. STUEBINGER: Dr. Stuebinger for the defendant Werner Braune. ment for the defendant Braune may be read. I have not as yet read this.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I am very sorry, yes.

DR. STUEBINGER: May it please the Tribunal: all the other defendants, on the following three counts:

1. Crimes against Humanity.

2. Commission of War Crimes.

3. Membership in a criminal organization. terial and emphasized it in its opening statement, demonstrating how the defendants, - including defendant Braune - are supposed to have committed acts making them guilty in the meaning of the Indictment. It has characterized the acts of the defendants as "the tragic fulfillment of a program of intolerance and arrogance". Over, and above that, it has stated that each of the defendants, in his position of responsibility or as commander in a so-called liquidation unit, usurped the right to determine the fate of human beings, and was imbued with the idea of death as the intended result of his power and contempt.

The acts for which the defendants have to answer were supposedly not dictated by military necessity, but by an extreme perversion of human ideas, the National Socialist doctrine of the master race. In refutation of this, I as Defense Counsel, should like to make the following statement : question put by the Presiding Judge as to whether or not he considered himself guilty of the grave charges brought against him, the defendant answered "Not guilty" and with this statement he thus expressed his own inner conviction. answer as an ejected incomprehensible denial and therefore to attach no significance to it; nothing could be further from the truth than to interpret the statement of the Defendant as an attempt at cowardly evasion of responsibility. pressed the fact that He feels absolutely innocent of the grave charges which have been brought against him and that those who were ultimately responsive were quite other persons who are not sitting in the prisoners' dock today. rations and trains of though are the basis for this feeling. It is inherent in defendant Braune's attitude that he in no way attempted to disown his acts or to white-wash them and that his statements are entirely trustworthy.

easier for me to carry out my task as defense counsel. I do not regard it as my task to attain a dubious result by legal tricks and distortions, but merely to serve the cause of law and justice before this high Tribunal. against humanity, in which he is alleged to have participated, as defined by the provisions of Control Council Law No. 10.

war crimes by the sane actions, crimes which were committed through violation of the laws and customs of war, including murder, maltreatment of prisoners of war and of the civilian population of countries and territories under the belligerent occupation of or otherwise controlled by Germany and wanton destruction and devastation not justified by military necessity.

1.) with having been a member of the Schutzstaffeln (SS)

2.) a member of Ant III of the RSHA. (SD)

3.) a member of Ant IV of the RSHA (Gestapo) i.e. of organizations, declared to be criminal by the International Military Tribunal and paragraph 1 d of Article II of Control Council Law No. 10. the actions constituting the subject of the indictment comply objectively with the above-mentioned facts with regard to Germany's fight against Bolshevism unless measures taken in individual cases seem justified as permissible retaliation according to existing customs of international and war law or were permissible as punishment for offenses against orders expressly and publicly issued by the occupying power. under orders in a frontline assignment and acted only within the scope of orders which He considered to be bindings The question of acting on orders is of special importance in this case, since the defendant was not holding an important key position, but was a subordinate receiving orders and received his assignment at a time when all orders had already been issued and had been in the processof execution for months.

Under these circumstances He had no possibility to disobey "the order, apart from the fact that he trusted the legality of the order given to him.

2.) This trial receives its special characteristics through lacking consciousness of guilt and emergency resulting from orders. three counts of the indictment existent by claiming in figure 9, letters A-P of the indictment, -- without, however, completely specifying the actions with which the Defendant BRAUEN is charged (with exception of letter F) -- that the Defendant as leader of Einsatzkommando 11b of Einsatzgruppe D murdered a considerable number of human beings in his territory of assignment (Crimea) during the tine of November 1941 until March 1942. concept common and unchanged at all times to all civilized peoples, of killing a human being from joy of killing, avarice or other low motives, maliciously or cruelly or by morns constituting a common danger. that the defendant without any efforts of his own was ordered to an Einsatzgruppe in the East and that in his position he only acted within the scope of binding orders issued long before his arrival and that he could not act differently although the contents of those orders in no way corresponded with his own ideas concerning the treatment of members of other races or were even in accord with his own inner disposition and wishes.

On the contrary the carrying out of the orders given to him was rather a heavy psychological burden for the Defendant and only the idea of duty and obedience, but also the knowledge that it would be impossible for him to evade this order, made it possible for him to stand this strain. It was not in his power to annul or to alter orders. was told what his tasks were, when all ordershad already been given a long time ago and when they had been executed since months.

objectively or subjectively. His Kommando did not exterminate but it carried out orders which, as they had been given, were given from a point of view of safeguarding the territory. He was not entitled to examine or even to decide upon what was a military necessity and what not. That was solely the task of the highest military authority. more than 2000 kilometers resulted from the situation reports and that these reports were sent to 60 different agencies, as is proven by the distributor, and situation reports were sent out in 100 copies to Reich Ministries, as for instance to the Reich Minister for Foreign Affairs, v. RIBBENTROP, proves, that it wasout of the question for the defendant to doubt that this was anything but a Fuehrer order. Wehrmacht, as the executor of executive power and of the responsibility in the execution of the measures, participated to a very essential extent or that the Einsatzgruppen received any possible assistance in the execution of their tasks. Thus he soon received orders directly from the Army to take and execute measures in the sense of the Fuehrer orders, be it the assignment for the combing of Simferopol, in which it was expressly stated that they were to be on the lookout fur Jews, or the order given by the 11th Army, which in December 1941 ordered the execution of the measures against the Jews in Simferopol to be finished before Christmas. the fight was going on in the East may not be forgotten, and that one had to deal here with an opponent, who originally disregarded any International Law and fought a total war, in which He thought every means admissible. systematic way of the partisan warfare, which had already been well prepared by the Russians before the outbreak of hostilities and which was considered an especially effective means to decrease the strength of the enemy.

The manner of fighting in the Eastern campaign, for which the assignment of partisans behind the lines of the German Army had been considered as a well calculated means of fighting and which had been cultivated accordingly in an over increasing measure, has shown how far in modern total warfare the methods of fighting have come away from the ideologies of the Hague REgulations for Land Warfare, and how fluctuating had become the whole complex of the problems of "military necessity". That is also borne out by the manner in which the modern air warfare was conducted and the development of the atom bomb as the latest means of combat until its first employment in Japan. himself in the assignment in the East and make clear the situation concerning orders given him. The Prosecution has also acknowledged this situation concerning orders without any reservations, when they talk on pages 11/12 of the Opening Statement of an information given the commanders of the Wehrmacht by HITLER on the tasks of the Einsatzgruppen, and when they refer to HITLER's decree as shown in the verdict of the IMT, and mentions that detailed instructions were put into effect.

The defendant's conduct: The defendant BRAUNE saw to it that orders, issued long before this assumption of office, were carried out correctly and he took special care that no excesses or cruelties occurred. the defendant's examination in his own case, in no way conforms to the picture of my client which the Prosecution hasgiven in itsopening speech. The Defendant BRAUNE was not the man to take upon himself the right to decide the fate of men and to deal out death in a cold-blooded manner. To the contrary, he considered this, his task, his duty as a tremendous burden, carrying it out merely in realization of his war-time duty as a subject and soldier to abide by the orders and laws of the head of the State and his Supreme Military Commander true to his oath as Civil Servant and soldier.

consciousness of carrying out a Fuehrer order, thereby engaging in a legal activity. In harmony with his personality and position he could under no circumstances oppose this order. Much loss did it occur to bin that ho might possibly refuse to carry out the order, as he was aware of the consequences which such a refusal in the operational theater would mean to him. It would have meant his certain death. been expected. The judgment of the I.M.T. defines it as a question whether there actually existed a choice in accordance with ethical laws.

Court No. II answered this question in its judgment of Erhard MILCH (page 96 of the opinion) to the effect that it. did not intend to suggest to MILCH and had never' done so that he (MILCH) should have chosen any way cut which might have cost him his life. Life is a legal right the maintenance of which must above all be granted to man, but open resistance to HITLER's order would have brought it to a sudden end. The defendant BRAUNE was no more than a small cog in a largo machine and he would nave been removed by the force of authority and power and HITLER'S order would still have been carried out. ho wasappointed and he could not sabotage the orders for he was always under the control of his superiors and his subordinates who independently of him had for some time already acted on orders given them.

I shall describe BRAUNE's conduct when not under orders from his supreme commander. on that point.

He left the SD in April 1939 when transferred to Coblence. totally different light from that in which the Prosecution has tried to present him. The only possible answer to the Prosecution can be a verdict of "Not Guilty".

THE PRESIDENT: I hope you understand, Dr. Stuebinger, that there is no intention to slight you by nut calling you this afternoon. The confusion arose through the fact that you had appeared at the podium this morning, and apparently you were checked off, so now we certainly do have your opening statement, and now we will recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats. the United States of America and this honorable Tribunal,

THE PRESIDENT: The defendants Rasch, Strauch, Blobel, and Blume are excused from attendance today in accordance with previous arrangements. Dr. Aschenauer, are you now ready to proceed with the defendant Ohlendorf?

DR. ASCHENAUER : I call the defendant Ohlendorf as a witness in his own case. as follows:

THE TRIBUNAL (JUDGE SPEIGHT): Raise your right hand and repeat after me: speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

THE TRIBUNAL (JUDGE SPEIGHT): You may be seated, BY DR. ASCHENAUER:

Q What is your name?

Q When and where were you born? District of Hannover.

Q What was the profession of your father?

Q Do you have any brothers or sisters?

Q What is the profession of your brothers and sisters?

A My oldest brother is a biologist; my second brother is a farmer; my sister has a business.

Q What was the political opinion in your parents' house? was a trustee of the German People's Party.

Q What was the religious attitude in your parents' homo?

Q Where did you spend your childhood and adolescence? and worked on the farm in my leisure hours. father's farm. Does that have any special significance in your development? of handling a farm and got to know the human conditions in a farm district, that is, the cooperation and living together of farmers, industrial workers, and peasants, merchants, tradesmen, and people of other trades. The rest of the time my professional development proceeded along with my political development, these conditions of administration, culture, religion, and education, as I got to know them in that village, always remained with me, and they became the leading motives for my own philosophy.

Q What kind of education did you have? I graduated from the Gymnasium.

Q Where and what did you study?

,8 October-M-IL-1-3-Caming (Int. Lea) were law and national economy, Later, after my graduation, I spent one year in Italy studying the fascist system and the fascist philosophy of international law.

Q Are you married?

Q Since when?

Q Do you have any children? ago.

Q When did you become a member of the Nazi Party?

Q How did you come to enter the Nazi Party? days on. When I was 16 years old, I was director of a youth group of the German National Party; but I was not sufficiently bourgois and involved in the class system not to turn my back very quickly from this People's Party. The interests of that party in the special political methods did not appeal to mo. However, on the other hand, I was too much involved with the religious and cultural philosophy of the traditional bourgeoisie to become a Marxist. But at that time I recognized that the social need was a truly national problem, a problem, that is to say, for the whole people, and I recognized that the national need was also a truly social problem. These two points of view seemed to have been expressed best in National Socialism in my opinion. In addition, I was attracted very much by the fact that active people count as valuable in building up a national state, symbolically expressed in the concept of the Worker's Party. Likewise the idea of national thought was attractive to me as well, that is, the doctrine that peoples are independent concepts which by themselves and in themselves have to solve their own problems.

Q What activity did you engage in in the Nazi Party? done in the relatively small organization at that time. I was director of a district group. I sold papers, I posted posters. I participated in discussions and spoke in gatherings. I went from house to house and from man to man.

Q Were you at that time a member of the SS too? that at that time those particular functions were not seperated as yet. There were no sub-organizations of the Party. Thus, the question of participating in the functions of the SS was not a question of becoming a member. Rather, together with four other members of the Party, I was detailed for service in the new SS functions, but since I left my home town shortly afterwards, I did not get to perform that service. I was merely crossed off the list and therefore never found out under what number I was registered.

Q. What was your activity in the Party after 1926?

A. In 1926 there were the first differences between myself and my superiors in the Party. I did not agree with my superiors' political and other philosophies. Therefore, from 1926 to 1933 I did not work within the official party. On the other hand, on my own, especially in the years 1929 to 1931 as a student in Goettingen, I was very actively engaged in spreading National Socialism by arranging for gatherings by myself, by arranging discussions, and especially conducted training courses. These courses were probably the first which were systematically started by the Party.

Q. Why do you emphasize these training courses especially?

A. Because in these courses my entire activity, even in later years, mirrors my activity later on. I was of the opinion that our time was spiritually a time of consciousness; that is to say, human beings did not want just to take what was given to them but they wanted to decide what they wanted by themselves and on their own free will. Therefore, I considered it correct, if one wanted to succeed in establishing an idea or a movement, to win over people consciously for this idea or for that movement. Thus, I started training courses in which I tried to discuss the political, social, and spiritual factors of the time in order to educate people to have their own opinions about these matters. Even though this was not recognized in this field in which I did this work, it was, nevertheless, successful, and the Party went through no crises in this field.

Q. Weren't there at that time already definite directives, and didn't you have to operate according to these directives?

A. Yes. The year 1930 was a very decisive year for the Party insofar as one considered the years 1925 to 1930 as the years of building an ideological basis for the Party. In 1930, on the other hand, the Party leadership decided to assume power in the country by means of a parliamentary mass party. According to this mission, the tactics and the strategy of the Party were laid down. Instead of the ideological basis, the mass propaganda was evolved.

In the leadership of the various agencies, regarding both the men who considered this propaganda as correct and who could carry it out, the ideological basis was simplified. An attempt was made to make the utterances of the Party systematic. But at the same time an opportunity to continue the ideological foundations was missed. At that time lists of speakers were made up and these speakers instructed about the subjects of their speeches and the way of handling them. I did not do any work in making out these lists, nor was I ever an official speaker of the Party. I rather objected to such a systematic laying down of principles; and thus it is understandable that until 1933 I was not active within the official framework of the Party any more.

Q. Until what time is your activity valid in the Party?

A. Until the spring of 1931. In the summer of 1931 I took my state examinations. After that I went to Italy for one year.

Q. Why did you go to Italy?

A. I went to Italy because, as a National Socialist who was conscious of the fact that his own opinion was not yet fit to develop a program for the people, I wanted to study the development of an apparently parallel, movement in order to see what that party which had already been in power for ten years was doing for its nation.

Q. What significance did your stay in Italy have for your further development?

A. I became an absolute anti-fascist in Italy and returned from Italy with the will to fight this fascism wherever and in whatever form I encountered it and to do everything to keep this development away from National Socialism and to find a basis for it which by its quality would not only put it in a position to avoid fascism but even to overcome it.

Q. Where did you see the dangers of fascism?

A. With the secularization of the religious values of Christianity and with the neglect of observing the Catholic laws. It went hand in hand with this dissolution of the communio fidelium, the community of the faithful.

The cessation of this community went hand in hand With the material values of society; that is to say, the ideas of enlightenment and of individualism made man independent and forced him to rely on himself. He no longer belonged to a natural community hut as a sum total represented his own interests. The cessation of this metaphysical relation between the individual people brought up questions of order which have not been solved up to this very day. At the same time it endangered the security of the larger states; and this problem has not yet been solved. As a gain of this time which has been achieved for humanity, they have acquired the consciousness of their own willpower and have established themselves as moral human beings. Fascism put itself beyond this gain of centuries. It merely recognized that there were no more natural communities. It opposed the traditional values of Rome to the dissolving tendencies of society, in the Roman Empire in the divine state and in the Roman Empire as an expression of a religious entity and its laws.

Of the first, the traditional value which founded the basis for the State as a final earthly value of the devine will. From the second, it developed humanism in order to add its one picture of individual application to the obligation of the State. A study of Fascist Doctrine, and of the Fascist legislation, especially of the constitution, showed clearly that this is an absolute State, whose efforts on a moral basis were camouflaged. The State was an entity in itself, and the only value to men, society and the people were only to arise as a value from this absolute value of the State. This State alone gave them the moral foundation and the social obligation.

Q As a National Socialist weren't you yourself in adherence of an absolute State - the total State, or of the Fuehrer State, as it said in the Nazi ideology? the Fascist State. National Socialism as such vent out from the recognition that the nature of the natural communities was dissolved by individualism, which also had recognized the idealization of the individual and the insecurity of the individual as regards his place in life. But contrary to Fascism, National Socialism made an attempt to consider human beings as realities, and as having their own value. It saw him as a member of a people. It found a new natural community, namely, the relationship of the citizen to the whole makeup of people in which this man was born as a member. Man was not merely an incidental citizen of it but a link within the people. Thus, man and the people had the primary value, and the State was merely an auxiliary means of caring for and developing these people and its culture.

THE PRESIDENT: May I interrupt you just a moment, please. Was this ideology expressed in the publications of the National Socialist Party, or is this your own individual interpretation, and your own individual philosophy?

this opinion unequivocally. This is the culture speech of 1935, and the speech on the front to the generals of the Eastern Front in the Spring of 1943 where Hitler expects considerable consequences as a result of this opinion, even for the German people insofar as he determined that it belonged to the makeup of the German people, that it is composed of various tribes of various races, and that it, therefore, is the mission of leadership of that State to care for and keep up the various qualities of these different tribes. He assigns the task to the State of uniting these various different characteristics of the different tribes in the German people, and he takes this as his basic conception. The regrettable feature is that these very two speeches by the possibility which was opened to Goebbels were withheld from the public; the culture speech of 1935 did not appear in the newspapers, but the speech of Goebbels appeared from the very beginning to the end. Furthermore, Your Honor, I believe it is hardly in optional Socialist literature which gives any systematic opinion in this respect.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand you to say that these two speeches were withheld from publication against the wishes of Hitler? much as it was the official speech before the Reichstag (Reich Party Assembly), but Goebbels, as the Propaganda Minister had the possibility of preventing a further dissemination, since he gave orders direct to the press as to which speech of the Party Assembly was to be published, and which was not. I don't know anything about whether Hitler opposed the dissemination of these speeches.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand that Goebbels would have a superior authority to Hitler in the matter of propaganda, if Hitler was interested? one not living through these things. We had a State in which the commanding power of the Fuehrer could not be doubted, but even he had to give way occasionally to the hierarchy below him, Ley, Goebbels and Goering in particular, and, in fact, he had to give them a free hand in their own field as there were no cabinet sessions, there were no regular Fuehrer discussions, and, whatever was brought to him by and for his decision was incidental.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you intend to say that Goebbels opposed the theories advanced by Hitler in these two speeches, and for that reason withhold public dissemination of them? BY DR. ASCHENAUER: doctrines? of the people, which National Socialists embraced, their idea of an authoritarian State, Fuehrer, had to be rejected, and was actually rejected. If this theory of absolute State was propaganda, of the National Socialist Party anyway, this on the one hand goes into the question which the presiding judge just asked; insofar as a man like Ley had an absolute interest to bring out that ultimate power of the Fuehrer and the State in order to be able to have his own absolute power in the State; and, on the other hand it brings with it the tragic moments of National Socialism, namely, because National Socialism up to 1933 had not developed its formuli sufficiently. After 1933 men flocked to it and were fully prepared for any devotion and to make everything available for a program of which they knew that those Fuehrers, who were right with them, were enthusiastic about it. Literature about the total State -- about the Fuehrer State is altogether written by such people, and not one National Socialist will be found among them. These are the same people whom today confess - I mean attempt to say justly that they were never National Socialists.

That is why I from the beginning opposed this type of literature, in student unions I treated the spiritual foundation of such literature, and, I would just like to name one person, the Jurist of Third Reich, Karl Schmidt, This Karl Schmidt as a basis for his political views had the doctrine of Friend and Foe. Nothing could contradict the views of National Socialism more than this doctrine for in a people all members are part of the people; even if they are opponents of a certain point of view, they, therefore, are not enemies who have to be exterminated but they are fellow countrymen who have to be won over.

But this doctrine together with the National Bolshevist literature in the field of economics has built up the Total State as a basis of this idea. member of the people. Furthermore, one would have to discuss the difference between the Western Democracy and a Germanic State? philosophies conflicted here without having understood each other. In National Socialism, as an idea, the idea of absolute obedience was seen in this opposition. But the differences between Democracy and National Socialism lie somewhere else.

aim is the equality of its citizens, and the guarantee of their upmost liberty, but it leaves the human side of life, the culture, the economics, the education to the individual himself, that is to say, it makes a difference between the citizens and human beings. This philosophy is opposed to the Germanic tradition. For this tradition the State is a representative of the whole people; for the leadership organization to care for and develop the people and its members. To this extent the Germanic man wants and expects from his representative, namely, the State, the development of the entire human being, and on his part he is prepared to devote himself entirely to this representative. The strongest expression of this was the Germanic Community, which existed without constitution, without limitation of rights and duties, consisted of a community of volunteers who devoted themselves unconditionally to its community, but who expected that the officials of this community would fulfill their living conditions. It Is clear that such a philosophy bears within itself tremendous dangers. If this serving element of the State is not sufficiently regarded, and if the State becomes an entity in itself, and a value to itself, and this danger National Socialism did not evade, this danger for the reason which I mentioned above, a number of Fuehrers and theories developed just the opposite but the strange thing is, that theoretically speaking an absolute Fuehrerism existed, but in particular during the war, especially, a pluralistic anarchy developed. That is to say, below this Fuehrer there were independent power -politics, disobedience and treachery, the Fuehrer State was neither thought out all the way nor, even less, was it formulated all the way through. The Fuehrer did not only deny the State as a purpose in itself, but has destroyed it in an exaggerated form, so that it was no longer available to him as an instrument; in place of the State, the multiple wantonness of the various fuehrers took its place.

Q What wasyour activity in the Party after 1933? District Court in Hildesheim, and as such I lived in my own town once more, I lead my own district group in my own town only temporarily. I directed the legal matters in the District Court at Hildesheim, and, furthermore, within my official duties I conducted training courses. In the clear consciousness of the coning in of a let of non-National Socialists into the Party could no longer be prevented, which made a discussion of the Fascist and Nazi Doctrines in opposite views necessary, and during this tine this theme was the content of my speeches, and despite the efforts, I could not prevent this joining of many non-National Socialists to the Party. This activity lasted until October 1933.

Q Then did you join the Institute for World Economics in Kiel?

Q How did that come about? economics, but since I knew on how little National Socialism was actually based, I accepted an offer from professor Jessen to be able to combine politics and economics, and, he offered no a position at the Institute for World Economics in Kiel, where I became his personal assistant, and at the same time he offered mo the opportunity of building a department, or to setup a department for National Socialism and Fascism. Thus it was our common goal to examine Fascism scientifically, and at the same time to explain National Socialism. Personally, it was my intention to study philosophy and theoretical National Sociology and Economies.

Q How long were you active as a scientific assistant? without him I remained at Kiel until the Fall of 1934.

Q How was it that your activity terminated so shortly?

AAbout new year of 1933 and '34 Professor Jessen and I had objected very strenuously against National Bolshevistic tendencies of the Party at Kiel, especially, because this National Bolshevist circles had built up an organization in almost all Reich Ministries.

As the result of this fight on our part I was in February 1934 arrested at the request of the Party with several other students. Professor Jessen evaded this arrest because he was sich. He had to leave Kiel since his opponent and my opponent, especially in the Ministry of Culture actually held the power. After Professor Jessen left, the Ministry of Culture demanded in the Fall of 1934 that I be dismissed from Kiel, because I was a factor of political unrest there.

Q. What did this event mean for your scientific plans, for your scholastic plant?

A. Since the departments of the Culture Ministry were against me, my scholastic career was at an end.

Q. What activity did you decide to engage in now?

A. Jessen and I took up the fight against these people with other groups in the Party and formulated the plan to build the commercial high school in Berlin into an economics institute in order to fight these national Bolshevist forces which were especially active in economics, in order to oppose them with real representatives of National Socialism. Jessen was to be provost of this school, and I was to aid him in building up the school. For this purpose I went to Berlin in December, 1934, but these plant fell through also because of the Party, in this case on the part of Rosenberg. In the paper, the Voelkisch Beobachter, an article appeared against Jessen which called a book by Jessen anti-national. Rosenberg objected to Jessen. The Culture Minister, Rust, did not dare to make him director of the school. Thus my scholastic plans were definitely at an end, but simultaneously my political activity was also at an end, insofar as the director of the Reich School of National Socialist Economics, Dr. Wagner, warned me at the request of an organization in Munich and warned me about attacking National Socialist politics in my speeches, such speeches which were epecially directed against the policies of the Reich Food Office would no longer be tolerated.

Q. How long did you remain in the Institute for Applied Economic Sciences?

A. Now I was without any professional goal, directed a library in the Institute for Applied Economic Sciences and furthermore held meetings with students. I had already described them briefly, but those forcer also destroyed my student meetings so that I was definitely at an end in Berlin.

Q. Are you speaking of the time '35, '36?

A. Yes.

Q. In May, 1936, you entered into the service of the SD. How did that come about?

A. This same Professor Jessen who had called me to Kiel and Berlin now offered me a post in the SD, namely specialist on economics, a position which had been offered to him too. Until that time I was not familiar with the SD. Jessen arranged a meeting with the leader of the SD, at that time Professor Hoehn, and in this discussion I told him what my political opinions were, and to my surprise he answered that these very political critical opinions were just the very ideas on National Socialism were needed in the SD. Since there would be no more public criticism, this would be an organization which would have as its mission to inform the leading organizations of the state about National Socialist developments, and especially as regards wrong developments, wrong tendencies, etc.

Q. What was the concrete mission which SD was assigned?

A. I was told to build up an economic news service, to create an organization which would be in a position in the field of economics to give all the information which would tell about mistendencies and mistaken developments in the National Socialist philosophy. This was the motive which then induced me to enter the SD and thus into the SS in 1936.

Q. Now, before going into any more important questions concerning the charges of the Prosecution, I would like to finish the story of your professional career.

How did your position in the SD develop further?

A. The picture in the SD was somewhat different that I had expected. The Chief of the SD had exaggerated to me insofar as the organization of the SD, which in reality did not exist. The whole central organization which I found consisted of about twent young people without any office help, without any registration, without any means at all. It was not a well organized apparatus at all. One did not even know what was wanted. One took up individual cases which in such an embryonic organization happened to come along. The natural interest of the Chief were practically the be-it-all of the SD. He was a political scientist and teacher, and thus the SD was first concerned with that field. Here I began to work in the field of economics, laid the basis for an information service in which information was gathered about economics in Germany, and I tried to find specialists who would be in a position to analyze the economic tendencies and to evaluate these tendencies. This work pleased, and around the turn of the year '36, '37, I became Chief of Staff of the SD inland, that is representative of the chief, with the special mission of transferring the system I had developed to the other fields. The basis for an all-encompassing information service was adopted and was organized along those lines. In 1936 we already find a picture, in a small scale, of the later Amt III of the Reich Main Security Office.

The SD Central Department II/2 had three groups which encompassed the entire phases of the spheres of national life, Group I, culture, education and national culture; Group II, law and administration, the questions of Party and State, of the high school and of the student organizations; Group III, all departments of economics.

Q. In your work did you have any difficulty?

what was being developed here. The difficulties came from the culture. sphere and from the economic spheres. In the years 1936 and 1937 the development of the four-year plan and the success of the food ideologies as National Socialist policies had made strong influences within the middle class. Hundreds of thousands of plants were closed. I started to take a part in this development with the new SD. We did not only try to take a hand in these developments and to point out the catastrophic consequences, but we also took a hand personally by personal conferences and strengthening our information material so that in the closing down of these plants many difficulties arose. At the same time we tried to point out to Himmler the damaging effects of these measures. And now there was the first shart difference, because the Reich Food Association under Darre as head was the actual basis and support of Himmler's ideologies, and therefore he objected to my reports as being against Darre. The factual problems were not agreeable to him. Since we also took a hand in the cultural problems and objected against the retirement and recall of the old professors by the Party and called attention to the fact that the opportunistic young knights were certainly not fit to replace the wisdom of the old professors, Himmler called me on the carpet. For the first time he called me a pessimist and this clung to me all the time. Besides Himmler stated that the SD had no business in these questions, but that they were left up to the Party. In the year 1937 the Director of the SD, Professor Hoehn, was dismissed through the intervention of Streicher. After the director had been dismissed the mission of the SD was to be changed, and therefore those forces were removed who had so far determined the direction of this new line. Since I was not prepared to give up my ideas about the subject, I was myself dismissed, not dismissed, I was merely excluded from a policy-making position. I was merely restricted to the economic department. Since I no longer saw any chance for the development of the SD in this position and did not want to participate in any other measures I asked for dismissal.

Heydrich refused this, but after long negotiations I succeeded, in the spring of 1938 to get permission to leave the SD and to become an official in the Economic Administration. November, 1939, I became the top manager of this group. In this time I only worked in the SD sporadically, for after my dismissal the other defendant, Seibert, was my deputy in the economic group who now actually directed the task.

Q Why did you accept a position in the Reichs-Group Commerce? years, '36, '37 and '38 was that unemployment was not only overcome but by the four-year plan and the many tasks which had been created threatened about one million businesses of the middle class. We had taken up this question since in our opinion it was the mission of National Socialism to dissolve the collectivization but not by proletarizing the middle class and by dissolving independent plants to increase this collectivization. The attempt to prevent this -- I only found a chance to prevent this in this Reichs-Group Commerce, and thus I went to this Reichs-Group Handel, Reichs-Group Commerce, in order to pursue my aims further in practical politics which could no longer be pursued in a normal manner.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, this would be a convenient time to recess.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken:)

DR. ASCHENAUER (Attorney for Defendant Ohlendorf): Your Honor, before I proceed with questioning my witness, I would like to clarify a few mistakes which were made in the translation. A list of incorrect points becomes evident from the comparison between the English and German. Professor Hoehn and not in the SD.

Two - it was said : alleged national socialist policies in the Reichsnaehrstand..... "allegedly" was not translated. from SD itself was mentioned, - the dismissal from the Main Office was meant. The Main Office was left out. These three things were incorrect.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, your remarks, of course, will be incorporated into the record and we can assure you that the correct version will appear in the final transcript, because everything which is stated here in court is automatically recorded on a film and from that the transcript is eventually prepared.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, thank you very much, Your Honor. large responsible task in the Reichsgroup Commerce (Handel) in September 1939 you became the leader of the office of the SD Inland in the Security Main Office? the State Police, because of the centralization of the political Police Forces by the Reichsfuehrer SS and the Chief of the German Police, had by then been extended so far that apart from the immediate fighting in the executive, they also took over the SD, the News Agency. and which had been legitimized by the Party, had, in the years 1936 and 1937, become smaller and smaller and in 1938 it had been separated from the State Police and SD and was finally dissolved.

to take up his old plans and form a State Protection Corps. He attempted to do everything in his power to establish this corps after the separation by the State Police and SD. He affiliated them into new organizations and turned them over to the Reichssicherheitshauptamt. The Reich Security Main Office too was supposed to be just a staff for a State Security Corps, which he extended to such an extent later on, that even the inner administration was taken over into the the State Security Corps. The SS Police, the SD Interior Administration were supposed to be taken over into the State Security Corps and the SS was supposed to be responsible for all this. silent about his plans in front of the Party, because the Party had legitimized the SD as a news agency, because the SD was a Party establishment above the SS but it had never been prepared to admit such a task in front of the State and to have it legitimized by the Party. was the news agency which had been legitimized by the SD. Party. It was attempted not to give up the SD as a news agency, because the Party had developed its own news agency and would have had the possibility to require officially this news service for itself, because the Reichsfuehrer SS did not offer them this intelligence service for their purposes. service from the Party in order to amalgamate these intelligence services within the State Security Corps, but this never came about. The Reich Security Main Office, as an institution, until the collapse, had never been an official agency, but officially the Security Police.

that is, the State Police and the Criminal Police, were superior to the Reich Security Main Office which remained an official authority. This Main Office, Security Police, was not dissolved, although in the Reich Security Main Office and State Police formed the office for the Amt IV and the Criminal Police formed Office V. Also the SD Main Office did not remain as an official Party institution, although internally the administration in Office I and Office II were combined with the State organization. This Reich Security Main Office, therefore, was an interior administration set-up of the Reichsfuehrer SS for the purpose of the State Protection Corps, but it never became an official agency within the State or Party. Thus, through a decree, it had been forbidden to use the letterhead of the Reich Security Main Office for any external correspondence. party from extending its own news service to the intelligence service on the one hand in order to use the SD as a function itself; in order to be able to show a facade to the Party as the other news agency was dissolved, which had been handled by the adversary and as this did not exist any longer within the SD, it was only a small beginning of the Lebensgebiet (domestic) News Service, that is Central Department II/2. As the Reichsfuehrer SS did not intend to extend this domestic news service and to develop it, and, also, Heydrich did not intend to reorganize the SD as much as it would have been necessary, the solution of an external facade was sufficient. This was an emergency solution, insofar as the staff which had been in the SD up to the time in the fight in 1936, 1937, 1938, had been used up by the deputy of Heydrich in the Reich Security Main Office. Therefore, there was no person who on this new basis could establish bearable relations with the State Police, but, as the SD was not regarded as a really serious matter by Himmler as by Heydrich, I remained in my main capacity as the manager of the Reichsgroup Commerce and Trade and in NOV, 1939 I was authorized to become the main manager officially, i.e. to takeover the complete organization of about 900,000 members and to represent them officially for all agencies of the Reich.

I remained Honorary Manager of the SD and I only temporarily worked in the SD and I saw no possibility thus to create a different picture from the one I left in 1938.

of a special confidence on the part of Himmler or Heydrich, was it? was prepared to take this over, because there was no serious intention of extending this office. your work done, the work you just talked about? ties and all the setbacks and defeats which happened later on. The SD Inland, the only purpose. as from September 1939, of the SD within the Reich remained illegal. The Party had not approved of this formation of the SD and it was not prepared to approve of it. Himmler himself did not legitimize this SD. He was not prepared to cover it, and he let it and its men down whenever they were attacked by any side; he did not defend it. Thus it was not possible to follow the plan of the administration of the Office III-D, and, too, it was in the interest of the German people, and it was not possible, as far as office personnel went, so that it could really solve the task which was Large extensive. This became evident very soon, especially in my own person. Although in September 1939 I became the manager of Ant III, in the beginning of November we had the first big crisis. Heydrich sent me on official trips with Himmler, and disputes arose, the consequence of which was that in Warsaw he informed me, through his chief- adjutant Karl Wolff, that I should leave his services, that an agreement between us about the work was no longer possible.

Ley complained to Himmler about me and asked for my dismissal because of criticism by the SD News Service against the development of the DAF and its economic enterprises. Himmler himself criticized a number of reports because he said they are defeatist and pessimistic. They came back torn up. In the negotiations with me Heydrich realized that I was chief of the Reich Group Commerce and Trade and was declared essential as such - that means I was obligated to serve in the Reich Group Commerce and Trade during the war and that he had thus almost completely lost his power over me. Thus, in 1940, the crisis with Heydrich started again in a very acute form, he asked me on various occasions to join the army. This was prevented because, meanwhile, the chief of the Reich Group Commerce and Trade is a soldier, and apart from taking over the management, I also took over the military end of Reich Group Trade, therefore, he asked for my dismissal from the Reich Group Trade.

THE PRESIDENT: May I interrupt, please. Witness, would you please indicate specifically just what were these differences between you and Himmler? Briefly, but specifically.

A (By the witness) The differences of opinion between Himmler and myself were differences of temperament and of politics. I now use his expression: I was the unbearable, humorless Prussian, an unsoldierly type, a defeatist, and intelligence monger.

THE PRESIDENT: Are we to understand that you mean by that, that you anticipated the defeat of Germany? many difficulties which might make the success of the war questionable

A (Continuing) What was most disagreeable to him was that in our administrative reports we wanted to bring about constitutional conditions under all circumstances.

We made it quite clear to him that if the order of the state was destroyed the war could not possibly be was. Now, I called Himmler a Bavarian because he called me a Prussian. He did not want orderly conditions. He was the representative of "Personalism". He tried to imitate Hitler in a small way. Hitler himself followed the type of policy so fatal to us, he had the habit of assigning tasks not to organizations but to individual persons, and if possible he assigned one and the same task to several individuals This was imitated by Himmler, although for him there was no reason whatsoever to fear that one of his functionaries would become too powerful, but he believed he could prevent his individual functionaries from becoming more powerful than Himmler himself. Practically the question of national culture dealt with in Case & Will be of interest to the Tribunal - these questions were handled by five different offices without making the conpetency for the individual tasks clear. When I suggested to Himmler to deal with these questions as an entity, this was, a further reason for his utterances which he made in Warsaw to the effect that I should be dismissed. Thus was his basic structure. He was a practical man; he was an opportunist of the day who was in no way prepared to deal with matters objectively and in an organized manner - rather, he liked to employ individual people day by day and to drop them again in the same manner. According to my opinion this Led had to destroy the whole order even in peacetime, and, of course, especially in as serious a war as Germany had to wage and that which separated me most from him was the willfulness of the individual decision not only in regard to the tasks he himself assigned but also in the legitimizing of people who were partly not qualified or so appointed that they could not exercise any leadership - it may even be that he appointed them perhaps for this reason - and on the other hand, by way of intervening in the continuous flow of events in an individual sphere, and thus nary very important matters were never brought to a satisfactory solution.

Expressed in one word, the difference between us was that I regarded politics objectively, and I wanted to make man the subject of politics While he regarded politics merely from a point of view of his own person and his tactical position, and he subordinated the facts to this tactical position.

If we judge the matter from the German point- of view, Himmler has not so much become a parasite of our own people for what he did, but for what he did not do. He had a power which has led to the terrible judgment of him and the SS, and in reality he did not exercise this power in Germany but he and his power were an empty shell, and in this we have the important element of his crime against humanity too, that through the police, through a unit like the SS, and later through his direction of the Ministry of the Interior, he would have had the power which would have enabled him to see the damage, and he would have had the possibility to remove this damage and to create a orderly conditions.

Q. Witness, you pointed out the difference between Himmler and yourself, How did it come about that in spite of this you returned to Berlin in June 1942, and took over Office III?

A. In June 1942, Heydrich was killed as a result of an attempt on his life. Himmler himself took over the leadership of the Reich Security Main Office with the clear intention of weakening it, because Heydrich was the only SS leader who had grown above his, Himmler's head. Technically, Heydrich was officially the Reich Protector and already on the official list of Reich authorities and ranked above Himmler. When Himmler was in charge of the Reich Security Main Office he weakened it in two important points. He took the economic authority from the Reich Security Main Office and transferred it to Pohl, the manager of the Economic Main Office, and he also took away the personnel authority of the RSHA and transferred it to the SS Personnel Main Office. Everyone who knows about offices and authorities knows what this weakening means. Himmler was not present at that time in Berlin, that is, the RSHA had no management, and no leadership. Thus he was forced to have the different offices working independently as the Office III, which, while I was in Russia, had no representative. I was, therefore, the only one of the management who, during his absence in Berlin, could direct the Office III. Furthermore, it was a tactical measure which, in my opinion, was to point up his weakening measure of the RSHA by taking away the Office Chief from the office and then instituting a person who had no authority, neither internally nor externally.

Q. What was the development of your relations with Himmler after this?

A. When I returned from Russia in July I was ordered to report to Himmler. In August he received me in his headquarters in a very friendly manner.

THE PRESIDENT: May we suspend just for a moment? There seems to be something wrong with the transmission here. We don't quite get all of it. I would like to speak to the interpreter here... BY DR. ASCHENAUER:

Q. We were just dealing with the question of the development of your relations with Himmler.

A. After my return from Russia I reported at the headquarters to report to Himmler about the situation of Office III. I was received in a very friendly manner, I was promoted to a Brigadefuehrer, and he told me that he planned to make me a Brigadier General of the Police. This friendly manner, of course, had its ulterior motives, because he went on with Heydrich's intentions by asking me to leave the Reich Group Trade and to become an official in the Reich Security Main Office. I explained to him that I had to ask him not to make me an official of the Reich Security Main Office, and not to make me a Brigadier General of the police, and why the Office III had remain an independent office under all circumstances, that is, it had to remain a party organization, and its members had to be party employees. I made it quite clear to him that the Party would never stand for a state organization taking over an information service in which the work of the Party would also be dealt with. I also made it clear to him that the SD could only tackle the task which he had talked about under the conditions that he would not give it the appearance of a police organization, because a police organization collected the most able experts of all departments, but these were not prepared to even give the impression that they were in any contact what so ever with the police.

Apart from that, through this connection between the state police and the SD, the most important task of the SD would be abandoned namely to be independent of any department, not to serve in any administrative or executive function, but to work without any individual responsibility and in no connection with other departments, but working completely independently because this, in itself, would justify the SD dealing with other subjects with its objective criticism, which, otherwise, would no longer be objective criticism and would be regarded as criticism of one department against another department. This, of course, led to a completely new disagreement. Himmler reproached me with very harsh words, and asked me to not try and teach him anything. He knew exactly what the purposes of the SS were, and what meaning the state protection corps had for him. I was dismissed in disgrace, and this was the second time in my activity of nine years in the SD that I had the chance to speak to Himmler himself. When Kaltenbrunner took over the office and became Himmler's successor in January 1943, Himmler spoke of the Office III and its chief with ironical words, and said they were the guards of the grail of National Socialism and of the SS who stood whining by the broken ideas and thought that now everything had been lost. Thus, we were publicly denounced as nuisances, pessimists, and defeatists. But it was only now that the actual crisis of the SD started because after Stalingrad conditions in Germany became more and more difficult. The more difficult these conditions in Germany became, the more critical, of course, became the reports of the SD, And now, Himmler was no longer prepared to approve of this activity on the part of the SD but, on the contrary, he used the complaints of his colleagues in the Reich Offices and pushed them on to the SD.

A. I'll give you a few examples. In the spring of 1943 Goebbels had tried through a theatrical attempt to gain the internal political power in Germany. It was the famous Sports Palace Speech, the declaration of a total war. Goebbels himself asked on that morning for a report of the SD on the effects of this declaration; and he got this report. In this report it was said that among the population of all Germany, in all districts, this declaration in the Sports Palace was disapproved of and disagreed with and that it was called a Punch and Judy show. This led to Goebbels' forbidding any spreading of these reports from all the Reich or part of the Reich. The reports from the Reich were these summaries of reports of all departments of the SD which were issued by us to all Reich departments and authorities and in the administrational practice of the Reich were the only source of information of the departments about difficulties of the remaining departments. With this the most important means of information of the SD was abolished and destroyed. that even Reichsminister Rammers and Goering, who, on pressure only, received these reports, were not in a position from their own reports which they received to overcome this defeatism. Gauleiter news service in the Party Chancellory had received these reports which I had issued against his power politics in Russia, He complained to the Reichsfuehrer SS, and the Reichsfuehrer SS wrote a letter to Kaltenbrunner in which he instructed him to dissolve the Office III and its subsidiary offices; to warn its chief; and to threaten him that if these unnecessary reports were not stopped, the SD, the news service, would be dissolved completely and the chief would be arrested. Bormann and Ley were the next people to take this direction. Ley immediately forbade the confidence men and the administrators of his office any collaboration with the SD. Because of the unjustified work of the SD, Bormann threatened to speak to the Fuehrer, which was to have the of effect that the Fuehrer would take the Chief of Office III where he belonged, and his people would be put to a more productive work.

also in 1944 forbade all Party authorities, all office chiefs in the offices down to the smallest menial clerk to have any activity within the Party. I mean the SD. This fight which Bormann put up remained in force until April 1945; and it was such a heavy fight that even Kaltenbrunner, who on the whole approved of my work, asked me urgently to stop the work on the Lebensgebiet (domestic) paper, or at least to camouflage the reports as reports of the adversary or sabotage reports. The reports of this kind regarding the leadership situation within the Reich which fell into the hands of the English showed the Allies that this manner of reporting was not given up in spite of all and in spite of the threats it was still possible to edit and issue the strongest reports about the leadership of the Reich, about the complete interior dissolution of leadership within the Reich, and about the collapse of the Luftwaffe and to submit them first by way of detour to the Fuehrer.

According to my knowlege that is the tragedy of the SD. These were the only reports which in the midst of the catastrophy were submitted to Hitler. I myself did not know Hitler personally nor did I over have the possibility of submitting a report to him or even of speaking to him.

Q. How did it come about that you were appointed into the Reich Economic Ministry?

A. My professional development was conditioned by my work in the Reich Group Commerce and Trade. This work gained importance and significance as it was meant for a group in the professional organization because the neighboring groups of the industries, the handicraft and banks and insurance companies and the transport groups did not have tasks which were handled by political people. They were not prepared to work in this very difficult sphere of the economical and armament ministries; and, as I entered this policy with political arguments, my own significance in economical policy was a much bigger one than can be understood from commerce and trade.

This was fortified by the fact that even in the economic ministry there were no political personalities who were prepared to discuss the differences with the Party, and the political person Speer, who was the confidence man of the Fuehrer. Thus in the years 1939 and 1940, from the Reich Group Commerce and Trade we were in charge of the economic, political situation; and we fought against all collectivistic and socialistic tendencies which were connected with the names Speer and Bormann.

Funk was in agreement with my activity. He especially approved of my work which I did in the face of the so-called self-responsibility of economy; that is, against the consequence that state authority as a state would vanish, and instead of the state economic leaders entered who took over the authority of the state, but at the same time they were competitors in competition with each other. Therefore, the possibility of corruption set in. But also it was one of the primary reasons for an economical loss of war because the competitor was no longer prepared to talk about its actual output to the competitor, and large masses of the people did not feel themselves confronted any longer with an objective state but with individual industrial beasts and monopolies. Therefore, the contrast between economy and the state became larger and larger. Funk approved of those reports of mine and therefore asked mo for my entry into the Reich Ministry of Economy. State in the Ministry of Economy. Himmler categorically refused my transfer into the Reich Ministry of Economy and for the very reason that caused Funk to ask for my transfer into the Reich Ministry of Economy. Himmler also recognized the significance of the economical development of the capitalism of monopoly as it had not been known until that date, But in a letter to mo he refused my own transfer into the Ministry of Economy, giving the reason that He did not want an 33 leader to be exposed in this economical fight against capitalism because this economical fight could not be waged within this whole world war.

After the Ministry of Economy collapsed in the summer of 1943, Funk again tried and through a tactful game succeeded in coming to a decision before Himmler; and Himmler now agreed.

Q. What was the effect of your last discussion with Himmler?

A. The relation with Himmler deteriorated even more; it had to deteriorate even more after this because my now duty in the Reich Ministry of Economy was added to the old crisis because what our predecessors had not been able to do now became our own task. We tried to force Pohl and his old Reich Economic Main Office to uncover the cards of the SS office; to play with open cards, as it were. We told him that we would not stand for the dissolution of this SS structure in Germany any more than we would in foreign countries. During the course of this discussion, together with Heider, the UnderSecretary of State in the Ministry of Economy, Himmler asked me to come to Berchtesgaden in the summer of 1944. He explained to us why this policy was not to be pursued by us in opposition to his economical activity. We refused any agreement; but he had already created conditions in Hungary by a deal with the Weiss-Konzern, securing the Weiss enterprise for the SS. As for us, the right was on our side in this case; and as normally he had nothing on us, he used the next occasion to begin a now correspondence of a very serious and criticizing, slanderous manner. The reason was the economical reform plan which I had drafted in the autumn of 1944. He intended in the economical field to establish an orderly administration. Himmler first agreed with that when Bormann objected because he was against any consideration on the part of the state and tried to prevent this; and furthermore he did not want a curtailment of the power and authority of the districts which he regarded as a measure against the Party.

Himmler now changed his opinion and agreed with Bormann. He disavowed my reform suggestions, which he said were academical reports, statements of an unnecessary intelligence.

But the end of our relations was of a different nature. In the last fortnight before the collapse I turned over my quarters in Flensburg and Ploen to Himmler. Only now did really serious discussions begin. Now he was more open to discussing matters with me. But even to say that these discussion were actually good discussions between Us-- only the end was more or less like the beginning because. at the end I tried to cause him not only to dissolve the Werwolf activities but also to dissolve the SS, and to go over and turn himself over to the Allies. In trying to cause him to do so, I put it t that he alone could explain to the Allies the tasks which he had given to the SS in a responsible manner, and he would have to take this responsibility. He refused and escaped without saying goodbye.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I think this would he the right moment for a recess, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I should like to ask a question. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. What was the date of this discussion with Himmler when the witness recommended the dissolution of the SS and the going over to the Allies?

A. That was the 9th of May, your Honor, 1945.

Q. Well, it was all over then, wasn't it?

A. No, it was not all over in a manner of speaking because the Flensburg government was in power, and the Allies had agreed to this so-called Flensburg government. This government was actually in power until the23rd of July 1945. They were officially in charge of Germany; of course, only in the manner of a district council. In this time between the 9th and the 23rd of May there were government reshuffles, as it were. Only on that date Himmler left the government as Reich Minister and as the commander of the subsidiary army. He had been of the belief that via his officer Schellenberg the Allies might negotiate with him and he might be used as a confidence man within Europe. From these conversations with Schellenberg via Bernadotte, the chief of the Red Cross in Sweden, with Churchill and the British government, Himmler really believed in it, until the day of his escape, even until the day before his death. Even after he escaped he sent me ordinance reports every day by which manner he tried to find out whether Schellenberg had returned from Sweden or whether Field Marshal Montgomery had answered the letter which he had sent on the 9th of May.

Q. But whoa you say that on the 9th of May you were discussing whether you should go over to the Allies, it's like the mouse discussing whether he should go over to the cat. You'd already surrendered.

A. Yes, but as I just stated, this small district of the Flensburg government, as it were, with the locality Muerwik and Gluecksbuerg, had not surrendered, because at that place there were official negotiations between the Control Commission of the Allies with the government and the chief of government of the so-called German Reich.

I may draw your attention to the fact, your Honor, that at the negotiations the Allies authorized Jodl, Keitel, and Friedeburg to remain the chiefs of government in this district Flensburg. This Chief of State with his government actually remained in force until the 23rd of May 1945.

Q. But you didn't seriously believe that you could successfully hold out against the combined Allied power after May 8, did you?

A. No, I think we must have misunderstood each other, your Honor, because I had only two intentions. One was to prevent SS units from being formed into underground movements. Therefore, I tried to cause Himmler to dissolve the SS officially and to order them to submit to fate, as it were; and as far as it would be possible to work, to work with the Allies positively. I also tried to cause Himmler to go over to the Allies and put himself at the disposal of the Allies so that he could tell them what the tasks were and of what nature they were, the tasks, that is, which he had given to the SS, and so that he could take the responsibility for them.

Q. Were you in daily contact with Himmler following May 8?

A. Yes.

Q. Until when?

A. At least until the 19th of May. I believe it must have been until the 21st, by ordinances. He had camouflaged himself and was living in a disguise under which he then was delivered into a prisoner of war camp.

Q. How did you submit yourself to the Allies?

A. When Himmler told me that I was afraid of myself and afraid for my own life then, I told him that I had already made up my mind to put myself at the disposal of the Allies and to take my own responsibility for what I had made of the SD. I could not leave it to anybody else to take responsibility for the activities of the SD; and although I had not been arrested when the rest of the government had been arrested in the afternoon, after asking three times for it, I achieved the status of being arrested.

Q. When was that? What date?

A. That was on the 23rd of May.

Q. Then they favored you by arresting you?

A. Yes, on the 23rd of May.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. ASCHENEUER:

May I continue now, Your Honor. Witness, did you report voluntarily for the campaign in Russia?

A.- No, on the contrary. Twice I was directed to go to Russia, and twice I refused. Then I got the third order which I could no longer evade.

Q.- Why didn't Heydrich from the beginning simply give orders, it was certainly not customary to negotiate with any of his subordinates?

A.- He was forced to insofar as I was on call for the Reich Group Commerce -- I had a note in my military passport which obligated me in case of war, to be at the disposal of the Reich Group Commerce, therefore, it was necessary that this war order be superseded by Heydrich's order. This happened for the third time by order, so that the Reich Group Trade revoked this order. Now I was conscripted for the Reichsfuehrer-SS, the Army district giving notice of a secret mission for the Reichsfuehrer-SS and that I had gone into a foreign country. After that I was made available for the Reich Security Main Office. Now I was given a note in my military passport for the Chief of the Security Police and SD.

Q.- Please explain the legal situation of your membership in the SD, when you were conscripted in 1941?

A.- In 1936, I joined the SD. When I was given the job of building up a critical military information service or office. When this job was taken away from me I asked for my dismissal. This was refused to me in 1938.

I immediately was able to leave from the main position which I held there. The situation with the Chief of Security Police and SD was as difficult as in the other SS organizations, because one did not enter into a contract. It was merely an unilateral loyalty agreement, and in addition to a simultaneous joining of the SS, a condition of military subordination existed. One was at the same time a military subordinate. My renewel application for dismissal in November 1939 was again refused. By now the position of the Chief of Security Police and SD had become even stronger. In the meantime through a decree the Security Police and SD were listed as being on a war emergency status, and in the renewed decree it was added that even an application to leave this organization would be forbidden. This application was even punishable. In this manner it was no longer possible after 1939, even to file an application to leave. This last remark applied to a general condition, since through the wish of the Reichsfuehrer-SS I had the possibility in November 1939 to make a renewed application. This is when I was conscripted for the Russian campaign in 1941, I was not a voluntary member of the SD, or of the SD. I was conscripted for the campaign.

Q.- How did the formation of the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommando come about? Were they part of the agencies of the offices of the Secret Police and the SD?

A.- The Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommando were neither agencies nor parts of the organization of the Office of the Reich Main Security Office. They were mobile units set up for one single purpose which were set up ad hoe for one certain employment. The members of the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommando were either conscripted or were taken from the members of the Security Police and SD. Or they were drafted to a large extent, for example, as drivers or interpreters, whereas, a large membership of the Einsatzgruppen, by order of Himmler, was made available by companies of Security Police and the Civil Police; these Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommando were no agencies or authorities but they were military units.

Q.- During the detailing of leaders and the men, were the purposes and the orders of the Einsatzgruppen made known to the men and the loaders when they were drafted?

A.- No, this was not done. The leaders and men were given an order to report to Deuben or Presch in Saxony. They did not get any information where they were to be committed, or what tasks they were supposed to do. Even after the units had been activated, the commanders and men did not know about it.

Q.- When was the area of operation made public?

A.- It was made known shortly before the units left for Russia, about three days before.

Q.- When was the order given for the luquidation of certain elements of the population in the USRR, and by whom was it handed over?

A.- As far as I recollect, this order was given at the same time when the area of operations was made known. In Pretsch the Chiefs of Offices I and IV, the then Obersturmbannfuehrer Streckenbach and Mueller, gave the order which had been issued by Himmler and Heydrich.

Q.- What was the wording of this order?

A.- This special order, for such it is, read as follows: That beyond our mission the Security Police and SD, the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommando had the mission to protect the rear of the troops by killing the Jews, Gypsies, Communist functionaries, active Communists, and all persons who would endanger the security.

Q.- What were your thoughts when you received this order of killings?

A.- The immediate feeling with me and with the other men was a general protest. Obersturmbannfuehrer Streckenbach listened to this pro test, and, even gave us a few different points which we could not know, but at the same time he told us that even himself had protested most strenuously against a similar order in the Polish campaign, but that Himmler had rebuked him just as severely by stating that this is a Fuehrer order, which must be carried out, in order to achieve the war aim of destroying communism for all times, therefore, this order is to be taken without hesitation.

Q.- Did you consider this order as correct?

A.- No, I did not. I did not consider it correct, because apart from the necessity of taking such measures, these measures would have moral consequences which are very damaging.

Q.- Did you know about plans or directives which had as their goal the extermination for racial and religious grounds?

A.- I expressly assure you that I neither knew of such plans nor was I called on to cooperate in any such plans. The Obergruppenfuehrer Barzelewsky testified during the big trial that the Reichsfuehrer-SS in a conference of all Obergruppenfuehrers made known that the goal was to exterminate thirty-million Slavs. I repeat that I was neither given such an order was even the slightest hint given to me that such plans or goals existed for the Russian campaign. This is not only true for the Slavs but this is also true for the Jews. I know that in the year of 1938, '39 and '40, no extermination plans existed, but on the contrary, with the aid of Heydrich, and by cooperation with Jewish organizations, immigarations from Germany and Austria were arranged; financial funds even were formed in order to help aid the poorer Jews to make this immigration possible.

In 1941 I personally helped in individual cases, where, for example, a representative of I.G. Farben called on me in order to overcome difficulties with the State Police. It was then their intention to let so-called bearers of secrets immigrate. Up to the very and I succeeded in giving such aid. Thus at the beginning of the Russian campaign I had no cause to assume that the execution order which we were given meant any sort of the beginning of an extermination or that any such extermination was planned or was to be carried out. During my time in Russia I sent a great number of reports to Chief of Security Police and SD in which I reported about the fine cooperation with the Russian population. They were never objected to. When Himmler was in Nikolajev in 1941 he neither made any reproaches about this, nor did he give me any other directives. I am rather convinced that where such an extermination policy was later carried out, it was not carried out by the order of the Central Agencies, but it was the work of individual people.

Q Did you give any thought to the legality of such a Fuehrer Order?

A Of course I did. I knew the history of Communism. From the theory of Lenin and Stalin and from the strategy and tactics of the Bolshevism World revolution, I knew that Bolshevism was to let no other rules prevail other than those which would further and promote its its aim. The practice of Bolshevism in the Russian Civil War, in the War with Finland, in the War with Poland, in the occupation of the Baltic Countries and Bassarabia, gave us the assurance and certainty that this was not only theory, but that this was carried out in practice, and in the same manner it therefore was to be expected that in this war no other laws would have any validity. This was true for the International Conventions which Russia officially denounced to the German government, as well as the international customs and usages of war, and, it was true because according to this same Communist Ideology the customs and usages could only develop between partners who were on the same ideological basis.

Just as the other class is the opponent internally who is to be destroyed by all means, according to the same ideology the other state which does not represent a Bolshevistic system is the external opponent which is to be destroyed, just as the class is to be destroyed internally. The rules in this are adjusted according to the state of emergency of the moment. In this respect it was clear to me that in this war against Bolshevism the German Reich found itself in a state of war emergency and of self-defense. What measures are to be taken in such a war to fight such an opponent on his own ground - to determine this could be only a matter to decide for the supreme leadership which waged this war for the life or death of its people; and, which, in my opinion, they certainly believed they waged also for Europe and even more for there was no doubt for us that the Four-Year Plan, as well as the events of 1938 and 1939, were nothing else for Hitler but the securing of the point of departure for this war against Bolshevism considered by him to be inevitable.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, when you refer to the Russian practice in the war against Poland, were you referring to the war of 1939 when Russia was your Ally?

A Yes. This has nothing to do with it, or does not change the subject, the fact that Russia was our Ally at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: No, I am just asking if that is the war you are referring to?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Well, did Germany at that time also have the same practices?

A I do not know that this happened to the same extent. That violations took place cannot be doubted.

THE PRESIDENT: You believe that it was not as widespread as it later developed in your war against Russia? Is that what I am led to believe?

BY DR. ASCHENAUER: given to him?

A This is not possible legally or actually. According to the general legal interpretation in Germany, not even a judge had the possibility of examining the legality of a law or an order. As little as an administrative official can examine the administrative edict of a supreme authority. But even actually it would have been presumptuous because in the position in which every one of the defendants found themselves, we did not have the possibility of actually judging the situation. It also corresponds to the moral concept which I have learned as an European tradition, that no subordinate can take it upon himself to examine the authority of the supreme commander and chief of state. He only faces his God and history.

Q Didn't Paragraph 47 of the Military Code give you an occasion to interpret this execution order differently? created to prevent excesses by individual officers or men leaves open the possibility to consider the supreme order of the Supreme Commander a crime. Apart from this, again according to continental concept, the Chief of State cannot commit a crime. regarded these exterminations in the East?

A This seems to have several reasons. For one thing, the deeds in the Hast were published as being isolated excesses done by the SS. One took them out of their context and made the SS alone responsible. In reality these executions in the East were a consequence of total wax which was inevitable if a philosophy of one country prevailed which had as its goal the destruction of every resistance against their conquering the world with their idea. This war was not finished. The Reparations for a possible conflict seem to tell me that whatever happened in the East is only a prelude.

Another point. It has been customary so far to judge executions during a war by various standards. The theorizing element which made the execution seem honorable was the fight of man against man. This has long been overcome. The individual war opponents try to exterminate as many enemies as possible by preserving their own strength. The fact that individual men killed civilians face to face is looked upon as terrible and is pictured as specially gruesome because the order was clearly given to kill these people. I cannot morally evaluate a deed any better, a deed which makes it possible, by pushing of a button, to kill a much larger number of cirilians, men, women and children, even to hurt them for generations than those deeds of individual people who for the same purpose, namely, to achieve the goal of the war, must shoot individual persons. I believe that the time will come to remove these moral differences in executions for the purposes of war I cannot see that political factors and political and economic conventions, which in their consequences cause the execution of and acts of violence against and misery for millions of people have done anything better morally only because the conscious consequences were not expressly made known to the population.

I believe, therefore, that when history has come to an end, that this conflict will not have started in 1941, but with the victory of Bolshevism in Russia, that then only can the judgment of history be made which will inform about various phases of this conflict. Fuehrer order which was given to you? that any other order but the goal of the war was present, namely, a momentary and permanent security of our own area, inopposition to that area, in which the belligerent conflict is taking place. execution was the part of a systematic program of genocide which had as its aim the destruction of foreign peoples and ethnic groups. Will you please comment on this?

A I did not have any occasion to assume any such plan. I assure you that I neither participated in plans nor did I see any preparation for such plans which would have let me assume that such a plan existed. What was told to us was our security and those persons who were assumed to be endangering the security were designated as such. objective prerequisite that the executions of populations according to the Fuehrer order were re necessary?

the propaganda of Goebbels was not clearly enough delineated. I was convinced that this order, in order to grin its ends internally, had torn many millions from their families, when dispossessing the Kulaks had taken the adult population away three tines from rural districts, and that the same thing was true of the other states. This state would have even less consideration for a foreign population. relation to the Bolshevist authorities, was a very, very snail number, much lower than the Jews who occupied leading positions. The Prosecution has submitted a report from my Einsatzgruppe. In this report in Enclosure No. 2 it explained the situation of Jewry in the Crimea. Unfortunately this enclosure is not available. It would have shown that in the Crimea, for example, up to ninety percent of the administrative and leading authoritative positions were occupied by Jews. The information service in the sane field, conversations with innumerable Ukrainians and Russians and Tartars, and the documents which the Prosecution submitted show that this was not a sporadic happening in the Crimea. For us it was obvious that Jewry in Bolshevist Russia actually played a disproportionately important role.

Three times I was present during executions. Every tine I found the sane facts which I considered with great respect, that the Jews who were executed went to their death singing the International and hailing Stalin, that the Communist functionaries and the active leaders of the Communists in the occupied area of Russia posed an actual continuous danger for the German occupation which the documents of the Prosecution has shown.

of Stalin for ruthless partisan warfare would be followed without any reservation. Orally and in written from the Bolshevists have attested enthusiastically to the fact that this partisan warfare was not only waged by the Communist Party and not only by the Communist functionaries, hut as Stalin requested, it was waged by the population, by peasants, by workers, men, women and children. This same literature is proud of the fact that it was waged with great treachery, which the call of Stalin evoked in order to wage this war successfully. Thus our experiences in Russia were a definite confirmation of the Bolshevist theory and of the practice as we had learned about it before.

Q. What orders did you give for the security of the rear area in regard to killing of civilians?

A. Before I testify to the various facts, I would like to say the following: The men if my group who are under indictment here were under my military command. If they had not executed the orders which they were given they would have been called to account for it by me. If they had refused to execute the orders they would have had to he called to account for it by me. There could he no doubt about it. Whoever refused anything in the front lines would have met immediate death. If the refusal would have come about in any other way a court martial would have brought about the same consequences. The jurisdiction of courts-martial was great, but the sentences if the SS were gruesome. The orders for the executions in the East given in Pretzsch, went to all Einsatzgruppen commanders or Einsatzkommando leaders who went along during the beginning of the Russian campaign. They were never revoked. Thus they were valid for the entire Russian campaign as long as there were Einsatzgruppen. Thus it was, therefore, unnecessary at any time to give another order of initiative. Therefore, I did not give any general order of initiative and did not give any individual order to kill people. I emphasize this, even though I was told in England two and a half years ago that the Russians had found a written order. My mission was to see to it that this general order for executions would, be carried out as humanly as conditions would permit, Therefore, I Merely gave orders for the manner of carrying out these executions.

Q. What were these orders?

A. These orders had as their purpose to make it as easy as possible for the unfortunate victim and to prevent that the brutality of the men would lead to inevitable excesses. Thus I directed first that only so many victims would be brought to the place of execution as the execution commandos could handle. Any individual action by any individual man was forbidden. The Einsatzkommandos shot in a military manner only upon orders. It was strictly ordered to avoid any mistreatment, undressing was not permitted. The taking of any personal possessions was not permitted. Publicity was not permitted, and at the very moment when it was noted that a man had experienced joy in carrying out these executions it was ordered that this man may never participate in any more executions. The men could not report voluntarily, they were ordered.

Q. What did you do to prevent a wide interpretation of these orders?

A. It was forbidden that the commandos undertake any executions outside of the territory occupied by the German Army. This became necessary in Czernowiz. This was especially necessary after 10,000 Roumanians had been driven into the German area of occupation, and it became acute for Odessa, when the Roumanians tried to carry out executions beyond our orders. The commandos had the order during the execution of Communists to execute only these persons who by their proved deeds and conduct do definitely represent a danger to security. A family was never seized, neither by a high functionary nor by a commissar nor by any other person. If, on the other hand, it was said that children were executed at Kertsch this was done without any connection to the Einsatzkommando there.

Q. Why did you not prevent the liquidations?

A. Even if I used the most severe standard in judging this I had as little possibility as any of the co-defendants here to prevent this order.

There was only one thing, a senseless martyrdom through suicide, senseless because this would not have changed anything in the execution A this order, for this order was not an order of the SS, it was an order of the Supreme Commander-in-Chief and the Chief of State. it was not only carried out by Himmler or Heydrich. The Army had to carry it out too, the Supreme Command of the Army as veil as the commanders in the East and Southeast who were the superior corianders for the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos. If I could imagine a theoretical possibility, then there was only the refusal on the part of those persons who were in the uppermost hierarchy and could appeal to the Supreme Commander and Chief of State, because they had the only possibility of getting access to him. They were, after all, the highest bearers of responsibility in the theater of operations.

THE PRESIDENT: May I ask a question, Dr. Aschenauer 7 the East, that is of the Wehrmacht, also had orders to carry out this program of execution?

THE WITNESS: I know that the Supreme Command gave the Supreme Commanders for the Eastern Campaign who had assembled on the 30th of March, not only information about the measures planned, but also directives to support the execution of these measures. The fact that SS and Police units were used for these executions had only one reason, namely that there was no guarantee for a systematic execution of these orders in the Army troops but that one expected demoralization if Army troops would be used, AS the war progressed in the Southeast this principle was abandoned.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you say that the Army commander not only countenanced this program of executions but lent their active support to it?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is what I want to say. If I my give you two examples for that, the executions in Simferopol by the Einsatzgruppe 11-B were executed on the order of the Army, and the Army supplied the trucks and the gasoline and the drivers in order to bring the Jews to the places of execution. The arrests of hostages were expressly carried out by order of the supreme commander of my army. He did not agree with the executions of those hostages, because the numberof executions did not seem high enough to him and afterwards he told Seibert, the defendant here, to tell me that He himself would henceforth carry out the appropriate number of executions. from this order. sense, because in agreement with the army, we had excluded a large number of Jews, the farmers, from the executions. When the Reichsfuehrer SS was in Nikolajew on the 4th or 5th of October, I was reproached for this measure and he ordered that henceforth, even against the will of the army, the executions should take place asplanned. assembled all available commanders of my Einsatzgruppe. The Reichsfuehrer addressed these men and repeated the strict ordered to kill all those groups which I had designated. He added that he alone would carry the responsibility, as far as accounting to the Fuehrer was concerned. None of the non would boar any responsibility, but He demanded the execution of this order, even though he knew how harsh these measures were. pointed out the inhuman burden which was being imposed on the men in killing all these civilians. I didn't even get an answer.

order? and the possibility of appealing to a higher authority, but I had neither of them. this order by sickness? myself as an individual person who only could think and act responsibly for himself. After I had once become Chief of the Einsatzgruppe, I felt responsible for the 500 men of this group. By simulating illness, I could have evaded the mission, but I would have betrayed my men if I had left this command. I could not leave this task and I would not have been convinced that my successor would care for his men in the same manner as I did. I considered this which I was able to do for my men - despite everything, I considered this duty and I shall consider it today as much more valuable than the cheap applause which I could have won if I had at that time betrayed my men by simulating illness.

Q Did you issue orders of execution? executions?

A It is in three points. As far as the transportation conditions permitted, I convinced myself before the large executions whether measures had been taken at the place of execution, which would make possible the conditions I set down for these executions. ordered that other distant Kommandos be detailed to support that Kommando which had to carry out an execution, and through my men to carry out unexpected inspections during these executions, I wanted to make sure in that way whether my orders were being carried out about the manner of execution.

was, in the first place to follow the German Army into the Eastern territories and to kill Jews, Gypsies, political functionaries, communists, and other elements of the civilian population which were considered racially inferior or politically unwanted. Will you please comment on this?

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. That is a rather large question and it takes up, perhaps, another phase of the indictment. Suppose we have our recessnow? Recessfor fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

I guaranteed this wage, even to the Rumanian authorities. Fourth, cultural places were restored - that is, the population was supported in restoring the cultural centers and they were inspired to take up a new cultural life. It is not for me now to describe or disucss the success which this had with the populations of such places. I can only state that because of these measures the population was on our side, and they themselves reported any disturbances which might happen in these territories. Therefore, by this positive winning over of the population, the security of the territory internally could be guaranteed, and actually, in our territory a partisan resistance movement did not come into existence, but it was formed by external elements and was artificially extended. to the army about the atmosphere within the population, the reaction of the population to German measures, and what disturbances and damages happened in the area on the part of the Germans. In this manner plebiscites could be arranged which were useful to the population and which saved us any police measures. The situation in the Crimea was much more difficult, although I was there a longer time than any where else at a stretch, and I had the possibility to prepare political measures. Even here the increase of my positive measures succeeded in establishing a sort of confidence relationship between the population and the SD agencies. When, in January 1942, the danger arose that we would lose the Crimea, the Tartars, also the Ukrainians, voluntarily put themselves at our disposal for military service. The army left it up to me to deal with the political situa tion in the Crimea.

At that time I could not accept the Ukrainians into the army, but the Tartars put 10% of their male population at my disposal within three weeks, absolutely voluntarily. Here, selfgovernment and self-administration was granted to all parts of the population that is, those units, those communities with a Ukrainian majority had a Ukrainian mayor; the Tartars got a Tartar for their mayor; the Greeks got a Greek; and the Great Russians got a Great Russian. These measures were extended in winter as a support when the danger of famine arose in the south. Thus, the actual security task was permanently a positive one and was to be achieved by positive measures.

Q Did the combatting of armed bands belong to your sphere?

A No, that was not within my sphere. But, in the Crimea - especially, after repeated landings of the Russians in Feodosia, Kersch and Eupatoria from the North, East and the West, with the ultimate aim of the Jaila Mountains, the whole Crimea was systematically filled with enemy agents and spies and those strongly executive tasks, as, for instance, band intelligence, became an essential task which was assigned to us by the army. To my great regret the forces of the army in the Crimea were so small that for months the Commando 10b and parts of the Commando 11b had to be assigned to fight armed bands. This assignment, as well as the combatting of armed bands, was under the army command, that is, the command of the various army units which held the front sectors. We ourselves were only subordinates and were outside our actual field of activities. this activity of the Einsatzkommandos? the Einsatzgruppe very small. I had merely one, or possibly two, departmental experts, and one adjutant, the defendant Schubert, who was also the manager of the business office. That was my whole staff, who had to deal with the matters.

I had to be in the headquarters of the army, the local headquarters, that is, in order to establish and guarantee the permanent contact between the Einsatzgruppe end the Army; I was actually the point of contact between the army and the Einsatzkommandos. My main task was to carry out the orders of the chief of the SD, the Security Police end the too frequent orders of the army, and to adjust them, and to take care that the Einsatzkommandos, on the basis of the general situation in an area, were committed in the right tactical manner. Thus, for instance, we had to hunt down saboteurs, enemy agents, or make out intelligence reports, or gather intelligence about partisans, or whatever the situation required.

Q I now turn to the documents. I note the Document Books I, II-A, II-B, II-C, II-D and III-D. I don't know whether the Prosecution had these document books at their disposal at present.

MR. WALTON: While the document books mentioned by the defense are not all here I don't think that will hamper Dr. Aschenauer at all - I think we can take enough notes, and enough notes appear in the record for our own purposes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. ASCHENAUER:

Q My first question on this subject: Introducing the evidence against the members of the Einsatzgruppe D, the Prosecution under Exhibit 149 produced document No. 2661, Volume III*D, and they have remarked that the operation and situation report No. 10 concerning activities of the Einsatzgruppe D from the last until the 28th of February 1942, in which it is shown that all Jewish areas in the Eastern territories are to be cleaned, as it were, by transporting the Jews to Ghettos and those who resisted the German regulation would be shot. Jews would also be shot in order to prevent the spreading of epidemics. Would you comment on this, witness?

insofar as it is not a report from the Einsatzgruppe D, because in this document, independently from individual reports of the group, collective notes - summaries, as it were - reports which were made Independently of the original reports. Only from the location signs can one conclude which territory is meant for the individual Einsatzgruppen. Of Einsatzgruppe D there is only one small remark three of four times in this lengthy document, the content of which is quite independent from the charge of the Prosecution, This paragraph is mentioned twice. The error seems to me based on the fact that the Prosecution confuses the term "Eastern Territory" - "Ostland", Evidently it takes the term "Ostland" to mean the whole of Russia, while in reality "Eastern territory" in German usage, is an administrative term by which the three Baltic countries are meant - Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, and the charge of the Prosecution against Einsatzgruppe D is the content of what is being reported from this Eastern territory. It is your own affidavit of 5 November 1945, and there it says:

"In the course of the year while I was leader of the Einsatzgruppe D they liquidated", (the Einsatzgruppe, that is), "90,000 men, women and children."

What do you mean by "approximately"?

COURT II-A CASE IX Einsatzgruppen for two and a half years now; and during all that time I have always tried to avoid naming figures because the numbers of executions I do not actually know.

I don't know anyhow today. I know under what conditions these sentences were signed by me. It is an affidavit which was chosen from a number of ten or twelve. Even then, that "approximately meant that I did not actually know. I can assure the Tribunal that in any oral remarks I might have made during these interrogations, I avoided as long as I could naming any figures whatsoever. If, of course, the figure 90,000 was named by me, I always added that of this, fifteen to twenty per cent are double countings. That is on the basis of my own experiences. I do not know any longer how I could have remembered the number of just 90,000 because I did not keep a register of these figures. The "approximately" must have meant that I was not certain. evident--and my own men reproached me for it--that I was wrong in naming the figure 90,000. It is evident that I mentioned this number 90,000 by adding a number of other figures. I do not mention this in order to excuse myself as I an perfectly convinced that it does not matter for the actual facts whether it was 40,000 or 90,000. But I mention this for the reason that, in the situation in which we are today, politically speaking, Fibures are being dealt with in an irresponsible manner. The material and the value of man seems to become so unimportant that the play with millions does not seen to be of any particular importance either. Herr Auerbach mentions the figure of 11,000,000 in relation to Germany. A very small part of these millions have ever COURT II-A CASE IX seen a concentration camp.

The IMT named the number 2,000,000 for elimination in the Eastern territories. The prosecution in this trial is slightly more modest and only mentions the number of 1,000,000. It is not for nothing that the prosecution deals with only a small portion of time concerning the activities in the Eastern territories because after this period there were no activities on the part of the Einsatzgruppen. prosecution in these documents, figures occur up to 46,000. I must now state solemnly that in the Reich Security Main Office, Heydrich, Mueller, and Streckenbach, and all the others who knew about these matters, intentionally exaggerated and invented the numbers of Einsatzgruppen A,B and C. By that, B, I mean during the period of NEBE. I am convinced that these figures, which, if I add the numbers in the documents, are not even half of what the prosecution charges me with, are exaggerated by about twice as much. I believe that it is quite evident that these figures should be compared with others and looked upon as the Soviet, the Bolshevist figures. Compare these figures, as I say, with the numbers of civilian population figures which for the same reasons even from other motives, perhaps, but in an inhumane manner were murdered because this is what happened while I was in command of the Einsatzgruppen.

Q. Witness, you speak of exaggeration and double counting. Do you refer, when you maintain that, to Exhibit 95, Document Number 3,148, Volume II, Page 57, of the 20th of September, 1941, and Exhibit 96, Document Number 3,147?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, I have been conducting a campaign, very unsuccessfully up to this moment, of COURT II-A CASE IX trying to get defense counsel and the prosecution counsel, when referring to an exhibit to give us the largest unit first--the book number, the page, the exhibit, the date, then the paragraph.

But you start off with the paragraph, and it's very difficult.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I shall try, your Honor, to comply with your wish.

Q. In maintaining this, do you refer to Volume II-D, Exhibit Number 95, Document Number 3,148, in the German Document Book Page 57; and Document Book II-D, Exhibit 96, Document Number 3,147; furthermore, to Document Book II-C, Exhibit 76, Document Number 3,137; furthermore, Volume II-D, Exhibit 85, Document Number 3,159? In these documents there are numbers which I would like you to comment on.

A. I should like to contest this figure, the figure mentioned in Volume II-C, Page 49 of the German text. There it says that from the 16th of September until 30 September, 22,000 Jews and Communists were executed and that the total figure is 35,000. In Document Book II-D, German text Page 57, it says, "Under Einsatzgruppe D," Location Kikerino, Work commandos of this area freed of Jews. From 19 August to 25 September 8,890 Jews and Communists were executed. Total number, 17,315." There's a question mark. In the next sentence it says, "At the moment the Jewish question is being solved in Nikolajew and Cherson. In each case approximately 5,000 Jews were comprenended." This operational situation-report is from the 20th of September. On the next page, Document 3,147, the operational situation-report from the 26th of September 1941, There under "Einsatzgruppe A the Location of Kikerino is stated. I do not know whether that was an actual garrison of the Einsatzgruppe A, but at any rate COURT II-A CASE IX I know that this Location was never a location of the Einsatzgruppe D. In this operational-situation report almost Literally under Einsatzgruppe D with the location of Nikolajew the same subjects are mentioned as in the operational situation report of 20th of September.

were submitting as documentary evidence the reports of activities of Einsatzgruppen A and D; but actually up to this moment, apart from the reports of the Einsatzgruppen to the army, they have submitted no original reports. These two subsequent operational-situation-reports, which could be controlled and checked up on very easily in Berlin, show very clearly how far the original reports are removed from the contents of these operational-Situationreports. It is my opinion that from the operationalsituation-reports not a single sentence can be identified with a sentence of an original report from the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommandoes, but, on the contrary, as becomes evident from these two reports, the operational situation reports are made up from the original reports, and they are full of mistakes and are not compiled with the view point to pass on actual reports.

October, in Document Book II-D, on page 60, Document II-D, page 60, it says, "During the time of report, the solution of the Jewish question was dealt with especially in the territory east of the Dnjeper River; the territories newly occupied by the commandos here freed of Jews". Then it says, "including those territories east of the Dnjeper River 4897 Jews and 46 Communists were executed". This figure is first of all outside the report of the tine of 26 September and secondly, it states the actual figure on which existed as to this territory at the time it becomes evident that the report of 22 October cannot be correct, under any circumstances. It can only here be an addition, or in using the reports from other Einsatzgruppen. There must be another exhibit, tie number of which I don't remember, from which this becomes quite evident, namely the fact from the operational situation report of the beginning of November. May I have this. That must be the operational report No. 129 of 15 November 1944, Exh. 85 in Document Book II-D, on page 21. Here approximately 4 weeks later on page 21 of the German version, this report of Einsatzgruppen D in that period reports 11,000 Jews were executed. It must be noted that in situation report 5 November, although in October, the total num ber had been mentioned as 40,000, the situation report of November states there are 31,000.

Here is a contradiction which cannot be clarified from the documents which only prove the questionability of the evidence of these documents, not only regarding these figures but these individual reports in these documents.

Q I further offer the documents in Volume II-B, Exhibit No. 58, Document 2837, in the German Document Book, it is on page 6. It is an operational situation report from the 29 August 1941. Furthermore, in Document Book II-D, Exhibit 89, Document No. 2943, German Document Book on page 37; also from Document Book III-D, Exhibit 154, Document No. 2840, in the German Document Book page 46; would you comment on the statements in these documents concerning other statements, whether they contradict each other?

A May I put a question? I think there is a mistake here in this document. This is Document Book II-B, page 6, Exhibit No. 58, which is Document No. 2837. I think it ought to say 57.

Q It should he operational situation report of 29 August?

A There is something missing. (Counsel and defendant consulting document at witness dock) I would like to point out two facts. On one occasion it says in the Document 2837, Document Book II-B, page 8 of the German text that in Mogilaw-Podolsk approximately 27,500 Jews were transported to the Rumanian territory, although in the report of 26 August it says that in the immediate vicinity of Mogilaw there were approximately 7,000 Jews who until the time the official duties were taken over were sent from Rumanian into this territory. A Jewish transport of about 6,000 people was in spite of protest by the Rumanian Bridge-Commandant transported into the Eastern territory at this time. Even if I add these 6,000 to the 7,000 and I do not think they are contained in this 7,000, then I arrive at the result of the number of 13,000 and this is the number which I remember. But here it states until the taking over of office from the reports of 7 August, it became evident that at that time the Einsatzkommando X-B, location at Mogilaw-Podolsk and I quote:

"Prevents the Jewish transport Into territory, taken over by the Germans." This, therefore, is quite Unlikely that when during the period of report of 7 August a transport which could only he carried out over two bridges end was stopped, and, on 26 August, 7,000 Jews should have gone from the Rumanian territory into the German territory; that then 2 days later 27,000 could have been there to be driven back.

submitted reports are. The same is valid for Document 2837, Page 8, where it says that in Chernowitzzat the time of the report through large-scale actions which took place in the Eastern territories some 3,000 Jews and 34 Communists were liquidated. For from the operational report of the 7th of August, it becomes evident - that is on Page 38 that the location of Kommando 10-B was Mogilev Podolsk and no longer Chernovitz, The figures under Chernovitz I shall deal with in another document.

Q. I now submit from Volume II-D, Exhibit 94, Document No. 2841. That is the page of the German boo, Page 95. The Prosecution charges you that the Einsatzkommando 12 in Babtschinzy had murdered 94 Jews.

A. From the text of the document itself it becomes evident that these Jews were executed as a counter-measure for the facts which are mentioned in this document itself. I quote verbally; "Only in Babtschinzy resistance was partially shown toward an orderly harvesting caused at the instigation of Jewish inhabitants and such Jews, who had only come to this territory a few months ago. By spying on the population, the Jews had already created a basis for numerous deportations to Siberia."

Q. I now take Document Book III-D, Exhibit 153, Document No. 4538. It is in the German Document Book, Page 36. The Prosecution charges that the Einsatzgruppe D from their own initiative founded a ghetto and used the Jews for executive works.

A. From the document itself the contrary becomes evident. I quote literally. "On the initiative of the Einsatzkommando the Rumanian town-commander in the old city erected a Jewish ghetto." The subsequent report that from this Ghetto Jews were assigned to working groups is a logical measure, which was taken by the town commander of Rumania who wasin charge of the administration of the Ghetto.

Q. In the same volume there is Exhibit 155, which is Document No. 641 which I submit to you. It is Page 40 of the German Document Book, and it says the following. The Prosecution wants to prove from this document that the sub-units of Einsatzgruppe D carried out conscientiously the execution orders.

A. This document is one ox the very few which are a true copy of the original report. However it does not become evident from this that the Prosecution wants to prove.

On page 43 it says verbally, "also otherwise, "all executions which were ordered by me and carried out by me," that is the man who wrote the letter, the report, "were carried out in the manner as ordered by Einsatzgruppe D, "which is exactly the contrary of what the prosecution claims. But this document is very interesting otherwise on the following page and that is in a double manner. First the Army here gives an instruction to the Einsatzgruppe D which is signed by the Ic AO "e", that means Riesen, who is a major on the general staff. This is countersigned by "RU". That must have been a mistake. It probably should read "RA". That is Major Rank, the superior, the superior of the major. In this it says that the Einsatzkommando of the Security Police with the Twenty-Second Infantry Division is within the combat front of the division-- That is in a condition in which all commandos or part commandos of the Einsatzgruppe found themselves. It says verbally, and I quote: "It is to be expected that all measures, especially public executions in the town of Genitschesk for setting up and determing, etc. of a Ukrainian protection unit, etc., will be taken after the division I-C, as proved, previously agreed to it." This document speaks for itself and I do not have to comment on it, but as the document is now being dealt with I should like to deal with another point of the document which is not being under debate yet. Although at that time I had the highest rank of a Standartenfuehrer, and as it is not customary in the Army, in particular as to public executions that an order to another unit should be signed by a man who is inferior or at least not as high as the receiver in his rank, the major here writes to the chief of the Einsatzgruppe who is a Standartenfuehrer, which incidently at that time had the even higher rank of an Oberfuehrer.

THE PRESIDENT: I think this may be a convenient point at which to recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

America, against Otto Ohlendorf, et al., de 9 October 1947, 0930-1650.

Justice Musmanno,

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-A.

The Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Before we begin the morning proceedings, and the testimoney of the defendant Ohlendorf, I should like to make this short announcement. Dr. Aschenauer has asked upon the termination of todays session that he be allowed a very brief time in which to prepare the final part of his case in behalf of his client. He asked for a recess until Monday noon. We will grant the request, and I would like to add that whatever time Dr. Aschenauer is permitted naturally goes to the benefit of all counsel, so that you also can be working on the preparation of your individual cases. So instead of reconvening Monday afternoon, we will allow the entire day of Monday with the understanding that on the following Saturday, not this Saturday, next Saturday after this week end, we will hold a session to make up for little of the time we will have lost. So that, when we complete todays proceedings, at such time as Dr. Aschenauer feels he has done all he cares to do today in connection with his case, we will then recess until next Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, may I proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. ASCHENAUER:

Q. I take Document Book II-C, and I submit to you, witness, Exhibit 71, Document No. 2952, that would be in the German Document Book at page 18, wherein the Prosecution charges that Kommando-XII had murdered 45 Jews. According to this document what was the real state of affairs?

A. In this document book it shows literally that these 45 Jews had been disposed of because they were not following police measures, and because they had attacked a German Military Unit.

This, therefore, was a counter measure.

Q. Document Book II-D, I show you now Exhibit 89, Document No. 2948, in the German Document Book, from pages 28 to 39, and the document has been introduced by the Prosecution in order to prove the murdering of 561 Jews?

A. The same state of affairs is valid for that document as for the last one, which says literally here, because participation in sabotage acts 351 and 400 counter measure for shooting at the German Medical carriages, and other such acts.

Q. I have the same document book II-D, and I show you the following three documents. First, Exhibit 92, Document No. 587, Exhibit 91, Document No. 4135, Exhibit 80, Document No. 2950; page number would be in the German Document Book page 40 to 48. Based on these documents the Prosecution is going to prove that the Einsatzkommando X-3 at the time of the report had been in Czernowita, and had murdered 16 Communists, and 682 Jews in Czernowitz, and 150 in the vicinity of Chotin. Apart from that caused the liquidation of 500 people in Znernowitz; I show you these three documents and I will ask you to clarify those questions in these documents?

A. Could you repeat the document numbers, please?

Q. Document Nos. are 587, on page 48 of the German Book, and the next is Document 4135, which is on page 43, and then document No. 2950, on page 40?

A. These documents contain two reports over the period of reporting, beginning with the 9th of July, the other one 14th of July and the last one of the first of August. If you compare these three documents it becomes evident that there is a strong contradiction between them, although it is the same period of reporting. Document No. 487 is a report of the Einsatzkommando 10-B to the Army Group South. Here it says, among other things, from the time of report from the beginning of July a major raid was carried through in the course of which the Jewish leadership could be apprehended almost completely.

In Document 4135 on page 46 of the German Text, it says, "In Rumania" prison in Czernowitz a large number of Jewish lower class population , hardly any intelligencia. There were no members of the Heeresgruppe Sued within the next stage. There was a further explanation. I can give a further explanation here. Those that were caught here in one place, those that are caught here and in the other place they said, no Jews are imprisoned. I also want to add that Kommando 10-3 had no prison of its own. The same applies for a further statement which we find in document, No. 5871, of the following date, which was 9 July, in which it says that 100 Communists were shot by the Kommando, but were executed together with Jews by the Rumanian Army Unit, and by police, and that the leading Jews were shot during the course of 8 and 9 July. In the Report No. 3145 on 14 July, which was the same period there are no reports about shootings. In the report of 1 August, 1200 people arrested are being talked about, and of more than 600 people having been shot. Although in this report of 14 July, it already states that Kommando 10-3 was in charge of executing the task in Czeriwitz, and would take three to four days for it. From my own knowledge the conditions in Czernowitz itself was contrary to these documents as stated in the about Czernowitz, when the following situation prevailed: In Czernowitz the general liquidation of Jews was prohibited, because Czernowitz was Rumanian territory. Actually the Jewish leading persons here not arrested, and as I remember, was never arrested. On the contrary the Rumanians made business with these Jews, and these Jews were in a position to make politics against the occupying forces, therefore, I ordered measures to be taken such as:

That these people should be arrested, and they should he interfered with. When in the course of these reports I myself went to Czernowitz, and I found out first of all who was the leader of the Kommando who was very much excited, because the Rumanians, that is the militia, in an unexplicable mannder had carried out liquidations. First of all, it was protested strongly against these liquidations, and for these very reasons had refused the request of the Rumanians to take part in these liquidations. The only interesting part of these reports is that Document 587, of 9 July, shows that the Army Group South in Czernowitz, which was being informed by members of the Army from the very beginning is informed about the liquidation of Jews from the very beginning. For this report was sent directly to the Army by the command and the activity of this Kommando has not been caused by myself, as this Kommando had already been cut away from the Army, before I myself entered this territory in Rumania. Furthermore, according to my own experience in Czernowitz, I think these arrests as well as the liquidation which is mentioned in this report, a tactical report of success which was meat for the sake of the Army, and I think it has not been submitted to me by Bersterer, the Kommando-Leader, for this very reason, because I knew that the content was not right. It says in Document 4135, amongst other things , which is on page 45 of the German text, the Einsatzgruppen Chief had a free hand over the assignment of Kommando. That is said to be the result of my discussions with General von Schobert, who was commander-in-chief of the XIth Army; in fact, however, the reception I got from General von Schobert was his showing a cold shoulder to me, as it were, and it was certainly of no value to me, General von Schobert did not even think it necessary to receive me in his office, but he passed me in the passage, after I had been kept waiting for some time, and only spoke to me while passing. Furthermore, just a few days after this report we had a few disagreements with the Army, because contrary to the free hand which it says here, the Army kept issuing orders in this district disregarding my own order in that territory under their command without informing me before hand.

It was at this time that the Army tried to go over my hand completely, and to treat the Einsatzkommandos as they would treat their own units. Therefore, either the statement in this document is only a tactical report or it has been taken from another report.

Q. If I how take Document Book III-D and Exhibit 158, Document No. 2859, German page No. 60 and submit it to you, witness, I take from this document the text which is an affidavit of the defendant Willy Weibert, and I quote: "I never had the order to segregate Communists in the Russian prisoner-of-war camps; however, the fact is known to me that members of the Security Police, and of the SD received the order to interrogate camp inmates in these camps, and to carry out executive measures." I would like you to comment on this; I would like to ask you were such Kommando instituted in your field of command by Willy Seibert and were prisoner-of-war camps actually combed?

Document No. 2422, which is on page 93 of the German book. In this document a distribution list is shown about the Kommandos which should he instituted in the prisoner of war camps, Stalag and Dulag by Chief of the Sipo and the Security Police. In Enclosure 1, which is on page 101 it says: "Every week the leaders of the special Kommandos report to the chief of their own Einsatzgruppen and special forces." If I go on quoting from page 102 I find the following part: "The chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen decide about executive proposals on their own responsibility and they pass on the orders to their Sonderkommandos (to the special Kommando troops)". If we nay just put these two together, these are the two most important parts of the document. Please comment on this. such camps, in which actually persons were singled out. The reason for this might he that our field of activity and our quarters were in the immediate front and we could not institute camps for any length of time. Anyhow, I do not remember that such Kommandos were ever put into force, but I know for certain that I was never submitted a list of people who were singled out and that I never accepted or refused a list of the kind that is mentioned in this document. I have never seen such lists.

Q In Document Book, Volume I, there is Exhibit No. 11.It is Document EC-307/1. It is page 48 of the German documents. I am showing you this document and I am asking you whether the decree mentioned in this was ever handed over to you? I was never handed this decree nor did I ever find out about the content of this. I should like to add that from the wording as well, and especially from the facts in 1939 to 1941, the term "final aim" in Paragraph 2 on Page 1 must not be mixed up in this case with the term "final solution" as it was coined in 1942.

From 1939 to 1941, according to my knowledge, no killings of Jews were carried out in Poland; but even here in Poland, in a parallel way to the migration measures of the Reich such measures were carried out. Document No. 2934. It is on the German page 55, page 4 of the document itself, page 6 of the original, there is the following sentence: "Paleski considerably devastated. Rumanians content themselves with looting everything. Pogroms could not be achieved so far". I should like you to comment on this quotation.

A The sentence, "Pogroms could not be achieved so far", means a tactical term for the sake of the Berlin office, because contrary to the orders of Berlin I had forbidden my command to instigate pogroms. I refused to take such measures because I did not agree with the method and the effect.

Q I have here Document Book II-D. I an talking about Exhibit 84, which is Document No. 3359. It is on German page 7. This is an operational situation report of 8 April 1942. From this document I quote as follows: "Inhabitants of the village of Laki near Bachtschissaraij were in constant contact with partisan groups; they gave them billets at night and supplied them with food. On 23 March a penal action against this village produced such huge quantities of food that the partisans would have been able to live on this until the next harvest. The 15 main participants, among them the mayor, were shot, all inhabitants were evacuated and the village was burned down." I should like you to comment on this document.

A This document is an example for many. I should like to repeat and state again that combatting the armed bands and the retaliation measures which were carried out for such villages as insisted on bands, all came under the order of the staff for partisan combatting and usually those actions were fought by the local army units, that is by the field divisions of the territory.

general activity and a general situation report is given. That means naturally in reporting, the situation in the territory is discussed, and not only our own activities but also all the other happenings and events of the locality itself, quite independently of who created these situations.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, just as a matter of information, looking at this page about which you have been testifying and directing attention particularly to the phrase, "and the village was burned down", would you please explain just what military objective was being aimed at in destroying the village? Let's assume for the purposes of the question that there was a reason for liquidating those who were opposing your forces, that is to say the partisans. Just what was attained in the actual physical destruction of the buildings?

THE WITNESS: These villages which I talk about were at the foot of the Yaila Mountains. The Yaila Mountains fill the southern part of the Crimes near the coast. In the Yaila Mountains there were about 10,000 partisans at my time. Naturally, these partisans were not sufficiently supplied with food because the mountains and the south coast had already been territories where there were famines even during peace. Therefore, the villages, that is the north part, were natural reservoirs for food supplies for the southern part. That means these villages were the only bases or the only places where partisans could go, especially in winter. The reason for burning and destroying these villages were two-fold; one, at first the village that is talked about here was a hiding place for partisans, and thus a base, was to be destroyed for partisan activities; and secondly, after the Army had threatened, on verification, to burn down villages if the villages supported the partisans actively, in such a case when a village actually supported the partisans it was then to be a deterrent for the inhabitants of the village.

Q I have Document Book II-a in front of me. It is Exhibit 54, Document No. 3235, page 139 of the German document book. It is an operation situation report of 23 March 1942, It is reported about shooting of mentally insane people. Even if it is not evident from the document how many mentally insane people were actually shot. Could you comment on this? place at a time at which I myself was not present in the Crimea, but I can assure the Tribunal that my Kommandos did not carry out shootings of mentally insane. I have forbidden this explicitly, and I repeated this again and again because the Army asked us on various occasions to carry out shootings of mentally insane people. It is for this reason that it is impossible that this report deals with actions carried out by one of my own Kommandos. Furthermore, I think this is a false report because the territory at the south of Karasubasar consisted mainly of woodlands and clay huts. There were no major villages and there was certainly no asylum for insane people.

Q.- Witness, I must remonstrate you here and that is from Document Book III-D, I want to put to you Exhibit 150, Document No. 604. I shall show you this document and I should like you to comment on it.

A.- This Document 604 is a report of the Sender Kommando 11a to the army. In the last paragraph it says, that Romanenko, on the 9 December 1941, for heriditary biological reasons, was executed, I do not remember this case in detail, but the reason probably was that - or at least this becomes evident from the document - that the Sonder Kommando 11a received a direct order from the Commander-in-Chief of the Army that Romanenko should be punished as deterrant, if possible should be executed in public by hanging. The Kommando investigated this case, as becomes evident from the document, and did not find the reasons confirmed for this request by the commander-in-chief. It does not become evident from the report why the kommando, in spite of this, executed the order, especially as it gives the reason for heriditary biological reasons, I do not know whether I ever saw this report, but if I had seen it I would not have agreed with it, but I assume that he reported to the Commander-in-Chief immediately after the Commander-in-Chief had been put in charge of this kommando.

Q.- Witness, from the same document book I now turn to another document. Would you look on page 15. It is Exhibit 151, Document No, 631, I ask you on this document, why did you try to justify yourself with the Army; why did you have to justify yourself concerning the confiscations of watches and other valuables taken during the Jewish actions?

A.- I remember the incident very well which led to my writing this report to the Army, Some officers had complained to the Chief-of-Staff that I refused to turn over money to the town of Simferopol without a receipt. Furthermore, complaints had been received that I had failed to turn over as many watches as I should have done after the confiscations had taken place. The Army sent a remonstration to me and asked me where the valuables were.

As the Army, by their own position, had the authority to ask me for such an explanation of the facts, this is the answer to the complaints of the Army.

Q.- I should like you to keep the same document, that is III-D, and to look at Exhibit 152, which is on page 21 of the German. This is Document No. 4439. The Einsatzgruppen is charged that they had looted Jewish apartments and had taken away property which they put at the disposal of Ethic Germans.

A.- What is called looting here was the carrying out of the confiscation, - and utilization decrees - which I simultaneously had received from the Reich Security Main Office and the Army. The apartments as well as the furniture, were put at the disposal of people who had lost all their property and who could prove that or it was administered by the local commander in their respective localities of command and was put at the disposal of those people who were looking for apartments. Furthermore, apart from these two lines, this report, which contains about twenty pages, is an excellent explanation of the terror under which the German territories lived for twenty years, and which only proves what I said yesterday, that as a rule three male grown-up members of each family in the course of this time were taken from the family and their fate could not be established.

Q.- That is those who looked for accommodations were, therefore, Tartars, Ukrainians and Etnic Germans, witness during what period in the war were you Chief of Einsatzgruppe D?

A.- I was chief of the Einsatzgruppe D from June 1941 until June 1942, inclusive, However, from March 1942 to July 1942 there were considerable interruptions.

Q.- What was the nature of these interruptions?

A.- From the beginning of March until 26th April I was on leave in Berlin. At the end of April I had to go back to Berlin until the begin ning of May.

After the death of Heydrich on the 4th of June, 1942, I was called to Berlin, and I only returned in order to give over my office to my successor.

Q.- Did you, as the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe, operate with the Einsatzgruppe and its units in Russia independently?

A.- No. My official office position was Plenipotentiary to the Chief of the Security Police and the SD in the 11th Army. As such, for the tasks which I had to carry out within the Army, Einsatzkommandos had been subordinated to me as units with whom these tasks were to be carried out.

Q.- Will you explain to us the importance of this position in the Army and the activity of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos?

A.- I was given this assignment on the basis of an agreement between OKH and OKW (The Command of the Army and the Armed Forces) on the one hand and the Security Police and the SD on the other. This decree was known as the so-called Barbarossa decree. On the basis of this decree the institution of these mobile units had a two-fold significance within the framework of the Army units. On the one hand, special units were subordinated to the Army for tasks which they had so far carried out on their own authority and with their own units. On the other hand, Heydrich, Chief of the Police and the SD, the sole authority, to give immediate instructions to these Einsatzkommandos, and, also to receive the new reports direct with the reason and the purpose to prevent an expected collaboration of the adversaries in the Reich itself and in the occupied territories at the front. The essential thing was that these activities were carried by me and the Einsatzkommandos in the assigned territories and was within, the territory of the Army, this means that the task and activities of the Einsatzkommandos were under supreme authority of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army. He held the executive power within his territory, and his power of attorney had been laid down in the Reichs Defense Law, as well as in a decree of the OKW, the high command of the Army, regarding the position of a commander-in-chief in the operational theatre.

of the Army were of primary importance and had to be complied with first. Therefore, it was necessary for the units to carry out all activities and tasks in a form which was in agreement with the intentions of the Army. That means the Army had either to agree or comment upon this, or, at least, show their agreement concerning the activities of the units within the framework of the tasks of the Army. By this term I mean that the activities of the Einsatzkommandos, Special Task Forces, were formed from the tasks of the army itself. That is, it had to attempt to fulfil the task which was meant for these special units within the framework of tasks of the army. It wasits duty to accept special tasks, which, according to the authority of the Barbarossa Decree could be asked for by the army.

Q This is the general framework. Was this factual and legal relation - to the army hirarchy and to the Einsatzgruppe and Einsatzkommandos also defined individually by a decree? agreement I mentioned. It was left to the discretion of the Army to determine the operational theatre of the individual kommandos, the strength of the kommandos, and the period of activity of the kommandos. Furthermore, it also had been determined for operative necessities the regulations and decrees of the army had priority. What had not been determined, however, was the current competition of orders which might occur within the decrees of the Chief of SD and the Security Police and the Chief of the Army. It was often the case, that it was more or less left to the skill of the officers in charge of the respective agencies to find an objective solution in case of such competitive orders. For operative reasons, however, the highest instance always in the end had the right to make the final decision. Barbarossa Decree for your own position and your activities and the activities and the position of the Einsatzkommando?

tried from the very first day not to take notice of me at all as the Chief of the Einsatzgruppen and to treat the Einsatzkommandos as their own army Units. We were auxiliary units, of the TC/AO. This becomes evident also from another document. It is Document 584. It is in Document Book III-D, in which IC/AO gives us a picture of how in his own tasks of espionnage of armed band activities and the setting up of plans for combatting such bands, apart from the Field Constabulary and his own units, and also the SD, delivered news reports which he himself used for his own purposes.

Q What was your relationship to the Chief-of-Staff of the Army? nor the Chief of Staff really took notice of mo at all when I first reported to them. When therefore, on the strength of describing the actual situation. The Army made use of the Kommandos without my knowledge. I had a serious dispute with IC, the consequence of this was that I was called to the Chief of Staff, Colonel Woehler, and he received me with the words, if the collaboration between the Army and myself would not improve, he would ask for my dismissal in Berlin. I believe that this fact gives a good picture of my relationship with the Chief of Staff, For although the Chief of Staff was a colonel, and, I, as a Standartenfuehrer apparently was - colonel, also the actual position becomes evident which I had within the framework of the Army. By the Army I was considered an unit leader of just about 500 men. That equals a commander of a battalion and I was treated accordingly. I was not only ordered to see Oberst Woehler but even a major and IC Rank and, he avoided expressly to address me with naming my rank, a custom usually exercised in the army in order to show that he, even as major, was above a Standartenfuehrer.

THE PRESIDENT: I understood you to say he was a colonel.

THE WITNESS: Who?

THE WITNESS: Who?

THE PRESIDENT: This officer with whom you were speaking.

THE WITNESS: The last one I mentioned was a Major. The IC with whom I had to deal immediately, and from whom the Einsatzgruppen received most of the orders, was a major.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Were you so under the control of the army that a recommendation from him for your dismissal would have had weight and effect in Berlin?

THE WITNESS: I didn't hear the question.

THE PRESIDENT: I see. I am sorry. Were you so under the command of the army that a recommendation from this officer to Berlin could have worked the dismissal which he threatened?

THE FITNESS: Immediately, yes. There is no doubt, because it was Himmler is interest as to this assignment to extend this first footing he had won for the territory of the army by means of a close collaboration with the army, and it is generally known that, as rule, not one officer of Himmler was ever covered by him when in the case of complaints the complainant was a person who was of importance to Himmler himself, and this was certainly the case of the Chief of the OKW, Keitel. What was your field of command? What was your power of decision? I repeat the question. Would you tell the Tribunal the content value of your position? What were you in command of? What was your power of decision and your authority? What was the territory of your authority? were at the utmost auxiliary organs of IC. The field of tasks which had been concretely established was to get a secure collaboration with the Security Service and the SD and to guarantee such collaboration with the army. That was the general framework of the order, and within the framework the order frequently discussed here -- to liquidate certain groups of people wasone concrete order, that had been issued, in order to achieve the goal of guaranteeing the security within this territory.

My authority consisted in safeguarding the communication lines of the army as well as the police security and in deciding whether or not the Einsatzgruppen should carry out such executions. It was outside my authority to stop the Einsatzkommandos from carrying out such executions, because this was the basic order which came from the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces and which was not within the power of authority of the unit leaders. My authority only started in carrying out these orders, that is, when deciding in what manner these orders were to be carried out, which was determined within the task or security. The orders which were issued by the OKW currently in this connection prove that the competence and the possibility of securing and guaranteeing security in these territories was not fully used, but that these orders with their possibilities were never exploited by me. Furthermore, the fact that in winter 1941/1942 currently Kommandos were never exploited by me. Furthermore, the fact that in winter 1941/1942 currently Kommandos were taken away from my own units by the army and became subordinated to the combatting troops. This, as I say, proves perhaps best that I, with my own kommandose, was only a little wheel at the lower and of the machinery, which the Army units kept in the Russian territory. might be of interest here, for instance, in the assigning of combatting units?

A I think I have given an example for this just now. There is only to be added that, as I have already basically explained before, special tasks were transferred to me by the Army which I just had to carry out and I could determine the way in which they should be carried out, for instance, in espionnage of armed band activities or recruiting of Tartars, or, for instance, the harvesting or establishing of district administration, or whatever the case might be. My authority and power of ordering was not left to me at all; and only insofar as the army did not deal with it itself, for me it was only a way of carrying out these orders.

Q The concluding question concerning the Russian set of questions: How was your power of decision? What was your power of decisions concerning execution orders?

A I do not think I have to repeat this. As to the orders for execution, even if applying the harshest standard, I had no possibility whatever to overlook them.

DR. ASCHENAUER (ATTORNEY FOR DEFENDANT OHLENDORF): This ends the questions dealing with Russia. Perhaps this would be a good moment for a recess.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for 15 minutes.

(A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ASCHENAUER: May I continue?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, indeed.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I now come to the final questions. Membership in the SS and the SD. BY DR. ASCHENAUER:

Q: Witness, we heard yesterday that in 1926 for a few months, lists were made of the members of the SS. What was the position after 1926 until 1935?

A: From the time 1926 to 1936 I had n immediate contact nor any immediate connection with the SS. I was not a member of the SS, either.

Q: By joining the SD, did you become a member of the General SS -- the Allgemeine-SS?

A: No, I did not become a member of the Allgemeine-SS. That concerns everybody who joined the SS through the SD as an organization. For all persons wearing the uniform of the SS within the reach of Heydrich and Daluege, the Chief of Regular Police, were appointed for that very purpose in order to avoid that these members of the SS should become members of the General SS. They did not want the officials to be subordinated to the General SS as well and they did not want them to be subordinate to other chiefs in the SS. They way none of those who joined the SD became a member of the Allgemeine SS.

Q: Witness, you said yesterday that Himmler tried to form a State Security Corps. What was the development of this?

A: This idea of the Stats Security Corps remained nothing but a plan. Nothing has been achieved that way, which made this idea at all a reality. The State Police agencies and the SD agencies in the Central Offices, as well as in the Regional Offices for the Reich, remained independent of each other and they remained independent agencies.

This presumption that the so-called Inspector of the Security Police and the SD established this connection, is incorrect because he had no actual orders, but in general he was to deal with the personnel questions of the SS members. He had further tasks which were not within the field of activity of the Sparten. Heydrich had formed commands of the Security Police and the SD in Holland he had made an attempt - and my men, together with the men of theState Police, were organized into one organization. This individual incident was rectified by me after Heydrich's death, when I returned from Russia. This one example in Holland was a step which could be described as one step towards the State Security Corps. The solution of this unit in Holland was the last attempt of that kind, but the agencies of the Security Police and the SD remained independent with their various tasks which had nothing to do with each other.

Q: What did you consider the political situation of the SD to be; in how far was the SD Inland in opposition to the Nazi regime?

A: The way things stood in the Reich there were three possible courses one could take if one did not agree with the development after the seizure of power: emigration abroad, emigration within the Reich, and positive opposition. The first two ways of opposition meant nothing but a catastrophe. They wanted to bring about a collapse by force. The positive opposition held an evolutionary attitude towards history, because in every revolution values are lost which can never be replaced and history must be considered as a continuous course of events where brisk interruptions and the attempt to miss something out -- whether forward or backward it does not matter -- on the whole causes more damage than it does good.

The men who after 1935 built this SD and extended it, saw the faults of the Nazi development in the same manner as those who emigrated abroad or within the Reich, but they stood in the middle of the political development, remained independent, and had to remain hidden for many years; they assembled exports who were able to overlook the situation; they obtained knowledge in order to understand the situation thoroughly and now tried, with the damages they could show, to bring about the evolution against the misuse of National Socialism by National Socialists. They wanted to bring about the evolution in order to counteract the damage done. The possibility was given to us through Himmler's generous attitude on one occasion. It was known generally, that when joining the SS, he did not attach any importance to the fact whether the persons were members of the Party or not.

with the strange coincidence that about 80 per cent of these experts were not members of the Party, But, these people were in a position owing to the moral strength which they held throughout the years to attract the largest part of the German intelligentsia in as far as they proved active in their professions and beyond this they attracted masses of the population and these people, who agreed with us in the one aim to develop history in a positive manner and who wanted to help to stop the mistaken developments which occurred; those were the actual workers for our end. Those were the members throughout the entire Reich with whom we carried out this positive opposition against Naziism.

Q Witness, whom did you fight in particular through the SD?

Q Why these three in particular? value of the human being. Ley, because he interfered with the independent development of the social ideas and the private sphere of the human being and tried to do away with it; Goebbels, because he denied the independent mental development, the development of consciousness, and in that way, the inner freedom of the human being, and in questioning all absolute values he took these values from the modern Existentialism and embodied and expressed Nihilism. Bormann, because he eliminated the natural tension between the individual and the community to the disadvantage of the individual by trying to subordinate these individuals to certain masters within the Party. These three together attacked the value of the human being, the result of modern times.

Q How did SD Inland fight this power? opposed these tendencies and secondly, he denied in his reports the measures of these persons, in as far as they expressed their inner views in their measures. That way, in a great number of cases, the realization of these tendencies in their development, as I have noted, was hindered or eliminated altogether.

opposition as you described it to us? and did not want any executive power and were prepared to show their power only by making reports, whose form and contents were unobjectionable.

Q What aim did the SD have?

A The aim of the SD was: our entire reporting activity was measured in the same way all the time, what is the effects of certain activities upon the individual and how do individuals react to these activities and we tried to help to develop a way of living in which people could develop themselves as we saw them, namely, people who, in their aim to gain consciousness and inner freedom found a way of living and results in all spheres of life and who were suitable to support these human developments.

Q You used the words "inner freedom". What do you understand by the word "freedom."

A By "freedom" I mean the voluntary ties of the individual, the motives of his will and actions, the obvious will of God, in nature and history. existed and still exists, in particular the SD was considered a great power which was omniscient in a way. Will you please state your opinion on this. activity had to be camoflaged. My department was not called Economic Department but ST-4; it was supposed to mean Staff Department No. 4. In 1937 I was not in a position to make any report at all without gitting permission of Herr Kranefuss first who was the economic expert in the personal staff of the Reichfuehrer SS. In 1938 we made the first great report, the contents of it dealt with sabotage of the Railway Adminis tration and further extension of the G erman Communication network.

This report was read by Heydrich and put in the files, that is, it disappeared in the safe because this mighty SD was not in a position to inform even a third person that they were dealing with such questions. In 1939, after the war had started, we had the courage to reveal obvious damages in the beginning of the war by making reports on them and here chance assisted us because Goering saw these reports and took them and used them in the sessions of the Reich defense counsel meeting and used them as questions to the resort representatives. He now desired to be informed on that way without knowledge of the connection for the first and only time in the history of the SD he permitted that these reports were given out. In 1940 he confirmed them again, when a number of local leaders, Gauleiters, objected strongly to these reports. But this leagalizing did not last either and in spite of the importance of these reports the SD was only an illegitimate child which one did not like to see and wanted to hide as quickly as possible. As the development in 1942 and 1943 shows that we were allowed to make official reports to the outside world no longer, Goebbels prohibited it. The power we had until the end was the result of the personal influence of my individual experts using their knowledge in the fact of experts in the Resors who were interested in this knowledge, an actual power the SD never constituted. My personal relations I need not repeat in this connection. I explained it in detail yesterday.

THE PRESIDENT: Are there any defense counsel who would like to question the witness? If so, and whatever order they desire, they will proceed with such questioning. BY DR. GAWLIK (counsel for Seibert): Q Witness, how long have you known Herr Seibert? A Since May 1936. Q In what manner did you meet Herr Seibert? A He was in the economic section of the SD which I joined at that time.

He was an expert there on questions of commerce and trade. Q Who was Gruppenleiter, Group Leader, of the Economic Group? A I was the group chief of the Group Economics. Q In how far was Herr Seibert your deputy? A In June 1938 Seibert became my deputy, when I left the SD as per orders from the main office.

He was my deputy until about 1944 Q For what tasks was Herr Seibert responsible? A Merely for within the economic sphere. Q Was Herr Seibert your deputy also in your capacity as Office Chief A There was no general deputy for office chief III but the four group Q Would you please inform the Tribunal which these four groups were. A III-A Law and Administration, Party and State; III-B Ethnic groups theatre and radio; III-D Economics starting with Agriculture, Trade, Q What was Seibert's last task before Russia was attacked?

A At the time he was my deputy in the economic group in the SD. Q When was Herr Seibert ordered to join Einsatz Gruppe D? A He was ordered to join the Einsatz Gruppe D when it was set up. Q I believe the word "ordered" should be translated as "drafted". He was drafted to join the SD and not ordered to join the SD.

When was Herr Seibert drafted to the Einsatz Gruppe D? A When the Einsatz Gruppe was formed.

Q Can you tell me the date? A June 1941. Q Did Herr Seibert volunteer to work for Einsatz Gruppe D? A No, at that time Seibert was in the Army and without his knowledge Q What tasks within Einsatz Gruppe D was Herr Seibert supposed to deal with?

A He was intended for the reporting section. Q And what was his title? A Leiter III, or Chief III. Q Will you please describe in detail the tasks of Leiter III within A He had the task to work on the news reports on the same subjects it.

For example, asfact which I have seen myself, to look into the NKWD had to be determined and similar things.

Apart from that he had to deal with all military tasks under me.

He continued in his connection with the Army; he inspected the Tartar companies villages; as protection against the partisans, he saw that they got Q Witness, in your reply you mentioned the word "Lebensbereiche", life's sphere.

A I hope you understand me because we talked about it all day yesterday.

Q Who determined the drafting of Herr Seibert to Einsatz Gruppe D and his tasks?

A At the suggestion of office I, the Chief of the Security Police and Q And who determined the tasks of Herr Seibert within the Einsatz Gruppe D? A I fixed the tasks of Seibert but he was assigned to the official Q Could you determine his position?

A No. that was fixed from Berlin. Q Could you change the position of Herr Seibert as Chief of Department III?

A In the long run, no. Q What was the reason that Seibert was drafted as Chief of Office III? A The reason was the previous knowledge he had gained on SD work, on economic group.

Apart from that, as I had meetings of all group other branches.

He was the most suitable one of my group leaders to Q In your staff was there an expert on executive questions? A When the Einsatz Gruppe was formed such an expert had been given to me.

After a considerable short time I asked for him to be relieved because he was not fully employed by me.

The Einsatz Gruppe itself had no executive tasks.

For that reason we did not heed to have an Q What title did this expert on executive questions have? A He was Chief of Office IV.

Q Did you appoint Kerr Seibert as Executive Office or did he work in that capacity?

A This expression executive officer is an invented expression which Q According to page 236 of the German record the Prosecution stated that Herr Seibert was Staff Chief for Security measures.

Is that correct?

A That again is an imaginative description. We did not have a staff chief nor a staff chief for security measures.

There was no title Q In order to make it quite clear I want to ask you again, was Herr Seibert perhaps the officer dealing with security questions?

A No, he was not an officer dealing with security Questions either.

Q. Did Herr Seibert have to carry out any executive tasks?

A. At no time did he have to carry out executive tasks?

Q. Did you appoint Herr Seibert to make lists of numbers of executions?

A. No, there was no such lists.

Q. Did Herr Seibert have the task to prepare secret papers and documents?

A. No, he didn't have that job either. The documents were in the office altogether.

THE PRESIDENT: Question, please, Dr. Gawlik. Did I understand you to say, witness, that there were no lists of executions. Did you hot keep a register of those who were to be executed or had been executed?

A. No such lists were kept by Herr Seibert or by me. It might be possible that in the office the number were known, because there for example, reports fron Berlin were collected there.

BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Did your Einsatzgruppe have a deputy chief?

A. Originally a deputy had been appointed for me. The reason was because the chief of State Police wanted mo to take a State Policeman because he under-estimated my capability in these tasks. For that reason Obersturmbannfuehrer Seezem, Chief of the State Police Agency, had been appointed asmy deputy expressly, but since he was chief of Vorkommando as well, during my activity he never was present in the place there I was billeted and for that reason ho never carried out this function as deputy.

Q. Who appointed this deputy chief?

A. Like all other functionaries, he was appointed by Heydrich.

Q. Was Herr Seibert ever deputy chief of Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. He never was that.

Q. Did the RSHA appoint Herr Seibert as deputy chief officially?

A. Neither official nor unofficially.

Q. To make it quite clear I want to ask again. Did you appoint him as a deputy?

A. I neither did this, nor could I do this.

Q. From Document volume III-D I submit to you on page 1 of the German Document Book--I am afraid I cannot give you the English page because I don't have the English Document Book; Exhibit No. 148, Document NO-2856, I submit to you; it is your affidavit of 2 April 1947 and in explanation in this document you stated the following among other things: "The former Standartenfuehrer Willi Seibert was my Chief III. Since he was the senior officer from point of service after me, he was entrusted by mo with the duties of a deputy during my absence." This "Entursted by me with the duties of a deputy during my absence," is that statement in this affidavit not contradictory to the statement you made just now?

A. No, not in disagreement, Seibert was the senior officer after me, in my staff but, not in the Einstazgruppen, but in the Einsatzgruppen there were at least two people who were senior to him in rank, and at least two others who had the same rank as he hold; therefore, it means that he wasmy deputy on the staff of the Einsatzgruppen, but not duputy for the entire sphere of the Einsatzgruppen.

Q. Please look at the same document book, on page 60, Your Honor, it is Document Book III-D, Exhibit 158, document No, 2859, the affidavit of Herr Seibert. In this affidavit Seibert said that as senior officer within the Einsatzgruppen staff"I undertook all tasks within the group in case Ohlendorf was absent from the group."

A. I don't understand this sentence because he could do nothing but continue to be in charge of this staff during my absence, and to settle the affairs which were in this staff.

Q. Was Herr Seibert senior officer within the entire Einsatsgruppe?

A. I think I have already answered this question.

Q. But perhaps you will repeat?

A. No, he was not.

Q. During your absence did Herr Seibert have special rights which normally he did not hold in respect to the command leaders?

A. Not materially. Actually, of course, he did not hand on any reports which I would have given normally. The fact that he dealt with the affairs of the staff in my absence, those affairs which could not remain until my return, does not mean that his power was extended.

Q. Please look at document III-D, page 73, which is Exhibie No. 160, Document NOKW 623, the report to the 11th Army, 16 April 1942?

A. What is the page?

Q. Page 73, 39 of the English. Do you find it?

A. Yes.

Q. In this report, shows that Communists of an extermination battalion were hanged in public, was this measure based on an order by Herr Seibert?

A. This measure in no way was based on an order by Herr Seibert. Such matters did not concern him, but he wasonly informed of it afterwards as a report of an event which had taken place here in the partisan war.

Q. When you look at the signature of this report, and also look at the same document book III-D, page 68 of the German Document Book, Exhibit 159, page 36 of the English Document Book, Document No. 629 NOKW, you will see that Herr Seibert signed both letters "By order of"-

A. I can not see that on page 68.

Q. Then it will be on one of the next pages.

A. On page 68 it says, Herr Seibert, but not "By order of."

Q. May I see that document book, please? Please look at page 80, does this signature "by order of" show that Herr Seibert was your deputy?

A. This "by order of" does not show it, but it was the general habit that chiefs of certain branches signed "by order of." That was the usage in the RSHA, and particularly in my office III. Therefore, he signed "by order of" automatically, no matter whether I was present or absent, as my deputy in his branch.

Q. If you would look at the letter of 9 October 1941 again, in Volume III-D page 68, Exhibit 159, Document 629, NOKW, this letter reveals that Herr Seibert, during your absence, asked the AOKL for an appointment for a discussion, giving the reason, that you were absent; did Herr Seibert deal with this matter only because you were absent?

A. No, he did not deal with it ;?or that reason, he did it because he always thought it was part of his branch. The question was whether such matter could be discussed with the chief of staff, or with the OB, (Commander in Chief) because then I usually went too.

Q. Please look at Document Book III-D on page 3 of the German; it is your affidavit of 2 April 1947, exhibit 148, Your Honor, Document No. 2856, on page 3, where you stated the following: "The only people whom I generally assigned to inspection tasks were, except for Schubert, Willi Seibert and Hans Gabel." I now ask you, what did these inspections tasks consist of?

A. This formula was no doubt the result of long discussion with Wartenberg, who wanted to determine that Seibert inspected execution. This I could not confirm, however, the reason is in the sentence before to the final sentence, that it was no doubt after this discussion that I prepared the statement, "That I did not know anything whether, or to which executions I sent the two persons named last. The inspection task I refer to was the regular contact of the Einsatzgruppen with the Einsatzkommandos, I only had three officers dealing with this, Seibert, Schubert and Gabel, these general inspections Seibert also carried out regularly; he inquired about order in the command, about the work in his branch, he inspected everything he had to deal with, or if any events occurred.

Q. Is it therefore correct that in this sentence you wanted to express that Seibert did not inspect any executions?

A. I expressed that I do not remember any such executions, because, therefore, I do not remember that Seibert inspected any.

Q. Did Herr Seibert ever give an order to carry out executions?

A. He certainly didn't give any such orders, because such orders were not given, particularly Seibert never was given the opportunity to do so; he did not have such authority.

Q. Did Herr Seibert ever in any manner assist in carrying out executions?

A. I do not know anything about such a thing.

Q. Could Herr Seibert have avoided carrying out the decrees given by Hitler?

A. No, he didn't have any authority to do so.

Q. Did Herr Seibert accompany you during the service trips to the commands?

A. Almost regularly.

Q. What were his tasks during these service trips?

A. His own branch had to be inspected in particular.

Q. During these trips with Herr Seibert, did you visit places of executions?

A. I remember one case when we happened to come across an execution of a few people who were executed for some reason the police had given. I cannot remember any other such case.

Did Herr Seibert assist in these measures at all?

A. No.

Q. Did Herr Seibert have any tasks such as observations?

A. No.

Q. Was Herr Seibert only a witness by chance there?

A. Yes, it was merely chance that he was a witness.

Q. Did Herr Seibert make service trips on hisown to the commands?

A. Certainly.

Q. What were his tasks?

A. The same inspection order we have already dealt with.

Q. Was Herr Seibert intended to become your successor as chief of the Einsatzgruppe?

A. I don't know about that, but I don't think it probable, because he didn't hold a position high enough for that.

Q. What do you know about a long absence of Herr Seibert from the Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. I remember that for four or five weeks, November to December 1941, he was on leave in Berlin.

Q. What do you know about the activity after Herr Seibert returned to Einsatsgruppe-D?

A. Herr Seibert returned with me and assumed his activity as deputy chief of the Economic Department.

Dr. GAWLIK: Thank you, Tour Honor, I have no further questions.

DR. MANRY: Dr. Mandry for the defendant Sandberger. BY DR. MANDRY:

Q. Witness, do you know how Gruppenfuehrer Mueller, Chief of Amts-IV judged Sandberger's activity in Estonia?

A. Yes, I know that. Gruppenfuehrer Mueller, during a lunch we had together, expressed his opinion about Sandberger's activity in Estonia, basing it on statements that he neglected his own Security Police, and tried to build up such a machinery of Estonians; he left these Estonians to themselves,. In his opinion Sandberger did not look after the security well enough in this region.

Q. Can you tell uswhen this discussion took place, approximately?

A. I cannot say that any more.

DR. MANDRY: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

DR. KOESSL: Dr. Koessl for the defendant Schubert. BY DR. KOESSL:

Q. Witness, on what occasion did you meet Herr Schubert?

A. I met Schubert when he reported to me in Nikolaev, that was October 1941.

Q. Could you determine his job in the Einsatzgruppen yourself or was Schubert appointed for a special task?

A. No, he was not appointed for a special task. Only commanders were assigned for certain tasks.

Q. What position did you give to Schubert?

A. He became my adjutant, and as such chief of the business office; that letter was of more importance to me, because I did not use an adjutant myself.

Q. Why did you use Schubert in this very function?

A. He had had jobs as; official, and, therefore, had been trained in administration, and owing to his training he seemed to me particularly suitable to deal with business matters.

Q. What tasks did he have to deal with as adjutant?

A. As adjutant he had to get terms, to make agreements, to look after guests, and to agree on terms and such things.

Q. Did Schubert ever have any power of command for troop units?

A. No, he had no power to give orders to any unit, only to one or two secretaries.

Q. Could Schubert give orders to Kommando leaders, for example, the chief Einsatzgruppe 11-B?

A. Of course not, he was not entitled to give any orders.

Q. Would Schubert determine the appointment of non-commissioned officers, or of enlisted men?

A. I do not understand the question.

Q. Could Schubert determine that the non-commissioned officer, Mueller, of Einsatz command 11-A, say, would take part in some partisan drive tomorrow?

A. Of course not. I have replied to that before, he could not give such orders. He could only have given orders to Sergeant Firtsche to write the letter again, but not to move to another place.

Q. Was it Schubert's duty to supervise duty in units?

A. No.

Q. Was Schubert ---the previous question was, was it Schubert's duty to supervise the duty of units and individual members of Einsatzgruppen-D, apart from the secretaries?

A. No.

Q. Did Schubert have to deal with planning executions?

A. No.

Q. In fact, what did Schubert have to do with the actual carrying out of the executions?

A. Actually not all, unless in individual cases I would have appointed him to carry out an inspection.

Q. In your affidavit of 2 April 1947, Document Book III-D, pages 1 to 3, Exhibit No. 148, No. 2856, you write in the last paragraph; "Insofar as I was prevented from inspections for personal reasons, I ordered members of my staff to represent me at these." I remember that Schubert inspected an execution which was carried out by Kommando 11 B under Braune's direction in December 1941 in Simferopol. The only people whom I generally assigned to inspections were, except for Schubert, Willi Seibert and Hans Gabel." Did the order to Schubert include that he should deputize for you at Simferopol, or was he entitled to give orders to Kommando Leader Braune?

A. Of course not. He was merely the one who inspected places and then a report wasmade to me. I read his affidavit, and was surprised by the formulation. He neither had the task of inspection, nor did he have to arrange anything, nor could he give any directives personally. He could merely see and listen.

Q. Could Schubert give orders to commanders, or part-commanders? That is, subordinates of Braune?

A. Of course not, except in an emergency, of course.

Q. Could Schubert have changed directives of Branune or did Schubert have to change directivesof Braune, if he did not agree with the way executions were handled?

A. Of course not, he could not interfere.

Q. What was Schubert's task if your orders concerning the treatment of those to be executed were not conformed with?

A. He had to report about the occurrence.

Q. If I understand you correctly, Schubert, owing to your directives, was not allowed to give any orders?

A. He was not allowed to give any orders.

Q. Was Schubert, apart from the Execution in Simferopol, sent to any other execution?

A. I do not know about that. I think it is quite improbable.

Q. On other occasions, apart from executions, did you assign inspection tasks to Schubert?

A. I cannot remember inspection tasks, but certainly he had other tasks, for example, I remember, for example, that he helped to recruit Talars.

Q. Were inspection tasks a part of Schubert's, general task?

A. Not in general, or principle, but only on other immediate orders.

Q. Did Schubert have to make reports to the RSHA about the activity of the Einsatzgruppe?

A. Not in general, but if I remember rightly he dealt with personnel questions, and administrative department, because he was chief of the business section where these questions were dealt with.

Q. Did Schubert sign reports himself?

A. I definitely do not think so.

Q. In how far was he entitled to sign?

A. In general he did not have the opportunity to sign anything, but if he had to transfer a person to a command, and had given him a letter of recommendation, he certainly would have to sign "by order of" Schubert, ro "By order of", every time at my request.

Q. During the several service trips, did you always have Schubert with you?

A. I think only on exeptional occasions, once or twice. I can not remember.

Q. Was Schubert appointed to deal with special tasks into which the other members of your staff could not look?

A. Of course not. Unless they were personal questions.

Q. Did Schubert over receive an order from you to execute any persons, himself?

A. That was not his task, and he did not get any such order.

Q. Did Schubert ever receive such a report to be handed on?

A. He certainly did not hand on any such reports, because they did not exist.

Q. Why was Schubert given the Iron Cross Distinction?

A. For repeatedly taking part in partisan fights.

Q. Who conducted these partisan fights?

A. I think I have answered this question before. They were lead by unit leaders, and the distinctions were given by the commander-inchief of the Army personally, and only under very grave conditions.

Q. What tasks did Schubert have after he served in Einsatzgruppen at the time he was with you as adjutant in the RSHA?

A. He returned to Berlin with me immediately, and there again he represented me in my antechamber, that is, he dealt with the same tasks as in the Einsatzgruppen.

Q. Did Schubert ever have the power of giving orders during that time?

A. No.

Q. Was Schubert active as an advisor, or did he carry out any confidential activity?

A. Nothing other than being in charge of the ante chamber will answer that question.

Q. Why did Schubert stop working as your adjutant?

A. After he had been with no for about two years, as adjutant I considered it better for his development that he would now get another job in order to develop better in a professional manner. The reason washis marriage, and since Iris service with me took up nearly every evening, I did not think that he could conform with his duties as a husband if he had to work evenings.

THE PRESIDENT: Then we will terminate the days proceedings. The Court will now recess and will reconvene next Tuesday morning, October 14th, at 9:30 o'clock. hours.

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-a. Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, during the afternoon session of tribunal II-A on 30 September 1947, Dr. Aschenauer interposed an objection to Book III-D, pages 39 of the English, 69 of the German, Document NOKW 628, offered as Prosecution Exhibit 160.

DR. ASCHENAUER (Attorney for Defendant Ohlendorf): The translation is not coming through.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you please repeat that? Apparently the translation did not go through.

(The interpreter repeated as requested.)

THE PRESIDENT: Very wall. Did you get that Dr. Aschenauer?

DR. ASCHENAUER: No.

MR. WALTON: I will repeat it.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Mr. Walton will repeat it.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, during the afternoon session of Tribunal II-a on September 30, 1947, Dr. Aschenauer interposed an objection to Book III-D, page 39 of the English, page 69 of the German, Document NOKW 628, offered as Prosecution's Exhibit 160. In subsequent conferences with Dr. Aschenauer it was determined that pages 2, 3, 5 and 8 of this document were, in fact, missing, Under Your Honors' ruling that excerpts from a document which are introduced into Guidance, it can be presumed, therefore, that the entire document is admitted in evidence.

We immediately telegraphed Washington to forward the missing pages of this document. These pages, which I have already referred to, came by air courier after the Tribunal had recessed on 9 October and are now available, together with the proper certification attached. that it be allowed to place a photostatic copy of each of these missing pages in the archives of the Tribunal and respectfully request the Tribunal to instruct the Secretary General to add them to Document NOKW-628. copies of those pages and is prepared at this time to deliver them to Dr. Aschenauer. Counsel can therefore make the necessary comparison between his copy and the photostat, which, If Your Honors admit, will then be in the official record of the case.

THE PRESIDENT: The request of the prosecution is approved. The full statement made by Mr. Walton is selfexplanatory and the Tribunal need not take up each item detail by detail. The Secretary General is instructed to receive the photostatic copies and make them part of the official records of Case No. 9, now before Tribunal II-A.

Dr. Aschenauer, have you now completed with the direct questioning of the defendant Ohlendorf?

DR. ASCHENAUER: There are a few more defense counsels who want to put questions of Ohlendorf.

THE PRESIDENT: That is correct. Such defense counsel as desire to cross examine the Defendant Ohlendorf may now take up their cross-examination in whatever order Defense Counsel have agreed upon.

SD, as compared to that of the commanders, an unrestricted and exclusive one or was it restricted?

A The title "commander" does not picture the condition correctly, The commander himself was under the Reichskommissar that is to say, the supreme administrative organ in a definite occupied area. This latter one had a power of command which cannot be compared to any other agency leader, He was immediately under the Fuehrer and the Chief of State. The commander of the Security Police was part of this hierarchy by reason of the fact that the commander of the Security Police as regional agency of a district or general Commissariate was again within the hierarchy of the general Commissariate. The commander was under the Generalkommissar, however not immediately, but the SS and Police Leader was in between. The Generalkommissars, for instance, of the Eastland, were relatively independent agencies, since those were three different areas, and, thus, the commander was actually more independent of his Generalkommissar than of his commander. Since the Generalkommissariats were independent areas, the Reich Main Security Office had, established the fact that, for example, in the Generalkommissariats of the Eastland, the commander there was also responsible to Berlin directly, that is, not by way of the commander. In the same way, the Reich Security Main Office issued orders to the various commanders without touching the military commander himself. In Eastland, for example, I would say that the commander is more an inspector than a military commander. In other occupied territories it was different.

the commanders ? commander. direct?

Q. You said that, if I understood you correctly, that the Reichskommissar Was the immediate representative of the Fuehrer and the bearer of the highest responsibility?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Is it correct then, according to what you said, that the designation of "commander " actually does not picture the real condition, but is a mistake?

A. I thought I had described the various conditions which made the commander merely an inspector.

Q. From what time does the activity of the Einsatzgruppen cease in an area ?

A. At the moment when an area has been given over to the civilian administration.

Q. Do you know anything about the opinions of the Gruppenfuehrer Mueller, the Chief of Office IV of the RSHA, as far as Jost is concerned?

A. I think it can be said that Mueller hated Mr. Jost deeply. This was shown by the fact that he tried for many years to prejudice Jost, in which attempt Mueller used his power with the State Police.

Q. Do you know anything about the reasons for this hatred?

A. Not in detail, no.

MR. WALTON: If Your Honors please, I think it will appear from the indictment that the time when Jost was Commander of an Einsatzgruppe, it was after the death of Heydrich Mueller. Therefore, the prosecution objects to the questions concerning the attitude of Mueller toward the Defendant Jost as being immaterial to the issue involved in the indictment.

THE PRESIDENT: If thechronology as indicated bythe Prosecution is correct, the objection is sustained.

DR. SCHWARZ (Attorney for Defendant Jost): I have no further questions, Your Honor.

BY DR . HOFFMANN (Attorney for the Defendant Nosske):

Q. Witness, a few factual questions: During your direct examination, you mentioned the shooting at Belzen and you said that the 45 Jews who were shot there were shot byEinsatzkommando 12. I do not find any description of Einsatzkommando 12 in the document. Would you affirm whether this was actually Einsatzkommando 12?

A. Einsatzkommando 12 never was in Belzen. This is a mistake; in the document too it says 10a and not 12.

Q. Witness, where was the Einsatzkommando 12 in 1941?

A. Until the end of July 1941, Einsatzkommando 12 was in what was formerly Rumania.

Q. Can you say anything about the mission of Einsatzkommando 12?

A. At that time Einsatzkommando 12 was a rest area.

Q. It has not been made clear to me how Einsatzkommando 12 is connected with Anajew. Do you know whether Einsatzkommando 12 was in Anajew at all?

A. First Einsatzkommando 10 A was in Anajew. Later 10 B.

Q. The documents also show that a partial kommando of Einsatzkommando 12 was ordered to the Crimea. Do you know what the reason for this transfer was?

A. This transfer took place in the winter of 1941, 1942, after the returning of the Russians in the South and East and in the West, and this created a very difficult situation, since the partisans and saboteurs continually interrupted the railroad lines, and then a part of Einsatzkommando 12 was detailed to reinforce the kommandos on the Crimea. They were detailed to assist Einsatzkommando 10B.

Q. Then I still have one more question. You said that the Einsatzgruppe D was also active in Stalino.

A. Neither the Einsatzgruppe nor any Einsatzkommando nor a man of Einsatzgruppe D was ever active in Stalino.

Q. Witness, then I have one further question. If I understood you correctly, you said during your direct examination that a man of your Einsatzgruppe who refused to obey the order, if this happened in the front lines, would either be shot immediately or be put before a court-martial. Did I understand you correctly?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Witness, do you agree with me that if someone were to expose himself to such a danger of rather being shot than to execute such an order that such a person would have to have a definite moral inner attitude about this?

A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Witness, I heard you here on the witness stand - I am not of the same opinion as you are, but I would like to say that your deduction was open to disagreement - did you inform your men of the Einsatzgruppen of this deduction, and did you train them in this respect?

A. I believe that your words are too general for me to answer concretely.

Q. Another question, Witness. I would like to make it more concrete: Concerning the misgivings which the various men in the Einsatzgruppe D mighthave had in t his connection did you do away with these misgivings by telling them your explanations?

A. I cannot remember anything concrete about this, but I am convinced that in individual talks with the officers I talked about this and I am also convinced that I talked along these lines to the commandos during roll-calls.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Hoffmann, you asked one question whose purport I was unable to grasp. It came through this way: Did anyone objecting to an order have to have a definite moral attitude? That to me is a little vague.

DR. HOFFMANN: May I make it more concrete then.

Q. Witness, did you dissipate the inner resistance of these people against this order and did you tell them that this order was necessary?

A. To do this, such an inner resistance would have to have been evident to me and I didn't see any trace of this. Ho such resistance came to my attention on the part of the client of Mr. Hoffmann and to which I would have had to answer. I was concerned with making it easier for my men and then one had to make them realize the seriousness of their tasks.

Q. You want to claim, witness, that all the men, especially my client , did not object to carrying out these orders?

A. No, I didn't say any word about this. The question was -did such an open resistance -- was such an open resistance evident to me, and how did I act on such resistance. In two and one-half years I had sufficient occasion to see how many men of my Gruppe did not agree to this order in their inner opinion. Thus, I forbade the participation in these executions on the part of some of those men and I sent some back to Germany.

Q. But it is your opinion that this is merely a matter of nerves?

A. I have had no possibility to investigate the various psychiatric conditions of every single man.

Q. Witness, the question is too serious to just shrug it off. I hope you agree with me that everyone must have had a moral resistance against these orders.

A. I believe my answers to questions on direct examination did show that.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Hoffman, please ---- Kindly pause for a moment after Dr. Hoffmann finishes with his question before you begin to answer in order that we may get the full interpretation of his question before your answer begins. BY DR. HOFFMANN:

Q. Witness, in my opinion, you must have counted on such a moral resistance on the part of everyone of your men, isn't that right?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. I May I repeat it. Can it be assumed -- or, I ask you .... Do you believe that everyone of your men simply agreed with this order and merely would carry out -- such as bringing water or carrying coal?

A. I will comment on your question. You want to hear from me that it was my duty to talk to everyone of my men and overcome the moral resistance widen he had against carrying out these orders.

I say again that - this would have been neither my job, nor did the men give me such an opportunity, by their conduct - for, in the final analysis it belonged also to the moral attitude of these men that they being soldiers should know how to obey, and that they applied their moral inner convictions to the carrying out of the orders.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, am I correct in assuming from your answer that the men at no time offered such distress or complaint with regard to executing theorders given them, that necessitated your speaking to them -- to calm their fears or inner resistance?

THE WITNESS: I think I have already said that I had repeated conversations with my men which had this problem as their content, but there was no genuine resistance which, in order to express myself more clearly, I would have had to break by force. But many men have suffered terribly under this task, and, therefore, had to be sent home for many, various , reasons; either that their nerves went to pieces, or they could not stand this morally, and they were sent back home for their own protection.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any other questions by any of the defense counsel? BY DR. MAYER (For defendant Dr. Braune):

Q. Witness, since when have you known Dr. Braune?

A. Since May 1936.

Q. Where did you get to know Dr. Braune?

A. Dr. Braune was Department Head for Law and Administration of the SD, Central Department II-2, -- in this same Central Department in which I took over the Department for Economics.

Q. Do you know since when Dr. Braune was a member of the SD and how he got to join the SD?

A. As far as I recall he joined the SD in 1935 with Professor Hoehn.

Q. Were you, yourself, Braune's superior?

A. From 1937 on , yes; as Chief of Staff of the Central Department.

Q. Did Braune, during the time of your work with him, have anything to do with the Enemy Information Service? That is II 1?

A. No, he always worked in the Domestic intelligence service.

Q. Do you know whether he had anything to do with that field before you worked with him?

A. No, he got into the Domestic intelligence Service immediately.

Q. With what did Braune chiefly occupy himself in the SD Main Office?

A. With the questions of law, of administration, relation of Party and State, and the students.

Q. Did you talk with Dr. Braune of the aims and purposes of the Domestic Intelligence Serbice of the SD?

A. Very frequently. In this sector he was my closest collaborator.

Q. What opinions did Dr. Braune represent? Did he agree with yours?

A. He agreed with me so much that after Hoehn left he could not remain there very much longer, but was forced, in 1938 at the latest, to leave the Central Department II-2.

Q. Was it also Braune's job to deal with Party matters?

a. Yes, I just said Party and State was one of his departments.

Q. Did his activity include also reports about Party matters?

A. Yes, of course; that was the task of the department.

Q. What were the opinions of Heydrich and Himmler about this task?

A. They were officially forbidden by a decree of Heydrich.

Q. Was the activity then discontinued?

A. No, it was continued under a camouflaged designation.

Q. What do you know about Dr. Braune's leaving the SD?

A. In the dispute between the state police and the SD -especially about questions of administration and the state which belonged to the field of activities of Dr. Best in the State Police - Braune came to be so strenousuly in favor of the SD that he had to leave at the demand of Dr. Best. After his dismissal the work of his department practically stopped. That was the demand of Best.

Q. But despite these tensions with Dr. Best -- how did Dr. Braune get to join the Stapo, the State Police.

A. Braune together with a number of other assessors, at the demand of the SS Main Office, Department I, had been directed into the State service. The Budget of the SS Main Office was so small at that time that the SD was in no position to employ new people. This emergency was eliminated partly by the fact that planning agencies of the state were employed for this new personnel, which were then detailed to the SD Main Office; and thus Braune also was transferred to such a planning agency.

Q. Is it correct that Dr. Braune thus only belonged formally to the State Police -- but actually worked for the SD?

A. Yes, that is absolutely correct.

Q. How did it happen Dr. Braune was subsequently transferred to the Stapo state Police?

A. In 1938, two attempts were made, First, Best requested that the assessors who held planned positions of the State Police now should also be put at the disposal of the State Police; and secondly, Heydrich tried, in order to have his way with the StateProtection Corps, to effect an exchange of State Police and SD officials. Thus a successor of Braune, an official of the State Police, was detailed to the SD.

Q Do you know anything about the fact whether Dr. Best especially objected to some special work of Dr. Braune in the legal field? the dismissal of Braune from the SD. In the dispute between the State Police and the SD about the treatment of administrative questions - Braune on my order had written a report which was submitted to Heydrich, the SD Main-Office, by way of the Central Department I, and Heydrich gave it to Best, and Best thereupon demanded the definite dismissal of Braune. Police and his transfer to Muenster?

A No, no; he objected strenuously. He felt betrayed and he tried by all means to stay with the SD. in Muenster?

A Yes, he finally achieved that. He need not resign from the SD completely, but he got the SD sector in Muenster the State Police in Muenster. because of the almost exclusive activity of Braune for the SD in Muenster a row developed? Schoengast, demanded the recall of Braune from Muenster because Braune, as he said, did not do any work for the State Police. He only worried about the SD. That was psychologically understandable because he was chief in the SD Main Office, whereas the work of the Deputy State Police director corresponded to the position of an Assessor, that is of an expert referent.

support him in those attempts with the aim of getting him back to Berlin? 1939. When I got the order from Heydrich to make a reform suggestion for the future SD, I got Braune to come back from his furlough and he helped me in Drawing up the suggestion. And I had planned to give him the Gruppe A in the new office. Heydrich had agreed to this, however Best managed to prevent this again.

Q Is it correct that you even asked Dr. Braune to look for an apartment in Berlin so that he would get the idea that he could count on his recall to the SD? look for an apartment in the same area where I was living. That was about the beginning of October 1939.

Q Did I understand you correctly, that it was Dr. Best who strenuously objected against Dr. Braune's retransfer to the SD, and who finally prevented this retransfer?

Q When did Dr. Braune hear about these various actions? concerned in the dispute. But the fact that he finally did not come back to the SD in October 1939 he heard from me since Heydrich now told me this.

Q Did Dr. Braune have the possibility of leaving the State Police and returning to the SD? Heydrich, not on the will of Braune. Heydrich had decided against him.

Q But isn't the fact to be considered that war had broken out by this time?

happened, what I have already said: that any possibility of leaving the State Police was prevented be a decree of Heydrich. That is to say, Braune was not only prevented from joining the SD by the will of Heydrich, but he did not have the possibility of leaving the State Police either against Heidrich's will. Braune belonged and I want to ask you a few questions, Herr Ohlendorf, about Dr. Braune's activity in the Einsatzgruppen. Did you cause Braune to be detailed to your Einsatzgruppe D?

Q How is it to be explained that Dr. Braune came to join the Einsatzgruppe at all? were to be put in the Einsatzgruppen. Thus, in ways the loaders were released and now fuehrers were always committed.

Q When did you hoar about Braune's being detailed to your Einsatzgruppe D?

A In October I was in Berlin on an official trip. Braune looked me up and told me that he had been ordered to report to my Einsatzgruppe. We then left together in my car.

Q Then your garrison was in Nikolajev, is that right?

Q What job did you assign to Dr. Braune after you arrived in Nikolajev? Norway, who was to inform himself about my job. During his presence which lasted for about two weeks I had told Braune to take care of this Minister. At the same time Braune acquainted himself with the task of the Einsatzgruppe by reading the documents of my Einsatzgruppe.

After that, about the beginning of November, he then left for Odessa as the leader of Commando 11b. about his job as leader of a Commando? acquainting himself with the job, and I am sure I spoke to him about these jobs. Odessa? Braune acquainted himself with the job during about one week. For that period the preceding Commando leader still held the command. Odessa? all business in Odessa and to prepare the Commando for an advance into the Crimea.

Q Did Dr. Braune carry out liquidations of Jews in Odessa? Roumanians demanded liquidations from Braune. According to my directives Braune objected to this, but the Roumanians pressed him and threatened him with complaints, so that Braune asked me once more and received the same directives from me. He did not carry out any liquidations in Odessa.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. I am wondering if that answer came through in accordance with the statement of the witness. What nationality was involved there?

DR. MAYER: I didn't get the question, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I have that the Ukrainians demanded liquidations from Braune, and then later on the word Roumanian was used.

DR. MAYER: In Odessa it was a question of occupational areas overlapping, and the Roumanians advanced beyond the Border-Lines of the occupied area. Thus they were given the power in their areas. It was the Roumanians who demanded from Braune the executions of Jews in that area. Dr. Braune refused these executions decisively.

THE PRESIDENT: I see; very well.

Q Do you recall when Braune's Kommando arrived in the Crimes? of November, that is, with his commander., with only a few vehicles. The rest had got stack in the mud, and he was able only to follow slowly.

Q Where did the Dr.. Braune establish his command post?

A This was in Simferopol?

Q Was there already another Kommando active in Simferopol? and a sub-command of 11-A were in the Crimea?

Q Were these part Kommandoes already active? Simferopol? Jews in Simferopol be carried out before Christmas, This directive of the Army was handed to me by a liaison officer, and Braune thereupon negotiated with the Army since we were not in a position to carry, out these liquidations. Thereupon, the Army agreed to create the conditions necessary which happened, and, thus, the liquidations took place before Christmas 1941. actually lent its support to carrying out of these executions? the Jews, the drivers, the gasoline, the military police to guard in that area.

Q What do you know about Dr. Braune's attitude concerning the Fuehrer's Order in general?

A Braune is a very soft sensitive man. Since I was with him for months I know that he carried out these things only with difficulty, and by overcoming his great reluctance.

Q What was Braune's main activity in Simferopol? the middle of the great partisan movements, and thus, his commandos hunted down partisans. Furthermore, he occupied himself with intelligence service, because he was predestined for this by his background.

Q When did you again see Dr. Braune after your return to Berlin? back, and to take up a position in the Academic Exchange Service, and in the student field. On my suggestion he was transferred to this activity.

Q What do you know about Braune's recourse to the RSHA, and his transfer to Norway. more complicated, the younger officers from the RSHA were all drafted, and, thus, Kaltenbrunner wanted officers who were under his jurisdiction, and who were active in other agencies to return to the RSHA. Thus, he wrote the letter to the then superior of Braune, Scheel, and demanded that Braune be released. Braune was then ordered back to the RSHA. Even though Mueller, Chief of the Gestapo, was against it, Braune was detailed to Norway in the capacity of Commander by Kaltenbrunner.

Q Did you speak with Dr. Braune before he reported for Norway?

A Yes, I did. He reported away to me before he left. duct in his new position at that time?

A Yes, I did. I was especially concerned with Norway. For a long time we from the "SD" had carried on a fight with Terboven. Through the unfortunate system of the agencies of the Commander, they were very much dependent on the Reich Commissioner as I already explained. The Commander in his opinions had adopted himself completely to the Reich Commissioner Terboven. So that I, in order to be able to Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.inform myself, sent my own man to Norway.

The tensions were so great that Terboven had one of these men dismissed. I told Braune about these conditions, and I demanded that he should resist Terboven, and that he should take care that so far as possible the politics of violence carried on by Terboven be stopped, and that a reasonable agreement with Norwegians should be reached. Braune agreed to this. the sense of your instructions? and the commander of Norway. Because of the resistance of Braune against the large scale action which had been ordered by Terboven to be carried out by the Security Police, which had been refused by the RSHA also, the commander had now come into a position when he also had to resist the Reich Commissioner. Thus, a dispute developed which as a result of the activity of Braune was brought about. He thus conducted himself in accordance with my instructions. measures on the part of Scheele against Terboven? so. ly changed? that he could no longer get out of it. to ask you a few questions about the landing of the Russians in Jewpatoria in January 1942? Witness, do you recall the landing? results did these landings have? also on the penninsula of the eastern side of the Crimea, and from Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.these bases it was attempted to make the partisan movements successful.

was when the Russians conquered Jewpatoria? had tried to fell Jewpatoria. These trucks with wounded people were met by the Russians, and they cut all the throats of these wounded people. The civilian population showed great joy about these things, and they resorted to celebration around these dead people.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I must object at this point, and ask what relevency this testimony has to the charges in this case.

THE PRESIDENT: The objection is well put. Will you please answer that question as to the relevency of this line of questioning.

MR. MAYER: I consider this question necessary in order to show in what difficult situation the Einsatzgruppen found themselves in the Crimea, and, it also is to show how strong the partisan resistance was against the Einsatzgruppen, and how big the partisan movement was in that area, especially, after the landing of the Russians, and, especially how it effected the civilian population, and thus created a dangerous strategical situation. I also want to show by means of these questions how close the collaboration of the Einsatzgruppen was with the Army, and. finally, also to what extent my client received orders from the Army. In that respect I consider these questions as of probative value, but I leave the decision to the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly you may put any questions which refer directly to your client. You may show what conditions he had confronted with when he arrived in any certain area or locality. You may show what directly was brought to him in the way of information, but we can not lose time in a general history of a "situation of anywhere not immediately connected with your client.

DR. MAYER: Yes, Your Honor. I shall leave this field, and in conclusion I would like to ask the witness Ohlendorf to give a judgment of Braune with whom he worked so long.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you nay a judgment?

DR. MAYER: A purely personal judgment, A judgment of his personality.

THE PRESIDENT: If you us? the word judgment

DR. MAYER: Or recommendation which he would make out of his superior.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. You use the word judgment, and you are then encroaching upon the duties of the Tribunal.

DR. MAYER: I did not mean that, but I meant purely a personal relation to his subordinates.

A I have known Braune for nine years. I got to know him as a very decent, true and straight character, who was so stubborn in his character that quite apart from the welfare of his own person, he tried to act according to this genuineness and straightforwardedness; he was a good patriot, and believed that he found his calling in the SD, thus, with all passion he through himself into the work of the SD. He was one-hundred percent reliable, and one knew that wherever he worked, there would be decency and a clean attitude.

DR. MAYER: I have no further questions to ask the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: When you say that you knew that he could be counted upon for one-hundred percent as to reliability, I take it that you mean that he would carry out whatever directions he received with regard to liquidations, or of anything else he was directed to do.

THE WITNESS: I did not quite understand this, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: In your summation of Braune's character, I understood you to say that he was one-hundred percent reliable. By that I understood that you mean that he was one-hundred percent reliable to the Reich?

A No, no, but reliability of his character. If a job was given to him one did not have to bother about whether it was carried out or not. If he said, yes, he meant, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. LINK: Dr. Link for the defendant Ruehl. I have a few questions with the permission of the Tribunal, to put to the witness Ohlendorf. BY DR. LINK: Einsatzgruppen-D?

A Yes, together with other men - one moment, please. I am mistaken. Yes, I know him from his activity in the Einsatzkommando 10-B.

Q What position did he hold in this Einsatzkommando? Kommando 10-B. Since he had these qualities which the kommando leader of 10-3 did not have, the leader of Kommando 10-B did not keep order, any official business matter was against his nature, and, thus, I ordered Ruehl to see that order was kept within this kommando. Without his holding the title, he was practically the administrative chief of the Kommando. of an administrative chief, may I ask you whether he had any power of command over this Kommando, or any part of this Kommando in this function?

A No, he had no such command over the Kommando. Mot even over parts of it. Persterer? have the seniority after Persterer, Ruehl was Obersturmfuehrer, that is, a 1st Lieutenant, and there was another man who was a captain, and who in the Kommando itself was the leader of the Department IV. Thus, were any one to be designated as deputy of the Kommando, it would have been automatically this leader of Department IV, because he was a captain. his deputy; would you know anything about this?

fore; I know that he was not deputy of Persterer. Also that he was not the designated person to be such by Persterer. a case of Ruehl once actually appearing as a deputy of the Kommando Leader. This assumption by the Prosecution is mentioned in connection with the transporting of a number of Jews back to Rumania territory. I therefore, ask you, can you remember that Persterer had reported to you at any time about the situation which had prevailed or developed in his area as a result of the fact that the Rumanians had transported a large number of Jews into the area occupied by the German Army? Do you remember that?

Q How was that situation developed? from me what was to be done with the Jews who had been transported across the Dnestr River, into the German area by the Romanians. He had brought Ruehl along because Persterer himself did not go back to Mogilew, but had still another mission to complete. I told Persterer that the Jews driven across the River by the Rumanians were to be brought back into the Rumanian territory, and that it was to be prevented that the Russians would drive any more Jews into our area. The situation in the area of Mogilew was so difficult, because the city of Mogilew was completely destroyed. Therefore, the famine prevailed, and it was not possible to prevent plunderings and revolts, for these Jews had been completely plundered by the Rumanians. They had no baggage with them at all. Therefore, hurry was great, and thus Ruehl wont back to Mogilew-Podolsk and -- he was to see to it that the Jews were to be sent back into the Rumanian territory, which was their homeland. The fact that Ruehl came to see me is nothing special for in contrast to what the Prosecution assumed it has not a question of a lieutenant coming to sec his general but of a leader coming to see his superior; everybody had this possibility who had any type of mission, and such mission could be given to any one, even if he had not been a leader, and even if he had not been a leader, he certainly would have the opportunity of speaking to me, for that is what I was there for.

explanation of my client that he then handed your order on to a SubKommando at the suggestion of Persterer. Did I understand you correctly that this fact would lead one to assume that Ruehl had any power of command, or any activity as Deputy? first order could not be executed at once? back the Jews into their territory, but we were dependent on the Rumanians because there was only one bridge at that time, and the Rumanians threatened to shoot if we tried to bring back the Jews into their land. Ruehl informed me of this and now I ordered Kommando 12 to negotiate at another bridge near Jampol and which had just been completed at that time, but it had not yet been handed over to the Rumanians, and thus Kommando 12 received the order to see to it that these Jews would now be brought back into their homeland via that bridge, and that happened. report appeared before you and that this was not Pesterer, would you explain this in the same way as you explained the first conference? because of the situation I have described, and thus Ruehl had to take his place in order to tell me about the results of the negotiations with the Rumanians.

Q Was this order then carried out? in any connection with the basic order under discussion? the conduct of the Rumanians I had ordered namely we would under no circumstances undertake to execute people by order of the Rumanians.

reaction of the victims themselves were, namely the Jews?

A No, I saw nothing of it, I don't know.

Q Rasch came from the. Ministry of the I terior to the SD, did he not? Until then he had not joined any part of the SS. He became Untersturmfuehrer automatically when joining the SS. Did this make him a member of the Waffen SS or the General SS?

A Certainly not the Waffen SS. There was no General Waffen SS. the SD in Koenigsberg. The Prosecution has submitted a document in Volume III_C, Exhibit No. 131, German page 13, Document No. 3253. There it says -

THE PRESIDENT: You are reading too rapidly.

Q "Since the Fuehrer has appointed you Brigadier General of the Police with the document handed to you on 19 Feburary 1940. I herewith assign you as from 1 December 1940 to a position provided in the budget of Brigadiers General of the Policepay group PA allocated to the State Police Headquarters at Koenigsberg." Witness, can you tell me whether the meaning of this document is of importance; with regard to budget purposes, so that a position was assigned to him where he could be paged by the fiscus, or does it also result in his being drafted into the State Police in Koenisberg?

May it please the court I don't quite see the materiality of this in that Dr. Mayer has been given the opportunity already to cross-examine the witness.

THE INTERPRETOR: I'm sorry, channel 3 is not working.

THE PRESIDENT: Let us first see what Dr. Mayer intends to present. He may be merely asking for the correct time. We don't know.

MR. WALTON: That's true; I only wanted him to confine himself to something that had taken place before. I am objecting to anything that has already been discussed.

THE PRESIDENT: Your objection is well taken. Let us see what he is going to ask. The sound system seems to be functioning now, Dr. Mayer.

DR. MAYER: I only wanted to address one question to complete my former question. The question itself refers to a document submitted by the Prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: Was that within your knowledge when you questioned the Defendant Ohlendorf before?

DR. MAYER: Yes, I knew the document.

THE PRESIDENT: Why was it you did not put this query at that time?

DR. MAYER: I simply did not address the question because I had forgotten it during the examination.

THE PRESIDENT: That seems to be the privilege of an attorney, to forget a question, so we will allow it. BY DR. MAYER: Thatk you very much.

Q It refers to Document NOKW 584, Exhibit No. 165 in the German volume III D, pages 104 and 105. This document itself deals with retaliation measures against partisans in Eupatoria and I ask the witness to inform himself of the text on which the action was based and to state his opinion on it and also what orders he gave to Braune at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: What was that document again, Dr. Mayer?

DR. MAYER: Exhibit 165, in the German Document Book III D, pages 104 and 105.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the document number itself?

DR. MAYER: The document is NOKW 584.

A I exactly remember this occurrence. The ICAO of the Army and Major Riesen came to me on behalf of the truz in order to obtain an order that my Einsatz Commando carried out a retaliation measure in Eupadoria. It was a retaliation measure for occurrences which have been descried previously by me when the Russians had cut the throats of wounded soldiers. I rejected the carrying out of this retaliation measure because I did not consider it to be my task to carry out retaliation measures of this kind for the Army. Major Riesen asked me for persons who could be put at his disposal in Eupadoria. I said I was prepared to do this because the retaliation measure itself as described to me by Major Riesen I did not approve of. The Commander in Chief had ordered that the entire population capable of war service in Eupatoria be shot. Owing to our stay in Eupatoria it was known that among this population there was a great number of persons who were not suspected of being partisans or who could be considered to endanger our security. For that reason I sent Braune along in order to select from the male population those persons who could not he considered dangerous but could assist Major Riesen with advice.

Braune returned from Eupatoria disgusted. The Army had not prepared the execution properly and therefore very unpleasant occurences had taken place and Braune had to take a hand in order to re-establish order to avoid even greater unpleasantness.

Q I have another little question. What connection did Braune have with Riesen? held a kind of a superior position.

Q Did Dr. Braune also approach him about the views of the Commandant Mueller. because rightly he considered him a white collar officer rather than an officer who would fight at the front and he received him with the words that for this action he did not require an order from the Commander in Chief. This statement may he explained by the fact that already at the beginning of the war through Keitel orders had been given to Army sections which in this case gave the officers the opportunity ever without the orders from the Supreme Commander to carry out such actions. BY DR. ASCHENAUER: difficulties in the record. May I put them prior to the cross examination?

Q In the Prosecution's evidence on page 330, which is the memorandum of 30 September, it says: Krimschacken are people of Jewish descent, who were living in this area for several hundred years, however, the Einsatzgruppe considered them undesirable. In this connection may I address two Questions. Did the Einsatzgruppe classify the Krimschacken - May I assist your memory with an excerpt of a document which Was not submitted here, Exhibit 325 presumably from the SS trials and may I ask what the decision obtained from Berlin?

A. The Prosecution themselve did explain that the classification of the Krimschacken was not necessary because the prosecution themselves described them as of Jewish origin. Therefore, the Fuehrer order concerned them. Thus, the Einsatzgruppe was not content with this result because at the Crimea, apart from the Crimean Karaims problem the question of the Karaims also existed. It consisted of the following: The Krimschacken are of Jewish origin but have given up their Jewish creed and spoke Turkish. The Karaimen, mostly, are not of Jewish origin but had the Jewish confession. The Einsatzgruppe twice to keep both groups out of the liquidations. The order of the 5th of December 1941 shows this. The following facts were written down here. The Karaims, according to their own statement, have nothing in common with the Jews except their confession. They are supposed to originate iron the moguls who formerly lived in the area of the Black Sea. During the czaristic days, in contrast to the Jews, they had all Civil rights and they are still proud of this, even now. The Krimschacken according to statements by the Jews are supposed to be Jews who left Italy about 400 years ago and came to the Crimea and spoke the Tatarian language. The Krimschacken themselves maintain to be a branch of the Tatarian people. One may presume that both sides are right and that there are immigrants from Italy Who, in the course of the centuries mixed with the Tatars, accepted their language and their customs but retained then confession. When the Einsatzgruppe enquired from Berlin it was decided that the Krimschacken are to as treated as Jews

Q. This finishes the direct examination as far as I am concerned.

MR. HEALTH: I think it is kaputt again your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, it seems that a few minutes will elapse before channel 3 may be reactivitated so we will take advantage of the noon recess and then you can begin afresh immediately after the noon recess. The court will be in recess until 130.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR HEATH: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Heath. BY MR. HEATH:

Q Mr. Ohlendorf, to speed this examination I'd like to attempt to agree with you upon one or two points. First, we shall not quarrel about numbers, You have indicated that Einsatzgruppe D under your command slaughtered something less than 90,000 human beings. I understood you to suggest to the Court that this figure is exaggerated although it appears in an affidavit which you have given. I ask you now to give the Court the best estimate you possibly can of the minimum number of human beings who were killed under your command by Einsatzgruppe D. give any definite figure, and that even the testimony in my affidavit shows that in reality I could not name any figure. Therefore, I have named a figure which has been reported "approximately". The knowledge which I have gained by this day through the documents and which I have gained through conversations with my men, make me reserve the right to name any figure and strengthen this reservation. Therefore, I am not in a position to give you a minimum figure, either. In my direct examination I have said that the numbers which appear in the documents are at least exaggerated by one half, but I must repeat that I never knew any definite figure and therefore cannot give you any such figure.

Q You can not give us a minimum figure? my reasons why I cannot give any figure.

Q Well, let me ask you -- perhaps I can help you ... In any event, I can indicate to the Court one reason why you might have doubt about the numbers.

In 1943 the Reichsfuehrer SS Himmler addressed the SS Major Generals at Posen. You are aware of that speech, are you not?

Q Perhaps you recall his complaint, and I will read it to you: "I come now to a fourth virtue, which is very rare in Germany - to truthfulness. One of the greatest evils which has spread during the war is the lack of truthfulness in messages, reports, and statements, which subordinate departments in civil life in the State, the Party and the Services sent in to the departments over them," Of course, that was in 1943.

Did you exaggerate the reports which you sent to the RSHA? were reported to me, and I know that double countings could not be avoided, and I also knew that wrong numbers were reported to mo, I have avoided to pass on such double countings or wrong statements because the neighboring units did not know their figures and, nevertheless the reporting of wrong figures was not prevented - and especially the reporting of strange figures - figures of other units were not prevented. The the report from Chernovitz is certainly the reporting of such strange figures, namely, the reporting of such actions which were done by the Roumanians in Chernovitz. system was maintained in Einsatzgruppe D to keep track of the people slaughtered? were sent from the Commandos to the Einsatzgruppe, and these reports were gone over and the figures contained in them were sent to the RSHA.

Q Well, it is quite obvious that that is what happened. But tell us now who reported for Einsatzkommando 12, say, during the first six months of its operations the killings by Einsatzkommando 12, to you?

Q And who was the man who reported to you? in this case by the then Sturmbannfuehrer Nosske. numbers killed by his unit? for example, was 200 or 250 kilometers away from me.

Q Witness, I don't mean to cut you off, but I think if I ask you now to attempt to make your answers as responsive as possible, I shall attempt to make my questions as explicit as possible - and I believe we both shall benefit. So - I ask you again - now why you did not check up on Nosske, but simply the question ... Did you rely on Nosske for truthful reports of the slaughters committed by Einsatzkommando 12?

A I didn't understand the last part of the question. Only the last part of the translation.

THE PRESIDENT: Please repeat the question, Mr. Heath, BY MR. HEATH: of persons slaughtered by Einsatzkommando 12 while it was under his command?

A I was of the opinion that these reports were truthful. In the case of Nosske however, in one case it was brought to my attention that the report was not truthful. But that was relatively at an early stage in Nikolajev.

case which were not killed by his kommando but by a strange unit. exaggerating the number killed by his unit? unit under you?

Q Yes, do you recall an exaggeration in the case of 10-A?

Q Any other Einsatzkommando do you recall exaggerating figures? yourself in today, it should be possible for you to give us a minimum figure based on the reports of the man who were under you, should it not? one half years that to the best of my knowledge, about ninety-thousand people were reported by M 4 Einsatzkommandos. How many of those were actually killed I do not know and I can not really say.

Q Very well, we will leave this after one more question. This figure ninety thousand is the best estimate you can give at this moment. I take it we must continue to read that with the qualification that you gave in direct testimony, that you think there is a great deal of exaggeration in it?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, I do not understand the witness to say that he regarded the figure ninety-thousand to be an exaggeration. He states, and he stated not only here but before the International Military Tribunal, that his estimate of the number killed by the Einsatzgruppe D during the time he was in charge was ninety-thousand, and he comes to that conclusion from the reports and that is what I understand he says today.

MR. HEATH: I agree with Your Honor: I had understood him to say that in the transcript his testimony was - - go ahead?

THE WITNESS: I am not quite in agreement with this answer, Your Honor. Insofar as I said that the number ninety-thousand was reported as having been killed, but I cannot really say whether that number had been actually killed, I would not want to say from the last that they were killed by the Einsatzgruppen, because from exaggeration I also knew definitely that the Einsatzkommando reports of the killings were made which were carried out by other units. Therefore, I could only repeat that ninety-thousand were reported.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you may agree to what I have stated, but you will have to agree to what you stated yourself on January 3, 1946, you were asked: "Do you know how many persons were liquidated by the Einsatzgruppen D under your direction." And you answered: "In the year between June 1941 and June 1942 the Einsatzkommandos reported ninetythousand people liquidated,"

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Question: "That included men, women and children? Answer: Yes, Question: On what do you base these figures? Answer: On reports sent by the Einsatzkommando to the Einsatzgruppen. Question: Were those reports submitted to you? Answer: Yes."

MR. HEATH: Your Honor, please, if I may interrupt, the defendant, I think I can clear up the difficulty. I have the advantage of having the transcript of his testimony before me.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. HEATH: I don't know that Your Honor has had the opportunity to sec it.

THE PRESIDENT: No, I have not.

MR. HEATH: He did make this statement with respect to the affidavit which you just read.

THE PRESIDENT: It is not the affidavit. This is testimony put to him in court.

MR. HEATH: He followed by that to this extent in the case of the direct examination. BY MR. HEATH:

Q Witness, this is from your testimony of last week. He said, if of course, the figure of ninety-thousand was named by me, I always added that in this fifteen to twenty percent are double countings, that is, on the basis of my own experience. I do not know any longer how I could have remembered the number of just ninety-thousand, because I did not keep a register of these figures. The "approximately" must have meant that I was not certain. It is evident that I mentioned this number of ninety-thousand by adding a number of other figures. I do not mention this in order to excuse myself, as I am perfectly convinced that it does not matter from the actual fact whether it was forty-thousand or ninetythousand. I mention this for the reason that in the situation in which we are today, politically speaking, figures are being dealt with in irresponsive manner. That is the qualification that I had referred to.

THE PRESIDENT: But that still does not in any way take away from what he said on January 3, 1946.

MR. HEATH: I agree, sir, with you.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the testimony of that day, and it still stands now as he gives this explanation and the Tribunal sees no difference between what he said then and what he said today, namely, that this estimate of ninety-thousand is based upon the report which he personally saw.

MR. HEATH: Alright, sir.

THE WITNESS: With what was just read by the President of my affidavit of 3 January 1946 I agree completely.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Anything else which I have said on direct examination is merely a commentary to the testimony of 3 January 1946.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. HEATH: Very wall, sir; BY MR. HEATH:

Q As we adjourned for lunch, Mr. Ohlendorf, I had begun to ask you about the Karaimians and the Krimschacks, I think you called them.

Q I beg your pardon?

Q Karaimians. I understood that you were confronted in the south of Russia with the question further to slaughter Krimschacks. Krimschacks I understood were human beings who had come by way of Italy to Russia, and they carried with them and they had Jewish blood. The direction which you got from Berlin was to kill the Krimschacks, is that correct? another sect whom you encountered in the south of Russia, and this sect had no Jewish blood, but it did share the religious confessions of the Jews. Is that right? should be killed, and I understood you to say that the order you got from Berlin was you shall not kill them for they have nothing in common with the Jews except the confession?

had no idea, and that you have no cause today to think that there was any plan to exterminate the Jewish race in existence, nor that you had any information of putting it into effect. Is that right? between the Karaimians and the Krimschecks, except Jewish blood?

A I understand your question completely. In reference to the Eastern Jews, in the case of the Jews who were found in the Eastern Campaign it was the order that these Jews are to be killed for the reason that they were considered carriers of Bolshevism, and, therefore, considered as endangering the security of the German Reich, This concerned the Jews who were found in Russia, and it was not known to me that the Jews in all of Europe were being killed, but on the contrary I knew that down to my dismissal these Jews ware not killed, but it was attempted by all means to get them to emigrate. The fact that the KarKaraimians were not killed showed that the charge of the Prosecution that persons were persecuted for their religion is not correct, for the Karaimians had that Jewish religion, but they could not be killed because they did not belong to the Jews in Russia, and because they did not belong to the Jewish Race. the last sentence, "They did not belong to the Jewish Race," is that right?

Q They were found in Russia?

Q But they participated in the Jewish Confession in Russia? blood in them?

Q So they came absolutely under the Fuehrer Decree; or the Streckenbach Order to kill all Jews?

Q Except for blood?

A Because they were of Jewish origin. For you must understand the Nazi Ideology as you call it. It was the opinion of the Fuehrer that in Russia and in Bolshevism, the representatives of this blood showed themselves especially suitable for this idea, therefore, the carriers of this blood became especially suitable representatives of the Bolshevism. That is not on account of their faith, or their religion, but because of their human make-up and character.

Q And because of their blood, right? their nature and their characteristics. Their blood, of course, has something to di with it.

Q Let's see, if I can understand it; we got a lot of time, I hope. What was the distinction except blood?

A Between whom?

Q Between the Karaimians and the Krimschecks?

Q Only the difference in blood, is that so? was blood? has not been doubted during the entire trial, that in this Fuehrer Order the Jews were designated as the ones who belonged to that circle in Russia and who were to be killed.

Q Very well, witness, let's not quibble. Let's come back again. What you followed was the Fuehrer order, Now I leave you out of it for a moment, your own idea of what should be killed and what should not be killed.

THE PRESIDENT: I disagree with you, Mr. Heath, that the witness has quibbled. I think he has stated very clearly that his orders were to kill all Jews, that was the criterion which he followed. If he was a Jew he was killed, if he was not a Jew then they might figure some other reason to kill him but he wouldn't be killed because he was a Jew.

MR HEATH: Yes, Your Honor, I am attempting to get him to say the word blood and not the word Jews. That is the reason I was saying he is quibbling, but I am perfectly happy to leave it where it is.

THE PRESIDENT: I think he has been rather forthright.

MR. HEATH: Very well. BY MR HEATH:

Q Let's see, Mr. Ohlendorf, let's go for a moment to this order which you got at Pretsch in the Spring of 1941. Did you have any knowledge whatever of the purposes of the Einsatzgruppen before you went to Pretsch?

Q But you did not know what they were to do? missions in which people of the Security Police and the SD were working that is, of course, true. Security Police would be to slaughter Jews and Gypsies?

A I could no longer say today that I had such an idea, but I don't believe so. In my opinion the order about the killing of the Jews was known to me for the first time in Pretsch, that is, for the Russian campaign. Einsatzgruppen to kill all Jews and Gypsies and certain other categories, you would remember it today -- would you not, Mr. Ohlendorf?

Q And. twice you refused?

Q The order in the first instance came from Heydrich? came from Heydrich?

Q You refused both the first and the second order?

Q Why?

A For two reasons. For one thing, because I had not been a soldier and did not have any interest in the military, secondly, because I was not a policemen, and had no interest for police work, and police work was against my nature, and third, because I had a genuine job to do in Berlin which I knew would not be replaced once I left it, and I wanted to do a job in which I could do the best I had. circumstances, excuse me, Ohlendorf was your military superior, was he not?

THE PRESIDENT: Ohlendorf you say? BY MR HEATH:

Q I mean, Heydrich? order must be obeyed without a question? people you have told us because you were ordered to do it, not because you wished to do it?

people please stick to that and question me about this matter.

Q I'll come to that in due time. I shall ask you now again how you refused the first Heydrich order to join the Einsatzgruppe? leave Berlin, and I said in my direct examination I was indispensible to the Reich Trade Group, that is, I had a note in my military passport which obligated me to work for the Reich Trade Group, and, therefore, Heydrich first had to consult me and remove this note. Therefore I had the chance to discuss these matters with him. go to Russia, and twice I refused?

Q Did you go to Heydrich and say, I refused to go to Russia? I used the tact which is necessary when discussing such matters with a superior, that is usually customary.

Q On the second occasion what happened? you were able to persuade him to relieve you of that assignment?

A When the last order came I could not evade it. How strenuously he insisted on this could be seen from the fact that Mueller and Streckenbach, Chief of the Gestapo and Chief of Personnel, were of the opinion that it would not be useful to give me an Einsatzgruppe, and they also protested to Heydrich about giving me the command of an Einsatzgruppe, but since he wanted it, the third order came down, and there was no chance to evade it this time.

Q I didn't follow you there. Who was it that insisted, Streckenbach? Mueller.

were to do in Russia?

A I don't know.

Q I beg your pardon?

A I don't know whether he did. any idea of what they were to do? job away from the Army, whereas, up to that time he had detailed personnel to the Army, and the Army worked without letting him in on his work, therefore, he expanded his domination to include the operational areas. gruppen? Armed Forces High Command and the Army Command, and Heydrich commissioned these two agencies. you to go to Russia in command, he knew what work you were going to perform in Russia, did he not?

A Whether he already had the Fuehrer's Order I don't know. I only knew the fact that the Einsatzgruppen were being set up. say, what the Einsatzgruppens were to do?

Q Now he had a special order?

Q In your direct testimony you said the order read as follows: Did you see the order yourself?

A No, I did not say, it read as follows? I merely gave the contents, for I always said, there was no written order.

Q I misunderstood you, the transcript said "Read as follows," So your understanding of the purposes of the Einsatzgruppen came from Streckenbach orally at Pretsch?

Q And you protested? a general protest.

Q What form, did your protest to Streckenbach take? possibly accomplished. It is impossible to ask people to carry out such executions.

Q Why? for people spiritually than to have to shoot defenseless populations. worse than to be shot either, when you are defenseless? for example, to starve.

Q It is not meant entirely ironically. I have read the whole of your testimony, and I am impressed by the fact that not once did you express any sympathy or regret.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr Heath, I don't think that that observation is in place.

MR HEATH: I withdraw it, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are not to comment on the witness. Ask him questions, and he is to answer them. What you think about him is of no consequence.

MR. HEATH: I know that, Your Honor, and I ask the Court's forgiveness for having out the question.
BY MR HEATH :

Q What form of protest did the other men present at the time? What did they say about this order which Streckenbach described?

bach and Millar were persons who had the same rank as the other Einsatzgruppen leaders, so that here there was lively protest not of a formal kind, but as among comrades, the reaction to this order was expressed in rough words, and I sail in my direct examination that Streckenbach immediately interfered in our argument and confirmed it in even stronger terms than we had just expressed it.

Q. What was Streckenbach's rank?

A. At that time he was Bridgadefuehrer or Gruppenfuehrer. At any rate he was the chief of an office, as I was, and as Nebe who led the Einsatzgruppe B, and besides Rasch was in the same rank.

Q. Now you have answered my question. What other protest was made besides pointing out to Streckenbach the bad effect on the morale of troops who would have to do these killings?

A. I didn't get the question.

(The question was repeated by the interpreter.)

A. I didn't mention that sentence. I merely said that the order for the killings was an inhumane order. I didn't speak of morale, for those experiences were to be made only afterwards when the order was carried out. Here is tas merely a protest of the inner being of each man against such an order.

Q. A protest against killing defenseless human beings, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. How strongly did you feel that at the time?

A. I don't know how to explain this to you.

Q. Was it sufficiently strong, your feeling of revulsion, was it sufficiently strong for you to doubt the possibility that the head of the German State had ordered any such thing?

A. I didn't understand the question.

Q. You say that you felt very strongly that this was an inhumane order.

A. Yes.

Q. Did your feeling of revulsion against what was ordered cause you to question whether the head of the German State had in fact made such an order?

A. First of all, it was not concerpt. If I must describe this feeling I would have to say grief and sorrow, not only for the momentary order but for the moral and spiritual consequences which such orders would have to have in their wake and which are still not concluded.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I don't think that you quite grasp the questions which Mr. heath put to you. Let me try to put it. Were you appalled and shocked by this order that you questioned whether it could be true and that possibly some mistake had been made and that the Head of the State had not issued such an order?

THE WITNESS: I did not doubt the fact that the Fuehrer had given it because this was also the first reaction of Streckenbach, that he repeated this word, "Fuehrerorder" to us.

Q. (By Mr. Heath) With no prior information from anyone about the order you were fully prepared to believe and did believe that Adolf Hitler had ordered those exterminations?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, I don't understand why you want to pursue that business. There is no doubt that the order was issued by the Head of the State. It was so explained to him. He believed it, acted on it and executed it, so why do you question that?

MR. HEATH: If your Honor please, I was trying to get, with the Court's permission, at this man's state of mind and why having access to Heydrich and having access to Himmler if he thought it impossible that.

THE PRESIDENT: He didn't think it was impossible. He never said he thought it was impossible. He knew the order came from Hitler, Himmler, et al., and accepted it.

MR. HEATH: I had not so understood, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think there is any Question that he accepted it as coming from the higher leaders. Do you have some doubt that he accepted it as such?

MR. HEATH: If your Honor please, I have no doubt that he accepted it as such and acted on it as such,

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I forgot to turn the switch, I will remember to keep it up.

MR. HEATH: Shall I repeat that answer to your, your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, please.

MR. HEATH: I said, sir, I have no doubt that he accepted it and I have no doubt that he acted on it as an order coming from Hitler. What I am attempting to find out is his state of mind when he tells the Court as he has, "I felt bound I had to act because of the military command." I am trying to get the witness to explain to us why if he was horrified by this order, as he says he was, he did not use the channels that were open to him: to go to Heydrich, to go to Himmler, and to question whether Hitler had in fact ordered this thing.

THE PRESIDENT: For the simple reason that there was no doubt in his mind that the order had. come down.

MR. HEATH: Very well, very well.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the reason he didn't go.

MR. HEATH: Very well, if it is as clear as that, Your Honor, I shall certainly not labor it any further.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the conclusion the Tribunal reaches, and if we are in error I am sure the witness will volunteer directing us.

Q. (By Mr. Heath) Witness, I leave that now and go to this question that we haven't quite finished with yet. Streckenbach, when you men protested this order, said, "I myself protested a similar order in Poland, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. "And my protest came to nothing." I suppose he told you that, did he not?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact he said, I think, that Himmler had rebuked him for protesting.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when he told you that, did it occur to you that Jews in Poland, who had been the subject of a similar order prior to your invasion of Russia were not properly classified as bearers of Bolshevism in what was the nearly Fascist state of Poland?

A. I don't know that the same thing was ordered and carried out in Poland what was ordered and executed in Russia. I know just from this talk with Streckenbach, that individual actions were ordered in Poland, but not that a general order existed, and Streckenbach already at that time protested against single actions. These aporadic actions were not so much directed against Jews as also against Poles for the reason that after the invasion of the German troops there were border guards who as exaggerated retaliation revenged themselves on the Poles who whortly before and after the outbreak of the war had committed misdeeds on Ethnic Germans and had killed a large number of them, and Streckenbach objected to these actions, and I was personally a witness in the dispute between him and. Himmler because this happened on the official trip on which I accompanied Himmler.

Q. How long have you known Walter Schellenberg?

A. Walter Schellenberg?

Q. Walter Schellenberg.

A. I know him since my SD time, since 1936.

Q. You have told the court that you did not want to go to Russia. Do you recall the conversation about going to Russia which you had with Walter Schellenberg after your return to Berlin?

A. No. I don't.

Q. Do you remember saying to Schellenberg that he was not a good National Socialist in that he had not proved himself?

A. I don't think I have ever expressed myself in such a primitive form. I never used such phraseology until this very day.

Q. You must understand that the language I use is a quotation from an interrogation of Walter Schellenberg. I know that you and Schellenberg used better German than comes out in English. I have heard it said that you use excellent German yourself.

A. Mr. Prosecutor, you can depend on the fact that since 1937 I have had such a bad relationship with Schellenberg - which I don't want to describe here - that in the year 1942 when I know him even better than in 1937, I certainly did not have any such talks with him.

Q. Well, I don't want to increase your troubles with Mr. Schellenberg, but he has said some good things about you, as well as that. I will ask you again, did he not answer you and tell you that you were rather slow because he knew how to avoid service with the Einsatzgruppen and you didn't know how to do it?

A. That is so grotesque that I don't know any answer other than I can only say to you that Schellenberg would have taken any possibility to pick out an Einsatzgruppe in which he could have done the most to please Himmler, for nothing else was the purpose of his life down to the very moment when he believed he could please and had to please other persons.

Q. Now, let us move to something that is not qrotesque. I want to ask you, or I say this, Sir, You have told the Court repeatedly that to your knowledge there was absolutely no purpose to exterminate races. You are charged here, of course, with war crimes, which is one kind of killing, and crimes against humanity which is another kind of killing. You have told the Court that you have no reason today to believe that these killings were part of an extermination program. I want to ask you further, you are aware of this speech which Hitler made in 1953 at the party rally in Nurnberg, and I would like to ask you, when I have read you this quotation, to comment on it, "But long ago man has proceeded in the same way with his fellowmen. A higher race, at first higher in the sense of possessing a greater gift for organization, subjects to itself a lower race, and thus constitutes a relationship which now embraces races of unequal value. There thus results the subjection of a number of people under the will often of only a few persons, a subjection based simply on the right of the stronger, a right which, as we see it in nature can be regarded as the sole conceivable right because founded on reason." Do you recall that or any of the similar outgivings of Adolf Hitler during the period 1933 on?

please the Prosecution especially. Despite repeated readings I have still not understood it to this date, Perhaps the last two sentences are reasonable, but the first two-thirds I cannot make any sense out of. a great deal of Hitler's statements, were you not? about politics from various scattered quotations. If one were to do this it would be hard to find any statesman of one whom could say that he had ever any definite idea. for statesmen are in the difficult position of being in politics which is something changing and developing and statesmen always adapt themselves to this changing characteristic of politics. This has not been only a quality of Hitler but all statement use to do this until this very day. the jurists of the Third Reich, Karl Schmidt, whom you quote in your direct examination, as the author of what you call the theory of "friend and foe". You pointed out to the Court that this theoretician of the Nazi movement, the top legal theoretician, had, in your opinion, an impossible doctrine. Schmidt was the top juridical commentator on the Nazi State, was he not?

A In '33 and '34, yes, but then it was at an end after that,

Q Now, in Schmidt's conception man had the very power, which Hitler described here, too coerce his weaker brother, did he not, the moral, right to do it? ppeared as the top jurist of the Third Reich because he credited such mistaken theories to National Socialism. because he opposed your view of National Socialism?

A That is very difficult. You ask very much. National Socialism, unfortunately, had no time to work out its theory thouroughly and thus I looked in vain for even one book of principles on which National Socialism really was based.

MR. HEATH: If your Honor please, my connection is broken here now. Will you speak please?

(The interpreters tested the channel).

Q (By Mr. Heath) Let us go to Gottfried Feder. When was his influence ended in Germany? undersecretary in the Ministry of Agriculture in 33, this was the last honor which one gave him. Actually he didn't have anything to say in the Agricultural Ministry after 1933, nor did he have any political significance at all.

Q Very well. He was free of political pressure, and it was he who said that the master race dogma was the emotional foundation of the Nazi movement. Do you care to comment on that, do you care to comment on the Herrenvolk, the importance of it to the Nazi movement? arrived at the idea of the master race from his own vanity. Outside of him and Ley and two other people there was certainly no logic in the leadership for raising this nonsense of the master race. The office for racial politics dealing with such racial problems never represented this theory. dates. In August, 1942, we find Rosenberg, spokesman, saying "The Slavs are to work for us. Insofar as we do not need them they may die. Therefore compulsory vaccination and Germanic health services are superfluous. The fertility of the Slavs is undersirable." Now, Rosenberg, would you classify him as the spokesman for the National Socialist State?

A Certainly, but I don't believe that he expressed this in this form for I know him personally. He was anything but a man who would even say such a thing;certainly not act accordingly. I never could consider him an enemy of the Slavs.

Q Very well. He himself, I "believe, came from Russia, did he not?

Q Wall, let's see about Hans Frank. How do you place him in the Nazi hierarchy in 1941 at the time you were in Russia? conditions in the Reich considered him anything else, not even Hitler.

A The same thing would go for Frank as what I said before. You might quote from him about the legal state as it could not have been formulated any better by the best Democrat, and you could list him as the greatest enemy of the SS and of the police, but he was taken seriously neither as the one nor as the other, and the fact that he came to the General Government was the result of the fact that Hitler did not want to make him Minister of Justice, even though the Minister of Justice was deceased and no one had been found to replace him. The General Government was not considered to be a permanent organization and therefore the Governor General, the title of the Governor General was considered to be honorary, and even a Frank was not considered to be able to spoil it, because he had a "spiritual strength". (Tuhalt") Socialism, is it not, that psychopaths and irresponsibles were given power in a personal state?

A I don't think that it is a single case, but this has happened time and again in politics. difficulties in the Party came from your opposition to those men who advocated total destruction of the objective or instituional state, is that right?

Q You had been convinced by a year's study of Mussolini's personal autocracy that Italian Fascism was a bad thing?

institutional restraints on men who weilded power? unrestricted dictatorship in the form of a totalitarian state. words, do we not? power to legislate by himself without the restraint of any constitution, was he not in precisely the same situation and did he not have the same power to act that Mussolini had acquired, from the legal standpoint?

A Yes, I understand you completely. The difference is that the one was National Socialist and the other was FAscist. Hitler did not for himself, did not make up a constitution for an ah solute; stats, but because he had a different opinion of the state he had himself given power for a definite period of time. And this was nothing else but a constitutional means, which during the parliamentary period of the Weimar Constitution was also used then, especially in the years '31 and '32, when Paragraph 48 of the Weimar Constitution was the basic support of the government. This law giving a government the power must not let one conclude that Hitler wanted to establish a dictatorships, but he took a constitutional means, and I know that during the entire time of the Hitler Government, even during the wars it was the idea to build a senate, a kind of parliamentary system, and I know, that several times Hitler complained to acquaintances that he still had not found any man who could rebuild the state for him and who could give the state the appropriate legal form. I don't believe that Hitler wanted a dictatorship.

mind Hitler wanted something other than a personal dictatorship. power? power? you entertained, you have told the Court, was shared by a number of intellectuals who gathered around you in the SD -you persevered in the hope that some day your view would succeed and the absolute dictatorship would be limited by institutions or by law?

A Yes, that is right, I was convinced of this fact for two reasons: especially because it was known that after the war Hitler wanted to lay down the affairs of state and merely wanted to remain head of the State and thus I understood from his misgivings and from his contempt toward very many people, it was his interest to establish certain safeguards for the new political forces.

And the second reason was the knowledge of the front generation. In the SD we had knowledge of a great number of letters, for example, of Hitler Youth Leaders, who severely objected to functions of the leader corps of the Nazi Party that is to say to the absolute power of the Party. Therefore, I was firmly convinced that the front generation after the war would start to have other conditions in German -- other than those which now existed as a result of a five-year war.

Q I understood you to qualify all of Hitler's hopes and expectations for limiting his absolute paver with this statement, "He hoped after the war to do that."

or until the war was finished? strict kind of leadership in Germany as existing in other states during the war; because of the fact that Hitler formally held the entire power, which actually was being distributed among the hierarchs below him -there was no genuine leadership in Germany during the war.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I think we are drifting very far afield here, but you just made one observation which has aroused a question in me. You stated that you would have wished that in Germany during the war there might have been leadership such as existed in other nations. Do you want to give an example?

THE WITNESS: For example, America.

THE PRESIDENT: If you would have had this kind of leadership in Germany there would have been no need for Hitler or for a war, don't you think?

THE WITNESS: I spoke of leadership during the war, Your Honor. I believe the leadership in America during the war was slightly different than the one during peace. The war legislation gave the President extraordinary powers and he then found organs who supplied him with extraordinary powers during war time, whereas in Germany, the means of power were actually already used up during the war because a Bormann and a Ley had spent these forcible measures too early; for psychologically seen, the subordinate will adapt himself to the measures of the superiors and the method uses itself up, but I am convinced that in America war was directed more strictly and organically than in Germany,

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Heath. under Himmler, did you not?

A No, one couldn't say that. This was only a little side activity. The main time of my activity was spent in economics, from 1938 to 1943 as a private man and from November 1943 to the end of the war as an official of the Reich Economics Ministry. the end of the war?

Q Yes. Now I want to question you about your relationship with Himmler, briefly. I understand you to say in your direct examination that in - Let's begin at the beginning. May I recite briefly: In 1926 you joined the NSDAP.

Q 1925. Then you distributed booklets from house to house according to your word you did everything that was to be done in the small party membership at that time. Then you went to Italy, I believe, and when you came back you conducted a Party training course.

Q Well, those dates are not important. Let us begin in 1933. Your first official position was referendar in Hildesheim. Economy in Kiel?

A Yes, that's right. 1934? the Roehm action in the Party, also the Bolshevist tendencies?

A That would be very nice for you, but it wasn't that way, unfortunately. These were National Bolshevist circles and not Roehm circles. I could give you the names, but I do not think they will interest you.

Q No, they don't. I wasn't clear. I didn't know what you meant precisely because I find this -

A It was a mistake in the translation. These were National Bolchevist circles.

Q You were arrested in 1934 at the request of the Party?

Q That is the NSDAP? from Kiel?

Q At the request of the Party?

Q Rosenberg?

A That again was somewhat later. That was during the activity in Berlin. in 1934?

Q You then went to Berlin?

A I am sorry I didn't get it in the German.

(The interpreter repeated the question.) school into an economic school. National Socialism?

Q And Rosenberg then killed that plan for you? examination "Thus my scholastic plans were definitely at an end, but simultaneously my political activity was also at an end. Dr. Wagner warned me about attacking National Socialist politics in my speeches." Is that right? So thus far you were in opposition to the ruling Party authority?

Q Now, you were out of work in 1935 and 1936, or weren't you?

A I was not without work. I said in already the direct examination that I did earn my living, but I bad no great future plans. I also stated that I directed a library in the Institute for Applied Sciences.

Q All right. In May you entered the SD, May, 1936? SD?

Q Who was that?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, do you want to suspend now for the afternoon recess?

MR. HEATH: I beg your pardon.

THE PRESIDENT: Suspend now for the afternoon recess?

MR. HEATH: Whatever time suits Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for 15 minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. HEATH: May I proceed your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Heath. BY MR. HEATH:

Q Mr. Ohlendorf, at length I was attempting, before the recess, to show what I will now summarize.

You were in constant conflict with Party leadership on matters of ideology and practice, were you not?

A I want to intervene here. During the time the Prosecution refers to the Party had very little to do with ideologies; but my interventions were mostly concerned with practical politics - that is, in particular against the policy of the food Ministry Reichsnaehrstand.

Q Let me rephrase the question. Prom time to time, from 1936 until the end, you found yourself in opposition to so powerful leaders of the State as Goebbels, Bormann, Ley---is that right? in writing your reports he would speak to the Fuehrer about you and have put where you belonged, and your subordinates put where they could do more useful labor?

A Did you say Himmler?

A I can't remember that. on the occasion? I believe.

belonged. Soon after that you went with Himmler on a official trip to Warsaw, did you not?

A There is an error concerning the years. The occurrence you described as a Himmler occurrence when he threatened to send me to a concentration camp and to dissolve my office was in the year 1943.

My official trip with Himmler--when I was one among fifty--was at the beginning of November 1939.

Q I see. I think I have made the error; all right. Well, you went to Poland with Himmler in 1940?

Q 1939. All right. And Heydrich sent you along with Himmler, you say? Disputes arose between you and Himmler in 1939?

Q That's all right, whether it was monoloque or not. He reproached you that members of the SD in Poland had not been able to treat the Jews in a manner in which he wanted, and that you say, "was a product of my education."

What was it he wanted done to the Jews in Poland which he said you had failed to do?

to the prosecutor or his previous questions. It was in the same city, where differences between Streckenbach and Himmler occured. It concernto the order which controlled you in Russia?

A Yes. During the direct examination I already answered the questions, but the President, and today I answered your questions, that once concerning certain definite single actions. differed from the order which controlled killing of Jews in Poland in 1939? during the entire time of the committment, the killing of all Jews had been ordered. Special actions in Poland had been ordered, whose contents I do not know in detail.

to treat or to dispose of Jews in Poland, did he not specify, beyond what you have just told the Court?

A No. He attacked me in a public place, where the people accompanying him were together with some officers, and shouted at me across the table that this man was the product of my education. He wanted to express by this that he had behaved in an unsoldierly manner and that instead of acting he had examined questions which might result from such connections. It was not even a monologue in this sense, but merely shouting at me when I was sitting at the table. No actual discussion took place.

Q Did you know what it was that Himmler was rebuking you for?

A He had asked this certain SD man what he had done. He met him in the street and this man replied to him that he had studied the Jewish question in that territory, and the expression "studied" annoyed him so much. "studied" the Jewish question, Himmler was impatient and rebuked you because a man had used the word "study"?

Q Is that all that you know about Himmler's disaproval of the SD in Poland in relation to the Jews?

Q Well, that may mean a number of things. What did it mean to you? fuehrer Wolf, at that time chief adjutant of Himmler's ordered me to come, and revealed to me that Himmler wanted me to leave this service because agreement between him and myself was not possible, but there were other causes for this as well--not only this one. tell us about it?

the use of the word "study" - Himmler was impatient, because no study necessary about what was known the Jewish problem in Poland, but acting without study. Is that what he meant?

A No, it was much simpler. He merely accused the man that instead of helping to act, he merely occupied himself with obtaining information.

right? you further who ordered you to instigate pogroms in Russia? announced in Pretsch. by instigating pogroms, is that correct? said this, who was also present during this discussion. to you? pogroms, did you not? not achieve pogroms?

report. In all these reports which were submitted as documents, Einsatzgruppe D in this report is only mentioned in one line with respect to pogroms. refuse to execute a part of the order which had been given you?

A I think on the contrary -- not to carry it out. Part of the order about the manner of killing was not carried out by me.

Q Part of the order about the manner of killing.... You also were called upon by the Army to kill insane people in Russia?

Q Were you ordered by the Army to do that?

this was addressed to me as a request. It suggested to me as I would express it best. to you?

A I cannot say that any more now. It might have been Central Organs of the Army, or, generally, it would have been suggestions of local headquaters to local agencies of one of my commands. With such matters one did not come to me in my central position. of this decree, or this order to kill, and that it had the obligation also to execute the order within its ability? Is that right?

A Yes; but I do not know that in this order insane persons were mentioned; but I would have considered the insane persons kust like anybody else because they would have come under the order if they owing to their condition, would have endangered security - but not because they were insane alone, and for that reason I rejected this request.

Q You don't mean to say that the persons you killed had to endager security in order to be killed, do you?

Q Well, let's not say about the sense of the Fuehrer Order. Let's talk about reality. Did the people you killed in fact endager security in any conceivable way?

A Even if you don't want to discuss the Fuehrer Order it cannot be explained in any other way. There were two different regions one, where those people who, through the Fuehrer Order, were considered to endanger the security and, therefore, had to be killed. The others, namely, the active Communists or other people were people whose endangering of security was established by us and they were only killed if they

Q Very well. I repeat my question. Apart from the Fuehrer Order, and not because the Fuehrer Order assumed that every man with Jewish blood endangered the security of the Wehrmacht ... but from your own experience in Russia, from your own objective witnessing of the situation in Russia, did every Jew in Russia that you killed in fact endanger security, in your judgment? Order because this Fuehrer Order did not try to evade temporary danger, but also danger which might arise in the future. us see if we can't talk about it without the Fuehrer Order. I ask you the simple question... From your own objective view of the situation in Russia, did the Jews whom you killed, and the Gypsies, endanger the security of the German Army in any way?

I did not examine that in detail. I only know that many of the Jews who were killed actually endangered the security by their conduct, because they were members of the partisans, for example, or supporting the partisans in any way, or housing agents, etc.

Q Let's put the partisans or those who were aiding the partisans completely aside?

A I will assist you, Mr. Prosecuter. Of course, at a certain time there were persons when one could not have said that at that moment they were an immediate danger, but that does not change the fact that for us it meant a danger insofar as they were determined to be a danger, and none of us examined whether these persons at the moment, or in the future, would actually constitute danger, because this was outside our knowledge, and not part of our task.

Q Very well. You did not do it then because it was outside of your task. I want you to do it today for this Tribunal. Will you tell us then whether in your objective judgment apart from the Fuehrer's Decree, all of the Jews that you killed constituted any conceivable threat to the German Wehrmacht. not connected with the Fuehrer's Order. Therefore, I can not give you this answer which you would like to have. make - - you need not answer that. Let me make it clear then, in the Crimea - - No, I believe near Nilelajew, Himmler came to see you in the Spring of 1942, did he not, or Fall of 1941? farmers is that right, and you had determined not to put them to death? constitute any security threat whatever to the German Wehrmacht?

the general situation, and of the Army. I considered it more correct not to kill these Jews because the opposite would be achieved by this, namely, in the economical system of this country everything would be upset, which would be of importance to the operation of the Wehrmacht as well.

Q Then, I ask you the question again. Because these people were farmers, you concluded that it was wiser to get grain they produces, than to put them to death? I was conscious of this danger.

Q Of the danger, that they might house partisans in their houses? the Jews would conceal partisans in their houses?

A No, I only named this as an example. There might have been agents against us who could endanger us in any way. I only mentioned this as an example. wouldn't it, or what do you call them, Karaimians.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, I must confess a confusion here. I understand the witness to say, or perhaps you said it, that the reason the Jewish farmers were not executed is that they were used to bring in the harvest. Then a discussion ensued as to the possible threat that these Jews could bring to the security because they could house partisans. There must be a contraciction there; in one instance, there was no need to kill them, and the other instance, they were a threat and therefore were subject to executions. Were they saved, or were they not saved. If they were saved, why, and if they were killed, why?

MR. HEATH: As I understood the witness, Your Honor, he said he was balancing the desirability of getting in the harvest as against a potential threat.

THE PRESIDENT: I see.

MR. HEATH: He exercised discretion.

THE PRESIDENT: And came to the conclusion that there was more to be gained not liquidating.

MR HEATH: Precisely, I understand it.

THE PRESIDENT: Is that correct?

THE WITNESS: I think it is even simpler. They were not farmers, they were craftsmen, who when there would be no longer work for them to do would endanger considerably the interests of the Wehrmacht. I never considered this problem in discussion but now Himmler came to me and ordered that without consideration to any other circumstances these Jews were to be treated according to the Fuehrer Order, without any further discussion, and without any further considering, of circumstances.
BY MR HEATH:

Q What about the gypsies. I believe you have no idea whatever as to how many gypsies your command killed, have you?

A No, I don't know.

Q On what basis did you kill gypsies, just because they were gypsies? Why were they a threat to the security of the Whermacht?

Q Blood? that the Jews actually during wars regularly carried on espienage service on both sides.

THE PRESIDENT: You were asked about gypsies. Jews?

Q I beg your pardon?

Q I think I best repeat the question. I would like to ask you now on what basis you conceived or determined that every gypsy found in Russia should be executed, because of the danger to the German Wehrmacht?

A There was no difference between gypsies and Jews. At the time the same order existed for the Jews. I added the explanation that it is known from European history that the Jews actually during all wars carried out espionage service on both sides.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, what we are trying to do is to find out what you are going to say about the gypsies, but you still insist on going back to the Jews, and Mr Heath is questioning about gypsies. Is it also in European history that gypsies always participated in political strategy and campaigns?

THE WITNESS: Espionage organisations during campaigns.

THE PRESIDENT: The gypsies did?

THE WITNESS: The gypsies in particular. I want to draw your recollection to extensive descriptions of the Thirty-year War by Richardo, Huch and Schiller -

THE PRESIDENT: That is going back pretty far in order to justify the killing of gypsies in 1941, isn't it? a part in this, to get at this decision.

THE PRESIDENT: Could you give us an illustration of any activity of a band of gypsies on behalf of Russia against Germany during this late war? that they actually played a part in the partisan war.

THE PRESIDENT: You, yourself can not give us any illustration of any gypsies being engaged in espionage or in any way sabetaging the German War effort?

A That is what I tried to say just now. I don't know whether it came out correctly in the translation.

For example, in the Gilay Mountains, such activity of gypsies have also been found.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know that of your own personal knowledge? the reports which came up from the Gilay Mountains.

THE PRESIDENT: In an instance in which gypsies were included among these who were liquidated, could you find an objective reason for their liquidation?

A From Russia I only knew of the gypsy problem from Sinferopel. I do not know any other actions against gypsies, except from the one in Sinferopol.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR HEATH: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, please, BY MR HEATH: gence? Isn't is a fact that the nationals of any invaded state are notorious bearers of intelligence. Don't the Americans bear intelligence, and the Germans bear intelligence, and the Russians bear intelligence for their countries when they were at war?

A I don't think so, But the difference is here that these populations for example, the German population, or the American population have permanent homes, whereas gypsies being unsettled as people without permanent homes are more prepared to change their residence for a more favourable economical situation, which another place may promise them. I believe that a German, for example, is very unsuited for espionage.

Q Well, let's not get into that. I understand you to say on direct examination that you took positive measures, to pacify the conquered territory, and you found that in reality the positive measures which you took as against these killings was about all that was necessary, except in the Crimea, is that right?

A I didn't quite understand your question?

Q I shall repeat it. "During my time in Russia. I sent a great number of reports in which I reported about the fine cooperation of the Russian population," do you remember that? said that you did not have the same fine cooperation in the Crimea, because there were so many Jews down there?

A No, I did not say that, but on the contrary. I even said that owing to the fact that I was able to remain very long in the Crimea and looked after the population there in a political respect very carefully the cooperation of the population in the Crimea and the Einsatzkommande became even closer than it was in the other areas.

Court No. IIA, Case No. IX.

Q Mr. Ohlendorf, what happened to the Jewish children, the gypsy children? parents.

Q Did you kill them just like their parents?

Q I don't understand your answer. Did your reports show the killing of children or did they show that children had been spared? to the security of the Wehrmacht a child constituted in your judgment? I did not have to determine the danger but the order contained that all Jews including the children ware considered to constitute a danger for the security of this area. for killing children except genocide and the killing of races? from the fact that this order did not only try to achieve a security but also a permanent security because for that reason the children were people who would grow up and surely being the children of parents who had been killed they would constitute a danger no smaller than that of the parents. tion of whole races in order to remove a real or fancied threat to the German people.

A Mr. Prosecutor, I did not see the execution of children myself although I attended three mass executions.

Q Are you saying they didn't kill children now?

A I did not say that. May I finish? I attended three mass executions and did not see any children and no command ever searched for children, but I have seen very many children killed in this war Court No. IIA, Case No. IX.

through air attacks, for the security of other nations, and orders were carried out to bomb, no matter whether many children ware killed or not,

Q Now, I think we are getting somewhere, Mr. Ohlendorf. You saw German children killed by Allied bombers and that is what you are referring to? bomber who drops bombs hoping that it will not kill children and yourself who shot children deliberately? Is that a fair moral comparison? covered a city that was a fortified city, square meter for square meter, with incendiaries and explosive bombs and again with phospherous bombs, and this done from block to block, and then as I have seen it in Dresden likewise the squares where the civilian population had fled to--that these men could possibly hope not to kill no civilian population and no children. And when you then read the announcements of the Allied leaders to this--and we are quite willing to submit them as document--you will read that these killings were accepted quite knowingly because one believed that only through this terror, as it was described, the people could be demoralized and under such blows the military power of the Germans would then also break down.

Q Very well, let's concede -- I think there is truth in what you say, though I never saw it. Does it occur to you that when the German Wehrmacht drove into Poland without provocation and when you drove into Norway and when you drove into the Low Countries and when you crushed France and when you destroyed Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Greece, when you put Roumania, Bulgaria under your heel, and then attempted to destroy the Russian State, does it occur to you that people resisting your tyranny stand on a higher moral level when they resort to the same horrible cruelties which you initiated in order to destroy your tyranny. Answer that, please.

which you referred to, in a different way than you do.

Q And that is also my opinion; on that we have a difference. events of the last weeks in particular even if the price of peace calls for force because there is a danger which, if it is not broken by force, will cause a battle of bloodshed, that we then as the ones who were closer to Bolshevism than you in the States, much sooner came to realize than you; and with this view I agree principally with your statesman in America at the moment, and I believe that among these statesmen hardly anyone does not hold the view that Roosevelt made a mistake when in 1942 he presumed that we were not in an emergency state concerning Russia, not in a German only, but also in an European state of emergency.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. This is a very interesting debate and if the Tribunal didn't have a very serious and solemn responsibility in passing upon the issue of guilt or innocence in the charges very solemnly drawn in the indictment, the Tribunal would be glad to listen to this debate which could go on for a very long time but since the issue is a very narrow one, Mr. Heath, let us try to adhere to the problem which is before the Tribunal, namely, is this defendant guilty of having perpetrated illegal killings.

MR. HEATH: Thank you for the admonition.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't mean by that that occasionally it is illuminating to get into these side issues but I am afraid this last exchange went beyond all bounds of normal discussion on a question of murder. BY MR. HEATH: the slaughtered in Russia. I think you have not yet answered my question. What conceivable threat to the Wehrmacht was offered by the children of gypsies and Jews, let's say under five years of age?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, the witness has stated that the reason these children under five, under four, under three, down to conception I imagine, were a possible threat to Germany in the future years. That is his answer and he stands on it.

MR. HEATH: Your Honor, I have no further questions. I trust I have not imposed too much on the patience of the Court.

THE PRESIDENT: You have not imposed on us. We have enjoyed your discussion very much.

A (BY THE WITNESS) Your Honor, may I say one thing. That was not for me the, reason for the killings, but merely to clarify the question of the Prosecutor I tried to give a possible motive for the Fuehrer Order, but not an argumentation of the conditions us they were with the Einsatz Commander in the East, because the Fuehrer Order also included the children, and I merely tried to give an answer to the question of the prosecutor but not my own personal view. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q What the Prosecutor put to you Mr. Witness is a very fair question, namely, you are an individual of intelligence, a person of reflection and you don't do things blindly and dumbly and when an order comes to you to kill down and shoot down in cold blood children that you had to give an explanation to your brain as to why it was necessary to do away with these tots. That is the question he put to you and your answer is you had the order of the Fuehrer because it constituted a threat to the future of Germany. time when I received the order.

MR. HEATH: Your Honor, I am in the unhappy plight of having to ask permission to ask one more question. We of the Prosecution objected to the same thing on the part of the gentlemen for the defense this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: I think the Prosecution on occasions forgets too.

MR. HEATH: I did forget, your Honor. BY MR. HEATH:

Q Mr. Ohlendorf, on the question of the order which you say you felt you had to honor and fulfill, the Fuehrer Order. It is a fact, is it not, that you could have failed in your duty as a soldier and escaped this without any penalty, in short, you could have played sick. direct examination because I expected it.

Q Let's see if you expect the next one - I suppose you do. At one juncture you were told by the Chief of Staff of the Army above you down there, in the South of Russia, that unless your collaboration with the Army improved, he, Colonel Woehler - I forget his name - he would recommend your immediate dismissal in Berlin, so there was a way, was there not, where you could have avoided service merely by refusing to be agreeable with other military gentlemen. Is that right?

debate but factual reproaches which were not true. And did not do anything else than rectify untrue reproaches.

Q I am sorry, I didn't understand that. Is it true that you were threatened with a recommendation for dismissal unless your collaboration with the Army improved?

A No, it was the first word of the Chief of staff, "If your cooperation with us does not improve we will request that you be dismissed," and then a number of factual reproaches which were untrue, and I merely had the possibility with regard to the Chief of Staff, to reject these untrue reproaches. Nothing else was being discussed. I do not think that you expect that, in order to be relieved, I should have allowed these reproaches which were not true, to be put on to me and my men. thing, I simply wanted to find out whether it was possible for you to win a dismissal from this job or task that you had by disagreeing with the military and you have it was. BY THE PRESIDENT: at pretsch when you first learned of this mission. How many of the defendants were present at that conference? this word - Nikolajev how many of the defendants were present if you recall?

Q Who?

leaders were there, only I cannot remember the individuals. stated that valuables and clothing were not taken from the victims? Valuables were taken away and a part of the clothing was also taken, I merely prohibited that they had to undress. outer clothing, were they not?

THE PRESIDENT: They are scolding me from the interpreters' section here.

Q (By the President): Witness, do you stand on all the testimony which you gave before the International Military Tribunal, you approve of what you said before the IMT?

A I only want to add two things. The record I have seen about my statement is very incorrect and there are several mistakes of context which not only change the matter but also contain expressions which don't make sense. For example for "conference" they put "food stores" or something. Inasfar as these mistakes are removed I stand up for my statement before the IMT. This does not concern the interrogations in your records, I know from experience that they are full of mistakes, and not one of the records was corrected by me afterwards or signed, but I talk now about my statement before the IMT. in Court and the interrogation?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Dr. Aschenauer.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I presume that Mr. Walton wants to continue with the cross-examination. I want to point out the ruling that only one member of the Prosecution is allowed to conduct the cross-examination. In the case against the generals, against the Southeast generals, the Prosecution tried the same thing, to have one general questioned in cross-examination by two prosecutors. The Tribunal ruled that it is not permitted, according to the ruling which applies before this Court, and only one prosecutor has the right to conduct cross-examination. For that reason I object to the coming cross-examination by Mr. Walton.

THE PRESIDENT: Can you point to any actual ruling of this Tribunal which prohibits the Prosecution from questioning the defendant on all phases even if two attorneys are required to do that or more?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, it is a decision by the Tribunal here in Nuernberg.

THE PRESIDENT: Which Tribunal?

DR. ASCHENAUER: That is the Tribunal which is in session against General List and Field Marshal von Weichs the Southeast generals.

THE PRESIDENT: Are List and von Weichs in this box?

DR. ASCHENAUER: No, but I presume that here the same ruling applies, and I also remember a written ruling where it says, "This ruling applies to all military Tribunals in Nuernberg."

THE PRESIDENT: Who said that?

DR. ASCHENAUER: That only one prosecutor is entitled to do the cross-examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Who said that it applied to all tribunal

DR. ASCHENAUER: It is my opinion it is a fixed jurisdictional ruling and that one Tribunal admits a decision and the other permits the reverse. The usual thing is that one ruling applies always and that one ruling of the various military tribunals also applies for this tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Aschenauer you very well know that cases differ from Court to Court There undoubtedly was a good reason for the ruling in that particular case, just as there is a good reason for the ruling in this case, and the ruling in this case is that your objection is overruled.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Then I can't add anything.

THE PRESIDENT: I will say naturally, Mr. Walton, that you will not go over the same field covered by Mr. Heath.

MR. WALTON: It is not the intention of the Prosecutor at this time to encroach on the field covered by Mr. Heath. However, they do overlap.

THE PRESIDENT: Wall, of course that would happen.

MR. WALTON: If I go too far afield the Tribunal will call my attention no it.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY MR. WALTON: examination that you were conscripted or drafted for the campaign in the East as a high-ranking member of the SS and the SD? examination that you were conscripted or drafted for the campaign in the East as a high-ranking member of the SS and S the Eastern campaign.

At the time I did not consider myself a high-ranking member of the SS and actually I was no such think. For that reason I could not say it.

Q Well, what was your rank at that time?

Q That is equivalent to a full colonel, is it not?

A I don't know the American army, but about the rank conditions I have already mode a statement in detail in my direct examination. Do not forget that I was a political SS leader and not a military SS leader and that the unit which I had to lead actually had the strength of a battalion and not that of a regiment with a colonel over it. campaign with the SS and SD units if you had not been a member of these organizations before the war? would have had or got the possibility to give me orders, I certainly would have evaded this fate. of the SS and SD before the war you would have been conscripted for service in some branch of the Armed Forces as distinct and seperate from the SS and SD? because as I said, I was considered indispensable for the Reich groups Trade (Handel). On the other hand, many people were drafted for this effort who were not members of the SS and had no connection with the SS or SD, and just for that reason they could be drafted because until then they were in a position which the Wehrmacht could not approach until then, for example, in plants which were considered essential for the war effort.

time, just now, that no SS and SD men were drafted by the Wehrmacht at the time of the campaign against Russia?

A No, that is incorrect. Many SS leaders were also in the Army. Himmler tried, of course, to stop SS leaders from joining the Wehrmacht because he himself did not have sufficient personnel. He continously got new orders to set up new divisions, and in '43 at least, he did not have sufficient officers and men who could be a basis for this new division. were not put in the Wehrmacht but retained in the SS and SD units? general way what the armament of an Einsatzgruppe was and more specifically Einsatzgruppe D? gruppe D had 180 vehicles. These trucks had two drivers each, and this figure is contained in the entire total of 500. This fact shows the limited number of actual experts because from the very beginning 200 drivers were deducted from the 500 men. This large number of vehicles shows that the Einsatzgruppe was fully motorized. The Waffen-SS, another 80 to 100 men, was particularly given for armed protection. They were equipped with automatic rifles. The others either had rifles or automatic rifles. I believe that is about the total equipment.

Q There was no light or heavy artillery, of course?

and the gypsies who were not partisans?

A Their equipment? gypsies who were not members of partisan bands. What was that? civilian population, had just as many and just as little weapons as it was usually the case. roundups or these assemblies came to them with their arms in their hands? similar occurrences, which you have submitted yourself.

Q Answer my question, General. Was it reported to you that Jews and gypsies who were required to register by your orders, passed through their own council of Elders, came to register with their arms in their hands?

Q only now do I understand you. I believe this is only a rhetorical question. If the Jews at the order of the SS police, had to be registered surely they would not appear with weapons, and I think I can guarantee that they did not appear with, weapons. say that the Jewish population, exclusive of partisan bands, had now arms, whatsoever, isn't it? already in a organized unit while, of course, there were a lot of passive partisans, that is to say groups who had weapons or poison and which only later would be organized and used by larger units.

Q I will state it differently. Then those Jews who did not belong to any active resistance movement, is it a general fact to say that they were unarmed members of the civil population?

A Certainly. Some of them did not have any weapons, of course. way you so desire the methods generally used by these Jews?

THE WITNESS: I am sorry, I cannot hear the translation.

THE WITNESS: I am sorry, the translation is interrupted.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. generally used by the Jews and gypsies to carry out their resistance to the armed forces if they were not members of partisan bands?

DR. ASCHENAUER: A similar question has alreday been asked by Mr. Heath, and I object to it it is really a repetition of what Mr. Heath said and it is one of the overlapping cases to which your Honor has indicated.

THE PRESIDENT: The question was very similar to it.

MR. WALTON: Very good, sir, I will withdraw it.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q (By Mr. Walton) General, can you give us a few examples of acts of sabotage which these people commited against your Einsatzgruppen or the German Armed Forces?

THE INTERPRETER: I am sorry, the channel is out. I can't hear.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. It seems as if it will take a little while to repair the channel so the Court will recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty o'clock.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 15 October 1947 at 0930 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II-S.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. WISMARCK (for the defendant Jost): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Jost, to prepare his examination on the witness stand, be excused this afternoon and tomorrow from presence in Court.

THE PRESIDENT: The request is granted, and the defendant Jost will be excused from attendance today and tomorrow.

DR. DURCHHOLZ (for the defendant Schulz): Your Honor, I would like to make the same request and ask that the defendant Schulz be excused for this afternoon to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The same approval is granted, and the defendant Schulz will be excused from attendance at the time indicated.

DR. LUMMERT (for defendant Blume): Your Honor, I have the same request for defendant Blume, for today.

THE PRESIDENT: And the request is also granted, for defendant Blume.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I only want to correct one translation mistake. Defendant Ohlendorf was asked yesterday about the speech of the Reichsfuehrer-SS in Poland. He replied to this, he had "heard about this speech hero." This "here" means here, in Nurnberg. That was not translated. In order to avoid a misunderstanding, I wish to point this out.

THE PRESIDENT: In other words, the defendant Ohlendorf indicated that he did not hear the speech at the point where it was delivered, but only heared of it here, in Nurnberg?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Let the record show, as so indicated.

MR. WALTON: With the permission of the Tribunal I shall proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Walton. BY MR. WALTON: about which so much has been said here, was an illegal order? and customs of war?

Q Have you ever heard of the Geneva Convention?

Q And have you ever heard of the Hague Convention? subject to military law, did you not know that the killing of civilians in occupied areas, without any trial, is considered by both international law and the laws and customs of war to be plain murder, and nothing else? the authority to decide whether a person was a Jew, or Gypsy, or a Communist, and to order his execution? commanding officer of that unit?

man was a Jew or a Gypsy and order his execution?

A I cannot answer to this question in a concrete manner; but before I do so I wish to point out that the question of discretion what could be done to carry out the order, - the entire situation should be considered. For example, concerning the Jews. It was usual that the Commandos called the Jewish Elders to determine who was Jewish and who was not. The possiblility to go beyond this decision was not given to the Commandos. Therefore, they had to accept the determination of the Jews themselves as a basis of their orders. The actual carrying out could not be done by the Commando leader himself, of course, but he had to rely on his officers who were commanders of part of the command as well. As the Tribunal knows, this question had already been decided before the war by order of the Fuehrer, through Keitel, insofar as individual officers had the opportunity to arrive at a decision whether or not the person was suspicious, and whether they might endanger the security. In my direct examination I already explained that this statement went too far in my opinion, and, therefore, I gave the order that the suspicion be confirmed. But to ask for more, - for example, concerning the Jews, than, to believe the determination of the Jewish Elders could not have been expected of the Commandos because there was no possibility of doing more. Doing more would have questioned the task. Commando leader by the Jewish Council of Elders was sufficient to denominate those named as Jews? Jewish Elders themselves took the Jews to the registration place or the collection place. identification that could cause his execution by Einsatzgruppe D?

A No; I remember cases in Sinferopol where, to identify Gypsies, the certification of two witnesses, at least, was used and required by the command there.

of the area in which this man was arrested?

Q And these witnesses claimed to have known it?

A Yes. That was the difficulty, because some of the Gypsies - if not all of them - were Moslems, and for that reason we attached a great mount of importance to the fact that there were no disprepancies in the procedure, and on this question in particular local Tartars took part. there was in the case of a Jew, is that right? Jews - and as I said yesterday already, I only remember the great action in Sinferopol. that you personally never issued execution orders. Am I correct? order for execution as such had been given from the start in Pretsch, or rather, later by the Reichsfuehrer. But the Commandos took it for granted that when they came to a larger city the solution of the Jewish question would be the first problem to be solved, and, therefore, the execution developed - not from one order, but followed a number of occurrences - such as asking for a Council of Elders, or rather, nominating a Counsel of Elders registering etc., until the final action was the result. The same during the executions themselves, where a number of organizational occurrences took place one after the other, a definite order was only given, really, at the moment when an officer stood before a military unit and gave the order to shoot. Everything else develops - one occurrence following another. examination, reference was made quite frequently to, and I quote, "the Army". To what Army, or Army Group were you referring?

A In my case, to Group 11. Eleventh Army.

Einsatzgruppe D?

A First, General Ritter von Schobert; he was killed. After that, there was a temporary assignment; end then later, Field Marshal von Manstein. Army Group Wouth during your career as commander of Einsatzgruppe D?

A With the Army Group South itself, no; only with the Army. The reason was that the Eleventh Army was independent, relatively. That had been intended as a nucleus for a new army group which was to operate in the Caucasus Mountains. These army units at that time were still in the Baltics and were ready there.

Q How often were you in contact with General von Schobert? And later General von Manstein? the 12th of June; then I saw him again in the Army casino once or twice. And von Manstein, I mostly saw in the Crimea on duty, as well as privately; for example, privately - he put me in charge of recruiting Tartars. I also had personal discussions with him about the question of military commitments of my unit. Contact with the Army became closer in time because the difficulties of the first month put some officers at such a disadvantage that they had to beg my pardon. And now the other officers tried to eliminate these former differences. It took longest with Manstein. Not before the Spring, 1942 was I invited by him personally, for the first time, to his castle on the South coast, which he had set up for recuperation. There I was, together with my successor von Albensleben, and another officer, and three or four officers of the Army. I was invited to his place one evening. I stayed there the night. The next morning I had breadfast with him, and then I travelled on. The second time I was privately invited during the celebration when Sevastopol fell. Apart from that, there was a constant contact with the Army, of course, owing to the fact a liaison officer was with the Army to share the billets with the one I C.A.O.; and beyond that, Herr Seibert, at least one week visited the Chief of Staff of IA or IIA, or the Chief for Partisan Combatting, and arrangements were made.

Naturally, I had more to do with the Chief of staff than with the Commander in Chief. And for that reason I visited him officially, repeatedly. Finally, after the winter of 1941, a very lively personal relation with the Staff Office of the Army took place in my casino. For example, during the Christmas celebration the staff of the Army was almost completely represented, and also during my goodbye party.

Q General, I think a translation came through incorrectly. The way I heard it when you were mentioning the commanders of the Eleventh Army, the name von Albensleven come through as your successor.

A I want to complete this. Einsatzgruppe D was given to Overfuehere Bierkamp, but he was with Einsatzgruppe D only for a snort time in the Crimea. The Crimea was given over to the civil administration and Albensleben became SS and Police Leader for the Crimea, and, therefore, he became successor for that area. Not in my position as chief of the Einsatzgruppe. question, your personal contacts and official contacts with the Army under General von Manstein were more frequent and more friendly than with his predecessor, General von Schobert? before he died, in battle.

Q. Can you remember now when General von Mannstein succeeded General von Schobert, that is, the approximate date?

A. I cannot remember the exact date, but I think that von Mannstein beemae successor of von Schobert in September 1941 at the latest.

Q. Now did General von Schobert, or General Mannstein ever issue orders to your Gruppe concerning executions?

A. That question is to concrete, Mr. Prosecutor. Such orders existed in various forms. For example, if he told the defendant Siebert, who is present here, that retalliation measures which he had ordered were not sufficient, and for that reason he would have to take a hand himself, or concretely, as I described concerning Sinferopol, where the Army requested that the liquidation of Jews be carried out immediately. Apart from that the idea of killing certain persons like, for example, the insane people, but I can not always say, of course, that this was of the Army itself. But the Einsatzoommandos, were assigned to corps or divisions, so that they had contact with the commandos, and, therefore, the task of issueing individual orders was later given to the smaller units rather than to the Central Offices.

Q. Then General von Mannstein did personally issue instructions or orders concerning the executions in Sinferopol, about which we have spoken?

A. No, I cannot say that, but an instruction came, sofar as I remember after discussing it with Braune, it came from the Quartermaster General Oberst Hauch, Colonel Hauch, but in the organization of the Army, it is natural that the Quartermaster General on his own authority cannot do such things without the approval of his commanderin-chief. I, therefore, cannot say that von Mannstein knew about it, or that he ordered it. I am merely considering it to be so owing to the military situations.

Q. It is highly probable that General von Mannstein did know and did instruct his staff officer to issue orders which came to you, is that correct?

A. In that case I cannot imagine that a staff officer as to his own authority can make such demands.

Q. General, who were the Army officers with whom you usually had conferences as to the activity of the Eisatzgruppen-D?

A. That was I-C.

Q. Can you give me his name?

A. First, Major Rank, R-A-N-K. Later his successor, Major Eisler, or Colonel Eisler; the I C-A-I, Major Riesen, E-I-E-S-E-N, and the chief of the Partisan combatting unit was Major Steffanus. The other staff officers I think are not of such great interest in this connection, that is, the I-A, there was Oberst Bussel, and von Werner. They are the most important names I know of.

Q. You say all of these were on the staff of General von Schobert, or General Mannstein.

A. Yes.

Q. Did these same officers whom you have named hand down to you orders for the execution of Jews?

A. No, I cannot say that.

Q. For the execution of Gypsies?

A. No, I cannot say that, either.

Q. For the execution of the insane?

A. As I said before, I do not definitely know whether this order was given by the Central office or from the Medical offices, or from the Regional offices.

Q. Who issued the orders for killing of active Communists and Soviet officials?

A. For these groups the order was contained in the general Fuehrer's Order.

Q. I believe you testified a few moments ago that the liaison officer of Einsatzgruppe-D with the 11th Army was the present defendant Seibert?

A. No, the liaison officer was another man. Siebert belonged to my staff, and was in my billets, while the liaison officer was another officer, who was in the staff of the Army, and also shared his billets with the Army.

Q. Now, General, you have admitted here that during the time you commanded Einsatzgruppe-D, an unidentified number of persons were executed, by the units under your command, and, I believe you testified further that the responsibility for the actual executions generally were in the kommando leader, am I correct?

A. Responsibility is a word which can be explained in different ways, those who gave the order; were responsible. They were responsible for the carrying out in this case.

Q. Just a matter of information, will you state in detail what normal channel the order went through from the authority issuing it to the man who actually pulled the trigger?

A. I believe my entire examinations show that this order was given once, namely, in Pretsch, and, therefore, the initiative was given, and, therefore, no new initial order was given in my time. Such an original order I did not get anyhow, unless one could consider the order to pick out PW's from PW camps as an extra order. The original order, as I have said, was sent to the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen, and to the Kommando leaders who were assembled.

Q. This in effect is true, is it not? Because of the difficulty of communications in the area in which you found yourself, you Kommando leaders were largely, because of poor communications, independent units, were they not?

A. The Kommando leaders were independent, there is no doubt about that. They had to be able to act independently for reasons as you gave just now.

Q. And they made a great many decisions without having to consult either you or higher authorities, did they not?

A. These decisions, Mr. Prosecutor, have to be stated more definitely. In this general form I cannot answer, yes or no.

Q. I apologize. They made tactical situations without consulting higher----tactical decisions-----I am sorry, without consulting higher headquarters, did they not?

A. Of course,

Q. How to select these commanders, great care had to be exercised as to their ability. Their initiative and their general ability to do the job?

A. Of course.

Q. And they were trusted sub-unit commanders of yours?

A. It is rather difficult to answer this.

Q. I will repeat General. I shall rephrase the question. Because of their careful selection, you relied on their judgment in given situations, did you not?

A. The Kammando leaders had certain tasks. These tasks they had to carry out. I did not choose the Kommando Leaders, or else they would have been quite different ones, but they were appointed by the RSHA, and they had to carry out the task which they had been assigned, and I had to rely on it, that according to their best ability they would fulfill these tasks. But since I did not rely on it completely, I tried by inspections to find out whether the commandos were in order, and whether the tasks were carried out. Unfortunately, as to some commanders, it was possible to go there, even once within six months, because it was rather difficult to get there. I had no influence in choosing Kommando leaders, either.

Q. In your direct examination you have explained your position and relationship with the Chief of the 11th Army. My question in connection with this topic may be, therefore, in a sense a little repetitious, but nevertheless, I would like you to answer this for the information of the Tribunal. Which were the special tasks which were assigned to you by the Army on the basis of the so-called Barbaressa Decree?

A. The basic task surely was to supply information and to look after the policing and the security of the Army. Beyond that the Army gave definite detailed tasks, and those changed according to the situation. For example, in July and August the harvest had to be brought in, the rear, had to be guarded; in November and December and January, to make inquiries about the partisans and to fight them; immediate military commitments, and then again the information service. These changed according to the situation.

MR. WALTON: At this time, may it please the Tribunal, I should like to submit to the witness for his examination, and later to be introduced into evidence, the document under NOKW-256. There are copies in the German language ready for distribution just as there are in the English now. I think it would be fair to Dr. Aschenauer at this time if he choosesto inspect it, and if he desires to make an objection I shall await on him at this time.

THE PRESIDENT: You are subitting it now for identification and scrutiny prior to actual introducing it as an exhibit?

MR. WALTON: Yes, and unless it is ruled out, sir, I should like for it to be given an identification number, so that it can be more easily introducedinto evidence by its number at a later time.

THE PRESIDENT: I think it might be well to give it an exhibit number at once.

MR. WALTON: According to my count, sir, the exhibit number it is entitled to is No. 174. I am ready to stand corrected if that is an error.

THE PRESIDENT: Has the witness received it?

MR. WALTON: I submitted it to his counsel, first.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. If you have an extra copy, let Dr. Aschenauer have one. If so, he can read it simultaaneously.

MR. WALTON: Yes, sir, but I would like Dr.Aschenauer to see the original, first.

THE PRESIDENT: I see, alright. Secretary General, have you enlightened Mr. Walton on the correctness of the exhibit number?

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL: Exhibit No. 174 is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: That is correct.

MR. WALTON: Before I can ask him, the witness will have to read it, first. It is not too long, but it consists of several pages.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. WALTON: General, will you indicate when you have finished reading it, please?

THE WITNESS: Yes (after reading same) I am ready.

MR. WALTON: Thank you. BY MR. WALTON: containing this Decree? the so-called Barbarossa Decree. I do not think that this draft actually constitutes the Barbarossa Decree, but considerable parts are contained in the Barbarossa Decree. I believe that there are not a great number of differences in the contents.

outlining the collaboration of the Sonderkommandos, and the Army in the rear areas?

A I just forgot one thing. This text shows in this draft the fact that the Einsatzgruppen in the operational areas are mentioned, and also Einsatzgruppen in the rear areas. There were no such double assignment. Only one Einsatzgruppe was assigned to the Army, to each group, and the Army group decided how they were to be used. in the forwarded areas, the Army decided that?

Q now, isn't it true, that this Barbarossa Decree, that Himmler's orders based on it made it plain that the Sonderkommando should carry out their missions under their own responsibility? expression "own responsibility" were, I presume, that this means that the chief of the Security Police, and the SD could give instructions to these commandos, which then were carried out on their responsibility; but it never meant beyond the authority of the Army, or rather of the Army group, and this limitation, as is shown in this draft also, because every time it is said that the instructions are to be given to the Army, the Army can make restrictions. The Army can exclude areas; it can make restrictions if the operational situation required it. Later in the Barbarossa Decree, it says that the operational necessity could cause instruction of the Army, and change them. This sense is revealed clearly in this draft, "own responsibility" never means beyond the actual authority of the commander-in-chief.

of the Army, as contained in his task. This is shown in the assignment of the Einsatzgruppen and in the instructions of the OKW for the competence of the commander-in-chief. of the order, the Fuehrer Order, subject to the tactical situation at any time, which was the responsibility of the Army as to how to carry out these missions was entirely up to the decision of the Einsatzgruppe, was it not? draft of the Barbarossa Decree include executions? the executions, the Einsatz commanders had the order, and the tasks were given to them to carry out certain executions, of course.

Q By the Barbarossa Decree?

A No, no, I did not say that. At least, I did not intend to say that. I do not know that in the Barbarossa Decree this order for extermination is contained. To repeat it. I do not know that in the Barbarossa agreement the Fuehrer Order anything about the killing of certain groups of population was contained.

Q General, I won't quarrel with you, but the testimony is very clear on your oders for execution. I leave that point at this time. Now, General, did it ever happen that the order of the Commander of the 11th Army, or his staff, was given directly to the Kommandos -- these units which were subordinate to you?

A Which orders?

Q Any orders?

they did not pass through your headquarters? distribution lists, a written order to a command was given to me to see. This was only so if they were orders by the Army. Orders by a Corps, or by the Division I did not see, of course. after the order was actually given? Army corps gave an order to s sub-unit of yours?

A Whether I was informed? from your headquarters, and attached to the Army corps, do you follow me? commando 11-B should be committed for a certain specific task, the Army group commander issued an order directly to the commander of the Einsatzkommando 11-B?

Q. Now, were you later through official correspondence or through reports of your kommando informed that that actual order was given?

A. Of course, in writing or orally if the command leader considered it necessary that I should knew about this event.

Q. Then yourinformation did not come from a copy of that order sent to you through official channels, but through the report of your kammando leader?

A. In that case, if the Army did not give a written order, only that way of course. If they gave a written order, on the whole they would have given me a copy.

Q. Then you obtained your knowledge of this type of orders from a report submitted to you by your kommando leader?

A. Yes.

Q. General, was it the task of the liaison officer of the different units of the Einsatsgruppen to transmit such orders?

A. I believe I must ask a preliminary question. By liaison officer you mean the officer who was in the staff of the Army?

Q. Yes.

A. In the document book such an occurrence is mentioned, the case with Romanenko. There, the document shows that the liaison officer got an order from the Commander-in-Chief and gave it to the commando itself immediately. This shows that the command wasin the place where the Commander-in-Chief was, while I was with the stuff of the Einsatzgruppenabout two hundred kilimeters to the west. Therefore, if the Commander-in-Chief wanted to hand something to a command, he could easily give such instructions to the liaison officer.

MR. WALTON: Now I shall have to avail myself of the privilege of forgetting one or two questions. Your Honor, I should like to draw the witness's attention bact to some moments ago when I was asking him about who had the authority to make selections for executions. It is entirely out of the context now, but my attention has been called to it. I ask I ask permission to go back and ask him.

THE PRESIDENT: I recall that you did go over that subject, but there is no reason why you can't go back to it.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) There is one class which I forgot to ask who made the selection. General, who made the selection of Communist and Soviet officials for execution?

A. The procedure was that certain persons were arrested and these persons were examined and were taken to be examined, as is usual, by the police. The interrogating officer, mostly together with the kommando keader, determined the result of the examination, and with that they determined whether the man endangered the security, as the result of the examination, or whether he did not, and they passed a judgment on this person.

Q. It usually turned out, did it not, that a member of the Communist Party and a Soviet official of the Communist Party or of the civil administration were considered a definite threat to the security of the German armed forces?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, in carrying out the procedure which you have just indicated, I assume that in many, if not all of the towns, that you would find yourself liquidating the governing authorities, the mayors, the councils, etc., because naturally they would be members of the Communist Party, is that true?

THE WITNESS: Insofar as I know the conditions in the cities or districts where the Einsatzkommandos entered, there was no administration any more, but the leading personalities had escaped or were hidden.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) General, how were the condemned people assembled for an execution?

A. In detail I cannot describe that.

Q. I believe you stated in the matter of the Jews the registration through the Council of Elders stated who were the Jews. Now, if it was determined that so many would be executed, were the Council of Elders instructed to assemble so many people?

A. To assemble the people, yes.

Q. Now, was there any pretext given, either by the kommando leader or by the Jewish Council of Elders, to get these people to assemble?

A. Yes, for example, on the resettlement question.

Q. They were told that they had to move or they would be moved to a place for resettlement, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now then, what disposition was made of these people after they had assembled in the market square or at the place designated?

A. It was tried, for example, to compare whether registration lists were the same as the persons present. The persons were then assembled and then were taken to be executed.

Q. Were they sometimes marched to the place of execution?

A. No they were taken there by trucks. I just described how in Simferopol the Army gave trucks for this purpose.

THE PRESIDENT: Did the Council of Jewish Elders know what was the real purpose of the demanding of this list of the Jews?

THE WITNESS: Certainly not in my Einstazgruppe.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, after the first contingent had been marched away or transported away, was it not then very obvious the purpose of the obtaining of this list?

THE WITNESS: In a city the Jews were then assembled all at once, at one time, for example in barracks or in a large school or in a factory site.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand then that no executions took place until the Council of Jewish Elders had completed their work of making up the lists?

A. Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) Now, did you have any Army directives or any orders stating the minimum distances from Army headquarters where these people could be executed?

A. In the case of Simferopol the Army decreed that shootings should take place at a certain distance from the city. The same occurred at Nikolajev.

Q. By certain distance do you mean a certain distance from the headquarters or from the Army installation or from the city itself?

A. In Simferopol from the city; in Nikolajev from the headquarters.

Q. Now, what was the general method used in execution?

A. Only one method wasused by me. That was the military manner.

Q. Am I to infer from that execution by shooting?

A. Yes.

Q. In what position were these victims shot?

A. Standing up or kneeling.

Q. What disposition was made of the corpses of the executed victims?

A. They were buried in that same place. The kammandos, who carried out the executions, had to prepare the burying so that no signs of the executions could be seen afterwards.

Q. What was done with the personal property of the persons executed, General?

A. The personal property was confiscated. The valuables, according to orders, were given to the Reich Ministry of Finance or rather to the Reichsbank. The personal property was at the disposal of the local kommando and the city, except for exceptions in Simferopol where the Army was assigned a group of the National Socialist Peoples' Welfare Organization who took care of the textile items.

Q. Were all the victims, including the men, the women and the children, executed in the same way?

A. Until the spring of '42, when by Himmler's order it was determined that women and children be killed by gassing in gas vans. Your Honor, I ask to make a remark about a question in yesterday's examination.

I think a mistake arose to the effect that Your Honor asked me whether from the reports from the kommandos the fact that children were shot could be seen. Should I have answered to the effect that this opinion was confirmed, that would be wrong. My confirmation in the IMT that men, women and children are contained in the figures is merely a conclusion from the fact that Jewish men women, and children were to be shot. In the reports which came from the Kommandos no such difference was made. Actually I do not remember any report where children - or figures of children - are mentioned. I repeat, the statement, on which I confirm, was a conclusion I came to following the order.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand then that a report indicating that 5,000 Jews had been killed would not specify so many children, so many women, but just 5,000 persons?

THE WITNESS: Yes, yes.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) Let me refresh any memory, General, please. I believe you stated in answer to the last question that executions were entirely in the form of shootings until the spring of '42 when you received an order to have women and children executed by gas vans, am sorry I missed your statement as to where this order originated, or from whence this order came.

A. The order of the gas vans came from Himmler immediagely and was given to special units who had these gas vans.

Q. These units who had charge of the operation and the maintenance of the gas vans stayed with the vans all the time?

A. Yes, I only saw it myself for a short time because it occurred shortly before I resigned, but the drivers remained there while the officer who had come along originally left later on, but the reason for this was mainly that the vans were refused by the kommando leaders, and I was not prepared to force the kommando leaders to use these vans. The vans were practically not used.

Q. General, have you ever seen yourself a gas van?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you give a short description of the physical appearance of a gas van to the Tribunal?

A. It is an ordinary truck just like a box car. It looks like that, like a closed truck.

Q. No windows in the gas van?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q There were no windows?

A. It is possible.

Q. The back of the gas van, did it have a thick door which led into the interior of the gas van?

A. Of course.

Q. And this door was narrow where only one person could enter at a time?

A. No, I believe it was an ordinary door as any other truck has it.

Q. Now were the people selected for execution induced to enter these vans?

A. One could not see from the van what purpose it had, and the people were told that they were being moved, and therefore they entered without hisitation.

Q. The same information was given them that they would be moved for purposes of resettlement?

A. Yes.

Q. General, could you estimate how many persons could be accommodated at one time in these vans?

A. There were large vans and small vans. The small one might have taken fifteen persons and the large one thirty.

Q. Did you ever learn how long it would take to execute persons by the use of these lathal gas vans after they were subjected to gas?

A. As far as I remember about ten minutes.

Q. Did all of your kommandos use these vans?

A. No, because there were more kommandos than vans. Apart from that one van was no good because they had come from Berlin. One van was sent to Taganrog immediately without my seeing it and never came back, and the other two vans remained in Simferopol.

Q. Did Sonderkommando 10-A ever use one of these vans?

A. I already said that one van was sent to command 10-A immediately.

Q. I apologize then. I missed it. Did 10-B ever use one of these vans?

A. No, I am not sure whether they did use it. I cannot swear to it, but I don't think so

Q. I accept your answers as the best of your recollection and belief. Did Sonderkommando 11-A use one?

A. No, as I said, the two vans were in Simferopol.

Q. 11-B, did it ever use one?

A. 11-B will have used it I think

Q. And Einsatzkommando 12, do you recollect it ever had one?

A. No, they certainly did not have one.

Q. Now many people do you estimate - I am sure that you do not remember the exact number, but how many people do you estimate were executed by these vans by Einsatzgrppe D?

A. Please save my mentioning these figures because I don't know anything about 10-A and concerning 11-B the van may have been used two or three times, I an not sure. I myself hardly saw the van, but only the first time, together with the physician, I had a look that the people died without any difficulties, and then I must have left. I don't know whether it was used again.

Q. Then some people were executed by means of the gas vans by your subkommandos?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: What was the purpose-

A. Not by myself.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) By your units.

A. Not by myself.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you always have a physician with you?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And what was the immediate purpose of the services of this physician?

THE WITNESS: He was unit physician really, but I also used him, of course, for such purposes as expert.

THE PRESIDENT: I see. But his primary purpose was to supervise the health of your men?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Walton) General, when you were on direct examination you stated, and I quote your own words. "The Army left it to me to deal with the political situation in the Crimea." Was the task of cleaning the Crimea of Jews, gypsies and above all Communists considered a political task?

A. No, If I talked of a political task here, among the various groups of the populations it could be found, for example, the difference between the Tartars and the Ukrainians, or those from Creat Russia and the Ukraineians, to set up administrations of small localities. For example, if in a parish there were different groups of populations, to see to it that when the mayor was appointed a person was taken who was appropriate to the numbers of the population under him.

Q. Then the executions were solely a security task and the tasks which you have outlines in your previous answer were the general political tasks

A. Yes.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, I wish no question now the witness on certain of the documents in the Prosecution's book. This is the end of a phase of. my cross-examination. If the Tribunal so wishes to have the recess at this time, I think it is proper as far as my examination is concerned.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Just before we recess I would like to state this to Defense Counsel. I presume that some of you will want to present documents. I heartily recommend that you begin to assemble those documents immediately. There is a great problem, as you know, here, in the palace of Justice in the matter of translating documents and then getting them properly mimeographed, COURT IIA CASE 9 and if you wait until your client is about to take the stand to busy yourself in the preparation of these socalled document books we will find ourselves in such a state of congestion that it will be impossible to get the books out in time.

So I ask you please to get started at once on whatever documents you intend to produce.

(A recess was taken).

Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. RIEDIGER (Attorney for the Defendant Haensch): Mr. President, I ask that the Defendant Haensch be excused from the sessions on Thursday and Friday, since the time is approaching for the preparation of his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Haensch will be excused from attendance in court on Thursday and Friday in accordance with the request made by his counsel.

Yes, Mr. Walton.

MR. WALTON: General, there are about three or four questions which I overlooked concerning executions. I desire, at this time, to ask them and then I expect to leave this subject for good and all. BY MR. WALTON: called for the future execution of women and children by this means. Do you know why this change was made from the usual method of shooting? lieve the moral strain on these men who were actually detailed to execute women and children. Now you have stated that their mechanical performance was not of the best and this gave you the opportunity to use a van as little as possible, is that not right.

A No, that is a mistaken interpretation. These two things differ. If the gas wagon was mechanically faulty it certainly was not used. It was not used even if it was in order, because for the men the moral strain was greater in killing people by gas vans than by shooting. vans, the usual method of shooting was employed? page 3 of the English, page 5 of the German, and this is Document NO-2661, Court No. II-A, Case No. 9.being Prosecution Exhibit 149.

Under the paragraph headed, and I quote, "Jews", which is found on pages 9 and 10 of the English, I am not familiar with the page in the German, this is stated, and I quote, "The solution of the Jewish problem which can be considered as almost solved and settled in the Ostland, continues," -- which is underscored, -- "in the remaining occupied territories of the East." -- "Of the East" is underscored -- Still quoting: "The concentration of Jews in Ghettos has generally been carried out." -- That sentence is underscored -- Still quoting: "Again and again the Jews who do not obey the official orders are seized and shot. In order" -

15 Oct 1947_M_MSD_9_1_Biolsi (Lea)

MR. WALTON: Shall I continue, your Honors? Have you found it?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, you may continue.

MR. WALTON: Still quoting: "In order to avoid the spreading of the danger of epidemics, shootings of Jews became necessary at different occasions" End of quotation.

General, are to presume that the term "Ostland" refers to the Baltic countries? other territories occupied by Einsatzgruppen? gruppe at all, but in March 1942 -- this is a report of March 1942, in this case from the occupied civil areas --for example, the Eastland was not an area of Einsatzgruppe in this time. territories of the East?

A Certainly not in some of these areas. Einsatzgruppe D, during this time - from the 1st to the 28th of February - which is the time of the report, was in the crimea, and in Melitopol and in Taganrog. continuing the solution of the Jewish problem in the Eastern territory which it occupied?

A Yes, but from the terminology "herding into ghettos", this does mean that an area of the Einsatzgruppe D cannot be for, at that time, there were certainly no ghettos in the area of Einsatzgruppe D. classes of the Russian population which threatened the security of the German forces, beginning with the class you considered most dangerous to security?

A I don't think I over undertook to make such qualification. If you had asked me at that time whom I considered most dangerous I 15 Oct 1947_M_MSD_9_2-Biolsi (Lea) Would certainly have mentioned the political commissars or the political functionaries -- independently from the racial group of-to which they belonged.

Q And who was the next most dangerous class, in your opinion?

A I don't want to make any more classification. killing of the insane was handed you. an execution of insane persons -- naming the time and place, approximately.

A Noo not even approximately. I only remember one locality, one building, but I cannot give you the village, or the town, or the time. After such an order I inspected these matters myself in order to be able to give respective reports to the army and then I refused to do it.

Q You don't recall the approximate number of people who were liquidated at this time?

A No, I don't.

Q Now, let's turn our attention to Document Book II_A, page 124 in the English, page 138 in the German, which is Document No_3233, and is Prosecution Exhibit 54. On pages 126 and 127 of the English Document Book this quotation is found:

"The removal of asocial elements led to the fact that 800 gypsies and insane people were rendered harmless."

And on page 127 this quotation appears:

"During the period covered by the report, 2,010 people were shot, among these there were 678 Jews, 359 Communist officials, 153 partisans, and 810 asocial people, gypsies, insane people, and saboteurs."

Do you follow?

Karasubasar. In the last paragraph of this excerpt it says that among the 810 asocial people, gypsies, insane people and saboteurs were liquidated. Does this not mean that only 10 of this number met death as saboteurs, because they offered any threat to the military security of the German forces? the expression, "saboteurs" means whether this number contains a number of people who endangered the security of the German forces by sabotage. And were shot for that reason.

A No; in the first paragraph I have quoted it says that 800 of a certain class of people were executed. Then, in the second quotation it says 810 -- that is different from 800--asocial, gypsies, insane people and saboteurs -- being a difference of 10 people between the first figure and the second figure. Now, can we assume that within this larger number only 10 people were saboteurs?

A I have already commented on this document. Such an assumption would be impossible. I believe that the reports were mixed up here. I just said that south of Karasubasar such a possibility did not even exist, In reality it could not exist.

Q Now, let us turn to Document Book III_D, again on page 11 of the English, page 12 of the German, Document NOKW_604, which is Prosecution Exhibit 150. Do you recognize this report, General?

Q Do you consider this an authentic report? Romanenko-- I am soory, I mis-stated the question. This is a report prepared by Commando 11_a on the case of Wladimir Romanenko, suspected of sabotage that interfered with Russian workers employed by the German authorities. It goes on to state that the information to Romanenko's 15 Oct 1947_M_MSD_9_4_Biolsi (Lea) sabotage activities proved, on investigation by Commando 11-a, to be erroneous.

Now, General, what was the disposition finally made of Romanenko? I cannot remember the incident at all. It can be gathered from the first two lines, what we have already discussed this morning - that on the 7th of September the Special Commando 11-a, through Sturmbannfuehrer Gemeiner, - he was at the time the liaison officer of the army, etc., the Supreme Commander had ordered the surrender to the Commando and had informed them that he wanted a punishment to be meted out, if possible, by public hanging. As the prosecutor has just stated, the Commando has thoroughly examined this incident and it did not find the charges of the Supreme Commander confirmed in all its details. Therefore, it seriously warned two witnesses who testified against Romanenko. Nevertheless, Romanenko was executed as an insane person. This report is evidently a report of this Special Commando 11-a, again via the liaison officer, direct to the Army headquarters. Unfortunately, I don't known what led the Special Commando 11-a to act as it did.

Q Just from the report, isn't it true that Romanenko offered no threat to military, security, -- did he? order from the army to punish Romanenko by hanging him publicly. what army gave that order?

A That must have been on the 10th of September; and it must have been the Supreme Commander, - either Manstein or still Schobertbut I would assume that at that time probably Manstein was there already; but I cannot be sure.

Q. Now, let us turn to Document Book II-C, page 42 of the English, and 49 of the German, being Document NO-3137, which is Prosecution Exhibit 76. Now, there is a paragraph which reads as follows, and I quote:

"The Commandos continued the liberation of the area from Jews and Communist elements. In the period covered by the report the towns of Nikolajev and Cherson in particular were freed of Jews and remaining officials there were appropriately treated. From 16 until 30 September, 22,467 Jews and Communists were executed. Total number, 35,782. Investigations again showed that, everywhere, the high Communist officials had be-taken themselves to safety. It was, foremostly, leading partisans or leaders of sabotage detachments who were seized."

General, did you follow the quotation?

A. Yes.

Q. Was not the headquarters of your Einsatzgruppe D in Nikolajev at the date of that report?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. From memory, can you tell how far Cherson was from Nikolajev?

A. About 80 kilometers.

Q. Your headquarters were in Nikolajev some months, were they not?

A. That is right.

Q. Can you give an estimate as to how many Jews lived in these two cities?

A. I have already commented on this in my direct examination. According to my estimate there were about 5,000 Jews in each of these cities.

Q. Now, what did you mean when you reported to Berlin that a city or an area was freed of Jews?

A. That there were no more Jews in those areas.

Q. Where were the former Jewish inhabitants of these places?

A. The Jewish inhabitants had been killed.

Q. When a report stated, and I quote: ".. and the remaining officials were appropriately treated." --what, exactly, is meant by the term "appropriately treated"?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, I may call your attention to the fact that you may not assume that this is my text. This is a text from Berlin, and the interpretation such as you would like to have I cannot give you to this text. For if we think back to this time the first sentence already is incorrect, that the territory was freed of Jews, for this was at the time when the area was completely untouched as far as ridding it of Jews is concerned, and only later did Himmler arrive and ordered the executions of these craftsmen. The first sentence, therefore, would be incorrect, and therefore, I ask you not to have me interpret this word for word because this would be an incorrect interpretation. I have already said in direct examination that this figure especially cannot be correct under any circumstances. Neither the 22,000 nor the total number of 35,000.

Q. From the general language of these reports from Berlin -- which I agree with you is not your language -can we assume that "appropriately treated" is a synonym, or another word for liquidation?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. General, last Wednesday you commented on Book II-D, page 51 of the English, page 57 of the German, which is Document No-3148, and is Prosecution Exhibit 95; and also the next document which is in the same book, page 52 of the English, and page 58 of the German. This latter COURT II-A CASE IX document is NO-3147. Now, by comparison of the two Communists executed, and both of them give the same total of 13,315.

Does not that appear on both documents?

A. No, in the first document the number 17,350 appears as the total number. And in the second, 13,315. But even if I say that the "7" is a typographical error and that it should be "13" then this is the best proof that here in two separate operational reports, one on the 20th and one on the 26 of September, the same report was given.

Q. Now, let me reach what I am trying to get at. Can it be possible that this report of the 26th of September, if the numbers agree, as they do in my book but don't in yours -- if the numbers agreed, would not the report of the 26th of September be a confirmation of the report already sent forward on the 20th of September?

A. That is absolutely possible.

Q. Now, in the event, we will say, if Berlin received any additional reports of executions during the week 20 to 26 September, was it customary for the RSHA to merely repeat the facts contained in the report preceding to show that the tactical situation with regard to Einsatzgruppe D had not changed?

A. well, usually if nothing happened it was not customary to copy the same report over again, but you would just say that there is no report. Therefore, this is completely incomprehensible to me.

Q. General, as a matter of fact the execution of Jews and Communists happened more frequently during the first part of the campaign than later, in 1942, did it not?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. And this was because Einsatzgruppe D encountered more of these classes of people in August and September 1941 than it did in February and March 1942, isn't that correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, one report states that an Einsatzgruppe C -not your Einsatzgruppe -- executed 35,000 people in two days. Is it not true that all units of an Einsatzgruppe, with the active assistance of police units attached to them and Wehrmacht units upon which they should call for assistance, could have executed such a large number of people in such a short time.

A. No, I consider it completely out of the question.

Q. Let me go into that a little further. Police Battalion No. 9 was a police battalion on which you could call, is that correct?

A. No, no.

Q. What was the police battalion-

A. If the police battalion which had been attached to the Einsatzgruppe in the East had the number "9, then this was the original battalion which, by order of Himmler, was distributed among the various Einsatzgruppen, without battalion staff, that is, there was no more battalion, but there were four companies, and these four companies were distributed among the four Einsatzgruppen. Each company to each Einsatzgruppen. In my Einsatzgruppe the company was completely dissolved. That is to say, the various Einsatzkommandos got one or two plattons, or a half platoon, from this unit. For it was attempted to use these police units for guard purposes for the Einsatzgruppen. It may be that another Einsatzgruppe handled this differently. For example, kept the company together. But a company was put at my disposal which was no longer a company because it was distributed among the entire area of 400 kilometers.

for manpower to assist in the Jewish raids, or any partisan warfare or executions? your own for assistance when you needed it?

A If they were voluntarily asked to do it. I could not order a unit to do so.

Q Let me ask it this way. Your survey of a tactical situation showed you that you did not have enough manpower to solve this problem, even with the assistance of what Police Units you already had, would you then be at liberty to go to the nearest Army, to the nearest battalion commander of the Wehrmacht, or regimental commander of the Wehrmacht, and explain your situation to him and ask for some help in liquidation. It was a question of voluntary agreement between the leader of the Einsatzkommando, and the leader of the military unit to get assistance, despite the prohibition of participation in the executions, and this happened repeatedly. It was not a question of an order on our part, but of agreeing voluntarily with the other military commanders. or the non-commissioned officer have the power to volunteer or to agree to go to your assistance in these execution matters? it upon himself to disobey.

Q Let's go back just a little bit. The Einsatzkommando Fuehrer has agreed with his neighboring Army commander, whether a unit is decided, or a battalion, or regiment, it makes no difference, he has agreed that he needs thirty or fifty men to come to his assistance.

The Army unit commander is agreed that he does need this many men. Does this Army unit commander then call on a junior officer and say, pick out twenty men, or thirty men, and take them over to where the Ensatzkommando requests them, and commit them to action, or, does that junior officer assemble his company and ask for volunteers from the Wehrmacht to go? it I would have to assume the latter, that he would ask the people to volunteer. it was for the men, is that right, on a voluntary basis?

Q Now, General, let's turn to Document Book II-B, page 7 in the English, page 5 of the German, which is document NO-2337, and is Prosecutions Exhibit No. 58, this is report dated 29 August 194-7.

A '41.

Q '41, yes, I am sorry, on page 11 of that report, in the English document book, it relates the number of Jews that were driven out in the Rumanian territory, and in this connection you discussed the participation yesterday of the defendant Felix Ruehl, of which he has also told in his affidavit. Now are these two instances the, same, the one in the document and the one which is related by the defendant Ruehl?

A I don't remember the affidavit of Ruehl.

Now in paragraph 3 of that document -in his affidavit the same incident as the one given in the report of Document 2837, the first document which was called to your attention? made of this transport, after he carried them to some place. Did he ever report back to you that this problem was settled, that he had disposed of the Jews? Jews were liquidated, would you have remembered it now? know that is a difficult question.

A I remember the incident very exactly. But to answer your question, I didn't have the impression that Ruehl was a leader of the transport. Ruehl, sofar as I remember was the very one who passed on my directives to MogilowPedolsk to let the Jews go back to Rumania, who then reported to me that Rumania would not let the Jews return across the river, and then he was referred to Kommando XII, which was then to try to arrange the transporting back of the Jews by way of another bridge. That happened as the result of a directive given by me to Noske. Ruehl, therefore, had nothing else to do but to give the directive to Mogilov, and to report back to me that the Rumanians would make difficulties. And, then from a part of Kommando XII together with a part detachment of X-B in Mogilov, which was not under the direction of Ruehl, but under a different leader.

This transport of Jews was effected from Mogilov over the bridge to Jampel, into the Roumanian territory. From my own knowledge I consider it completely out of the question that a) younger Jews were picked and b) that 1265 were shot. Because the order was clear, and Noske reported later the carrying out of this order, and there was no cause to assume that such a selection was made, or that such killings were perpetrated.

Q Then Nosske reported to you on this incident?

Q Do you recall what Nosske reported? with the German bridge officer, he had just barely made it possible that this transport be brought back. have been preferred by the Rumanians, could the Einsatzgruppe have prevented or order the Rumanians troops to cease and to desist and not execute these men? We only had the possibility of intervening once and awhile because the Rumanians were making difficulties by lootings, and by rapings, and, thus, we permitted ourselves to interfere personally. with the Rumanians troops affairs? persons.

Q All right. Now, General, one more document. Let's turn to Document Book II-D, on page 49 of the English, and on page 54 of the German. This is document NO-2841, which is Prosecution's Exhibit No. 94. Were any of these 94 Jews guilty of spying, as the report says, on the population?

A I can only interprete the text, Mr. Prosecutor, that according to that, it looked as if the Jews had sabotaged against the harvest, and were identical with persons who had denounced other people, and caused them to be sent off, that is what the document shows. dissatisfaction with the agricultural workers, or in any way preventing them from doing their normal agriculture, labor, would it not, that would be agriculture sabotage?

Q Yes. And also it was about or prior to the entry of German forces in this area, these people had sent Russians, there own fellow nationals, by their denouncing, off to Siberia. Now, General, it is not clear to me why for a crime against another Russian before the Germans occupied the area the German forces would want to punish these men?

A Mr. Prosecutor, may I remind you of the law which had just been decreed in Germany, I believe they were the Same, only goes somewhat further, insofar as the officials are accused that as the result of the laws of their State they officially persecuted people, and in the case of Goerdler, the young girl who recognized Goerdler, who even was involved in the assault against the life of the Chief of State, received twelve years in the penitentiary, and that these twelve years in the penitentiary, according to the Berlin publicity were not even sufficient. That was yesterday, we were trying to pin it down to facts as to the document before us.

Now who determined that the number of Jews should be 94 to be executed as a reprisal, or retaliation. Was this the Kommando-Fuehrer there?

A It must be typically a fact which I had said before; a detailed investigation was undertaken, and the result of this investigation had effected 49 people. Namely, they had participated in sabotage, or in agitation. That is not a general measure, but certainly these were individual investigations.

Q But it was a reprisal measure? was a measure because of the security being in danger, The text which was probably summarized one can not quite make it out.

Q Let me ask you this. As a general policy were the populations of any area warned beforehand that they would be subject to reprisals if they did not obey the directives and the orders of each of the police units?

A Yes, there were very clear orders. There were directives of the Army, or of the Army corps, which were posted, and made known everywhere in which, for example such crimes were listed with a threat that whoever violated such directives would be publicly hanged.

given a trial, or was it an emergency measure to have the arresting officer decide whether he had violated a directive and pass sentence?

A I don't know about such matters. I believe that these taking of hostages and reprisal measures took place later on. Bock II-C, page 16 in the English, page 18 in the German, which is document NO-2952, and is Prosecution's Exhibit No. 71. General, in this document please turn to the fourth paragraph under the heading "Partisan Warfare."?

Q Page 16 of the English, and 18 of the German. Now under paragraph four I direct your attention to the sentence where twenty hostages were dealt with by a summary Court. General, are you familiar with the proceedings in a Summary Court?

A No, I don't know anything about it.

Q You don't know then whether these twenty hostages would have a right to counsel to represent them?

A I don't know this, but I could give you exact information about it. The decree which I had mentioned before, the. Decree of the Fuehrer, signed by Keitel of May 1941, excludes such procedure. This is a directive about the procedure-to be applied before a court martial, and this directive determined that in all these cases a court martial is not competent, but that an officer has to decide those cases by himself. it to be stated in another way.

THE PRESIDENT. Mr. Walton, may I interrupt, please.

MR. WALTON: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Does the offer also decide the ratie?

suspect, or not? German deaths, if any?

A I had just understood the Prosecution's question differently. I don't he meant the taking of hostages, but the question of whether somebody if he was suspected was in a position to have a defense counsel present him in the trial.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, is referring to a particular document where reference is made first to ten hostages, and then twenty hostages. Does this officer who investigates the matter decide just how many hostages shall be killed because of whatever jeopardation was committed upon a German element?

THE WITNESS: The Einsatzgruppe itself did not take any hostages, give you this information, with my knowledge of the Einsatzgruppe, but Colonel von Schobert - I mean, General von Schober complained to Seibert that for these cases which happened in Belzy, not enough hostages had been shot, and he, therefore, would give directive that harsher measures be taken, that is to more hostages should no shot then were shot in this case.

I don't know whether ratio numbers were already determined, as this happened in the Southeast later on. I would assume that this was determined by the competent local officers of the units, probably, according to these directives of the Army, but I am only giving you my interpretation. the first trial, the IMT Trial, that Keitel had been quoted as ordering so many hostages to one German soldier killed, and I was wondering if that applied in this case?

Q Some more information, General. I think you have answered this, but I would like to get it dtraight in my own mind. Did the hostages under sentence of death have the right to appeal deaht sentences to a higher military or SS authority?

A Of course not. Thas was just what I said before as to the content of Keitel's Order.

Q Yes, now, didn't the main duty of this Summary Court consist of selecting the number of persons to be executed, the main duty?

Q In your direct testimony didn't you state as a fact that the arrest of hostages was carried out, and I quote your words, "By order of the Supreme Commander of my Army," and then you relate that the Army complained that you executed a few hostages. This has been referred to several times, is that correct? of Seibert, who had this experience with Schober. I don't know of these hostages measures from my own knowledge. complaint about too few hostages being executed? year? is it not so? complaint? Not you personally, but generally as to your unit? hostages.

like to add from my recollection that at my time in the East the Army also arrested very few hostages, because at that time the partisan warfare had not yet turned into a warfare of the population, a general warfare. execute hostages? was brought to your knowledge that hostages were executed by some one?

A I only know from the Prosecution's documents about the shooting of Kischimen. I don't remember anything myself.

Q Now let's consider this same document a little father. In paragraph-

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, suppose we recess at this time.

MR. WALTON: Yes, Your honor.

THE PRESIDENT: We will be in recess until 1:45.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1345 hours.

(Whereupon a recess was taken until 1345, 15 October 1947.)

(The Tribunal reconvened at 1345 hours, 15 October 1947).

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE-PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued) BY MR. WALTON: your attention to the document which we were discussing at that time, and it is contained in Document Book II-C, Page 16 of the English, Page 18 of the German, and it is Document NO-2952, Prosecution's Exhibit 71. I should like to call your particular attention to Paragraph 5 headed "Jews". In your comments last Thursday you stated that these forty-five Jews were executed as a counter-measure. By this do you mean that they were executed - I am sorry.

A I beg your pardon. I only stated my argument following the document. subject "Jews"? retaliation for attacks on German military personnel? to which could bring death, failure to register as a Jew? not stayed at home in the evening. They are precaution-measures in order to avoid attacks by the military, which is a presumption which cannot be taken from the document. forty-five Jews in that document? Would you state as a matter of general knowledge that they would?

acted on cases where Jews were to be shot in reprisal? that on principle there was an order that regular courts were to he excluded. English and the German Page 43, Document NO-4135, being Prosecution's Exhibit 91, and in this same document book, Page 45 of the English, Page 48 of the German, which is Document NOKW-587 and is Prosecution's Exhibit 92.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, Document NO-4135 shows at the top of Page 41 the date 10 July 1941. The photostat copy of the original shows this date to be 14th of July, 1941, and the German document books so give it. I now ask your Honors to make correction of this typographical error.

THE PRESIDENT: It will be corrected. BY MR. WALTON: two documents offer strong contradiction. I invite your close attention once more to these two documents. In NOKW-587 it was reported to the I-C of Army Group South that Einsatzkommando 10-B shot 500 Jews, among whom was the Jewish leadership. Now, when we consider Page 41 of the English, Page 43 of this same document book, where you found Document NO-4135, it shows the situation which prevailed about the same time in Czernowitz as the report to I-C of the Army Group South shows, does it not?

Q Yes. At one-point in your testimony you stated that the SD had no prisons as you were immediately behind the fighting front, did you not?

A I beg your pardon; because?

prisons as you were immediately behind the fighting front, did you not?

A No, not for that reason. That must be said in another connection. In Czernowitz not the SD but the Einsatzkomnando there did not have any prisons but the Rumanians had them because the Rumanians were in charge of that city.

Q And did Einsatzgruppe D ever take any prisoners? prisoners? individual case, but surely there would have been P.W.'s as well as certainly civilian prisoners because if they were suspected of a crime they had to be examined. interrogations were in progress? finished interrogating in Army prisoner-of-war cages or Rumanian prisoner-of-war cages or prisons, take them out for interrogation and put them back? occurrence from Feodosia. These occurrences were new to me, that civilian prisoners were sent to POW camps. When I read it I could only explain it to myself that it concerned persons of military age who were sent to the POW camp for that reason. not be killed but should be punished by a prison term? wrong impression. I believe that the Proportion of released prisoners to these condemned was ninety to ten, or even a ratio of ninety-five percent to five percent, and a number of documents, which the Prosecution has submitted here itself reveal that fact, that a number of persons were arrested who were suspected of being partisans and the rest were released.

Q Nov in the second topic under the heading, "Einsatzkommando 10-B" in Document NO-4135 before you, which is Page 42 of the English, it states that a great number of Jews of the poorer class are in the Rumania, prisons and nearly no intelligentsia. Doesn't this document confirm the fact that executions had nearly wiped out the leadership or the intelligentsia class in this area, as reported in NOKW-587to the Army Group South? contrary because I actually knew the condition, because in Czernowitz there were two scandals. One was the very rotten way in which Jews were killed by the Rumanian Army, and the second was the dirty business the Rumanians did with the rich Jews, and from my knowledge I can comment on this sentence, that the rich Jews actually were not arrested.

THE PRESIDENT: What methods did the Rumanians employ in liquidating Jews that you disapproved of in the language which you have just used?

THE WITNESS: With the kommando leader from Czernowitz I wanted to leave Czernowitz, and I found some of the Jews as they had been shot by the Rumanians, or they had been shot at, and they had been lying there shot although not dead, although the kommando leader had asked the Rumanian Army to stop this. One group of Jews had been sent there and they had shot at them and left the victims lying just as they were. Some were not dead, and only forceful, interference by Pesterer finally stopped it or put it in order end that was when he was responsible for excesses against Rumanians. BY MR. MALTON: cooperation between the Rumanian troops and the Einsatzgruppen insofar as the solution of the Jewish problem was concerned in your respective areas?

A Unfortunately I must contradict you immediately, Mr. Prosecutor. This cooperation was not possible and for that reason did not exist. Document Book II-D, Page 41 in the German, 43 in the English, the same document, NO-4135, Prosecution's Exhibit 91. We agree, do we not, that this Operational Situation Report No. 22 is one of the reports that was consolidated in Berlin? report from the four Einsatzgruppen, A, B, C and D?

Q Now, did not the information under the heading, "Results of the Conference between General von Schobert and Ohlendorf," come from your headquarters before Berlin could consolidate it in its report? is on Page 72 of the English, Page 97 of the German, and is Document NO-3422, and it is Prosecution's Exhibit 19. This document contains directives for the commanders of the chief of the Security Police and the SD which were to be assigned to the prisoner of war camps and the transient camps and the date of this document is 29 October 1941. Were you on the date shown on this document the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe D?

English, German Page 16, to Document NOKW 641, which is Prosecution Exhibit 151, and this document is, as you will recognize, your signed report to Army headquarters, under date of 12 February, 1942, You gave the Tribunal your comments on this last week, but I would like to ask you what is meant by the phrase under, and I quote, Paragraph I, "Watches confiscated".

A I beg your pardon, may I have this page number again?

Q It is Page 16 of the German. Do you find paragraph headed "I. Watches confiscated"?

A Page 16? meant by the term, and I quote, "Anti-Jewish actions" which appears in the first sentence of that paragraph?

A "The watches confiscated during the anti-Jewish actions", do you mean this?

Q No, just what the torn "anti-Jewish action" means.

A That is not written here, "anti-Jewish action".

Q Doesn't the sane phrase in Paragraph II under "Confiscated rubles" appear? cause in the German text it says "Jewish actions," and not "anti-Jewish actions."

Q Does that phrase then mean an action against the Jews? "Confiscated rubles" also means the same thing?

Q Now, isn't it true that this property was confiscated simply because it was Jewish property and because Jews were enemies of the Reich and they had no right to property whatever?

which came, which we got after the Jews were killed was confiscate by the Reich. this action?

A I don't think it has ever been maintained. There was an instruction to confiscate. I want to ask you some questions on other information. In your direct examination you stated that between March and July 1942 you were frequently absent from your post as commander of Einsatzgruppe D, did you not? were away? or because of your confidence in him?

A I beg your pardon; because Einsatzgruppe D because of his rank or because of your confidence in him? group, and he was the senior officer there.

Q Then because of his rank as senior officer?

Q Isn't it true that you had confidence in Seibert, that he would be a man that would see that all orders and directives both from Berlin and from the Army would be carried out with the same degree of care that you would have used if present and in actual command?

A Unfortunately I cannot confirm that to you. He did not have the qualification to do that. I trusted Seibert but that independently from what you say, I think we discussed it this morning.

Q General, don't misunderstand me. This is not merely confined to executions by the actual daily activities. Didn't you have confidence that Seibert would see that they were carried out just as completely and just as militarily as you would have had you been there? the authority to do so. He could not act for me as authority towards kommando leaders who were senior in rank to him like Standartenfuehrer Seezen, for example, the kommando leader of 10-A; Standartenfuehrer Mueller of Kommando 12. Zapp also held the same rank as he did at least, if not a higher rank. These factors alone show that he had no power to command these kommandos. As you hill remember from the direct examination, as an acting chief it was, Standartenfuehrer Seezen who had been assigned to no by the RSHA. That has never been clanged, only that I did not use him. In this connection Seibert never acted, for me, but he acted for no in the staff, and saw to it that the affairs were running out properly. about the activities of the group to be transmitted to the different Kommandos?

A No. Although I don't like saying it, in this connection I must say again that such orders were never given by me at all, and Seibert neither had the possibility nor the opportunity to give such orders. absences in which Seibert was left there, did you have any cause for complaint against his actions that he had performed while you were gone?

the groups differences arose. However, I could not blame him for this because in that connection he did not have the moral authority to prevent this.

Q Did he make any attempt to settle these differences?

A I am afraid I don't know that any more. concerning the solution of the Jewish problem in the areas occupied by Einsatzgruppe D? took place, of course, gypsies, Communists, etc?

A Mr. Prosecutor, such an immediate possibility he did not have and he had no reason for it because he was not immediately connected, with it. Such discussions usually Were conducted, in a comradely manner because he knewmy position just as well, that is my situation with regard to Himmler and Heydrich. He knew the situation of Himmler and Heydrich regards the Fuehrer. In other words, he knew all the circumstances, and he could not anticipate that nowadays it would, be useful, apart from useless conversations a bout these matters, to have made formal objections.

Q: Did he over ask to be relieved of duty permanently with you?

A: No.

Q: Did he ever ask to be relieved of the duty of inspector of executions?

A: I do not know whether Seibert over inspected any executions. For that reason he could not have asked me to be relieved of that duty. The military inspections in the companies, he certainly very much enjoyed, because that was what he liked to do.

Q: He accompanied you on inspection trips you have stated?

A: Yes.

Q: And on these inspection trips you have at least three times inspected executions. Was Seibert with you then?

A: During these inspection trips no executions were inspected at all, but I merely remember one trip we had together when by chance at the Kommando 10-A we happened to come across the shooting of several plunderers.

Q: He did not ask to be relieved from viewing this incident, did he?

A: It was on the street. He could not have been relieved, because he was approaching this place.

Q: When you sent Seibert on an inspection trip, did he, as your representative have the power to see that the execution squads carried out your orders for humane executions?

A: I have just said that I do not remember that he was sent by me to inspect any executions. If I sent him on any inspection trips, for example, to inspect the Tartar companies, of course he had the special authority to stop bad conditions there. That was the purpose of the trip.

Q: Was Seibert's service in Einsatzgruppe D satisfactory to you at all times?

A: That would be saying too much. In general, I managed to get along with him.

Q: Would you consider that Seibert was one of the few close friends you had in Einsatzgruppe D when you commanded it?

A: I do net consider military connections as friendly connections.

Q: General, let us turn for a moment to Co-Defendant Heinz Schubert. When he reported to you in Nikolaev in October 1941 -- this was some three months after the Einsatzgruppe D had taken the field, was it not?

A: Yes.

Q: who informed Schubert of his field of tasks?

A: That was very simple, relatively speaking. He went to the office and looked at how the files were kept and took care of these files, and, apart from that, I told him what I wanted concerning visitors, terms, order, and so forth. That was all and it was not very difficult to make this clean to him, because he had previous experiences about such things.

Q: Now, was he also informed officially of the main tasks of Einsatzgruppe D in its own operational areas? I specifically refer to the Himmler order and the order to Keep the supply lines moving to the Wehrmacht. Was he informed of that officially?

A: Whether he knew about that, I don't know; I presume so. In any case, I had no reason to inform him about it officially, because officially it was no concern of his

Q: Do you happen to know where he first acquired the knowledge that Einsatzgruppe D was engaged in liquidation of the Jews and Communists, etc?

A: I don't know that. I presume that he only heard that in the Crimea.

Q: When Schubert returned from his inspection trip to Simferopol in September 1941, did he report to you in person?

A: That was not an inspection trip in Simferopol. That was in the same place. He was sent out by me to the same place, because I went there in the morning and in the afternoon and he went there in between. When he returned of course he reported to me.

Q: Did he tell you that he had seen to it that this execution by Braune's Commando II B was carried out according to your orders?

A: He could not have reported that to me, because that was not his task. He merely had to watch and listen but had no authority of command.

Q: Then you would make this same answer to the next question: Did he tell you that he saw to it that those condemned persons were not beaten and that there were no disturbances among the civilian population?

A: It was not his task.

Q: General, isn't it a strange coincidence that all your efforts from 1938 to 1941 to have Braune assigned to you for duty were of no avail, and then suddenly he turns up in your Einsatzgruppe in the fall of 1941, by the merest chance?

A: I don't know whether he had good connections with Amt I and if he wanted to come to me, but I don't think so. I think actually he was surprised by his transfer and it was a mere coincidence that he came to me, but I don't want to maintain that definetely.

Q: You were glad to have him when it so happened he did report to you?

A: I was very glad that he was with me, of course.

Q: And the reason you were glad was because you valued his services, isn't that true?

A: Yes.

Q: Now did Browne ever ask you to be relieved of his command?

A: He never talked about that.

Q: Yesterday -

A : One moment, please. There would have been no chance to do so either, because he knew, like everybody else, that a soldier cannot ask to be relieved from the Army, but unfortunately, he is under the war legislation, where no special application can be made. Such an application would be of no avail.

Q: Yesterday, you testified that many of your officers and men could not stand the mental strain of executions, is that correct?

A: Yes.

Q: you described Browne yesterday as a soft and sensitive man. How did it happen that he was able to stand this strain and there was no necessity to relieve him of his command?

A: As far as I know, Browne only saw one single execution in his life. That does not seem to be a very great strain.

Q: Let us turn our attention once more to Sonderkommando 10 B. Who was the highest ranking officer next to Pesterer in this Kommando?

A: It was Hautsturmfuehere Finger.

Q: Do you consider it impossible for Ruehl ever to have been the deputy Pesterer?

A: Yes, definitely.

Q: When asked by counsel for the Defendant Biberstein about the time when the activities of the Einsatzsgruppen ceased completely, you answered, that that was a result of the retreat of the German forces from Russia and you said, further that the activities of the Einsatzgruppen stopped, when they had to retreat into areas under the German civilian administration, did you not?

A: Yes, but concerning the actual tasks of the Einsatzgruppen, because previously in interrogations I said that on this occasion the Einsatzgruppen were usually reorganized. Their tasks were changed and they were converted into fighting units to help fight the partisans. That was the fate of Einsatzgruppe D, for example.

Q: Approximately when did this change in the activities of the Einsatzgruppe in general take place? What year?

A: In general, one could say after Stalingrad. That is in January, 1943, that is, with the year of 1943.

Q: Are you in a position to state specifically when the activities of Einsatzgruppe C ceased entirely?

A: Unfortunately not.

Q: Were you at that time active in the conquered territories of the East or had you already returned to Berlin?

A: In July 1942 I returned and never went back to the East.

Q: So you were in Berlin at this particular time?

A: Yes.

Q: Now, General, you have told us that the Einsatzgruppe D was broken down into Kommandos. What was the average strength of a Kommando in personnel?

A: That varied. There was only one complete kommando. That was Kommando 12, while the other Einsatzkommandos were broken down and on an average they consisted of 70 to 80 people.

Q: Was there any further breadkown? Were there platoons, or squads in each Kommando?

A: Yes, as required, part kommandos were found.

Q: Now a Teilkommando, is this a permanent organization; or was it organized to perform a cert in mission and then return to its parent group, which is correct?

A: Yes.

Q: Which is correct?

A: As required by necessity the Army could require that a corps or a division could be given such a sub-unit.

Q: Now, it was necessary to have on your staff and certainly distributed through the kommandos, interpreters, was it not?

A: Yes.

Q: What was the usual rank off interpreters in Einsatzgruppe D?

A: That varied. I, for example, had a hauptsturmfuehrer who acted as interpreter. Mostly these interpreters were not from our own ranks, but had been sent to us to help out and mostly they did not join the SS, but were only given a uniform usually according to their former position, that is, an assessor, for example, as a rule would have the uniform of a hauptsturmfuehrer, a regierangsrat, a counsellor, would get a uniform of a sturmbannfuehrer. That is, the interpreters did not no Id a rank as such, but his rank changed according to his former position. He could have been an unterfuehrer, or a hauptsturmfuehrer, or some higher rank.

Q: In the event that it was a sturmbanfuehrer or a hauptsturmfuehrer, did he have interpreting duties?

A: If he was employed as an interpreter, he was an interpreter.

Q: Nothing else?

A: It is possible, of course, that he may have been used for other jobs if necessary of course. Of course, I did not leave anyone in my office without doing anything.

Q: In Einsatzgruppe D, did you have a kommando for the purpose of collecting archives or intelligence material?

A: No.

Q: Do you know if any other Einsatzgruope had a kommando for the purpose of collecting archives?

A: No.

Q: Was there attached to the Einsatzgruppen headquarters any units whose purpose was not the protection of the rear are as by insuring the security of the area?

A: I think this document which you showed me previously reveals that. Here it says first, "Securing, before the commencement of operations, of certain objectives (material, archives, files, pertaining to organizations, associations, groups, etc. hostile to the Reich or State)" It was, of course important to secure such archives. It was necessary and of great importance to know about conditions in the Soviet Union.

MR. WALTON: General, I want to thank you for your cooperation and your prompt answers in this examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have any questions, Mr. Heath?

MR. HEATH: If Your Honors please, yesterday I had begun to ask a question. I think I did not make the relevancy of it clear to the court. Mr. Walton has just touched on it and it is this the plea of the Defendant here obviously is the coercion of a superior order that under the law -

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Heath, I don't think it is necessary to make any argument.

MR. HEATH: Very well.

THE PRESIDENT: Put the question and then if it seems irrelevant, we will rule on it.

MR. HEATH: Yes, sir. BY MR. HEATH:

Q. Mr. Ohlendorf, you have just said that you felt that you must respect this order unto your own death.

Will you now tell the Court what your present judgment is of the order. Do you think it was a moral order or do you think it was a wrong order which you received from the head of the German state?

DR. ASCHENAUER (Attorney for the Defendant Ohlendorf): I object to this question, Your Honor. Only facts can be asked about and not opinions.

MR. HEATH: May I answer, if Your Honor please. who claims mitigation because of superior orders is putting himself in the position of saying, morally I had no choice. If, in fact, he morally approved of a superior order and therefore would have acted without the coercion of it, if in fact he did not object to the coercion but merely lent himself to the course of action which he would have to follow without coercion, then a plea of mitigation fails entirely, and so here, if the Defendant did these killings because of the coersive effect of an order, with which he disagreed, that is one thing, but if Ohlendorf was himself in full agreement or in partial agreement with the purpose which Hitler had, then the mitigating effect of the coercion oder is fully or almost fully lost.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, do you follow that argument?

MR. HEATH: The plea is bad, if it is done willingly.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I wish to point out that these are merely argumentations which have nothing to do with testimony by the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal has indicated that this is not the time for argument, but it would appear that the purpose behind the question is not in the nature of argumentation, but for the purpose of determining whether there can be any mitiation in the offense as charged by the prosecution in the indictment and for that purpose the question will be permitted.

The objection is overruled.

A Mr. Prosecutor, I have already replied to that question during my direct examination by stating that I considered the order wrong, but I was under military coercion and carried it out under military coercion knowing that it was given in a state of emergency and the measures were ordered as emergency measures in self-defense. The order, as such, even now, I consider to have been wrong, but there is no question for me whether it was moral or amoral, because a leader who has to deal with such serious questions decides from his own responsibility and this is his responsibility and I cannot examine and not judge. I am not entitled to do so.

MR. HEATH: If Your Honors please, that is exactly the state of the record and I respectfully submit that we yet have no answer. For this reason: the witness has said he thought it was a wrong order, because it was difficult or impossible of execution, when he was told -

THE WITNESS: I didn't say that.

MR. HEATH: When he was told about it at Pretzsch, he thought it was impossible of execution. I think the very issue which he seeks to avoid is the crux of this question, namely, not whether it was a difficult order, or a wise order, from the standpoint of his, but whether it was right or wrong. The issue is a morale one. The coercion of superior orders goes to the moral coercion and not to the wisdom of the order.

THE PRESIDENT: But, Mr. Heath, hasn't he answered your question?

MR. HEATH: He has said -- he said it was a wrong order.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, what more do you want. Put another specific question and we will see if he hasn't answered. It appeared to the Tribunal that he has answered, but put the question to him.

Q You have said it was a wrong order. I want you only to tell me whether it was morally wrong or morally right.

THE WITNESS: May I correct beforehand that in my reply I never said whether it was a difficult or not a difficult order. That is an ssumption which I don't want to have in the record.

THE PRESIDENT: Then it must have been an error in transmission, because the Tribunal is under the impression that yesterday you stated in your original protest against the order that it was impossible of fullfilment or very difficult of fullfilment. Are we in error in that impression?

THE WITNESS: I said, "inhuman", Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I see, very well. The record indicates just what was said. Now do you want to put another question?

Q I put the same question. Was the order a moral one: was it morally right, or was it morally wrong? to decide on the moral issue, but I considered it to be wrong because such factors are able to bring such results which may mave immoral affects and, in my opinion are bound to have immoral effects. But I fo not think I am in a position to jusge the responsibility of a statesman who, as shown in history, rightly, saw his people before the question of being or not being, to jusge whether a measure in such a fight against fate, for which this leader is responsible, is moral or immoral.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we extract from all that you have said, this thought@ That you are not prepared to pass upon whether the order was morally right or morally wrong, but you do say that the order could only lead to very bad circumstances which would be injurious to Germany

WITNESS: Not only to Germany itself, your Honor. I consider this to be much more serious, even. I see the order which Hitler gave, not as a first cause for this order, but I already consider it as a result of logical developments which may have started - or at least became very obvious - when in 1935 in our opinion Germany was encircled. Such measures must further such developments -- for example, to the effect that instead of an understanding, - hatred, revenge and an exaggereated effort to gain security will become very strong and, therefore, the general insecurity of the word will be increased. For example, causing effects - as can be described with the name "Morgenthau Plan" or requests, as such that Germany is be weakened in its greatness and strength so that this people will no longer endanger the security of any one. That is what I meant by "effect" which might result from such factors, because they are intended for this: while I mean that throughout historical development at some time a chain of hatred or mistrust has to be broken in order to start anew somewhere, and that, for example, I hoped would be achieve through national individual people, but here the chain is continued, a sequence is continued, which instead of reconcialiation breeds more hatred, and increase the feeling for security.

That is my opinion on this.

MR. HEATH: May I put the question once more, if Your Honor please?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, you may put the question and then the witness may answer it directly, or, if he feels he has already answered it, he may so indicate, or he may refuse to answer it.

We will see what happens. BY MR. HEATH:

Q I do not ask you for a judgment of Hitler's morale; I ask you for an expression of your own moral conception.

The question is not whether Hitler was moral; but what, in your moral judgment, was the character of this order: Was it a moral order, or an immoral order? abstractly for a moral estimation or nothing - but a moral estimation and judgment about a deed of Hitler. And for that reason the judgment which I may make is judgment on the deed of Hitler. Your Honor. You surrendered your moral conscience to Adolf Hitler, did you not?

A No. But I surrendered my moral conscience to the fact that I was a soldier, and, therefore, w wheel in a low position, relatively, in a great machinery; and what I did there is the same as is done in any other army, and I am convinced that in spite of facts and comparisons which I do not want to mention again, the persons receiving the orders and all armies are in the same position- until today, until this very day.

your moral scruple. It was the fact that you had surrendered to Hitler the power to decide moral questions for you -- is that right?

A That is an argumentation from you which I never said. No, it is not correct. But as a soldier I got an order, and I obeyed this order as a soldier. required - I suppose you did -- if you had a moral conscience you had to judge the orders that came to you. You got an order from Adolf Hitler, and you tell us you accepted his moral judgment absolutely, whether right or wrong, - is that right? I think my answer will not be changed by the fact that you want me to make a certain reply.

Q Let us put it in the negative, then. You refuted to make any moral judgment, and you refuse now to make any moral judgment then, and you refuse now to make any moral judgment on this matter?

Q I am not asking you the reason. I am asking whether you refuse to express a moral judgment as to that time, or as of today. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Yesterday Mr. Heath put a question to you which perhaps we did not allow to be answered - but in view of what has now been stated perhaps we might go back just a moment. He asked you whether, when you received this order, any question arose in your mind as to its authencity namely, was the order of such a nature that it caused you to hesitate as to whether there could have been an error in it and would cause you to go higher than the officer who had given you this mission, in order to determine, positively, whether it was uathentic or not. You remember that discussion?

Hitler, that is, it was Hitler's, it did not give it to you, but it came from Streckenbach.

Q Yes, very well. And his rank was not so high that an incredible statement by him could be questioned? to such extent that you wanted to inquire whether it truly was an order given by Hitler or not; or not, or were you so satified that Hitler knew what to do, and the circumstances were such that even that order could be a logical one, that you accepted it without misgivings, without questioning, without doubts, and without investigation? dispersed, as I explained yesterday, through reaction-to wards Streckenbach, and Streckenbach argumented on all those questions which your Honor just mentioned. So that during this discussion all the questions have been worked on already, and finally. No other solution was loft to us, than according to Streckenbach's experience through his discussion with Hitler it is quite obvious that there is a Fuehrer Order here which under no circumstances can be taken back, or can be cancelled.

Q You indicated a lack of desire to answer Mr. Heath's question on the moral issue. You indicated that it wans't for you to decide the moral question at all. But with every order, with every demand, or request, there instinctively goes a moral appraisement -- you may agree whith it or not --; so when this order was given to you to go out to kill, you had to appraise it, instinctively. The soldier who goes into battle knows that he must kill. But he understands that it is a question of a battle with an equally armed enemy. But you were going out to shoot down defenseless.

Now, didn't the question of the morality of that enter you mind? Let us suppose that the order had been -- and I don't mean any offense in this question -- suppose the order had been that you should kill your sister. Would you not have instinctively morally appraised that, order as to whether it was right or wrong -- morally, not politically, or military but as a matter of humanity, conscience, and justice between man and man?

from the others. I believe during my direct examination plenty of questions of this kind have been dealt with. Probably with the occurences of 1943, 1944, and 1945 which I had - where with my own hands I took children and women out of the burning asphalt myself, with my own hands, and with my own hands I took big blocks of stone from their stomachs, of pregnant women; and with my own eyes I saw 60,000 people die within 24 hours -- that I am not prepared, or in a position to give today a moral judgment about that order, because in the cause if this connection these factors seem to me to be above a moral standard. These years are for me a unit separate from the rest. Full of ruthlessnot in position to take one occurence or rather a small event, of what I experienced and to isolate it, and to value it morally in this connection. I ask, you to understand that from a human point of view.

Q Your answer gave a certain date. You mention the years 1943, 1944, 1945. Naturally, these were years following 1941, when you were confronted with that issue.

MR. WALTON: One thing further, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let's wait until the recess is over and determine whether you gave anything else.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I ask you to permit defendant Blobel to be absent from the Tribunal tomorrow forenoon and afternoon so that I can prepare with him his own examination.

THE PRESIDENT: The request wilt be granted.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Does the Prosecution have any further questions?

MR. HEATH: Your Honor, please, is this Court going to pursue the question which it asked before the recess, or is the Court through questioning the witness?

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I thought we had exhausted that inquiry, unless-

MR HEATH: The Court made inquiry on which it got no response from the witness, which was, I think, the ultimate question which Your Honor was putting to him, namely, if you get an order from Hitler to kill your sisten, would you have acted on the order, or would you have had any conflicting moral judgment about the nature of the order? There was no response, and I don't know whether the Court thinks we have gone far enough with the questioning, or, whether we may ask for a response to that question?

THE PRESIDENT: The Court would not insist on the question being answered because of its very nature, but it seems to me that it is a relevant question, but the witness may or may not answer, as he sees fit.

MR. HEATH: May we then put the question to him, if Your Honor, please? BY MR HEATH: and blood, would you have executed that order, or not?

A I consider this question frivolous. The question which is being put to me here by the Prosecution, it deals with people - - with life and death of people, and of millions of people who are near starvation even today, therefore, I can only designate and state that the question is frivolous. killing order, a moral question arises, but if thousands of human beings are involved in it, you can see no moral questions; it is a matter of numbers?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I think you are the only one to understand my answer in this way, that it is not a matter of one single person, but from the point of departure events have happened in history which among other things have led to deeds committed in Russia, and such an historical process you want me to analyze in a moral way. In fact, I do, however, refuse moral valuation with good reasons as outlined sofar as my own conscience is concerned. I don't refuse answering this last question because of just one person; it is, in order to bring morality on the basis of numbers, but because the Prosecutor now addresses me personally....

Q I shall not address you personally. Suppose you found your sister in Soviet Russia, and your sister were included in that category of gypsies, not a Jewish - - but in, gypsy band, and she was brought before you for slaughter because of her presence in the gypsy baud; what would have been your action? She is there in the process of history, which you have described?

DR. ASCHENAUER: I object to this question and I ask that question not to be admitted. I think the subject has been dealt with sufficiently so that no other questions are necessary. This is no question for cross examination.

MR. HEATH: Your Honor I believe we have met tests which we applied by putting one of his own flesh and blood in exactly the alleged historical stream in which he can form no judgment. I asked him now whether if he found his own flesh and blood within the Hitler order in Russia, what would have been his judgment, would it have been moral to kill his own flesh and blood, or immoral.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I ask for a ruling of the Tribunal upon my objection.

THE PRESIDENT: The question indubitably is extraordinary one, and ordinarily would not be, tolerated, in any trial, outside of a trial like this, which is certainly an extraordinary and a phenominal one. We are dealing her with a charge, which to the knowledge of this Tribunal has never been presented in the history of the human race of a man who is here charged with the responsibility for the snuffing out of lives by the hundreds of thousands - - not hundreds of thousands, but ninetythousand.

If he was not charged with anything so monstrous as that, it does not seem to me necessary for him to answer the question on a moral issue, but if he was presented with an order by Hitler to dispose of his own flesh and blood, whether he would regard that as a moral issue, or not, I believe, that it is a question that is entirely relevent and is not frivolous, and the witness will be called upon to answer it.

THE WITNESS: May I please answer this question in the way it was put by the Prosecutor, and the way it was originally put. I had not finished my statement why I considered this question as frivolous,as the Prosecutor interrupted me.

MR HEATH: The Court has ruled that the question is not frivolous, and it calls for an answer. I urge the Court or respectfully request the Court to ask the witness to answer the question.

THE PRESIDENT: The ruling disposes of this, and the witness will answer the question, so that you do not need to urge or demand.

MR HEATH: I should have added Your Honor, or refuse to answer it, one way or the other.

THE PRESIDENT: I am disposed to believe that he will answer it. Let's see whether he will answer it, or not.

THE WITNESS: I consider this question as frivolous, because it brings a completely private matter into a military one; that is, it deals with two events which have nothing to do with each other.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness - -

MR. HEATH: Your Honor -

THE PRESIDENT: Let's just keep in mind this situation. You are a defendant in a trial, and very serious charges have been brought against you. Your whole life and career are before this Court for scrutiny and examination.

A question arises regarding an order which you received, and that order calls for the execution, of defenseless people. You will Admit that in normal times such proposition would be incredible, and intolerable, but you claim that the circumstances were not normal, and, therefore, what might be accepted only with terrified judgment was accepted at that time as normal discharge of duties. It is the contention of the Prosecution, that regardless of the circumstances, the killing of defenseless people involved a moral issue, and that under all the circumstances you were to refrain from doing what was done. Now by way of illustration he advances, suppose that you had in the, discharge of this duty been confronted with the necessity of deciding whether to kill among hundreds of unknown people, one whom you knew very well. It seems to me that that is relevant comparison. Now, let's direct our attention to that very question, if you will, please.

THE WITNESS: If this demand would have been made to me under the same, pre-requisites that is within the framework of an order, which is absolutely necessary militarily, then I would have executed that order.

MR HEATH: That is all, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I would like to ask one question. Were the men in your command entitled to any increase in pay because of the nature of the operation, or were they paid regular salary which went to all soldiers?

at any time.

THE PRESIDENT: Now you were travelling in a territory which must have been very strange to you, and you had indicated that you had interpreters, but you must have been confronted with many language difficulties, because of dialects, and so on. Do you suppose that because of those language barriers that any errors might have occurred, so that even individuals under the broadest interpretation of that order were killed who should not have been killed?

A I don't think so. The interpreter whom I had, for instance, my own interpreter was from Russia himself, and he knew the language and the conditions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. You stated yesterday the only reason why you did not wish to leave your command was that of a fear your successor might not be so considerate ox your men, as you were. In what way did you regard that, considerate in what respect?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you were considerate of them, but the Tribunal does not understand in what respect, was it with regard to accommodations, with regard to food, with regard to the manner in which they had discharged this unpleasant duty? in Nikelaev; that, for example, the Higher SS and Police Leader Jeckel, had organized special detachments which had to carry out nothing but executions, and it is understandable that this would ruin these people spiritually, or make then completely brutal. This is an example of what I meant.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. How much time did you spend, generally, in each community. I presume you were travelling all the time?

A I personally, or with my staff?

THE PRESIDENT: With your staff. With your unit, the Einsatzgruppe?

A I changed my headquarters when the headquarters of the Army moved;

I always joined the Supreme Command of the Army.

THE PRESIDENT: Now you said that you tried to avoid excesses. Just what do you mean by that? his own.

THE PRESIDENT: You mentioned this morning that apropos something else, that there was a Christmas celebration in your organization. Did you have a Christmas celebration regularly every year?

THE PRESIDENT: Yesterday, you stated that you had attended three executions, and in each one of those executions the subjects were singing the International and that they were shouting their allegiance to Stalin, and you took from that their solidarity to the Bolshevist Cause, and, as I understood your answer, you drew from that a justification for the order, namely, that these individuals had in effect declared their hostility to Germany, and, that, therefore, as a matter of security and self-defense, or as a war measure in itself, it was justifiable to dispose of them in the way they were disposed of?

THE WITNESS: I was asked whether I saw any signs that the Fuehrer Order really was based on objective facts, and I meant these facts as one example to show that in these cases the victims actually expressed this attitude. This was not a basis for my action, only an example of what I saw myself.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you take from their singing and from their shouts at that moment, that this reflected an attitude on the part of all that race, which called for aggressive measures on the part of the Reich? visits always were attended by the same demonstrations on the part of the victims. It was not a cause for me to act in any way. It was merely an It was merely an illustration of the actual situation.

THE PRESIDENT: Now just one more question on this incident. When you observed this demonstration, did you feel any sense of relief that here indeed were enemies of your country, and, therefore, the order which you were executing did have some justification in fact? Your Honor, because in any situation it is difficult to comment on this. I said that I watched this demonstration with respect, for I resepcted even this attitude, and I never hated an opponent, or an enemy, and I still do not do so today.

THE PRESIDENT: Any further questions, Dr Aschenauer? BY DR ASCHENAUER:

Q Your Honor, I only have two more questions. Thye concern the document which was submitted by the Prosecution. I believe it is Exhibit No. 167 - - 174. On page 4 of the German copy. In the original it is on page 3. There are two sentences "we received your directives from the Chief of the Security Police and the SD, and we are informed that we are under your command as far as restricting our mission on the part of the Army is concerned." I want to ask one question. Did you ever have any responsibility of your own about these missions, including the executions, which went higher in responsibility than that of the Supreme Army Commander, as the executor of Supreme command and which would have excluded the responsibility of the Army commander-in-chief over life and death?

A No. This activity was carried out under the responsibility of the Supreme Commander. He alone had the execution power of command, and therefore he disposed over life and death. This responsibility was never limited. your responsibility refers to the manner and type of the execution of the order?

DR. ASCHENAUER: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant may now be returned to the defendant's box.

(Witness excused. )

DR. ASCHENAUER: I call Dr. Reinhard Maurach.

DR. REINHARD MAURACH, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE DIXON: Witness, hold up your right hand and repeat after me: will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated. BY DR. ASCHENAUER: your person.

A My name is Reinhard Maurach, M-a-u-r-a-c-h. I was born on the 25th of March, 1902, in Simferopol, Professor of Criminal Law, now in Munich. I have no connection with the defendant.

Q I ask you my first question. What is the position of the Soviet Union to international law?

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honors please, I must object to that question; the international law of the Soviet Union is certainly not an issue here. It has no relevance in this case.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, the question itself very obviously is irrelevant. If you can show the Tribunal how the attitude of the Soviet Government in any way sheds any light on this issue before us, we will be glad to hear you.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, the Prosecution in its indictment refers to The Hague Convention, to the various agreements which were concluded between the various states. It also mentions the general customs of war. This opinion represented by the Prosecution forces me to the conclusion that these conventions and agreements are also valid for the Soviet Union. The Hague Convention, the international usages of war, are bases for the indictment. In this indictment we are concerned with a part of the war history. Therefore, this trial must also examine the principles of international law and the various conventions and what the position of the Soviet Union is to these conventions. It is the thesis of the Defense that a war emergency existed. For that reason we must produce a basis for the practice and theory of international law and the various conventions. It must be shown by the Defense that in reference to the Eastern area, inasfar as it is being dominated by the Soviet Union, a special legal situation existed. For this reason I must ask this basic introductory question, in order to show what the relationship is as far as the belligerency is concerned, from the point of view of the High Command of the Soviet Union, what the relationship is of this High Command to the various uses of war, and what its position is to the various conventions, For this reason I ask that this question be admitted.

In the final analysis it is nothing but an introductory question. After it I shall go into the specific questions which concern the indictment more specifically and more practically.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you prepared to show, Dr.Aschenauer, that by international law there is a defense to the charges as outlined by the Prosecution in the indictment?

DR. ASCHENAUER: As far is this is concerned, I have already gone into it in my opening statement, I have explained here that international law is not valid for the East

THE PRESIDENT: I don't want you to give me your opening statement again because I think that lasted three hours and a half. Dr. Aschenauer, the trouble is that your question is a little too general. I think you will have to admit that. The question which you have put to the witness is entirely too broad. Now, if you can get it down directly to the indictment and to the specific charges we will gladly hear you and see how much of this we may permit under our rules of procedure.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Then I shall formulate my question differently.

Q (By Dr. Aschenauer) What is the position of the Soviet Union, in its attitude toward international law, to The Hague Convention?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that is the same thing.

Q (By Dr. Aschenauer) Was the Hague Convention valid for the Soviet Union?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, as we understand the defense, especially as brought out by the first defendant, the defendants were compelled to execute an order which come to them from higher authority.

Not once did the Defendant Ohlendorf speak about Russia and what its attitude was toward the Hague Convention. Their defense is not predicated, as we understand it, upon what Russia did, So wherein is the relevancy of this type of testimony?

DR. ASCHENAUER: The relevance of this testimony lies in the fact that on the basis of the Russian conduct in carrying on the war, the defendants had to count on the fact that a war would be carried on in the fast which would have to be waged outside of the normal limitations imposed by international law, and I want to prove this on the basis of the attitude of the Russian war leadership toward international law. The partisan warfare mentioned by the Prosecution is likewise to be traced back to the attitude about international law held by the Supreme Command of the Russian Army.

THE PRESIDENT: As We understand it, Dr. Aschenauer, you will attempt to establish by this witness that the Fuehrer order was justified because of Russia's attitude toward Germany and toward all those involved in the war. If you establish that, then you must, perforce, concede, and the Tribunal will ask you now whether you are willing to concede this, that the order was a justifiable order and that, therefore, the respective defendants had no reason to complain about the order because it was in accordance with international law. Are you ready to concede that?

DR. ASCHENAUER: I want to designate the Fuehrer order as a preventive measure of the German war leadership. For this reason I must cone back to the war rules as they were valid for the Eastern campaign, that is to the attitude which prevailed before the year 1941, for the Fuehrer order is in the final analysis only a consequence of this Russian attitude.

THE PRESIDENT: It would appear that you are in this position at this very moment, Dr. Aschenauer, of defending Hitler or defending Ohlendorf. If you prove that Hitler had every right to issue this order, then you are establishing that everything that was done was done in accordance with international law, which would in itself be a refutation of what Ohlendorf himself stated, that he objected to the order.

DR. ASCHENAUER: No, your Honor, it is this way, I describe the presumed emergency state in which the defendants found themselves and which can be explained from the international law in existence. I must prove how the defendants reached the conviction that the Fuehrer order had to be executed, and one part of this proof is the practical attitude toward international law in existence, I must prove how the defendants reached the conviction that the Fuehrer order had to be executed, and one part of this proof is the practical attitude toward international law represented by the Russian war leadership.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you are going behind the Fuehrer order itself. You are going one step further than the defendant himself did in his defense, is that correct?

DR. ASCHENAUER: No, I don't go any further than the defendant himself did. The defendant said that the execution of the order can only be explained for the existing special circumstances, and the special conditions then existing were a result of the war emergency state then existing.

THE PRESIDENT: But he did say that he protested this order.

Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: I would like to point out to Dr. Aschenauer that this question was raised before the International Military Tribunal and it was held, by the. Tribunal there that regardless whether Russia was bound by The Hague Convention or not, Germany was so bound. So to raise the question here again is completely irrelevant to any of the issues we have brought and outside the jurisdiction of this case.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, may I state my attitude towards this objection? This is one of the basic problems in Case 9. In Case 9 it isn't a matter of any facts, but of activities of persons in Russia, one cannot legally evaluate these activities by examining the actual overall situation if one does riot look into the circumstances, the knowledge and the experiences of the defendants, which induced them to commit those deeds. The Prosecution argues that the question of an emergency, and of a presumed emergency is superfluous since the IMT verdict established a state of aggressive war against Russia.

In such case there would be no state of emergency for the attacker. Whether the IMT verdict about the aggressive war against Russia did justice to the actual historical situation in 1941, I leave outside of this trial. This IMT verdict does not touch upon the legal situation of the 23 defendants here in Case 9. self-defense cannot be denied to them in face of the situation in which the citizens of the State found themselves after the speeck of their Chief of State of the 22nd of June '41, except if it were proved to them that they knew, contrary to the speech of Hitler, that, it was a purely aggressive war, that they wanted it, and that they were preparing for it. of the Defendant Ohlendorf with all clarity. Here at the latest the Prosecution should have brought up its objections. Nothing of the kind happened. This evidence admitted without the slightest objection, and now that this line of thought is to be pursued and confirmed by an expert opinion, and since this is being objected to by the Prosecution, it can have only one reason, that after the defense of the Defendant Ohlendorf, the great importance of these points have become clear to them. Furthermore, it is doubtlessly true that international law and international customs of war have been established for cases of war only because the one partner always will plead an emergency and unrestricted warfare would be the result. International emergency and international self-defense are independent of the fact whether anyone is the attacker or the one being attacked and is independent of any such subsequent findings. Finally it happens that one of the war partners, apart from the cause of the war, declares himself not bound by international law or by the established customs of war. Maurach's testimony is to show that this situation applies to Germany, and especially the intentions, motives, and aims of the defendants in reference to the Russian conduct which was to be expected from the theory and practice applied before 1941.

As far as the intensity of the criminal will of the defendants is concerned, it is legally relevant and necessary to find out for what motives they acted. The clarification of this psychological question plays an important part at least as far as the sentence is concerned. The cutting off of any evidence which tries to explain the motives of the perpetrator is therefore equivalent to an inadmissible restriction of the defense. Evidence such as this cannot be rejected with statements which belong only in the judgment of the Tribunal. If this evidence was such that on examining it one would have to see chat it was neither relevant for deciding guilt or the sentence, the Tribunal could refuse the evidence. In this case the evidence belongs to the usual Subject matter of the trial which the Tribunal may only evaluate at the end of the trial. Convention and the customs of war as bases for the legal evaluation of the actions. Therefore it is justifiable to examine the Russian side of this war in order to find where these bases were actually present. The partisan warfare was claimed even by the Prosecution. Why should it not and care it not be proved that this partisan warfare, Which originally was responsible for many executions was outside of international law? Likewise it is important that, beginning with the Stalin call for partisan warfare of 3 July 1941, the defendants found the previously assumed emergency confirmed as the war continued. The indictment claims that there is no emergency state when there is an aggressive war. When the Prosecution claims this it basically confirms the standard for all criminal laws, namely that a national emergency exists. It doubts merely that in the special case of the belligerent state between the Reich and the Soviet Union, which was declared, unfavorably for Germany, as an aggressive war, a National emergency was to be applied. This decision of the Prosecution is to be clarified since Ohlendorf and the others base themselves on this national emergency.

to enable the Tribunal to determine the subjective side the intentions, the goals, and the motives of the defendants. The claim of the Prosecution is erroneous for two reasons.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, may I interrupt, please. You stated in your argument up to this point that you might interpret our refusla to hear this evidence as a constriction upon the opportunity of the defense to present its case. We would look with great regret upon any interpretation by you or your brother defense counsel that this Tribunal in any way prevented the defense from presenting its case, regardless of what it may be. It appears to us at this juncture that what you are attempting to show by this witness is irrelevant. However, we will permit some questions just to see how you develop your theme. If it appears, after a few questions, that the testimony of the witness is entirely immaterial to the issue, then we will once more examine the relevancy of it. If we allow the witness to testify to the full extent of his knowledge on this particular issue, we will allow the prosecution to make any motion that it sees fit after the testimony is in as to whether this still is irrelevant, if it turns out to be irrelevant and it should not be excluded. Q (BY DR. ASCHENAUER) Then please answer my first question.

Of course, this still does not mean anything. One would have to go on and examine perhaps, whether the Hague Convention is valid for the Soviet Union because it was signed by the Czarist government and because the Soviet Union is the legal successor of the Czarist Government. But I would like to deny this question also, for the following reasons: successor of the Czarist Government has been very variously answered in legal theory, and the Soviet Union has-unfortunately, I might say - not taken an unequivocal position on this issue. Once in 1924 it stated to the Institute Intermediary in answer to the question whether a treaty concluded in 1917, a treaty concluded before the Soviet Union existed, whether such an agreement is binding to the Soviet Union that this cannot be answered generally, but that it would have to be interpreted from case to case. In all political treaties the Soviet Union has taken the attitude that such treaties which represent a certain limitation on its sovereignty, do not automatically continue to be valid, but that it was different with its practice on economic agreements, world postal agreements, which were not political agreements, but when political treaties were involved, the Soviet Union reserved the right to sign it. Therefore, it always represented the attitude that these political treaties were only valid for the Soviet Union if an express renewal or a new signature takes place. As I said, an express signing did not take place, a silent agreement -

THE PRESIDENT: Professor, just a moment.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honors please, I don't want to hinder the defense in any way, but in order to save time, we will concede whatever the Professor states as his opinion; either the Hague Convention does apply to Russia or does not apply to Russia and we will concede, if he will just state what his opinion is -- that is, we will concede that it is his opinion.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. That's quite a concession, Dr. Aschenauer. He is willing to agree with you on either side and then let you draw from that statement whatever you feel is logical in your defense, because it must be very clear even to you, Dr. Aschenauer, that the way the professor has begun his dissertation -- that it may be a rather long one, because he is more or less trained to go into a Question with the greatest of minutiae and with the blackboard, We might be here much longer than even you expect, if we don't put a limit on his testimony.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Why don't you ask him directly whether Russia is or is not bound by the Hague and Geneva Conventions. Then, at least, we'll have briefly his answer. Then, if he wants to explain why, he can in a few brief sentences fortify his conclusion.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Yes, I shall try to be precise.

Q (BY Dr. Aschenauer): Witness, was the Soviet Union bound by the Geneva Prisoner of War Convention? to the Soviet Union and for this reason: Because this Convention was concluded in 1929, that is, at a time when the Soviet Union already exited, and the Soviet Union was not a signatory to this convention. would make considerable differences, all according to whether the prisoners of war are proletarians or class enemies? statement nor is any statement of the War Ministry existent, but there are other explanations by the leading representatives of the Soviet International Law: Professor Korovin, Professor Pashukanis, Sabanjn, and others, and here, as a rule, they stated that the Soviet Union would draw a difference in the treatment of its prisoners, all according to whether these are proletarians or non-proletarians, that is, class enemies.

The proletarians can be educated in a prisoner-of-war camp but the class enemies have to be isolated and have to be made harmless. ered admissible, if they represent a danger to the leadership of the Red Army?

A This question is to be confirmed basically, principally. Examples for this are the evacuations of elements of populations, even before the war, from border territories, and, above all, during the War, after 1941, the evacuations of even greater groups of people from the war areas, first of all, of the Tartars from the Crimea, of the Germans from the Crimea, and of all the Volga Germans form the Volga area.

Q Would this danger have to exist more concretely? evidence of any treasonous attitude of these people. It was sort of a general preventive measure.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honors please, all the questions presented by the Defense thus far have had no bearing whatsoever on the charges brought against the Defendant Ohlendorf or any other defendant in this case. We, therefore, ask that this line of questioning be discontinued and that everything stated by the witness be stricken from the record as irrelevant.

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly, Dr. Aschenauer, the Conventions with regard to prisoners of war aren't applicable here, because we are not discussing prisoners of war. We are discussing the civilian population.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, the Hague Convention, on the other hand, is a matter of this case and -

THE PRESIDENT: Let me interrupt, Dr. Aschenauer, please. You have heard the prosecution's objections and the Tribunal has attempted to indicate also how it looks upon this particular issue. Now, as we said before, in no way will we restrict the defense in presenting what to them seems the logical defense in this case, always within the bounds of reason.

Now we will recess at the present time and I would suggest that you talk with the professor after court adjourns and the professor has heard this discussion back and forth and perhaps you can crystallize a few precise questions which will bring from the witness precisely what you want and then we'll make the ruling on the prosecution's objections tomorrow morning. Is that clear?

DR. ASCRENAUER: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. The Tribunal will now be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 16 October 1947, at 0930 hours.)

of America, against Otto Ohlendorf, et al.,

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal. No. II-A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session, God save the United States of America, and this Honorable Tribunal.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, one short motion this morning before we get down to the business of the Court. The Prosecution this time moves the Tribunal for an admission of the Document which was introduced yesterday during the cross examination of the Defendant Ohlendorf. That document is No. NOKW-256, which has been given the identification number of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 174. We respectively move the Tribunal at this time that this document be admitted into evidence as part of the Prosecution's case.

THE PRESIDENT: Prosecution's Exhibit No. 194 will be admitted into evidence as part of the Prosecution's case. Dr, Aschenauer.

DR. GAWLIK: Dr. Gawlik for the defendant Naumann. Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Neumann be excused immediately because his defense has to be prepared, and that he be led to Room No. 57 to discuss it with me. I make this motion now because Professor Maurach is to be examined as an expert, and, therefore, it was my intention to have Herr Naumann excused in the afternoon, but I just heard Professor Maurach will not appear, and that Herr Spengler will be examined immediately, and for this reason I would like now to make this motion.

THE PRESIDENT: The motion of course, will be granted. You understand that you will be the next in order?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, all right. The defendant Naumann will be excused and will be taken toRoom No. 47 where he may be in conference with his attorney, Dr. Gawlik.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, your Honor.

DR. KOHR: Dr. Kohr for the defendant Blobel, as representative for Dr. Heim. I make a motion to have the defendant Blobel excused also, and that he be brought to Room 57 also. There seems to be a mistake here. The motion was already made yesterday afternoon, but the defendant Blobel was brought in here erroneously. It is necessary that in order to prepare the defense he be brought to Room No.57 to discuss the defense.

THE PRESIDENT: You would like to do that immediately, would you?

DR. KOHR: Yes, Your Honor. Yes, I would like to have it done immediately.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant ---

DR. KOHR: It was a mistake, He was already excused for today, but he had to appear anyhow.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Well, we will rectify the mistake. Immediately the defendant Blobel will be excused, and taken to Room No. 57 so as to be in conference with his attorney.

DR. KOHR: I thank you, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome.

DR. RIEDIGER: Dr. Riediger for the defendant Haensch. Your Honor, the situation with Haensch is similar, on the basis of the decision of the Tribunal yesterday Haensch has been excused for the proceedings of today, and, tomorrow, but he was never brought in anyway, and I ask that he be dismissed, and that he be brought back for a discussion on his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: You also want him taken to this Room No. 57?

DR. RIEDIGER: No, if it is possible, to his cell, because he has to work himself.

THE PRESIDENT: And you want that done immediately?

Page 772

DR. RIEDIGER: If possible, yes. If this does not create any special difficulties.

THE PRESIDENT: I see no difficulty whatsoever. The defendant Haensch will be excused so that he may be interrogated by his counsel, and will be taken from the defendants box, immediately.

DR. RIEDIGER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand we are having some mechanical difficulties which are very brief in duration, we hope so, and we will suspend for two or three minutes. We are ready Dr. Aschenauer,

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, Dr. Reinhard Maurach was to testify yesterday in Court, and was to give an expert opinion founded on the subject of what were the results from the attitude and the war practices of the Soviet Union sofar as International Law is concerned, and, what in his opinion this has to do with the war emergency state -- war with the presumed emergency state, Your Honor, I have come to the conviction that the Tribunal would get a better and a clearer picture of this if this man would give in writing an expert opinion in the form of an affidavit. Therefore, I ask that this expert opinion be admitted as an exhibit.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honor, please, we have not as yet received any copy of the exhibit offered by the Defense ... However, if it pertains solely to questions of the Russian attitude towards International Law, and, is not more closely connected with the charges in this cass, we object to it as not being relevent.

THE PRESIDENT: This is a repetition of the objection made bythe Prosecution yesterday, and the Tribunal indicated yesterday that we were disposed to hear the Professor in order to ascertain that his testimony would be relevent. The Tribunal is further disposed now to receive the Professor's opinion in a written form, so, therefore, the objection of the Prosecution is overruled, and you may have the Professor prepare his expert opinion in writing, and to submit to the Tribunal as an exhibit on behalf of the defendant Otto Ohlendorf, and at the same time we will entertain a motion on the part of the Prosecution if itsees fit to have it excluded, if the Prosecution at that time again insist that the evidence as adduced by the exhibit it irrelevant.

MR. FERENCZ: One mere point, Your Honor. As concerns this exhibit we waive our objection to net having received it in advance, but request the defense counsel be instructed that as regards the calling of witnesses to the stand, and the introduction of additional. exhibits, the Prosecution be notified twenty-four hours in advance.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Aschenauer, I am presuming you are familiar with the rule, and in announcing it to you I would like the defense counsel to be reminded that the rules require that the Prosecution be informed twenty-four hours previously with the presentation of witnesses, or of an exhibit, with the nature of the testimony to be presented by that witness, or in the exhibit.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Before I call the witness Spengler, I would like to make a statement that I renounce the witness, Justus Baier. I want to use the witness Spengler completely. The witness Spengler is a character witness, and an export witness, but in order not to take the time of the Tribunal unnecessarily, I will do without the witness Herr Baier, and I shall be satisfied with submitting the affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, we will accept the procedure.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I call Dr. Wilhelm Spengler as a witness.

DR. WILHELM SPENGLER, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE SPEIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me: speak the pure truth, and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath)

JUDGE SPEIGHT: You may be seated. BY DR. ASCHENAUER. draw your attention to the translation difficulties, and I want to ask you to speak slowly, and to watch the lights, as these mean interruptions and slowing down. The first question. First give the Tribunal information about your person, and about your education and your profession.

A My name is Dr. Wilhelm Spengler, and I was born on 19 March 1907 in Ratholz in the Allgaeu. I am the son of a teacher, Wilhelm Spengler, and his wife. I attended public school in Buchsheim, near Memmingen, in Suebia. The High School in Memmingen, I graduated from High School in 1925 in Augsburg. Having grown up among the confusion of the First World War, and in view of the chaos and the spiritual and ideological world dissolution of the war epoch, and on the relative construction of values -- (interruption) A (continuing) It was up to me to look out for myself, and to find my own spiritual basis for my life.

For this reason I studied European cultural history for six years, and literature and philosophy at the Universities of Munich and Leipzig.

I got a Ph.D. and in 1932 in Leipzig also I passed the State examination for teaching at a High School on the subject of German, History and Philosophy, with the aim of a scholastic career.

Q Witness, did you reach your goal?

A No. This shows the desperate situation of the scholastic German youth in these years. The Commissar State Examination in Saxony for teachers, Professor Hoehn told me that despite my good examinations, I could not be employed because of an oversupply of teachers. That is, I could not get a definite position for fifteen years, that is 1948. This situation as assistant teacher jobs, did not provide enough for my life and too much for death. I could not do any more as young man, than my graudation with honors and my PhD, and my state examination was excellent, qualified me, and nevertheless I was on the street without any employment. Just to show you this general situation I mention these results of my examinations.

Q From where did help finally come to you?

Q Now, Witness, we come to your political career. Did you belong to the Nazi Party?

A No, I did not belong to the Nazi Party at that time. If in my whole student years there was something which could not arouse my interest, then this was politics. The confusion and the talks of the dozens of parties was for me so much more of a reason for me to concentrate only on my studies. how did you come to this contact? instructor at a university. I became the aid of Professor Hoehn in Jena. I heard from him for the first time that such a thing as an SD was to be formed, and he told me that leading agencies of the Party in Berlin, to which he had connections, had in mind to form an objective information about spiritual life, about sciences, about the situation at universities, and that they wanted to have a picture of how these various cultural groups thought about the formation of the National Socialist State.

He asked me whether I would be prepared to give him such information.

Q How did you decide that? by the State, and since I could not count on any definite position until 1948, but since here I saw a possibility that I might find work and work objectively, and express my feeling, even critically, that I could be useful in this job, and since I could work at a central agency and could occupy a policy-making position, I said to myself -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. Now, you have been telling us what you had been doing. Now you tell us the conversation you had with yourself. Now, in this very interesting dialogue between you and yourself, what are we to gain from that which will help us in deciding the case of Otto Ohlendorf? In other words, Dr. Aschenauer, I am afraid that you are allowing this witness to go into too much detail with regard to his own life. What is the relevancy of this?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I want to clarify the following questions by means of this witness: According to what points of view did Ohlendorf carry on his activity in the SD: secondly, what was the effect of the opposition of Ohlendorf; thirdly, by means of the SD and in the SD, Ohlendorf had humanitarian goals, and he defended these goals against anyone without any regard of his own person so that therefore he made enemies and incurred serious threats.

THE PRESIDENT: But, Dr. Aschenauer, this witness is giving us the story of his life, not of Ohlendorf's life.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I had to come back to the time which this witness himself lived through in order to show the Tribunal what this man lived through and what his own opinion is. Your Honor, I had to go into these things because in the cross-examination, it is up to the Prosecution to also examine the character of the witness. Therefore, I have asked these introductory questions, and I shall not come back to these questions. My next theme will be the SD work, which was Ohlendorf's aim, and I must, by describing this SD work, form the basis for Ohlendorf's opposition against the totalitarian state.

ent II/2, and he struck me very quickly.

Q Now, why? the wearer of a golden party badge, never did I hear from such a man such polished and critical remarks about the development of National Socialism. He made this criticism about the various economic fields, and he showed that the actual activity of these economic departments in the life of the German citizen is not the realization of National Socialist aims, but that it is a decadence from the original idea, a divergence from the original idea.

It is not the realization of a national organized life in the nation, but the culmination of the old capitalistic economic forms, but now by means of the authority of the Party. He also gave me concrete examples for this criticism out of the daily work for the justification of this criticism. ask you to speak more slowly. Witness, what was the effect of this criticism in the office, how was his attitude judged in the rest of the office?

A The effects were various. Some of these people saw in him a man who had a very clear philosophical picture of things which to him meant National Socialism, and who from this picture had criticized actual conditions, and who had the belief that by this criticism he could reform these actual conditions, but the others saw in him, even at that time, an intellectual pessimist and one who only sees things in a very dim light.

Q: Witness, what connections do you know of which caused Ohlendorf to become Chief of the Domestic Service of the SD?

A: These connections took place in the first half of the year 1939. No clear picture of what this SD was to be and was to become, had as yet been developed, for in the beginning, in its embryonic beginnings, immediately after the so-called assumption of power, a part of this SD, the so-called Central Department II/1. was the legitimate enemy information service of the Party and was to inform about the status of enemy tendencies and ideologies within the total structure but already in 1934, '35, Hoehn began to build his cultural department into a reflection of the spiritual and cultural life, of the life of law and administration and of economics, and his successor. Six, also strove to develop a general information service about these matters. developed as the latter Office IV of the RSHA and had achieved complete independence. From the beginning on, as far as the enemy information service and observation was concerned, the Gestapo had available its own investigation offices and its own information service. That means that the concept "enemy" in the SD which was developing became smaller from year to year, and in 1938 the development was given a final coup de grace in the sense that the enemy observation disappears even as an informational task. This was finally completely excluded from the SD and was given to the competence of the Gestapo alone. This was decided in the so-called decree of separation of functions. From this period of time on the SD, and this is true for the entire Office III of Ohlendorf, on the SD has had nothing to do whatever with concrete enemy information.

This became the competence of the Gestapo alone. Including all connecting questions on informational measures.

Q: Witness, what became of the Office of Cultural Affairs which had been directed by Hoehn and later by Six, that is to say of the Department II/2, of the so-called Domestic Field (Lebensgebret).

A: From this remaining apparatus Ohlendorf now developed Office III, and from 1939 on until 1945 Ohlendorf gave this office its character and its aims and its goals and its ideas.

Q: Witness, can you tell us about the ideas, the loading ideas, according to which Ohlendorf performed his SD work, can you describe this to us briefly?

A: Since I was active in this office of Ohlendorf from the beginning and was active until the end, and since I was the department head of Culture and Science in this office, I can doubtlessly describe this backbone of the office, this Office III, and I must say this right now, Ohlendorf had a religious central idea about human beings which was the center of his thinking, and which he emphasized to us one hundred times during conferences.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you have used the phrase "religious central idea". Do you mean, by that that he was a member of a church and was given to religious worship, or are you using that phrase in a generic sense?

THE WITNESS: It was his inner philosophical religious philosophy.

THE PRESIDENT: You say it was an inner philosophical business. Did you look into his soul?

THE WITNESS: It was an inner philosophy which he

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but you keep saying "inner". What sort of spectacles or apparatus did. you use to look into his inner soul?

I am very anxious to know how you looked into his inner soul.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, he always told us his thoughts repeatedly and repeatedly and he developed then over a number of years.

THE PRESIDENT: As far as Otto Ohlendorf's inner soul is concerned and his outlook upon life in general, he expressed that attitude from the witness stand with a clarity that you have not yet approached. I don't think that anyone could tell us in better language than Otto Ohlendorf spoke himself just what he thought and felt, so now in your testimony please give us objective facts, what Ohlendorf did, what he said, but don't try to tell us that you roamed about in the inner recesses of his soul, because we don't know that you are capable of doing that.

Q: (By Dr. Aschenauer): Witness, give us practical examples according to which Ohlendorf performed his SD work.

A: I can give concrete examples from the work of this Office III. The contempt for all intellectual things and academicians, on the part of the NSDAP, is well known. Throughout long years of information service the organization of the spiritual man and of cultural accomplishments in the framework of a people has always been brought out again and again, but finally we succeeded to change this evaluation of schools and intellectual things. Goebbels, on the basis of these reports, finally declared himself prepared, by means of a decree of the press conference of the Reich government, to avoid any contemptuous evaluations of sciences or scholars and teachers and to avoid such remarks in press, theater, radio and literature, and to forbid such remarks. I think it was in the fall of 1943 Goebbels invited the high school principles to convene at Heidelberg and he tried to establish contact with the scholars aria to get them to agree to the Party program.

This would not have been possible without the tireless efforts of the Information Service of the SD in which the justification of these intellectuals was always emphasized again and again. When Goebbels became the representative of the Fuehrer for total war, the high schools and universities were to be closed immediately. On the order of Ohlendorf almost all German universities took it upon themselves to defend their scholastic activities and thus we were able to avoid that the intended closing down of all schools would be undertaken in general and would only be done in single instances.

Of course, one cannot state in detail how many young scholars and how great a fraction of the succeeding academic generation were enabled to carry on their work and that they were not destroyed by the war through this measure. When the Speer Ministry decided that research was not inportant for the war, and since scholars were drafted to the Army withoug any questions, the continuous support and collaboration with the Reich Research Office, through this cooperation it was brought about that a Fuehrer decree was issued and this Fuehrer decree ordered that the drafting of research workers would be stopped and that 5,000 research workers and scientists would be brought back to their research institutions from the front lines. If a spokesman for the American foreign office -

MR. WALTON: If it please the Tribunal, I fail to see the relevancy of this line of testimony. I have listened very carefully and I object to this line on the grounds that it does not pertain to the issues involved in this case. If, however, this witness is a character witness, I make no objection, to him stating his opinion of the character of ohlendorf, but I do object to the record showing a dissertation on the cultural history of Germany from the year 1931 to 1945. We are not interested in the cultural history of Germany or in the Information Service of Germany during the war years.

THE PRESIDENT: In this trial?

MR. WALTON: In this trial, yes, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer, it must be obvious to you with all the zeal with which you naturally manifest in behalf of your client, and justifiably so, that what this witness is talking about now has no relevancy to the issue and can be of no assistance to this defense. It is just merely a discussion on something which is of interest, but not in this trial, please try to bring the witness directly to the Defendant Otto Ohlendorf, what he did, what he said, and how what he did and said affected him, in so far as the charges in the indictment are concerned. And let me suggest, Dr. Aschenauer, at this juncture for all defense counsel in the preparation of witnesses please, do not fall into the groove or pattern which has apparently been marked out for this witness.

Try to adhere directly to the issue and give the Tribunal facts which will illuminate the issue and not illuminate the whole world as scholastic learning

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, the Defendant Ohlendorf is charged with Count 35 membership in a criminal organization. This activity, this work, which the witness has described as the work of the Defendant Ohlendorf was the activity of the Defendant Ohlendorf in Office III, for which he has been accused. In my presentation of evidence I shall come to the opposition of Ohlendorf against the totalitarian state. For this reason, I also had to use part of the time to explain what Ohlendorf did in his Office III. This is nothing else but the admissible exculpation proof.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, the defendant is charged, in Count III with membership in the SS. Now how does this testimony that Goebbels sent all the students to the front in any way exculpate the defendant from membership in the SS? Now Ohlendorf was or was not a member of the SS. If he was not, that simple statement suffices. If he was, then it must be shown that he was unaware of the criminal purposes of the SS as outlined in the decision of the International Military Tribunal. If that can be shown, then he was exculpated insofar as that count is concerned. Now, will you please try to adhere closely to that very definite narrow issue.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, may I say a few words to that? The Control Council Law No. 10 admits proof of exculpation. It says here that a man can be exculpated if he did not know the criminal intents of the organization. I ask, Your Honor, isn't it a proof of his exculpation if a man worked against the aims seat down by Himmler and other people, namely, the totalitarian state. I want to hear-the proof of exculpation and, therefore, to this restricted extent, I thought I could give the Tribunal a basis on which I could build later on.

If it is sufficient to the Tribunal, I shall continue and discuss the contradictions which arose.

THE PRESIDENT: The difficulty is very obvious. The witness has prepared himself to testify along a certain line and he is having a hard time to deviate from this program which he has already outlined for himself. That is the reason I wanted to admise other defense counsel not to let other witnesses prepare themselves in this manner. He is covering entirely too much territory. We have said that whatever Ohlendorf said and did, which is in any way relevant to Count 3 or the other counts will be admissible. Now let us try to keep in mind the Defendant Ohlendorf at all times. Let us proceed.

Q (By Dr. Aschenauer): Witness, please describe the controversies of Ohlendorf and the leading personalities and give the reasons. disagreements of Ohlendorf on the one hand and Heydrich and Himmler on the other hand. Here we find diametrically opposed disputes in their various goals. Himmler and Heydrich had the aim to take the entire SD and incorporate it very closely into the Security Police and to take the SS and Gestapo, the Criminal Police, and the SD and make out of all of them a State Protection Corps. Opposed to this incorporation of the SD into a State Protection Corps, Ohlendorf objected for years as strenuously as a lion. The final disagreement between Himmler and Ohlendorf ends with a dispute between Himmler and Ohlendorf on the subject of this State Protection Corps. Shortly after Ohlendorf returned from Russia, during a discussion with Himmler, Ohlendorf protested against such a State Protection Corps, which was to protect the Nzai reality, and he objected so severely that Himmler did not want to hear any of this bullying. The incorporation of the SD into such a State Protection Corps was in disagreement with Ohlendorf's basic plans, namely, the position which he had set up for himself, namely, to work for the people, for the nation, for its citizens, and for their wishes and desires, their needs, and their criticisms, and not to work for the totalitarian state.

I may perhaps have exaggerated a little bit -

THE PRESIDENT: No, no. Don't exaggerate. Let's have the facts just as you know them.

THE WITNESS: Yes, yes, Your Honor.

Q (By Dr. Aschenauer): What were the reasons for the dispute with Ley? that is the regimentation of the German man from the cradle to the grave. From those who developed the DAF, beginning with the DAF kindergarten down to the DAF vocational education, even about the regulation of leisure time, in the DAF man was being regimented from cradle to the grave, and he was ordered about from cradle to the grave.

Q. May I interrput you, Witness. I ask you to be brief and only give the essential facts.

A. Against these policies of Ley, Ohlendorf made reports for years and was considered an opponent by Ley himself. Ley complained so continuously and bitterly to Himmler about these SD reports and Himmler did not approve of the work of Ohlendorf, but criticized Ohlendorf as an intellectual beast. He even limited and restricted the Information Service so that Ohlendorf from the middle of the war on was able only to send to Himmler about 1/10 of this critical work against the Nazi reality. Thus the Reich Press Chief, Dietrich, complained about these reports, because the Ohlendorf reports showed the actual popular opinions about these press reports and the Army reports. Thus Goebbels wanted to have Hitler dissolve the SD because when Goebbels gave his speech in the Sports Palace to open total warfare, a speech in which he called on the people with questions; "Do you want total war?" in the extremely critical SD report an out the -

MR. WALTON: May I renew my former objection, please?

THE PRESIDENT: Now we are going to hear a blow by blow account of Goebbels' speech in the Sports Palace and how the audience responded to his various rhetorical questions. Now how does that help us in deciding the question of the guilt or innocence of Otto Ohlendorf?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I don't want to come back to this complex of questions and I shall go into the Jewish question, which is the basis for the prosecution indictment.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q. (By Dr. Aschenauer) Do you know the attitude of Ohlendorf towards the Jewish problem?

A. Even though the Jewish problem did not belong to the field in which Ohlendorf worked, I can, nevertheless, testify to his concrete opinions and his conduct, as far as the Jewish question is concerned, because in reference to the general political situation about the Jewish problem Ohlendorf would express himself on this problem, and also acted on it.

Ohlendorf's attitude towards the Jews can be gathered from his attitude towards the concept, "people." Jews were people for Ohlendorf also, not German people, that is, but foreign people, but because they were people they were for him justified from the world order and world situation.

Q. Witness, what practical conclusions did Ohlendorf draw from his attitude?

A. Following his practical attitude Ohlendorf judged events of the so-called Crystal Night in November 1938 and he rejected these events in his reports by the Group III D. He stated his attitude against the wearing of the Jewish star, because this was a contradiction to the dignity of the human being. In his economic reports he also stated his objection against the boycott of Jewish business, in 1835 already when the Jews in Germany who held a great number of key positions in the medical field, press field, legal field and so forth, had to leave these positions, because the figures highly exceeded the small percentage of the Jewish population with the German Reich.

Q. Witness, what do you know about a minority statute for the Jews which Ohlendorf worked out?

A. The most important step which Ohlendorf took about the status of Jewry and their position in Germany was his request to Heydrich around 1938 or 1939, to effect a minority statute for the Jews in Germany so that such a minority statute would lay down the rights for this alien group which happened to live in Germany and that such a statute would regulate those rights of the actually undetermined status of Jewry. I know that with this suggestion to Heydrich which Ohlendorf made spontaneously on his part, because he was not even competent to deal with these questions that Ohlendorf was thrown out when he made that suggestion. I witnessed his bitterness, how aroused Ohlendorf was about this brusque refusal, of Heydrich to listen to him. The events did not let Ohlendorf rest in peace afterwards either. Despite the brusque re fusal which he got, about a half year or three-quarters of a year later, Ohlendorf made another attempt to have this minority statute established as a legal regulation, just like the other minorities in Germany had their own autonomy.

Here the result was exactly the same. Heydrich simply refused --

Q. Witness, do you know whether Ohlendorf voluntarily reported for the Eastern campaign, or whether he was ordered to report?

A. Ohlendorf did not report voluntarily for the Eastern campaign. He was ordered to report. Ohlendorf at that time was only honorary head of the office and in his main position he was manager of the Reich Group Trade so that for the time being Ohlendorf was not able to report as Heydrich and Himmler requested, because he was made indispensible for the Reich Group Trade, but during the Polish campaign various incidents must have happened about which I did not hear in detail, but which induced Himmler to rebuke Ohlendorf, which came by way of Heydrich down to Office III, and reads about as follows: Ohlendorf's weaklingsand cowards did not prove satisfactory in Poland. It was about time that these men would be committed in combat and Ohlendorf above all. Heydrich then asked Ohlendorf several times and asked him personally when he would report for the campaign. Ohlendorf objected for the following reasons: He had never worked in the field of the State Police; that he had no experience in Police matters, and, in addition, Ohlendorf had never been a soldier; beyond that, it was against Ohlendorf's nature to direct various units of the State Police and the Criminal Police.

Q. Witness, do you know anything about whether Ohlendorf in the spring of 1941 still worked on the Minority statute for the Jews?

A. I don't know any details about this. Even though I thought about it, I cannot give you the year. I don't know whether it was 1939, 1940 or 1941. I don't know exactly. But Ohlendorf retained this attitude, this known to me from former years.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: The cross-examination, will be taken up after the morning recess. The Tribunal will now be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I made a mistake during the discussion -- and I wish to beg your pardon -- I used the expression "Gestapo State". To explain this -by this I did not mean the organization, and their legal tasks, but only the terminology used today for the Nazi state.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will show that explanation and correction.

DR. SUESS (for the defendant Schulz): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant be excused from the session this afternoon because the defense wants to prepare him for his direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Schulz will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon so that he may confer with his counsel in the preparation of his defense. Now, Mr. Secretary General, will you see that the necessary order gets to the prison authorities so that Schulz will not be brought into Court this afternoon?

DR. SUESS: Thank you, your Honor.

DR. GAWLIK (for the defendant Seibert): Your Honor, I would like to address a few questions to the witness Spengler.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Mr. Spengler, do you know Herr Seibert?

A. Yes, I know Kerr Seibert.

Q. Please state for the record, which of the defendants is Kerr Seibert.

A. From me, the second from the right, in the front row.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I ask you to note in the record that the witness Spengler identified the defendant Seibert correctly.

THE PRESIDENT: I think perhaps the interpreter stated that incorrectly. isn't that what you intended to say?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will so indicate, that the defendant Seibert has been identified by the witness on the stand, at the present time Spengler. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Since when did you know Herr Seibert, and what do you know about his work?

A. I hav e known Herr Seibert since 1936. He was in the Group III-D, Economics, of the Office III. He was Referent, and later Deputy Gruppenleiter, finally, Gruppenleiter.

Q. How many Gruppenleiters were there?

A. There were four Gruppenleiters.

Page 793

Q. Was Herr Seibert also Deputy office Chief?

A. No, Herr Seibert was not Deputy Office Chief.

Q. Did Herr Seibert volunteer to work in the Einsatzgruppen?

A. No, there were no volunteers.

Q. What did Herr Seibert do in the Einsatzgruppe?

A. Herr Seibert, like all those who worked in the Einsatzgruppe, was ordered to go there.

Q. Could Herr Seibert have refused to obey this order?

A. No, no more than any other orders we were given.

Q. What would have happened to Herr Seibert if he had not obeyed this order?

A. He would have been arrested and put before a Tribunal.

Q. When Herr Seibert was ordered to Einsatzgruppe-D, did he know, about the work of the Einsatzgruppe?

A. No, no, he did not know about the work when he was drafted to work for the Einsatzgruppe.

Q. What were the reasons that Herr Seibert was drafted to Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. The reasons were as follows: A Chief-III, that is an expert on the news service, was to be taken in, and as Herr Seibert, since 1936, had belonged to this office and therefore had gained a lot of experience, and as the economical questions were important, Herr Seibert was detailed for this duty. Apart from that Seibert was also an officer of the Army, of the Wehrmacht.

Q. What field within Einsatzgruppe-D was Herr Seibert intended to work in?

A. Herr Seibert was detailed by Berlin to work as Leader-III, That is, he was to give SD reports on various subjects, economics, law, and administration, health, culture, and Science.

Q. Witness, what do you know about Herr Seibert's activity with the Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. K know that Herr Seibert carried out his task as leader III because such specialised report were made in the economic field, and, also on ethnic subjects and they were sent to Herr Seibert in Berlin. For example, a report about the position of the Tartars in Crimea, and on their organization, their history, their Estonian origin, and soforth was made.

Q. Would you please repeat on what is your knowledge based as to Herr Seibert's activity in the Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. This knowledge is based first of all on reports which remained in Berlin with Seibert's colleagues; we talked about all of this, and also because in the later COURT II-A CASE IX years I met Herr Seibert almost daily, and we talked about this work and these reports.

Q. Was Herr Seibert deputy of the Chief of Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. Herr Seibert's position as Deputy Chief of Einsatzgruppe-D I don't know about. I knew that he was Chief-III, and in the staff of Herr Ohlendorf, Einsatzgruppe Ghief, I know that.

Q. Then it would have been known to you if Herr Seibert had been deputy of the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. If he had held an official position as Deputy Chief of Einsatzgruppe I would have known about, or I would have heard about it, and, Herr Seibert later on would have told me about it.

Q. Witness, to this reply I submit to you from Document BOOK III-D, page 69 of the German text, and unfortunately, Your Honor, I do not have the English text; it is Exhibit No. 160, Document NOKW-628. This report is from Herr Seibert, signed "By order of"?

A. I see.

Q. Does this not show that Herr Seibert was Chief of Einsatzgruppe-D, and does this not contradict your reply?

A. No, this does not show that Herr Seibert was Deputy Einsatzgruppe Chief, because even I in Berlin signed during the absence of Herr Ohlendorf in the Crimea, I signed all reports of my group "by order of", because each group leader in his field could deputize for the chief, and they signed, "by order of" but this did not make any of us group leaders, deputy chief, Ohlendorf never had a deputy in Berlin in Office-III.

Q. When did you meet Herr Seibert after his commitment in the East?

A. That was when Herr Seibert returned, June 1942.

Q. What do you know about Herr Seibert's activity after this return to Berlin?

A. As previously he again worked in the economic group III-D., and expert reports were made in addition to the economic reports.

Q. Did this economical group apart from their reporting activity have any executive power?

A. No, this group III-D, like the rest of Office-III had no executive authority at all. This executive power was Vested in the State Police and in the Criminal Police, Office-III, and, therefore, Herr Seibert and the group could neither give an order for arrest, nor could they interrogate a person; not even could they officially ask him to a court, they could only invite him for discussion. The only authority which Herr Seibert and the entire Office-III had was the information Service showing the situation in special fields.

Q. Was Herr Seibert, after his return from Russia, Herr Ohlendorf's deputy?

A. No, Herr Seibert never held that position, I must definitely state here that Herr Seibert would have been the last one of the group leaders to be appointed as Deputy Chief of the Office, because he was the youngest one of us. Only in 1944 was Herr Seibert appointed Gruppenleiter, group leader, although he had worked in the economic field since 1936, and since Herr Ohlendorf had been in the office as Office-chief, he conducted the economic departments in III-D.

Q. Witness, you already said that it was customary under Herr Ohlendorf that every group leader signed "by order of." I have one question on this point, was this only used when Herr Ohlendorf was absent at any time?

A. This was not only used when he was absent, but it was generally used, for example, after Herr Ohlendorf had returned, I continuously signed finance department reports "by order of" just, as Herr Seibert did in the economic field.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you stated that Seibert was too young to have taken ever a deputyship. How old was he at the time?

A. Herr Seibert, I believe, was born in 1909, I am not quite sure of it, I only know that among us group leaders he was the youngest one.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Ohlendorf himself was only about thirty-two or thirty-three at the time?

A. I know that, but Herr Ohlendorf had a very good education and training. He had studied law.

THE PRESIDENT: Then your answer should be not that Seibert was too young, but he was too inexperienced?

A. I can say that, too, as well.

DR. GAWLIK: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Any further cross examination on the part of another defense counsel?

DR. STEIN: for the defendant Sandberger. BY DR. STEIN:

Q. Witness, since when have you known the defendant Sandberger?

A. I believe since about '36, '37, perhaps even '38.

Q. At that time was he in the Reich Security Main Office with you?

A. No, at the time he was not in the RSHA, but he worked in the SD, in Stuttgart, and there he did reporting, expert reporting.

Q. Did you see Sandberger after his journeys after COURT II-A CASE IX the Eastern campaign?

A. Yes. I know Herr Snadberger was appeared there in the RSHA, in Berlin.

Q. How often did this happen?

A. Two or three times, I am not quite sure,

Q. What did he want in Berlin at that time?

A. On one occasion Obersturmbannfuehrer Gengenbach, that was the group leader for law and administration, who dealt with personnel questions in Office-III, I talked to this man, and there I heard that Herr Sandberger urgently requested to return to his specialized SD work in Office-III.

Q. Can you say approximately when this happened, about what year -- what month?

A. I can work that out. When did the Russian campaign start, the year of '41, or the beginning of '42, was it not, and it was a few months after the Russian campaign started, approximately.

DR. STEIN: Thank you, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any other defense counsel? Is the Prosecution ready for cross examination?

MR. WALTON: The Prosecution has no questions to ask this witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the witness will be allowed to leave the courtroom. He may be escorted from the courtroom.

(witness excused)

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Aschenauer?

DR. ASCHENAUER: Your Honor, I have finished except for presenting the documents in the submission of my evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Dr. Aschenauer, as I have indicated on several occasions, I do hope that you will get to work at once on your own documents that you intend to present.

DR. ASCHENAUER: I shall hand in the document books, as the affidavits arrive and state when my documentary material will be ready. The first document book I shall hand in at the beginning of next week. I shall hand in the translation.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Dr. Gawlik are you ready to proceed with the defendant Naumann?

DR. GAWLIK: I am prepared to continue, but the defendant Naumann is not here. I believe he is just coming.

THE PRESIDENT: He will be brought in immediately. Dr. Gawlik, through no fault of your own, and we are sure you are not trying to conceal your client from the Tribuanl, they brought over the wrong defendant. They brought here Blobel instead of Naumann. It would take a little of time to correct this error, and to make the correct substitution, so we will take advantage of that time, and we will now recess for the regular lunch period, and reconvene at 1:30 o'clock.

(Whereupon recesswas taken to 1330 hours, 16 October 1947) (The hearing reconvened at 1335 hours, 16 October 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. SCHWARZ: Dr. Schwarz for the Defendant Joost. Tribunal permit the Defendant Joost to be examined after the Defendant Schulz?

THE PRESIDENT: Is counsel for Defendant Schulz here?

DR. SUESS: Dr. Suess for the Defendant Schulz. this. If the examination of the Defendant Joost is now going to be postponed, we have no objection against this.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand it then that counsel for the Defendant Schulz is prepared to proceed with the defense case upon the termination of the case of Neumann?

DR. SUESS: Pardon me, your Honor, but I didn't get this.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand that counsel for the Defendant Schulz is prepared to proceed immediately after the termination of the Naumann case?

DR. SUESS: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: And counsel for the Defendant Joost will be prepared to proceed immediately after the termination of the Schulz case?

DR. SCHWARZ: Yes, your Honor. I thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: You are very welcome indeed.

DR. SCHWARZ: May I also make the request that the Defendant Joost be excused from tomorrow's session so that I can discuss his defense with him?

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Joost is excused from attendance at tomorrow's sessions so that he may confer with his attorney.

DR. SCHWARZ: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honor please, the Prosecution has no objection to the defense taking the stand in any order they see fit, but we Would appreciate it if the Prosecution could be given notice in advance of the order they intend to take so that we may prepare our cross-examinations at the same time.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. For the information of the Prosecution the Tribunal will state that Joost's order was moved back only because his counsel was appointed a little later than the other attorneys, so that it now stands this way: Naumann, Schulz, Joost. Then we have no reason to assume that the regular order will not be followed following that.

MR. FERENCZ: We would like to know if the Defendant Rasch intends to take the stand.

THE PRESIDENT: We had set that aside because of the physical condition involved there, and I don't suppose Rasch's attorney is here this afternoon. No. Very well, will someone -- I will ask the Secretary-General to obtain information at the Defense Information Center as to the condition of Rasch and the intention of his counsel with regard to placing Rasch on the witness stand.

DR. GAWLIK: Dr. Gawlik for the Defendant Naumann. the examination of the Defendant Naumann in his own defense. With the permission of the Tribunal I call the Witness Naumann to the witness stand.

THE PRESIDENT: The oath has not yet been administered.

ERICH NAUMANN, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE DIXON: Defendant you will stand. Raise your right hand and repeat after me. the pure truth and will withold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated.

BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q When and Where were you born? English and 4 of the German text of Exhibit 113, Document NO-2970, and from Document Book II-D, Page 1 of the English and Page 1 of the German, Exhibit 112, Document NO-4150. Are the statements in these documents about your person correct?

A In Document 4150 there is one small mistake. It must be on Page 1. Instead of "1940" it should read "1942."

A Yes, I am just looking for it. In the seventh line from the top, but this is in the German text, you must read the whole text, the sentence reads: "In the year 1935 I became SS-Fuehrer in full time capacity and from 1940 on I became an official and a police officer." Here it should read "1942" instead of "1940."

THE PRESIDENT: Which page of the original?

THE WITNESS: That is Page 1 of the Document 4150. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q And in the original?

THE PRESIDENT: Read the sentence again, please.

THE WITNESS: On Line 7 of the German text, "In the year 1935 I became SS-Fuehrer in a full time capacity, and from 1940 on I became an official and a police officer." There it should read "1942" instead of "1940."

THE PRESIDENT: "1940" does not appear in the English text.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honors please, I believe the English text says "1935." I believe that is what the defendant is referring to.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, it should be, "I have been a member of the SD since 1940," is that the correction he wishes to make?

THE WITNESS: That is already the next sentence, I mean the previous sentence.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it reads in the English this way. "I joined the SA in a fulltime capacity. In 1935 I became full-time SS leader, and since 1935 I was an official and officer of the police." Is it that "1935" which is incorrect?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is not correct, but in the German text it says "1940", not "1935."

THE PRESIDENT: And it should be nineteen-forty -- what?

THE WITNESS: 1942.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the correction is made.

THE WITNESS: The other document is 2970, in the same document book, Page 14 of the German text.

DR. GAWLIK: This is Exhibit 113, your Honor.

THE WITNESS: In the middle of this page, it is on Page 11 of the original document.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Next to my signature it says "10th of January '42." That should read 10th of January, 1943, because in January, 1942, I was neither Brigadier General nor Major General. Otherwise, outside of a few typographical errors, which are not important, this document is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: The corrections will be noted. BY DR. GAWLIK: the year 1929? not at all active politically. The distress of the year 1929, the struggles between the various parties, the collapse of the economy, the unemployment with all its devastating results, and the resulting party struggles caused me to bother my head about political parties.

Thus in May 1929 I went for the first time to a gathering of the Nazi Party. In November 1929 I then joined the Party. Before I worried about political parties I was a neutral German as far as party policies were concerned who loved his Fatherland, but who rejected Marxism, the Nazi Party seemed to be the only party which would find the way out of this distress and misery which was not Marxistic but was yet socialistic. For this reason I joined the Party in November 1929.

Q How long were you an SD leader in full capacity? first of July, 1935, until the end of the war.

Q Where were you active before? and I was this from October, 1933, until June, 1934.

Q In what were you active after that? the Educational Matters. Here I remained until June 1935 when the organization was dissolved.

Q Was this an agency of the Party of an affiliation of the Party? connections with the Party, of its affiliations. was accepted by you? Educational Matters was dissolved in the year 1935. Therefore, I had to look for another position. Through a former acquaintance of mine, the then SS-Sturmbannfuehrer Joost, who offered me a post as a department head in the SD Main Office, I came to the SD.

Q What position did you first hold in the SD?

AAs department chief in the central Department III/2.

Q What was your activity in this central Department III/2?

protection organization? fuehrer in Austria? Graz and Klagenfurt, had to be given SD subdepartments which then would function as branches of the SD Main Office, just like all the other SD subdepartments worked in the Reich.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, may I interrupt please? The Defendant Ohlendorf will be excused from attendance this afternoon for the purpose of an interrogation which is to be made by Mr. Wolfe.

(The Defendant Ohlendorf was thereupon excused.)

Q (By Dr. Gawlik) And what were the missions and the activities of the SD in Austria? fuehrer in Berlin? domestic services for the District of the Reich capital, Berlin, and for the District of the Province Mark Brandenburg.

Q When did you become Chief of Einsatzgruppe B in Russia? Einsatzgruppe in Russia?

Q Did you voluntarily report for this mission?

Q Who gave you this order to take over this Einsatzgruppe B? B from Streckenbach, the head of Office I. Heydrich gave the order for me to take this group over.

Q Who signed the Transfer- order? Russia?

Q Can you give reasons for this?

A Yes. Orders of Heydrich had to be obeyed, especially during war time. the commitment? would have been sentenced to death for refusing to obey an order.

Q When did you leave Berlin?

Q When did you arrive at the Einsatzgruppe B?

Q And when did you take over the command of Einsatzgruppe B? introduced me to the job and during that time I did not have my power of command. Nebe still held it. After the expiration of this week, Nebe handed the Einsatzgruppe over to me and frm then on I was Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B.

Q How long were you Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B? of the German text, I submit to you Exhibit 113, Document NO-2970. This document says from the 1st of November 1941 you were Chief of Einsatzgruppe B. How do you explain this statement in this document book? Is that correct?

A The 1st of November is the date of my Transfer - order. After Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach had ordered me to take over Einsatzgruppe B, Rasch suddenly was supposed to take over Einsatzgruppe B and I was supposed to go to Kiev. At the same time it was discussed that Rasch should go to Berlin and Thomas was to be sent to Russia and it was not clear whether Thomas or I were to go to Kiev or Smolensk. After a long discussion back and forth I finally went to Smolensk. Rasch did not go to Smolensk but went to Berlin and Thomas went to Kiev as new Chief of Einsatzgruppe C. During that time I had to remain in Berlin, because my destination was not yet determined. English, page 23 of the German text, Exhibit 72, Document NO-2830. This concerns the Operational Situation Report 132 dated 12th of November, 1941. In this Operational Situation Report of the 12th of November 1941, you are already mentioned as the Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B. Were you already Chief of Einsatzgruppe B at that time?

November, 1941. Report 132 of the 12th of November, 1941? RSHA, but as my Transfer Order was of the 1st of November 1941, I of course, was automatically mentioned in the reports as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B.

Q Where were these Operational Situation Reports compiled? It may have been Office IV, but I am not sure. on these situation reports?

A Yes, for example, in the case of Rasch, I don't remember these two reports, but there are two operational Situation Reports of the 29th of October and the 5th of November. In these two Operational Situation Reports of the 29th of October and the 5th of November. In these two operational Situation reports, Rasch is designated as Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B, even though he never was in Smolensk in all his life. It may have been caused by the fact that Rasch as I said before was to go to Smolensk before me, which was made known in Office I and therefore Rasch was certainly mentioned as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B in these Operational Reports.

Q Who was your predecessor in Einsatzgruppe B?

Q Who was Nebe?

A Nebe was the Chief of the Reich Criminal Office. That is, the Chief of the Reich Criminal Police.

Q What were the reasons why Nebe was recalled?

Page 809

A I don't know. I assume that he had to return in order to continue his very important activity as Chief of the German Criminal Police.

Q What Einsatzkommandos belonged to Einsatzgruppe B? 7b, and the Special Kommando Moscow and the independent, detachments Smolensk and a small detachment which was the advance command post. gruppe B?

Q What was the composition of this staff? assistants, the signal personnel, guard personnel, and the drivers. These together were members of the staff.

Q What was the garrison of Einsatzgruppe B?

Q Where is Smolensk? subordinated to you?

A That varied. The Einsatzkommandos contained about 130 to 150 men. The Special Kommandos were smaller, about 60 to 70. The Special Kommando Moscow contained about 30 men during my time. Einsatzgruppen and the Special Kommandos from your garrison? kommando 9x -- that was about 150 kilometers -- and others were considerably farther. For instance, 7b was in Orel, which was about 450 kilometres away. 7a was in Kalinin, about 500 kilometres away and these distances cannot be measured with our Middle European conditions here, because the road conditions in Russia especially after the battles were very bad and to travel even small distances took a considerable amount of time. As an example I might cite that a trip from Einsatzkommando 9 to Einsatzkommando 7a took me about 1 whole day from early morning to night to travel 300 kilometres.

Q How large was the area of Einsatzgruppe B approximately? a whole Army corps. Thus it consisted of the areas of first 6, later 5, and 4 Armies and then extended back. The territory began in the north east in the Kalinin, which is north of Moscow. The boundry went farther south and down to the area near Orel. From there the border went from east to west, down south west of Gomel in the Pripet Marshes and from there a line south to north to the Delta of the Dyna and from there a line from the west to the east to Kalinin. I once placed this territory on the map of central Europe and this square covered the following area: The points of the square were Kiel in the North-east, Vienna in the South-east, Paris in the south west and London in the north west.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I ask that the defendant may rise and point this teritory out on the map.

THE PRESIDENT: He may do so.

THE WITNESS: Kalinin -- there is Moscow. North of Moscow is the Volga. North from Moscow is Kalinin, near the Volga and there its borders cross the M of Moscow down through Podolsk, down to about Tula, which is near Orel. Then the border went through Kursk. South of Kursk, Cherkassy, then along the Pripet Marshes down to the old Polish border and then north outside of the territory, Borisov is still included, then up near the source of the Dune River and then across the lake up there back Kalinin.

Q. Were you subordinated to the Chief of the Security Police and SD?

A. Yes.

Q. Where you also subordinated to any other agencies?

A. Yes. To the Commander-in-Chief of the Army Group Center, the Commander of the Rear Army Center and the Higher SS and Police Leader Central Russia.

Q. To what extent were you under the command of the Commanderin-Chief of Army Group B?

A. Not Army Group B, but Army Group Center. The Commander-inChief of Army Group Center was my superior as far as march-routes housing, food, and these matters were concerned. Furthermore, I had to report to the Commander-in-Chief and as far asthe tactical situation demanded it I had to accept orders from him.

Q. To what extent were you subordinated to the command of the Commander of the Rear Area?

A. In the same manner, only restricted to the Rear Area.

Q. To what extent were you subordinated to the Higher SS and Police Leader?

A. The Higher SS and Police Leader exercised a sort of supervision over all parts of the SS and Police units in his area.

Q. Did you give the Einsatzkommandos and special detachments under your command, any special orders to execute Jews, Gypsies, and Communist functionaries?

A. No.

Q. On the basis of what orders did the Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos carry out executions of Jews, Gypsies, and Communist functionaries?

A. On the basis of the order handed down by the Chief of the Security Police and SD, and by Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach.

Q. Witness, was this order handed down to you during your time of service with the Einsatzgruppe B?

A. No, this order had already been handed down before the Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos went to Russia.

Q. And who wasthen commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe B -- in order to determine this once and for all?

A. The first Chief of Einsatzgruppe B was my predecessor, Nebe.

Q. On the basis of this order was every member of the Communist party to be killed?

A. No. Only insofar as they exercised any endangering activity.

Q. Could you have prevented the execution of this order?

A. No, I could not.

Q. Can you give any more reasons for this?

A. Yes, I had no possibility of preventing the execution of a Fuehrer Order. This would have brought the most severe measures in its wake against me. Furthermore, I would not have been able to change anything in the order if I had disobeyed it.

Q. Perhaps you can express more clearly what would have happened to you if you had attempted to prevent the execution of this order, already given to the Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos.

A. I would have been put before an SS and Police Court, and certainly would have been sentenced to death; but I think it would have been even more probable that Himmler would have given the order to have me shot if I had refused to obey the order.

Q. From Document Book III-B, page 1 of the English text, page 1 of the German text, I submit to you Exhibit 112, Document NO-4150. This if your affidavit of the 27th of June 1947. Are the statements in this affidavit correct?

A. Yes, I already said that with one exception -- 1942, instead of 1940 -- outside of this, they are correct.

Q. Under number 4 of this affidavit, you stated the following: "I know that while I wasits chief, Einsatzgruppe B--- or, as the case may be -- the Einsatzkommandos, Sonderkommandos and other units under its control carried out executions."

Is this statement correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Did Einsatzgruppe B itself - that is, the staff - carry out any executions?

A. No, this was not its job.

Q. What were the other units outside of the Einsatz- and Special Kommandos Which carried out executions?

A. That was the independent detachment Smolensk.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, I don't quite understand your differentiation between the affidavit and the interpretation that you are attempting to derive from it. How, paragraph 4 states that "Einsatzgruppe B carried out executions" -- leaving out the intervening phraseology. Noe, you are having the witness to say Einsatzgruppe B did not carry, out executions. How do you interpret that from this very clear statement in the affidavit?

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, shall I explain this, or shall the witness explain?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I would like to have the witness explain it, under your direction.

A. (By the witness) The Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos belonged to Einsatzgruppe B. If the Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos carried out executionsthey are to be counted as total executions of Einsatzgruppe B as a total unit. But I was asked by Dr. Gawlik whether the staff of Einsatzgruppe B -- the 60 men - carried out any executions. To that I answered No, - it was not its task, it was not the mission of the staff to carry out executions.

THE PRESIDENT: But the Einsatzgruppe B was responsible for the executions. The staff was responsible for the executions. They may not have actually pulled any trigger, but the Einsatzgruppe B was in charge of executions assigned to that action group.

A. (By the witness) No, Your Honor, it was not this way. I already said in the beginning that the area of Einsatzgruppe B was very large, -- and I believe Dr. Gawlik will come back to this during the trial -- it was, therefore, not possible to give express orders to each pendently, to a large extent. The largo distances forced them to do it; so did the lack of communications; and also local subordination to the army or to the Commander of the Rear Area.

THE PRESIDENT: You knew that there was an order which required the Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos to perform executions? Answer that, please.

A. (By the witness) Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and these Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos came under your jurisdiction in Einsatzgruppe B?

A. (By the witness) Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, so that the only distinction you were drawing is between the trigger men and the headquarters? Lot me put it in another way -

A. (By the witness) No, Your Honor -- I am describing the situation asit was. In Pretsch and in Schmieberg I don't know exactly how it was -- I was not there -- the Einsatzgruppen chiefs and the leaders of the Einsatzkommandos and Special kommandos were given these orders, and on the basis of these orders they acted.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. And they were under your supervision and control. You were the superior officer of those Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos?

A. (By the witness) Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and what you are telling the Tribunal is that you and your staff did not actually participate in an execution?

A. (By the witness) No.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, he wants to say even more than that.

He wants to say that he did not give any order for those executions because the order already was existing for the Einsatzkommandos and Special Kommandos at the time when he took over the Einsatzgruppe.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR FERENCZ: Excuse me, Your Honor. I believe the defendant is on the stand, and we will hear from him what he intends to say, and not his defense counsel. We object to defense counsel explaining what defendant wants to say.

DR. GAWLIK: This is the moment, Your Honor, which I have already mentioned before, When I raised an objection against some additions which the Prosecution made in their presentation of evidence, and them at that time Your Honor was kind enough to tell me that if I would make such additions Your Honor would tell the Prosecution the very same thing.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I assure you that my kindness, as you very kindly termed it, will carry over to this point -- and therefore you are absolved from any sin. BY DR. GWLIK:

Q. We were under number 4 of this Document NO-4150. I ask you now, - Did the Einsatzgruppe B itself - that is, its staff - carry out any executions?

A. No. The staff did not carry out any executions. That was, as I said, not its mission.

Q. What were the missions and the activities of the Einsatz and Special Kommandos?

A. The Einsatz and Special Kommandos had the mission to keep order and security in the entire army area, in the rear of the combatting army.

Q. What were the activities and missions of the staff?

A. The staff was to busy itself with personnel questions, administrative questions, organizational matters; it had the motor questions under it; food, housing.

Furthermore, it had to accept the reports from the Kommandos; it had to compile collective reports and send them to Berlin, to the Main Office, end to other agencies.

independently?

A They had to work completely independently. This was because of the great distances, the very bad communications, and the various orders commands of the army and their localities, or the commander of the rear area. Kommandos active as a result of orders given to them by the staff? detection in building up indigenous police; in reporting all necessary domestic information; and other such matters. police? police--to see that order and security were maintained, that crime be prevented. Furthermore, the indigenous police was used also in partisan detection, and it also fought partisans. gruppe B?

A The Commandos and detachments had to do this. The detachments were called "Troops", with Einsatzgruppe B- therefore, "Troop Detachment Smolensk" for instance.

page 1 of the English and German text, Exhibit 112, Document 4150. This is your affidavit of the 27th of June 1947. Under number 5 it says: "Einsatzgruppe B received from the Reich Security Main Office Berlin, two or three gas vans but these were shortly afterwards passed on to Einsatzgruppe in the south. As far as I know Einsatzgruppe B did not use these vans.

Are these statements correct?

Q Did you ask for these gas vans?

Q Who ordered the assignment of these gas vans?

A I don't know; probably some agency in the RSHA.

Q Did you know about this order?

Q Could you have prevented the assignment of these gas vans?

Q How long were these gas vans with Einsatzgruppe B? give you the exact period.

Q What happened to those gas vans?

A I don't know whether they were used for the purpose assigned to them. I know I saw one of them, that once one of those gas vans was used to carry wood, I don't know whether they were used for original purpose. I did not hear of any such case.

Q Who ordered that the gas vans be given away? of the German, I submit to you exhibit of Ott, of the 24th of April 1947. Ott speaks of an execution in this affidavit, which took place in the surroundings of Bryansk.

Did you order the execution near Bryansk? it?

Q Could you prevent the carrying out of this executions? the execution?

Q On the basis of what orders were the valuables collected? I took over the Einsatzgruppe.

Q Who gave this order?

A Ott must be mistaken here. I already said that this order already existed when I took over Einsatzgruppe B.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand, Dr. Gawlik, that it is your intention, or your client's intention, to repudiate the affidavit of Ott?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, in this respect, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: I notice in the defendant's own affidavit, in paragraph 7, the affidavit of June 27, 1947, that he says, "I am aware that the administration chiefs collected valuables and money belonging to the persons intended for execution. The money and valuables were remitted to the Ministry of Finance." It would appear from this statement that he know beforehand, before the executions, that the valuables were to be collected.

DR. GAWLIK: Perhaps he can asnwer that question.

THE WITNESS; There was an order that the valuables of those people to be executed were to be collected by the administrative cheifs and were to be sent back to the staff of Einsatzgruppe B with a letter. The staff of Einsatzgruppe B, that is, Department II, the Administration, now was to send these valuables on to the RSHA, later to an agency of the Reich Finance Ministry in Mogilew, or Borisow, I don't know exactly which place it was.

THE PRESIDENT: Wouldn't parts of this affidavit be correct in that incident where he says that the valuables which were collected from these people were sent to Einsatzgruppe B. This was ordered by command of Naumann.

If you were commanding Officer at the time, and it was the procedure to send these valuables to your staff headquaters, and there was no indication on your part that this order was rescinded, then, in fact, you did order the sending of the valuables?

THE. WITNESS: Yes, I actually had these valuables passed on as was ordered.

THE PRESIDENT: You ordered that the valuables be sent from the places of execution to your headquaters?

THE WITNESS: No, that had already been ordered when I took ever the command. That already was customary before.

THE PRESIDENT: And you know that that order was in effect?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I know that.

THE PRESIDENT: And you carried on the procedure which had been established prior to your asking over Einsatzgruppe B?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: So, therefore, Ott is correct in saying that it was by your command, because you were the current commander.

THE WITNESS: Yes, Ott meant the chief of Einsatzgruppe B. Of course, I assume that he didn't know whether Nebe ordered it, or whether I did. Therefore, he probably used my name.

THE, PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, may I make a short statement about my presentation of evidence, to make it more comprehensible. The defendant does not dispute that he knew about this. But Tribunal II in the verdict against MILCH has already stated that knowledge alone is net punishable, but the defendant must either have participated, he must have killed himself, or he must have given an order to kill, or he must have the had the possibility to intervene in this order, or committed a sin of omission. That is the line of my evidence. The knowledge alone is not being disputed here.

THE PRESIDENT: You are just about two months ahead of the time for that argument. That comes at the end of the trial.

BY DR. GAWLIK: page 10 of the German text, the Exhibit No. 59, Document NO-2825. This concerns the Situational Report, 14 November 1941, under No. IX, on page 14 of the German Document Book -- I don't know what page of the English Document Book, it is page 15. It says the liquidations during the report period reached the following figure: 45,467. What was the report prior which this situational report of 14 November 1941 covered?

Q Where does it say that? next to the last paragraph, 23 October. The other dates are all older. This is the latest date given there.

Q Perhaps you can give the other dates too? 14th, 17th, 21st, 9th, 19th and 23rd of October. 1941, there are reports still missing?

A It also said here that under the last paragraph No. IX, "According to reports at hand the reports of SKM, Sonderkommando-XVII and Sonderkommando-IX, and the OKW, Oberkommando der Wehrmacht, are still missing, and you may see that these three kommandos will appear in yet later reports. One can see from the documents that between the events that happened in Russia, and the appearance of this in that situational report, between these two there is a lapse of a period of four or five weeks. After I have looked at the documents, it appears to me that the time is even greater than five weeks. gruppe-B?

A The report period runs down to 23 October, that was Nebe's time.

Q The Prosecution has said the following about this document: "This report describes the activity which probably took place before Naumann took over command." That is page 155 of the German report. Please comment on this.

A This activity didn't only probably take place, but definitely it took place before. is a report which was made out by Naumann two weeks after he took over Einsatzgruppe B. Is that correct?

A No, that is not correct. I have already said I did not take over the command until 30 November. of the people mentioned in this document?

Q Were you in Smolensk during this period?

Q Were you in Russia at all during this time? the liquidation of 45,000 persons has been described by the Einsatzgruppe, the defendant Naumann must have known the purpose and the functions of this unit whose command he took over and held. I will ask you, therefore, did you know of this report of 14 November 1941? mentioned in this document when you took over the command? situational report? Streckenbach, which took place during my first visit in Russia, I am sorry - during my first visit in Berlin, after I had taken over the Einsatzgruppe-B. At that time Streckenbach told me that various Einsatzgruppen reported figures which were considerably exaggerated, and, I remember that he really said some people don't seem to be concerned about a zero or two.

He mentioned in accordance with this the name of my predecessor. pecially the special action named under figure five, in then against forced labor inmates in the camp in Megilow. Tell me when this liquidation took place for the record? the document.

Q Did you hear anything about those liquidations? liquidation of inferior people? I know. If this happened at the time, Nebe was in command, I can not explain how Nebe happened to give such orders.

Q Now I submit to you a document from volume II-B. It is on page 36 of the English, page 31 of the German text. It is Exhibit No. 62, Document No. NO-2824. Did the liquidations covered by this report take place during the time you were in command of Einsatzgruppe-B?

A No, it was before my time. When commenting on the previous document I already stated that between the events in Russia and their the appearance of the situational report, a period of four to five weeks elapsed. This difference can be explained by the fact that after the event in Russia reports had to be made out by the detachment, and the detachment had to pass on this document to kommando, when the occasion presented itself, not immediately and the kommando had to gather up these reports from the various detachments, and had to collect them into the Einsatzgruppe, that is, to the staff of the Einsatzgruppe. That was not possible every day, the transport and gasoline situation made it impossible; thus a vehicle was used only when the various numbers of requests made that justifiable.

The Einsatzgruppe then collected these various reports, summarized them, and then when the opportunity arose sent them on to Berlin, to the RSHA. Thus, it can be explained that between the event in Russia and the appearance of the report, a considerable time elapsed. document? executions took place, or had to take place during the time before you took over the Einsatzgruppen-B? No. 149, and I don't know where it is to be found. English, page 17 of the German, Exhibit No. 114, Document NO-2833. Your Honor, this is the report of 22 December 1941, the operational report of 22 December 1941, that is document NO-2833, from volume III-B. This bears the number 149, Whereas the other operational report which I am supposed to comment on bears No. 148. This was made out earlier, as can be seen from the date. It was made out three days earlier, that is, on 19 December, whereas the other was made out on 22 December. This report No. 149, shows on page 23, the date 18 November and on page 24, 21 November. If the report of 22 December mentions dates like the 18th and 21st of November in its report, then the dates of the report on 19 December must be still earlier.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, shall we take our afternoon recess now, please.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. GAWLIK: 62 from Document Book II-B, page 36 of the English text, Document NOKW-2824. The Prosecution showed by this document that sixteen insame people and Russian children were shot. Can you state something about this, please? English, page 17 of the German text, Exhibit 114, Document NOKW-2833. It says, "Operation Report of 22 December, 41". The executions mentioned in this operation report, did they occur during your time when you were in charge of Einsatzgruppe B? are mentioned in the report. These events, therefore, occurred before my time. charge as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B? it was absolutely necessary that Einsatzgruppe B beled very well, and to get to know all the conditions out there in detail. For that reason I started immediately, and in time to visit all kommandos and partkommandos, to get to know my men, the chiefs of the kommandos and of the part-kommandos, to get to know my men, the chiefs of the kommandos and of the part-kommandos, to get acquainted with the country and the people, to get to know the security position, to know what the area looked like, to know the means of communication, how the population liked us and how the kommandos were manned out there. This was necessary because I needed this knowledge in order to be able to give orders eventually which were required according to the situation. page 52 of the German text, Exhibit 66, Document NO-3276. It concerns an operation report, No. 194, of 21 April 1942.

Did you order the executions mentioned in this document?

Q Were you present during these executions? intended missions?

Q Could you have stopped these executions from being carried out? were carried out by the Sonderkommandos and the Einsatzkommandos? under the Fuehrer order, membership in partisan bands and other crimes which are mentioned where various Army orders applied.

Q Did you give any orders for this?

Q What do you want to add to this operation report?

A I know this operation report. I know the paragraph on the previous page, 55 of the German text. I recognize the article about information on partisans exactly. On the other hand, the listing, in the form as submitted here, I have not seen before. I, therefore, presume -

Q One moment, Witness, please. Will you please state which listing? etc., are named. I do not know this list in this form. I would remember it because rather large figures are mentioned. I presume that these reports were put together in Berlin from various small reports because I would remember those figures. of the Einsatzkommandos and Sonderkommandos, did that consist merely in killing Jews, gypsies and Soviet functionaries for racial reasons or because of their political opinions?

Q What was the main task of the Einsatzgruppe? before my time, in such a way that the partisan fighting became the most important part, as it affected the security of the roar area. The Einsatagruppen and the Einsatzkommandos, the active parts of them, on principle had to collect intelligence concerning partisan warfare. This activity in time finally took up the time of the Einsatzkommandos more and more.

Q Is this shown in this document, Exhibit 66, NO-3276? they appear in record. "Police Activities" it reads: "At the time of reporting the Einsatzgruppe B" - it says "3" here, it is meant to be "B" - "has shifted its activity, even more so than hitherto, towards the field of partisan detection. While in the larger areas of the command the security situation may be described as satisfactory, pressure by partisans in the flat country is not only continuing but increasing, so that the possibility of military operations on a larger scale in the near future must be reckoned with."

Q Are these statements correct?

A. Yes, they are right.

Q. Can you complete these answers?

A. From my own knowledge?

Q. Yes, from your own knowledge.

A. Yes, The situation in the central Army area became such that the entire area could not be crossed by German troops at all, in which roads such as the Reichstrasse, the main roads from Vitebsk to Lebel, from Vitebsk to Polotsk, from Polotsk to Lebel, and many others were blocked for any traffic because the partisans had blown up all the bridges on this road and had thrown trees across the road. The partisans shot at every German vehicle they could see. Sometimes it was not even possible, in areas where there were woods, to pass through in single vehicles. We had to organize convoys where ten, twenty, thirty and fifty vehicles traveled together, mostly protected by tanks, in order to be able to move at all in some cities and places. If the partisans came across single vehicles or a number of vehicles and shot at them, they plundered and attacked them. In attacking these vehicles the people riding in them were killed. They were hit on the head. They cut off their noses, their ears, and other parts of the body, or they cut swastikas on their back, and even in winter, if they were not dead, they left them lying wounded, left them freezing, undressed them, and I could tell lots of things. This knowledge I have partly from reports, partly from discussions with eye witnesses and survivors. Even Einsatzgruppe B did not escape these losses, and one day Einsatzgruppe B lost thirty-one men in Rshev, south of Mogilew. It was the middle of the winter. We found the men, again, one badly wounded. For weeks or even months he was in the hospital recovering.

COURT II-A CASE IX These thirty-one men had bean treated as I have already described. Therefore, I don't have to say it again. partisans. They plundered and robbed whatever they needed, animals, clothes, utensils, or anything they thought they might need. The inhabitants were killed. or if they resisted unsuccessfully they were killed. Their houses were burned, and in that way the partisans carried on warfare in the East. I could talk about this for hours and even days, about many, many details which I remember.

Q. I now submit to you a document which the Prosecution up to now has not submitted. It is the operation report, No. 186 of 27th March, 1942, Document NO-3236, which I do not want to submit as evidence but only to be identified, and which I give the number, "Naumann No. 1" for identification. In how far does this document show the main tasks and activities of Einsatzgruppe B?

A. On Page 20 of this operation report No. 186 of 27 March the following can be read: "On 9 March 1942 a discussion took place at the headquarters of the Rear Army District about a large-scale Army operation against the partisans. To carry out this action against the partisans two active Army divisions with heavy armament and with units of the air force were selected in addition to the already existing security brigades. Einsatzgruppe B, at the instruction of the Commander of the Rear Army Area, had to see to it with its troops operation, that the operation be properly prepared. For that reason, until the conclusion of the operation in the operational areas the number of fortifications and strongpoints is to be increased in those areas and more men are to be sent there from Sonderkommandos 7-A and 9.

COURT II-A CASE IX The task of the Security Police and the SD is to carry on an intensive intelligence campaign through V-men and agents. At the beginning of the discussion the commander of the Rear Army Area, General of the Infantry von Schenkendorf, talked to Einsatzgruppe B and expressed his thanks for the work of the Security Police and SD without which the success of the Army operation would not be possible. He pointed out that the forces of the Security Police and the SD, on the basis of the experiences of the Eastern campaign, were indispensable."

Q. That will be sufficient. What did these partisans do?

A. Murder, plunder, looting.

Q. Were these only small sallies?

A. No, they were regular partisan battles. It was a regular partisan war.

Q. Is this also shown in the document?

A. Yes, it is shown from the other document, Document 3276, Document Book II-B. There it says, on Page 55 of the German text, in the first third - at the end of the first third of the page: "The methods learned in the partisan schools are systematically carried out in practice by the partisans so that in some areas of the Einsatzgruppe one can talk about a real partisan war with Bolshevistic methods."

Q. Were the attacks of the partisans only directed against the German troops?

A. No, also against the population of the country.

Q. To what extent does the Document 66 show this?

A. Following the paragraph I just read it says, "The innumerable ambushes, especially at night, frighten and depress the village population. People are somewhat COURT II-A CASE IX disappointed by the allegedly insignificant activity of the German agencies in combatting the partisans.

In the threatened villages hardly anybody is prepared to accept an official position. The natives have to watch passively while the partisans seize their cattle and food, as self-defense, because of lack of arms, is ineffective in warding off the raids."

Q. Did the Russian inhabitants take part in fighting these partisan?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this shown in the document?

A. This is also shown in the document. Following what I just read, "It has been established, that where partisans are threatening the people only in weak numbers, the villagers defend themselves vigorously. It may furthermore be said that the rural population in general takes up the fight against the partisan pest with gusto and gladly refuses assistance whenever they can destroy the partisans by themselves."

Q. What was the attitude of the Russian population towards the work of the Einsatzkommandos?

Einsatz-kommandos is being extensively facilitated by informers among the Russian population. The auxiliary police and the contact menare reported everywhere to have proved their worth in the detection of partisans.

Q I now come to the final questions. were you a member of the General SS, after 1 September 1939?

Q When?

Q What was your rank in the Waffen SS?

Q Did you volunteer to join the WaffenSS?

Q What was the reason for your membership in the Waffen SS? or the Navy or the Air Force.

Q Then, was your membership the result of a law?

Q Could you evade the draft orders?

A No, that would not have been possible. I would have been condemned to death for desertion. member of the SD?

A I don't knew that. I don't think so. As far as I know, at that time in 1940, certain age groups had been released for service in the Waffen SS. 1939?

A The SD?

Q Which SD? SD voluntarily? impossible to leave. There was no such thing in war time.

Q Can you give any reasons for that? What laws applied to you?

A The Army laws. I was considered essential for the Security Service during the war. My duty in the SD was considered my war service.

Q I now submit to you the verdict of the IMT. According to this verdict the SD is accused of the following crimes:

First, the extermi nation of the Jews, cruelties and murders in prisoner of war camps; excesses in occupied teritories, fourth, carrying out the forced labor program; fifth, ill treatment and murders of prisoners of war.

Did you knew that the SD Information Service, that is the organization in Office III of the Reich Main Security Office, committed such crimes and was used to commit such crimes against humanity?

Q Can you give reasons for that?

A The SD was merely an information agency. It had no executive tasks.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, on a point of information, the SD originally was, as I understand it, a news gathering agency, an intelligence organization.

DR. GAWLIK :Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: But it would appear that many misused the phrase to refer to something else and even, according to the Defendant Ohlendorf, Hitler erred in his reference to the SD so that I ask you new, was there any organization or outfit or group of individuals involved in violence which became known as the SD, even though incorrectly, so far as the original organizational chart was concerned?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, Your Honor. This name SD included -- that was -the concept was not clarified and by SD one often described the Security Police and the Secret State Police, and the Criminal Police. The reasons for this were that all the officials of the criminal Police uniform, and unfortunately it was quite common in Germany that the high-ranking leaders wanted power. Now Heydrich wanted to show that these are the people who belonged to him and therefore he gave them a gray uniform and all these people were insignia on their sleeve with the word "SD", Security Service, but they were Secret State Police officials and Criminal Police Officials, so that in the occupied territories every secret state police official and every Criminal Police official was described as an SD man.

This is shown in the submitted documents. For example, the Grebe document, which was submitted to the IMT. It describes persons who doubtlessly were Gestapo and Secret Police members, as SD members, and therefore, when one talked about police measures, one often meant SD. Keitel explained this in an affidavit before the IMT. He stated, there, if he did not know which police division was competent, he merely said, "Security Service", people had the opinion that the Police looked after the public order and the security and therefore, and therefore, it was the security Service, while this Security Service of Office III is quite a different thing.

It had no executive power. It could not even arrest a man.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q (By Dr. Gawlik) In your capacity as Oberhauptsturmfuehrer in the SD after 1 September 1939, did you commit any crimes against humanity or any war crimes? crimes?

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Cross-examination on the part of Defense Counsel?

DR. KOESSL (Attorney for the Defendant Ott): Would you permit me to ask a few questions, please. BY DR. KOESSL ( Attorney for the Defendant Ott): over Sonderkommando 7A?

Q When was this?

Q After that was he again put in charge of Sendorkommando 7B? continued ti Bryansk where Kommando 7B was and there he stayed with his predecessor Rauch for about three weeks and trained. That was the usual thing when a new Kommando leader came. We tried to make him work with his predecessor for about three weeks in order to train him well.

Q What opinion did you have of Ott? who did his duty, was a good leader to his men; I had no complaints about him.

Q How did the Army judge the defendant Ott?

A I remember two occurrences: One during a visit of the AOK 2 in Ord and the other one in a letter which the Commander in Chief, General Schmidt, wrote to me, when Ott was to be relieved, that Ott should remain, because the Army cooperated very well with him. command?

A I don't know about any during Ott's activity in Kommando 7B.

Q. Can you remember long periods when Otto was prevented from taking part in leading the Kommandos?

A. Yes, that occurred twice and then for some time: The first journey took about four weeks -- I am not quite certain -- about four weeks. It took place about April or May; and the second time he was absent even longer, because he had broken his leg and therefore he was ill, and then he had to recuperate and went on leave. During that time the RSHA relieved him. He returned once more, because the Commanderin-Chief of the AOK 2, General Schmidt asked for it in writning and this letter had been handed on to Berlin with my approval.

Q. Do you remember that the prosecution submitted Exhibit 123, in Document Book III-B on page 129 - 130, which has the NO number 4747? The transfer is mentioned and, as you pointed out, they asked for him to be transferred from Russia.

A. May I have the document, please?

Q. Do you there find a decree according to which Ott was ordered to return to the Reich?

A. This is the decree I already mentioned.

Q. This decree was not complied with and Ott was sent to Russia again, because the Army asked for it.

A. Yes, because the Army asked for it and because I had sent this letter on to Berlin.

DR. KOESSL: Thank you very much. I have no further questions. JUDGE MUSMANNO: Any furhter questions by defense counsel? BY DR. FRITZ (Attorney for the defendant Fendler):

Q. Witness, you said in your direct examination that you were in charge of D, a department in the RSHA, in the Central Department III A 21 and that you worked on the plant protection there, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your department have judiciary departments in the SD and in the Subdepartment of the SD?

A. Yes, departments and some subdepartments were concerned with this.

Q. Did a department unit in III 21 also work in a subdivision plant protection?

A. Of course.

Q. Did those members of the 3D who worked on plant protection have any executive police powers?

A. No, they did not have that.

Q. Therefore, if I understand you correctly, a departmental chief in III 21 in a subdivision of the SD did not have any executive power.

A. Definitely not.

DR. FRITZ: I have no further questions.

BY DR. STRESS: (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz)

Q. Witness, at the beginning of your examination, you stated that you did not learn anything about the execution order in Bruisk or Dueben, but even later. How do you know that this execution order in Bruisk, Dueben or Schmideberg was announced?

A. I heard about that for the first time through Gruppenfuehrer Heydrich before I left for Russia.

Q. Was it told to you by anyone else?

A. Nebe discussedit with me, of course.

Q. When did your departure to Russia take place? When did you discuss it with Heydrich?

A. Between the 1st of November and 21st of November, between my assignment and the date of my departure.

Q. 1941?

A. Yes, 1941, closer to the 20th than to the 1st.

DR. STRESS: Thank you.

BY DR. ERICH KARL MAYER (Attorney for the Defendant Steimle):

Page 840

Q. Witness, do you know the defendant Steimle?

A. Yes.

Q. Since when did you know him?

A. I met him in Russia.

Q. On what occasion did you meet him?

A. During my visit to his position in Reshev.

Q. What position did he hold at the time?

A. He was in charge of Sonderkommando 7a.

Q. What position did he hold under you?

A. He was under me.

Q. For how long was Steimle under you?

A. Only for a short time, approximately until the middle of December 41

Q. Can you describe briefly Steimle's activity in Sonderkommando 7a while you were there?

A. I remember something about this, owing to a visit I paid to Steimle in Kalinin and Reshev soon after I took my office. On that occasion Steimle talked about the work there and I remember that in the narrow front near Kalinin considerable espionnage activity was going on. He described to me one case in particular in which a Russian female student carried out espinonnage and gave messages to missions. This I remember of the activity of Sonderkommando 7a at the time when I worked there and visited Steimle.

Q. Did you, during the time Steimle was subordinated to you, hear about execution acts of any sort, particularly against Jews? Were they reported to you?

A. The time when Steimle was my subordinate was so short that I know that during that time no such actions were reported.

Q. During your activity asChief of Einsatzgruppe B did you hear whether Sonderkommando 7a under Steimle before you started to work there carried out such actions?

Page 841

A. I don't know that.

Q. Can you state when Steimle left Sonderkommando 7a?

A. I already said about the middle of December.

Q. Why?

A. In order to go on leave.

Q. Who granted his leave to Germany?

A. I did.

Q. Did Steimle return after this leave to Sonderkommando 7a?

A. No, Steimle did not return; when Steimle had not returned after his leave I either inquired in Berlin or was informed by Berlin that Steimle would not return because he had become ill meanwhile.

Q. Can you tell us to which Army Sonderkommando A was attached, during Steimle's time?

A. Always the 9th Army.

in which Sonderkommando 7-A was active on the map?

A Yes. The 9th Army in the territory of Sonderkommando 7-A were the same. The 9th Army was on the left wing of the Army Group Center. Therefore, Steimle was always furthest to the north of the northern commands. In the norht of this territory, there was Kalinin. Then the border ran along the front 'til just before Moscow. The south frontier of this territory was the division line of the 9th Army and the 4th Tank Division, which was 20 or 30 kilometers north of the top point from Smolensk to Moscow. The western border was the division line between the Rear Army and the rear territory. In general, it went from north to south approximately like the Dnjepr that is from east of Smolensk up to the Valday Mountains to the south of the Ilmen Lake, which is blue on the map and there again along the front, which ran from west to east there.

Q Witness, do you have Document Book II-B infront of you, still?

DR. MAYER: Your Honor, the witness will got the document book. BY DR. MAYER: NO-2824, Exhibit 62. It is the operation report No. 148 of 19 December 1941. During the examination it had already been discussed... In this document, in the territory of Einsatzgruppe B places are named but it is not stated which Einsatzkommando or Sonderkommando was assigned for these places. Please tell me, as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B - whether the following places, which I will read to you, were in the territory and were under the competency of Sonderkommando 7-A. The places are mostly on page 36, 37 and 38 in the German Document Book. I name the locations: Gshatsk.

A Gshatsk was not there. Gshatsk was near to Moscow.

Q Kurhle?

A Orel also further south; did not belong to 7-A.

A Bobruisk is south of Mogilew. It belongs to Einsatzkommando 8, not to 7-A. Vitebsk. In general, west of Smolensk. But since the border of 7-A was east of Smolensk it cannot have belonged to 7-A. to 8; Kormu is also down there, near Gomel -- I don't know the exact situation - but it is not under 7-A.

Q On the next page the following locations: Ljubawitschi.

A Ljubawitschi - I know the exact situation not very well. It is west, or southwest, of Bobruisk or Gomel, near Marinagorka, on the northwest border of the swamp region. That belongs to 9 or 8.

Q May I add another question. According to the situation of Ljubawitschi, 7-a cannot have anything to do with it, either. Einsatzkommando 8.

A Roslawl is east of Smolensk. It could not belong to 7-a.

DR. MAYER: Your Honor, I only have a few questions as defense counsel for defendant Klingelhoefer.

THE PRESIDENT: Vary well, proceed. BY DR. MAYER: on what occasion did you meet him.

Q On what occasion, and where?

Q What position did Klingelhoeffer have at that time? Gshatsk -- not far from Moscow. that Vorkommando Gruppenstaff had the task, when Moscow was attacked to set up billets, to look after the staff of the Einsatzgruppe for a command which wanted enter Moscow. they were in Gshatsk? it existed. Afterwards it was dissolved because I had realized that we would not get to Moscow vary soon. about measures or actions as contained in the indictment? had no more work for them. They had no space, either, because in Moshaesk there was part of Kommando 9. returned? I travelled together with Klingelhoeffer. I had met him in Smolensk while I stayed in Gshatsk. I visited him in his billets. I left him there.

I travelled on to Wjasma and to Kalinin, and then again to Smolensk. Meanwhile, Klingelhoeffer had already gone on leave.

Q When did he return? leave? Klingelhoeffer on my staff. Klingelhoeffer had been born in Moscow. For many years he had lived in Moscow. He therefore know he Russian language very well. He could treat Russian people very Well. He was the most suitable man. I needed him in particular for the necessary SD work because I could not use an interpreter who could just conduct conversation at a very low level, but he had to know the language so well, in writing and speech, so that material found in the Archives, or reports, could be translated by him; he could conduct conversations with some Russians whose knowledge was of importance to us, with professors, older gentlemen from the Czarist day and so forth. was Sturmbannfuehrer? itself did not matter, but his linguistic ability, and his mental ability apart from that, when I considered the entire work of Klingelhoeffer and the very valuable work he has done for the SD, the rank Sturmbannfuehrer in adequate with the way in which he solved his task. or did you also give him tasks which took him to other places? for about two weeks. This exception consisted of the fact that Klingelhoeffer got an order from me to make inquiries about partisans in Drasnin, that is about 25 kilometers to the west of Smolensk. The reason why Klingelhoeffer got this order was actually not in Klingelhoeffer' field; the reason was that as far as I remember the Chief of the staff in the Rear Army territory called, and reported that now the partisans had approached Smolensk and were getting dangerous, and that they were already 25 kilometers away.

He asked me to send a suitable man who could find out what the position was in Krasnin and in the woods south and east of it. This order I gave to Klingelhoeffer although Kraesnin was in the territory of Einsatzkommando 8. the local commander in Kraesnin, and why?

A This had to be done because it was ordered; and secondly, General Schenkendorf, the commander of the Rear Army, had ordered that in all these cases when Security Police commanders were put in charge of some limit they would report to the competent army officer. Krasnin to Smolensk? the Iron Cross first class? them were given out. Einsatzgruppe B was given one or two such distinctions. Since Klingelhoeffer at the time was one of the few leaders who had been in the east from the beginning, and apart from that, his reports were extremely valuable, and as the officers appreciated this I recommended Klingelhoeffer for this distinction: The Iron Cross with Guards first class.

Q What can you say about Klingelhoeffer's personality?

A Klingelhoeffer was formerly a singer. He has an artistic manner which is very evident. He is a soft, sensitive, a decent man, a good comrade and a good, cooperative worker.

DR. MAYER: Thank you, witness, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

(Tribunal recessed until 0930 hours 17 October 1947,)

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: If no other defense counsel intends to cross-examine the witness the Prosecution may now begin with its cross-examination. BY DR. LUMMERT (For Defendant Blume): to ask you first of all, Witness, when did you become the successor of Nebe as the man in charge of Einsatzgruppe B?

Q Do you know the Defendant Blume? 7-A?

A I do, and I know that from Nebe. He told me that. That was prior to my time. was in charge of Sonderkommando 7-A from its establishment, in other words, from June, 1941, until approximately the middle of August, 1941. I would like to ask you, Witness, did you at any time hear anything from your predecessor Nebe about the way in which Dr. Blume lead the Sonderkommando 7-A?

A Yes, indeed. Nebe spoke to me about Blume. He told me that Blume did too much for his men and that very, very often he spent the time with his men at Lakeside Places. I can very well remember the name of the Lake Roswita which I got to know myself later. Blume's inactivity as the man in charge of that kommando?

A I drew from Nebe's words that wanted to express his dissatisfaction.

DR. LUMMERT: Thank you very much. No further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. I take it that no other defense counsel desires to cross-examine the witness. Mr. Ferencz, you may now begin. BY MR. FERENCZ: that you never committed any crimes. Please explain to the Tribunal why you assumed an alias and moved from farm to farm as a common laborer after your discharge from a P.W. camp? official announcement that the Germans would be given the possibility to continue their struggle against Bolshevism. this would no longer be possible. That, for me, as an old National Socialist within a matter of minutes a whole world collapsed, can only be comprehended by someone who experienced those minutes or hours in a similar situation. It was a spontaneous decision, not having been considered previously that as an officer to avoid, if possible, being taken P.W. That was the reason why I wrote myself out a false release paper, and I received false papers altogether on a false name.

command of Einsatzgruppe B on 30 November 1941, and not on 1 November, 1941, is that correct.

A Did I understand you correctly, was it the 30th? Yes. whether Rasch or Thomas would be assigned instead of you, and that explains why the 1 November date was wrong. the 1st of November, 1941. The first which I learned about my commitment to Russia was a telephone call from Streckenbach, which also took place on the 1st of November, probably. During that telephone call Streckenbach told me about the fact that I was being sent to Russia as an Einsatzgruppe chief, and at the same time he told me that I had to prepare myself but that I had to await additional orders. A few days later, maybe two, three or four days afterwards, I can't remember the exact number of days, Streckenbach again called me up and he informed me that it was not quite clear whether I was to be transferred to Smolensk or Kiev. Whether at the time it was discussed that Rasch or Thomas was to be sent to Smolensk I don't know, because it was quite a mix-up, and it is still all mixed up. I still can't find my way around. In any case, the situation was such, that I was being discussed back and forth whether I was to be sent to Smolensk or Rasch was to be sent to Smolensk, or Thomas. At the same time it was also stated that Rasch was to be sent to Kiev and I was to be sent to Smolensk, or Thomas was to be sent to Smolensk. At the same time it was also discussed that Rasch was to be transferred to the Continental Oil Company in Berlin or that I was supposed to go there.

This back-and-forth discussion ended to the effect that I was finally told that I was to be transferred to Smolensk; Rasch was to be transferred to Berlin; and Thomas was to be transferred to Kiev.

which you filled out on the 10th of January, 1942, which was two or three months after your assignment, and you stated in that personnel questionnaire, and you confirmed to the best of your knowledge, at that time that you were chief of Einsatzgruppe B, from 1 November on. Why didn't you qualify it there and point out that you only were chief from 30 November on? when I was asked one of the first questions by my defense counsel, that there was a mistake in the document book, and it was not on the 10th of January 1942, but on the 10th of January, 1943, that therefore, the questionnaire does not contain a difference of two or three months but a difference of one year. But that does not make any difference really. I have put the date of my transfer at the time, which was correct at the time. Of course, 1 had no idea at that time, that I would have to use this date or I would have to answer for that date at any time here. Had I known that then I am quite sure that I would have written a different thing, namely the transfer order or transfer on that date, and actually taken over service on another date. to this, that he reported to you in the middle of November, would you say that he was lying or mistaken? Reshev at the end of November, would that also be incorrect?

with Sturmbannfuehrer Klingelhoefer, and I went to Vyasma, and from Vyasma I went to Chatsk and from Chatsk back to Vyasma, and from Vyasma I went to Rshev and Kalinin; from that can be seen that I was present in Rshev only a few days after taking over my assignment. inspect his position toward the end of November?

A It could not have been towards the end of November. It must have been early in December. did you receive specifically?

A I didn't understand the question. Would you repeat please? specifically what orders did you receive? and my departure on the 20th or on the 21st, I was ordered to Heydrich and I received clear orders from him for Russia. Now, first of all I received the Fuehrer order concerning the killing of Jews, gypsies and Soviet officials. No. 2, I received a general order for the Einsatzgruppen and for the Einsatzkommandos to maintain order and security in the rear area of the combating forces. function was to kill defenseless people, is that correct? that there was a Fuehrer order, and according to that Fuehrer order all Jews, gypsies and Soviet officials were to be killed.

Q Did he tell you that women and children were to be killed too?

Q What was your reaction? the first time used a sentence that all the Jews were to be shot and all gypsies and all Soviet officials, I asked him clearly that this only dealt with human beings who had done something criminal and which fact could be proved.

Whereupon Heydrich interrupted me quickly and said, "That is a clear Fuehrer order. This Fuehrer order has been issued for the security of the rear of the combating forces and of the entire Army area. There is no discussion whatsoever about this Fuehrer order. It can only be understood in one way, and it has to be carried out accordingly. All Jews, both male and female, all gypsies, and all Communist officials fall under the Fuehrer order." He repeated, "There is no discussion. The order must be carried out. The Fuehrer issued the order for reasons of security of the Army areas."

Q Do I understand then that you did not pretext this order? as it had been issued, and I took it, as an order of my supreme commander and of the head of the state, and, of course, I also took knowledge of the fact there was not discussion about it. B in any way or to improve their operations?

A Would you repeat, please? Einsatzgruppe B in any way or to improve their operations?

A That I had to improve my operations? about to take over. it in any way? No, no, I knew nothing about it.

Q To change them or improve them? Einsatzgruppe-B? I was told that Gruppenfuehrer Nebe, at the time, was in charge of the Einsatzgruppe, and that Gruppenfuehrer Nebe and the Kommando leaders had exactly the same orders as those issued to me, and that Einsatzgruppe B and their kommandos had to act according to those orders; furthermore, that I would have to receive certain instructions from Nebe.

knew that units of Einsatzgruppe B were killing defenseless people, is that correct? had to assume that people were being killed, and I had that confirmed by Nebe

Q So your answer to the question is yes? tinue killing defenseless people after you took command? received those orders in Schmideberg Ant Thueben or Pretsch and the leadership of Einsatzgruppe B could not possibly change anything in the orders or in the execution of those orders.

Q Would you answer my question, please? I will repeat it. Did you know that units of Einsatzgruppe B were going to continue killing defenseless people after you took command, yes or no?

A I believe that my answers exactly your question. Of course, I didn't say yes or no, but I went into details.

Q But your answer then is yes, with an explanation? Sonderkommandos, based on the orders which they had received, would continue their activities as they had done so far, and therefore they had to act according to those orders and continue their activity, your units. Did you read these? and I read part of them. Of course, I didn't read all of them, I don't believe, because they arrived sometimes in large bundles, and apart from that I wasn't present all the time, but as I stated yesterday, during the first six weeks I was traveling all the time in order to gain some sort of an impression about the areas of my assignment, about the units at my disposal, etc.

, etc. what did you discuss with then? the sub-kommandos we discussed all sorts of things. I know you want to know whether we spoke about the execution of the Fuehrer-order, the execution orders. I shall give you that answer before you are going to put it to me directly. Of course I spoke with the kommando leaders and the sub-kommando leaders about it, for the very simple reason because the kommando leaders, should I not have started to speak about it, would have addressed me about it, because this order was very harsh, terribly harsh for the Einsatz Kommandos and others who were involved in it. Everyone knew that it was not pleasant but was very much against one's inner feelings.

and its terrible burden when executing it who had something to do with it directly or indirectly were confronted, on the the other hand, however, with another discussion namely that this order had been issued by the Fuehrer, that is to say, by the man in supreme command, the supreme head of the State. We were now faced with the problem of our personal feelings and this order. Each one of us had to make up his mind whether during the war we had to decide according to our own personal feelings or whether we had to obey an order which was issued during the war by the Supreme Commander of the State. The decision was for us, as obedient soldiers, not easy, but it was clear we had to carry out the order, for the very simple reason that the soldier during the war has to carry our orders. If every soldier would only carry out an order after having considered whether as likes it or not, then there would be no more soldiers.

Q: Did you discuss it with any of these defendants?

A: I surely spoke about it with Steimle. I surely also spoke about it with Out. I also discussed it with my codefendant. Whether I spoke about or discussed those things with him I don't know. It is possible. I am not quite sure Defendant Klingelhoefer had nothing to do with the execution of those orders and noon of the other defendants here were with me at the time.

Q: When you discussed it with these defendants did you impress upon them the fact that it was a Fuehrer Order and had to be carried out by them without question?

A: That was known to the Kommando leaders as well as to me by the order. It was known and there was no need to point it out again, because the Kommando leaders would not have acted if they had not known the Fuehrer Order.

Q: Did any defendant ever come to you and say he couldn't or wouldn't, or didn't want to carry out the execution of defenseless people?

A: Nobody approached me in that form. No, nobody spoke to me about that.

Q: As Chief of Einsatzgruppe B, what would you have done to any defendant who refused to carry out the Fuehrer order?

DR. GAWLIK (Attorney for the Defendant Naumann): Your Honor, I have to object to this question. The witness can only be questioned about what he did, what he heard, and what he saw. However, beyond that he cannot be asked what he would have done, because it is nothing but an assumption. It is a hypothetical question. It is furthermore to be considered here that we would receive possibly a wrong reply which would lead to a wrong conclusion, for the witness possibly at the time would not have had time to think it over, because the circumstances were severe -- but anyway, this is not a question to put to a witness anyway.

THE PRESIDENT: What did you intend to establish by this question, Mr. Ferencz?

MR. FERENCZ: I intend to establish, Your Honor, that the defendant did, in fact, Enforce the Fuehrer Order and that, had any defendant discussed it with him, he would have ordered them shot or he would have let them go and that his position either coerced other defendants or did not coerce the defendants. The plea of superior orders is an important defense in this case and each defendant says he received the order from a superior. I would like to establish whether he could have evaded that order by going to his immediate superior and stating that he objected to the killing of defenseless people. I would like to know what this defendant would have done either to enforce that order or to allow his subordinates to evade the order.

THE PRESIDENT: The objection i s overruled.

Q: (By Mr. Ferencz): Would you answer the question, please, Naumann. What would you have done as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B to any defendant who refused to carry out the order?

A: I have stated before that nobody had come, but had someone come to see me, then, first of all, I amy trying to place myself back in that time -- I would have thought about the objection of that respective man then I would have made my decision. The decision would have been unmistakable; if it was a simple refusal to obey an order, I would immediately have had to report him to my superior officers.

Q: You said in you direct testimony that your units worked very independently, is that correct?

A: Yes, I said, "independently", yes.

Q: Does that mean that they could have failed to execute Jews and gypsies and others and no one would have been the wiser?

A: I know of no such thing. That Komandofuehrer acted thus

Q: I am asking you would it have been possible, because of their independence to do that without having any disciplinary action brought against them?

A: I told you that nothing of the kind came to me, nor nothing of the sort had happened -- that a kommando leader had done what you said.

Q: Could he have done it because of his distance from Smolensk or because of the independence of the kommandos, could they have avoided the killings of Jews without that coming to your attention?

A: Theoretically speaking, that might have been possible.

DR. HOFFMAN (Attorney for the Defendant Nosske): Your Honors, the defendant already stated that he knew nothing at all about it.

With that he pointed out that he knew nothing correct about certain facts and the question whether hypothetical things could be possible according to my opinion prejudices the defense of the other defendants and I would appreciate it if this question would not be admitted, as I believe that each defendant himself would have to answer this.

THE PRESIDENT: The fault lies in the very question itself. The question is could anything have happened without the defendant having known about it. It is very obvious that anything could have happened without the defendant knowing about it, so therefore, the objection is sustained.

MR. FERENCZ: I will rephrase the question, Your Honor.

Q: (By Mr. Ferencz): Because of the independence of these units and their distance from Einsatzgruppe B, were you able to control their acts so closely that the failure to kill Jews would have become apparent to you?

A: Due to the distances of that area, should it have happened, it would have hardly been possible, but still I would like to repeat that I know of no such case.

THE PRESIDENT: The question, Witness, is whether you had direct control over these inferior commands and whether your line of communication was such that you were currently informed of what was taking place in the field. Did you keep a check on them, in other words.

THE WITNESS: The connections between the Kommando leaders and myself was the following: The commandos reported every two weeks to me or to the staff of Einsatzgruppe concerning what incidents we controlled, that is to say, administrative, personnel, executive, and other measures. Apart from that once in a while the Kommando leaders would come to see me if they had some sort of a reason to do so and if they had a reason to discuss certain matters with me or then to discuss certain things with members of the staff of Einsatzgruppe B. Furthermore, until the month of April 1942 I would drive out currently to the kommandos and sub-kommandos and I would visit them, That meant, of course, that I went to see a kommando very seldom, because according to my recollection in 1942 there were approximately 24 garrisons of the Security Service Police and so within my area.

From the month of April, 1942, I had a plane at my disposal. Then, of course, I no longer drove to those kommandos but I flew there. That is what the direct contact was like between the kommando leaders and myself.

THE PRESIDENT: I think that is a full answer to your question, Mr. Ferencz.

Q: (By Mr. Ferencz): Yesterday you examined Document Book II-B, page 15, which was Document NO-2825 and this reported the killing by Einsatzgruppe B and its units of over 45,000 people in four or five months. This was before you took command. What is your best estimate of the number of persons killed by Einsatzgruppe B during the 15 months that you were in command?

A: I was already asked about that figure during my examination by Herr Wartenberg. Mr. Wartenberg for two hours wanted me to tell him the exact figure. He made all sorts of proposals to me. He started with 1,000 and then went up to half a million. I should name a definite figure. I told him that I could not mention any figure, because any figure I mentioned would be wrong.

Q: In Exhibits USSR 48 and 56 before the International Military Tribunal it was reported by a commission investigating atrocities in the Smolensk area that during the German occupation there and it was your area over 135,000 peaceful citizens were killed. Do you think that figure is too high or is it too low?

A: What document did you say this came from, Hr. Ferencz?

Q: Those were exhibits in the International Military Tribunal.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I would appreciate it if when the prosecution refers to certain documents that the witness be shown that document as it is the custom in all trials. At least if he would be shown the document he can state something about it. After all, he can't make any statements if he doesn't know the document.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the question concerns the figure of 135,000 people killed in the Smolensk area. It is very simple and I am asking the defendant if that figure is too high or too low.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know who made the statement before the IMT. No.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I have it in a exhibit USSR 48 and 56. I don't know and I don't have the document with me. I have one of our staff analyses of the documents giving that figure.

THE PRESIDENT: The prosecution, Dr. Gawlik, would be within its proper rights to ask him that question independent of any document.

He merely asks him if that many people were killed in his area. Now the witness can reply the number is too high, is too low, or he doesn't know. The whole field of response, in open to the witness. There is no undue advantage taken of him by the question.

DR. GAWLIK: I agree with your Honors. If the prosecution would ask, please comment on this figure, if that is the way the question is put, I have no objection whatsoever, however if reference made to any documents in the question then, of course, I would like to ask that the document be shown to the witness, or, that the question be asked without referring to the document.

MR. FERENCZ: I will rephrase my question, Your Honors.

Q (By Mr. Ferenz) Based upon your judgment as Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B and based upon your knowledge of the reports sent to you, do you say that 135,000 people killed by Einsatzgruppe B is an excessive figure?

A This figure is so large that it couldn't possibly be debated.

Q Your answer, then, is that it is excessive?

Q What is your minimum estimate of the numbers killed? Wartenberg wanted me to tell him about that end he asked me for two hours and I couldn't give me any information whatsoever. If you ask me about 135,000 people, then I have to tell you that this figure is a definite overstatement of what had been done by Einsatzgruppe B.

them. You were Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B for 15 months. You have told us that the officers of Einsatzgruppe B came to you and that you discussed the execution of defenseless people with them. You have also told us that for two hours you have refused the question, as to the minimum number executed while you were in command. And do I understand you now still refuse to answer the question?

A I did not refuse to quote a minimum. All I said was, I simply cannot give a figure because I do not have the information necessary to calculate, such a figure. If I did it was a total figure for a period of over 15 months. That takes in thirty monthly reports from six kommandos, which means 18 reports. Therefore it is absolutely impossible for me to give you a correct figure which was never added up, which, however, is contained in those 180 reports, but as much as hard as I may try I simply cannot give you an exact figure.

Q Very well. You stated yesterday that it was not the mission of the Einsatzgruppe staff to carry out executions and that you were only concerned with administrative and organizational matters, is that correct? further than that. I didn't say only administrative and organizational matters. Am I to repeat what I said yesterday, Mr. Prosecutor? the personnel, administrative matters and also with organizational matters; furthermore, that the staff had to see to it that certain questions of billeting, feeding, and also of transportation, of gasoline and similar matters were taken care of; furthermore, that the staff had the task to receive the reports from the commandos and to compile the reports which were then sent to the RSHA in Berlin and other agencies.

the executions? the staff. and I ask you to explain why it says in this report that the staff and the Vorkommando Moscow killed almost 2 1/2 thousand people.

A We already discussed this report yesterday. We read all the dates in this document and I shall read them again, 11 October, 14 October, 18 October, and the 20th of October, and the latest date is the 23rd of October.

It could be seen very clearly yesterday that at that time Nebe was in charge. What Nebe did in detail I don't know and there is something else to be added to that, namely, that at that time in October the Army still advancing. Einsatzgruppe B also was moving and I ran the group when the so-called activity had begun and the front lines had been stabilized. by saying that it may be true that the staff killed people before you arrived, but when you came there the Staff no longer killed people?

A I don't know whether the staff carried out any killings at any time. The staff was already in Smolensk and part from that, the personnel strength was so small that only those men were there who were actually used and needed for staff work. this sentence, and I quote, "Staff and Vorkommando Moscow, 2,457," under the report of liquidations to mean that the staff killed 2,457 people with the help of Vorkommando Moscow.

A I don't know. I couldn't know how things were before my arrival because I symply took over the Einsatzgruppe when it was busy in a stationary manner. How it was during the advance, I really can't tell you at this time. I don't know.

Q How many gas vans did Einsatzgruppe B have? three gas vans.

Q What were they supposed to be used for?

A That was mentioned before. They were to be used to exterminate human beings.

Q Were they in fact used for that by your unit?

Q Didn't you ever discuss with your kommando leaders the killing of women and children? trips to the kommando leaders and I mentioned that before that I spoke with them about this Fuehrer Order. women and children? were no gans vans. Einsatzgruppe B. is that correct?

A Yes, there were gas vans during my time. Of course I could be wrong about the date, but it must have been in June, June 1942.

Q As Commanding Officer of Einsatzgruppe B, didn't you ever inquire how these vans were being used?

A No, and please don't foget, Mr. Prosecutor, that at that time, in other words in 1942, June 1942, the executing of Jews were over.

Q Who sent you the gas vans?

Q Do you know specifically who?

A No, I don't

Q Where did the gas vans go when they left your unit?

the RSHA. Where they were brought to, I really don't know. I stated in my affidavit at the time that I assumed that they were sent to one of the Einsatzgruppen in the south. That could have been C or D. From disgas vans were sent to D.

Q In other words, you say that you don't know specifically who sent the gas vans nor do you know where they went and you do not know what they were used for, is that correct?

A I have stated that they came from the RSHA. Who sent them, of course I don't know. I furthermore stated that I don't know whether they were used and I also stated that I knew that their purpose was to exterminate human brings and, finally, I stated that day they were picked up by a representative of the RSHA and I don't know where they were brought to. carrying wood. What was your reaction at that time?

A I saw a gas van for the first time after they had arrived. The man in charge of the motor pool came to see me and when I went through the garage I looked at the gas van. Do you want me to describe it?

A On a second occasion I saw that gas van which? was always in the garage in Einsatzgruppe B had been loaded up with wood and, of course, we had to have stocks of wood for the winter. That was one of the problems of an Einsatzgruppe leader, too. its kommandes, were you not?

Q You had the power to command, did you not? command or who reported totake charge of a unit under your command?

and normally speaking they would stay there for three or four days with the staff of Einsatzgruppe B in order to gather information concerning everything from the administration to police activity. After that, they drove to their kommandos and they took charge of the konmando. They stayed there for approximately three to four weeks with their predecessor, and at the end of that time I went to their garrison and I relieved the man who had been in charge so far of his duties and I introduced the new leader to his men.

Q. You didn't give him any orders or instructions as to what his task would be, or how he should perform his task?

A. So that the new Commando leader or the Sonderkommando leader could get well acquainted with those orders he was to work along with the former Commando leader until he got into the swing of affairs, and that is why I issued no new orders about all those things which had been ordered before, this is not customary in the military.

Q. You just then took him and introduced him to his predecessor, and didn't give him any orders -- just turned him over and said, here you instruct him. Is that correct?

A. I understood from the translation that I took him along to my commander. Is that what you said?

Q. No, no. I understand from your answers that when a new officer reported you didn't give him any new orders or instructions but turned him over to the officer he was supposed to relieve, and that officer explained the function of the Commando to him and instructed him in what he was supposed to do, is that correct?

A. Orders are not issued to individual persons, but to a unit, and when those orders already exist for a unit, then they are executed by the unit. When a now man takes over he has to carry out the old orders; so that there would be no gap, and so that the work would not be interrupted, I decreed in all cases that the new Commando leaders had to work along with the old Commando leaders for three or four weeks.

Q. I am trying to find out what happened when a new officer reported, who gave him the order to do anything - whether it was a lieutenant or a major or even a non-commissioned officer.

A. I know exactly what you want me to tell you, Mr. Prosecutor. You want me to tell you the new Commando leader came, and I said Here are the 36 or 40 orders which were issued during that time, and I will give them to you all over again. However, it was not that way. The Commando leader went to the new Commando and took it over along with the orders that had been issued to the Commando previously.

A new chain of orders is not customary in military life. If a unit has certain orders, they stand and if a new Commando leader comes, he has to execute all these old orders - he has to carry thorn out. Orders are not given to individuals, but to units.

Q. They are just passed on existing orders by which you mean the order from Hitler and nobody else in between gave any new orders, is that correct?

A. Of course, you are referring to the Fuehrer Order. The Fuehrer Order was given to the Commandos and Einsatzgruppe; therefore, the Commandos and the Einsatzgruppe had this order from the beginning. Now, if a new leader, came in - then the task of the Einsatzgruppe and Einsatzkommando remained exactly the same, regardless of whether there was a change in leader or not -- it just didn't make any difference. A new leader had to comply with the orders which had been issued to that unit and carry them out in the same manner as they had been carried out so far. And that applies to every military unit, every agency, even in the homeland.

Q. Who told him about the old orders?

A. Probably the old Commando leader.

Q. You have seen the affidavit of the defendant Ott where he swore that you ordered valuables to be collected from the executed people, and to have them sent to you in Einsatzgruppe B, have you not?

A. Would you please show me that?

Q. Yesterday we discussed the Ott affidavit in which the defendant Ott said that you had ordered the collection of valuables. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, indeed.

Q. Did you issue any other instructions concerning other aspects of the executions, such as the distance from the city, the size of the squad, the manner of execution, the killing of children, or any similar methods? (Interruption)

A. Do you mean the executions or the valuables?

Q. I repeat my question. Did you issue any other instructions concerning other aspects of the executions, such as the distance from the city, the size of the squad, the manner of execution, or similar things?

A. No, that was not necessary. Those orders had been issued before.

Q. In other words, every detail was covered by pre-existing orders, and no questions were ever raised to you?

A. Well, of course, there were questions once in a while.

Q. What sort of questions?

A. I stated before that the Fuehrer Order was discussed between my Commando leaders and myself. We had two feelings...first of all, our own inner feelings against this order, and on the other hand we had the order, and then, of course, the decision was made that for obedient soldiers all orders had to be carried out.

Q. Did you control whether the executions were done in a humane and military manner, such as the defendant Ohlendorf has told us he did in regard to Einsatzgruppe D?

A. During my visits the Commando leaders told mo how executions had been carried out in the past. During my time, and I am now speaking about the chronological development, only a few or rather, fewer, executions were carried out than before. As a result of this, and as these were distributed over a larger area and a larger period of time, and as I was not instructed in advance about them, this was not negligence on the part of the Commando leaders but it was within the independence which they had in their activities. I could not possibly have issued instructions before the execution of those orders. Apart from that, the Einsatzcommando leaders during the months of July -- (Interruption) behind them, and, therefore, it would not be necessary for me to issue individual orders in individual bases.

DR. DURCHHOLZ (for the defendant Schulz): Your Honor, I am sorry that I have to interrupt. But the defendant Schulz has been suffering from a bladder ailment for some time. If possible, I would like him to be excused from the present court session at the present time.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of the representation made by counsel, the defendant Schulz will be excused from attendance at the present moment. He will be secorted from the Court. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Have you finished your answer, Naumann?

A. Yes.

Q. Do I understand you correctly, the, to say it was not necessary for you to issue any instructions concerning the details of executions?

A. Yes, that is correct. I say that because the Commando leaders reported to me as to how they had carried out these executions so far, and I had no objections to that.

Q. Yesterday you pointed out that several Prosecution documents which listed killings by Einsatzgruppe B were inaccurate because it was before your time. I hand you now, from Document Book II-B, page 62, Document NO-3276. This reports thousands of liquidations by the units of Einsatzgruppe 3 between 6 and 30 March 1942, including the killing of thousands of Jews and Gypsies. Were you the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe B and its units at that time?

A. During that period of time, yes.

Q. Did you personally ever order anyone to be executed?

A. No, not individually. As I stated before, orders already existed; they didn't have to be issued again.

Q. Did you ever order anyone to be "Sonderbehandeit" - or, to be given special treatment?

A. No.

Q. You are sure of that answer?

A. Yes, I am quite certain.

Q. Allow me, to refresh your memory. Did you ever hoar of the special Camp Wissokoje? W-i-s-s-o-k-o-j-e.

A. Yes, I know Wissokoje, indeed. There are several Wissokojes. I am assuming you are referring to the Estate of Einsatzgruppe B near Smolensk.

Q. I am asking you now if you have heard of the Camp Wissokoje.

A. Camp Wissokoje? There was no such thing as Camp Wissokoje.

Q. Did you ever order anyone executed near Wissokoje?

A. No.

Q. Were you in the vicinity of Wissokoje on the 5th of December 1942?

A. I don't know that. If you are referring to the Wissokoje I am referring to, then it was the Estate of Wissokoje, near Smolensk, approximately 17 kilometers east of Smolensk. Whether I was there on the 5th of December 1942, I really don't know, I was there quite often.

a man on it and ask you if that refreshes your recollection of having ordered an execution.

A What am I to know about this document? executions? connection with executions.

Q Then it does not refresh your recollection, is that correct?

AAgain I don't see what this has to do with it. namely the name of the enterprise of Zeppelin. But this is the first thing in the three documents which means anything to me. people, that you ever ordered executions? just given to the defendant.

MR. FERENCZ: I have just handed to the defendant three pages which appear to be a questionnaire or life history of three men. Each contains a picture of the man. It states when he was born, his name etc. These are part of a file to which the last note attached is as follows, to your memory the execution of certain people by your order:

"SS Special Camp Wissokoje. Dated 5 December 1942. Memorandum. As a result of various things which"-

DR. GAWLIK: I have to object, your Honor. I have to have a German copy of that document so I can tell whether this document is relevant before I can let it be accepted into the record, your Honor.

Page 874

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I have copy of the document. The objection is a matter of relevance. I think the objection can be over-ruled. I will show the document to the defendant and to the defense counsel and introduce it in the court as soon as I am finished reading a short paragraph.

THE PRESIDENT: That answer your objections, Dr. Gawlik.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, but your Honor, I still ask that I be given a copy prior to the introduction of the introduction of the document because I can't judge whether the part that is being read is relevant, the reason it is being read, and whether it has anything to do with Naumann. I can't check it if I don't have the copy, the copy should be shown to me in advance. And we always used to do it that way before. We always received the German copy first.

MR. FERENCZ: I am just trying to refresh the defendant's recollection, your Honor. I will show the relevance of this document in the first sentence.

THE PRESIDENT: You see, Dr. Gawlik, Mr. Frencz is not introducing a document in evidence at this moment. He is cross-examining the witness. He asked him if he recalls certain episodes, and the defendant has stated he has no recollection of any such episodes. Now, the prosecution is endeavoring to refresh his memory. Naturally, you have the right to see this document, but Mr. Ferenzc has the right to put the proposition to him before exposing the document to anybody, because it is only for the purpose of refreshing the recollection of the defendant.

MR. FERENCZ: I repeat my question. I will read to you a certain document to refresh your recollection about having ordered executions: "Special Camp Wissokoje. 5 December 1942. Memorandum. As a result of various thinhs which happened in the meantime at the special camp Wissokoje, "K" was given the special treatment on 25 November 1942 by order of SS-Brigadefuehrer Naumann of Einsatzgruppe B." Does that refresh your memory?

Q I will read a little further: "Here can be seen from the reports of SS-Hauptsturmfuehrer Sauckel, to the RSHA, Amt VI, Department VI-CZ, signed Goebel, SS-Unterscharfuehrer."

Do you remember anything having ordered executions now?

DR. FICHTE( for the defendant Bieberstein): Your Honor, for the defendant Bieberstein I would like to object to this manner of introducing evidence. It was usual at all times that before a document was introduced at least no one could read anything from the document During cross-examination it may be brought on that something is stated in the document, but not the whole document can be read. I an objecting to this on principle, for any further such cases.

DR. GAWLIK: And now I would like to see the document which was just read. the document.

MR. FERENCZ: You may show it to the defendant. Perhaps he will then remember.

THE PRESIDENT: Up to this point there is nothing incorrect in the procedure so Mr. Ferencz may continue.

Is there a question pending now? BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Does that refresh your memory, Naumann? gruppe B - in the Estate of Wissokoje there was a house which had been placed at the disposal of an official of Office VI, and this representantive of Office VI received three to six Russians who stated that they were against the Bolshevists, and that by order of the Germans they wanted to carry out certain actions against the Germans. This agency of Office VI was not subordinated to me. It was subordinated to the competent department of the RSHA, Reich Security Main Office.

It received these instructions from there which did not concern me and with which I had nothing to do. The leader of this Commando, a Hauptsturmfuehrer, conducted independent negotations, without having to report to me and without reporting to me. As, for execution of a man of this organization - I never did order such a thing because I didn't have the right to do so. It was up to Office VI. around Camp Wissokoje?

A No, I don't know that, either. killed by order of SS-Brigadefuehrer Nuamann of Einsatzgruppe B. Is that you? Are you the person referred to? than myself.

Q But you don't know anything about those killings?

MR. FERENCZ: Thank you. Your Honor, this document has just been received from Berlin. We have not yet had it processed, as soon as we can put it into the hands if the Court we shall do so and introduce it as an exhibit at that time. We have three such documents.

THE PRESIDENT: I would suggest you expedite the processing so that the Tribunal may be entirely current on these documents.

MR. FERENCZ: We will do it as rapidly as possible, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. FERENCZ: Before the recess we were discussing some documents which stated that the defendant Neumann ordered the execution of certain peopl. For purposes of idnetification I ask that these documents be given Prosecution's Exhibit No. 175, and we will introduce them as soon as they can be processed.

DR GAWLIK: I object to these documents being permitted to be presented, and I ask that the originals be submitted. First of all the connection of these documents is not evident, what I have been handed -and I only was given a part of them, and the Prosecution still the other part, are three questionaires of three Russians, but what they have to do with it, and the connection with these documents, is not at all evident and for that reason the Prosecution has not shown in how far these questionaires are at all relevant. In the last document which was given, to me it concerned a memorandum from a document and it seems strange why the Prosecution does not submit the entire document. I, therefore, must contest the authenticity ox these documents, unless the original be submitted. If the Prosecution has a copy, they must be in the position to get the original also.

MR. FERENCZ: If your honor please, at the time we introduce the document into evidence we will introduce the complete document, certified the same as every other document introduced in Nurnberg, and the defense counsel may raise their objections at that time. Now we are just asking that it be given a number for purposes of identification.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, the Prosecution at the present moment is merely asking that numbers be assigned to these documents. You will receive copies of the documents. That is copies of the entire documents, before they will be admitted into evidence. When he is about to introduce the documents into evidence you will have an opportunity to object to their relevancy or to their authenticity. He has merely asked that we give numbers for the purpose of maintaining the continuity.

DR. GAWLIK: But I ask that the original be submitted for identification because I contest the authenticity of this last document. It does not show at all from where it originates. I talked to some of the defendants. I am not allowed to talk to Defendant Naumann during crossexamination. None of the defendants know the persons mentioned there.

THE PRESIDENT: What have you to say to this, Mr. Ferencz?

MR. FERENCZ: The original is in Berlin, your Honor, and we have only received photostatic copies. This is the practice with all documents introduced. We have seen at the beginning of this trial that documents are processed in a certain way to assure their authenticity. The only objection I can understand is that the Prosecution has fabricated this document. If that objection is actually raised we will bring the original here. However, we must request that a photostatic copy be adequate, inasmuch as it is the usual practice, and to bring originals down in every case would completely disrupt the custody of the documents and the great care with which they are handled now.

DR. GAWLIK: I did not quite understand the question.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, when you receive the copies, please look them over quickly and then decide whether you will insist upon the originals being brought here from Berlin.

Page 879

At the present moment we well allow the numbers to be assigned. The Secretary-General may indicate what numbers.

MR. FERENCZ: 175, Prosecution's Exhibit 175.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you intend to give only one number?

MR. FERENCZ: He will give one number to the group of documents. your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, that number will be assigned to the group of documents.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) Naumann, you have made several statements here this morning, which you, of course, insist are true, isn't that correct? of the other defendants to or careful about what they tell the interrogator and not be fooled, and further try to tip them off about what you had said in order to avoid, contradictions? prison about my interrogation.

Q About what? it to the Court and identify it. Would you read it out loud, please?

Q Will you please read this, return the other document, please? I will hand you the original.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I want to know about the contents, as is customary, before the document is discussed here. I cannot look after my clients interest as defense counsel if matters are discussed here about which I have no knowledge, matters which are between the Prosecutor and the Defence. The usual thing is that when a document is discussed that the defense counsel gets a copy.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honor please, I have only one copy, but I give it to the defense counsel.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) Would you please continue and read the document slowly and clearlytto the Court?

A "Do not be bluffed during interrogations. Always be careful, even if they smile at you. My statements so far you Were leader of the VKM first of all in Moshaisk, then in Roslawl. I cannot give the dates. Whether you carried out executions I do not know. My service started at the and of November, 1941. At that time there were no more ghettos in my region. The larg executions of the first time occurred during Nebe's time. I then got you into my staff, first of all because of your linguistic ability. Secondly, I had to be open here as it seemed to be wiser - because of your inclination to drink occasionally. I then assigned you to my staff, firstly because of your linquistic knowledge -

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I object. First of all it should be shown who wrote this letter. The Prosecution would have to prove this. Secondly, I don't see the purpose of reading it out. The Prosecution could submit this document. Why should it be read out?

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honor please, we introduced first a typewritten copy of the document. The defendant said he was not sure that this was his own note, whereupon I handed him the original.

THE PRESIDENT: Is it the contention of the Prosecution that this is a note written by the Defendant Naumann?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and have you handed him a document which purports to have been written in his own handwriting?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honor; he has it now before him.

THE PRESIDENT: Defendant Naumann, is this your own note?

THE WITNESS: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Then I don't see any objection to his reading it.

DR. GAWLIK: It could be submitted in evidence. The Prosecution can state what they want to prove by it. I don't see the purpose of reading it out, why the witness should read it. We can read that ourselves, and so can. the Tribunal.

MR: FERENCZ: Your Honor, we will submit it as evidence. However, it is his own handwriting, and there are some parts that are difficult to read, and it is a short statement, about a page and a half, and it is all very pertinent and I am unable to read his handwriting, and that is one of the reasons I have asked him to read it himself and, to explain it to the Court.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I would recommend that the defendant read it, as he has been doing it, but read it slowly so that we can got the benefit of the translation.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) Continue, please.

THE PRESIDENT: May I ask, Mr. Ferencz, if you have a typewritten copy for the interpreter. It might be easier to give us the translation if she had the German before her.

MR. FERENCZ: We have just made a translation, your Honor, and it now is in the hands of the interpreter.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Now please, witness, read the document slowly.

THE WITNESS: Where from, Mr. President?

THE PRESIDENT: I would suggest from the beginning. First, to whom is this directed?

THE WITNESS: I addressed it to Klingelhoeffer.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

THE WITNESS: "Don't let them bluff you. Always be careful, even with the friendliest face. My statements until now, you were the leaders of the VKM, at first in Gsaitsk or Moshaisk, later in Roslawl. I cannot give dated. Whether you carried out executions, I don't know. The beginning of my duty, and of November, 1941. At that time there were no ghettos left in my area.

The large-scale executions fell into Nebe's time. I then brought you to my staff, firstly, because of your knowledge of the language; second, I had to be frank here, because your inclination to drink deemed it necessary. You then spent sometime with the preparation of a plan for Moscow and you worked for the SD in the staff, mainly because of your knowledge of the language. Troop Smolensk was led by some small Sturmscharfuehrer or Untersturmfuehrer whose name I do not know any mor. Troop Smolensk belonged to the EK 9. The number of persons executed by Einsatzbruppe B was not registered in the group staff. I therefore could make no statements on this. I did not give any execution orders because these were already given by Heydrich and Nebe to the SK and EK. B received two or three gas vans from Berlin which were not used by B and were, therefore, under directions of the RSHA given to C.

"Written reports went to Berlin about every three weeks. There was no count of executions contained therein, but it contained mainly a description of the situation from a security police point of view and a voluminous SD report. Beginning in spring, 1942, the main activity of Einsatzgruppen B changed to partisan reconnaissance and to the formation of police forces of indigenous persons (OD). This court has no original report of Einsatzgruppe B nor other records, only information reports issued by the RSHA, and these are not complete. These reports were first issued in 1942. About your activity in Gsaitz and Smolensk the court has no records.

"I have identified the following persons as belonging to Einsatzgruppe B and stated that I knew them:

"Staff: Schroeder, Schirme, Hoele, Eckstein, Rath, Mueller, Kiesewalter, Mahnke, Koch, Holste, Fischer, Pfeiffer, Gatz, Siegling, Lehmeyer.

"7a. Steimle, Rapp, Matschke "7b. Rausch, Ott, Schiefner "8. Bradfisch, Richter, Schindhelm.

"9. Schaefer, Wiebens, Burchardt "VKM Klingelhoeffer, Blume.

"There names were known here already for the greater part. Further I know nothing about the fact that executees had their clothing taken away from them before the executions and that the clothes were given to the NSV.

"An agent of Office IV, who has said to have had the mission of removing mass graves, was not with me." End.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honor please, we will do the same with this document as we have done with the last. We are having some difficulty having it photostatted because it is in very small writing and the paper is bad, but we will make it a document as rapidly as possible and will submit it then as Prosecution's Exhibit 176.

THE PRESIDENT: That number will be assigned to the document.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz) Naumann, will you please explain to the Tribunal why you thought it necessary to tell the Defendant Klingelhoefer the date that you took command and what he did and what you did, as well as who were membersof your kommando, and to warn him not be, be bluffed.

A. I gave these statements to Klingelhoefer and they were the same as those I made during the interrogation. Why I did this? Klingelhoefer was my comrade. I know him. I know that Klingelhoefer gets easily upset, and I considered it my duty as a comrade to tell him what I had said during my interrogations. Other reasons concerning this information did not play any part except the comradely attitude.

Q. Then as I understand you, because of your comradely attitude you told him not to be bluffed, and to say the following things, is that correct? As I understand your answer you are saying---

A. That is right. From a comradely attitude.

Q. Tell me, what is your opinion about the Defendant Klingelhoefer?

A. I stated yesterday when I was questioned by Klingelhoefer's defense counsel.

Q. You stated yesterday that he was a fine fellow and you were glad to have him as a major interpreter in your headquarters, is that correct?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Didn't you once state in an interrogation where you were under oath that he was no man and he didn't know much and since he was a heavy drinker you couldn't rely on him for very much?

A. No, I never expressed myself In that form. I only expressed exactly what was written in that note.

Q. I will hand you now the question and the answer which was put to you by Mr. Wartenberg concerning the Defendant Klingelhoefer, and I ash you in it is correct to read it to the Court.

A. "15 Question: Was his rank not too high to be an interpreter?

"Answer: If you ask me about his personality he was not a hardworking and clever man. I could not leave him in an independent position either because he liked to drink, and therefore I kept him with me.

"16 Question: Did the VKM, during Klingelhoefer's time, carry out executions?

"Answer; I can answer neither yes nor no; I think probably."

Q. That is enouth, thank you,

A. May I add something on this?

Q. If you wish.

A. The reply 15 is such bad German, which I don't usually use, not even during an interrogation, obviously the stenographer was not very clear about this, I have noticed this has happened repeatedly during interrogations. Very often I had to ask, during the interrogation, "Can you follow this?" And she often answered, "Please go a little slower."

Q. Do you wish to make any corrections to your answers there? If so, please do so.

A. I certainly did not say, did not use the phrase, "he was not a hard-working and clover man." Also I did not use the phrase, "I could not leave him to work independently because he, liked to drink too much," This phrasing was not used. As far as I remember, I said much more, in detail, about Klingelhoefer. These are only a few words or sentences about the Whole interrogation.

Q. In other words, you say that the transcript of that interrogation, which purports to be a verbatim transcript, is inaccurate and is much shorter than what you actually said, and is not in your own language?

A. It is inaccurate.

Q. Thank you. Will you return it, please?

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, do I understand that although the language as reproduced in that document is not your phraseology, and although you said more than is contained in the document, yet the thought which you expressed is reproduced in the sentences which you read?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, my opinion was expressed-much more in detail and more to the effect as I said yesterday. However, I told Interrogator Wartenberg at the time that Klingelhoefer was inclined to have a drink every now and then. That is exactly that I said, because that represents more approximately Klingelhoefer's actual character. He was not really a heavy drinker, he just liked to have a drink occasionally. That is a phrase I used verbatim and it is not mentioned here.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz) As my last question, Naumann, I ask you, in regard to your activity as commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe B for a period of approximately fifteen months, do you feel any guilt or remorse?

A. I believe the reply to this question can be seen from previous answers I have given. I have Said that the order, state order, which was given to us, and which ordered that certain categories of people, were to be killed for the purpose of maintaining order and security. I also said that this order, with all those who had anything to do with it directly or indirectly, caused considerable moral difficulties of conscience, but that all those who were directly or indirectly connected, realized that this order was given by the Supreme Commander and head of the state and that this order had to be obeyed.

Q. What is your answer then, do you feel any guilt or remorse?

A. Guilt and remorse I can only feel for crimes I personally commit. If I myself had carried out killings and cruelties then I would have to feel guilt and remorse. If I have carried out an order then I have no guilt at all, and therefore I cannot feel remorse for a guilt that does not exist.

you did while commander of Einsatzgruppe B, is that correct?

A. I have already given my explanation to that effect.

MR. FERENCZ: Thank you, No further questions, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Any redirect examination, Dr. Gawlik?

DR. GAWLIK: May I first ask the interpreter to give me the English translation of this letter. I believe there is a mistake in it.

THE INTERPRETER: The court reporters have it now.

THE PRESIDENT: Whoever has the present custody of the English translation of the note in question will please allow Dr. Gawlik to have it.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honor please, we may save time, if he will point out any correction we will concede to it. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Witness, I ask you to read the one sentence in this letter which starts, "I".

A. "I do not know that executees had their clothes taken from them before the execution and their clothes were given to the National Socialist Welfare Organization, the NSV".

Q. Please read the English as far asyou can, what has been translated in the English.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the defendant has read it. We have received a translation. Are you satisfied that the translation we have now received is correct?

DR. GAWLIK: I only wanted to show that the interpreters were given a translation which said exactly the opposite. The translation says, "I do know about it."

MR. FERENCZ: We will concede the correction, Your Honor. The original document was going to be offered to the Court, The translation was made only this morning and quickly passed forward. If it is corrected, there should be no further discussion on the matter.

DR. GAWLIK: I only wanted to correct this in order to inform you on this important point in the future.

THE WITNESS: Shall I read the sentence again:

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, please do.

THE WITNESS: "I know something about the fact that executees had their clothing taken away before their executions and that they were given to the NSV.

Q (By Dr. Gawlik) Did you write that in the letter? executees before their execution were robbed of their clothes and these clothes were handed over to the NSV.

DR. GAWLIK: I ask that the English translation be corrected in the record, because I presumed that the original text was wrong.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, the Tribunal's impression is that the interpretation came through that the defendant knew nothing about those facts. So, therefore no harm was done, so that you will see that what actually came to the Tribunal was the correct translation. after the end of the war hide. I therefore ask you did this happen because you had committed any crimes or were there other reasons, and what were they? officer to avoid captivity. It happened on the evening when I took off my uniform, that was my decision. Any other reasons or even any other thoughts than this I never had, particularly at this time. I could not have known how things would continue in Germany and until a few hours ago I has the impression that the Western Allies would give us the opportunity to continue to fight against Russia.

discussion with Heydrich. This order of Hitler, did you pass it on at all? beginning the units had been given exactly the same order. ask you did you have the possibility to object at all. opportunity to protest and object. I myself interrupted Heydrich and I was rebuked in that manner. I have described. were also discussed. please describe briefly what connections between the staff and the Sonder and Einsatzkommandos existed. Chief, is that it? I was Chief of the Einsatzkommando and, as such, I took a lot of time to talk to my Kommando leaders and the subkommando leaders, subordinate to these and to go out to them, because in the whole area, there were twenty-four garrisons, which were very hard to reach. Therefore, I could not visit every individual garrison very often. Beyond that I was visited by Kommando leaders when they thought that it was necessary to discuss something with me or members of the staff who wished to discuss something or to regulate something with me. These were mostly members of the staff and on this opportunity those gentlemen of course, visited me. Beyond that the Kommandos reported every two weeks always on the 1st of the month and the 15th or the 1st and the 16th, about everything that had occurred in the reegion in every branch and field and therefore gave reports on organizational matters, about questions of personnel and billets, about the fuel situation, about the vehicle situation and the effusive SD report and the report about police actions, report about cooperation with the Army and other things.

in to be identified. I ask you can you remember that you gave this order mentioned in the document? "Zeppelin" was not subordinate to me. Office VI of the RSHA in Berlin was in charge of it and directed it and the chief of this unit with one or two men worked with their own agency in Russia, immediately connected with Army agencies. They had immediate contact. Einsatzgruppe B merely had to help him if he needed material to carry out his task. I just now recall that it had its own fuel quota from the Army. It very closely cooperated with the Wehrmach, the German Army, and especially with the Air Force, the Luftwaffe, because agents were brought over frontlines by land as well as by air ways and such mutual assistance was necessary.

Q Please describe to the Tribunal what the enterprise "Zeppelin" was.

A The enterprise "Zeppelin", as far as I got to know about it, had the task to take Russians who had anti-Bolchevist ideas and bring them Across the frontier lines an either to help them return with news, which occurred only rarely, but up take them to the territories close or far away from the front from where they broadcasted together with them, the news to the German stations, by means of signal outfits which, as far as I know, belonged to the Wehrmacht, with other words to *o espionnage. I know that further orders were given that capable people were given the task not only to send the news reports, but also to carry out expoonnage acts. Details about this I do not know, because for the men of operation "Zeppelin" secrecy applied accordingly only these were allowed to know anything about it who were concerned with it.

Q Were the members of operation "Zeppelin" sobordinated to you as Chief of Einsatzgruppe B?

A No, I already said so. They were under Office VI. only in case they were not sure of something they had to be supported by a letter of the Einsatzgruppe.

If they could work it out themselves, they did not need the assistance of the Einsatzgruppe and this was mostly the case, letter? I merely want to clarify in advance as to the phrase (Sonderlager) Special Camp Wissokoje. The Prosecutor asked me whether I knew a camp in Wissokoje. With good faith, I said, "no" because there was merely a house, which was a Russian farm house, a wooden house, covering about 15 square metres. This wooden house was inhabited by the agents and there they received their reports. I do not consider this house to be a camp, because it was a house with two rooms, which was put at their disposal. The phrase an SS Special Camp, Wissokoke, I learned about only for the first time here. I had never heard about it and a house of 15 square metres, can hardly be given, the bragging name of an SS Special Camp. Also the Signature that is written here I do not know. It is Obel or Gobel. I know the man mentioned in the letter, SS Hauptsturmfuehrer Sakut. this?

A I don't know any such person.

Q He did not belong to your staff either? that it was actually written like that, is based on a mistake. orders to to that effect, for "Special Treatment" as it says here. I would have remembered it and I already said that I could not have given such orders, because I was not in charge of these Russian men. Once or twice I saw these men. There was a colonel among them who performed very good tricks on horseback, but apart from that I didn't know anything about these men.

when you were Chief of Einsatzgruppen B? security in the rear of the fighting forces. The activity itself extended mainly to the search for partisans as mean task, then there was also SD reporting and setting up local police force. These three subjects were the most important tasks of the Einsatzgruppe B. far?

DR. GAWLIK: Then I have no further question.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have something, Dr. Hoffman?

DR. FICHT (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BIBERSTEIN): Your Honor, I only want to ask that the Defendant Biberstein be excused tomorrow from attendance because I want to prepare him for his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Biberstein will be excused from attendance in Court tomorrow and, incidentally, the Tribunal will announce that there will be a session tomorrow, even though it be Saturday. It will begin at none o'clock and will terminate at twelve O'clock.

Do you have something, Dr. Hoffman? BY DR. HOFFMANN (Attorney for the Defendant Mosske): Einsatzgruppe independent? gruppen. as Ohlendorf? gruppe B were the same as those with Einsatzgruppe D?

D as in Einsatzgruppe B I cannot say, because I could not see in what manner Ohlendorf was in charge of his Einsatzgruppe. commitment were the same?

A If you don't express yourself too generally by referring to the Fuehrer Order, that was the basis of all Einsatzgruppen and all Einsatzkommandos, in the same manner.

Q There is one thing I don't understand. you said the Einsatzkommando leaders received the Hitler order and carried it out. You only notified the Hitler decree that was all you did were you then, as functionaries necessary at all? assigned and according to what Ohlendorf said, during the last few days and what I said yesterday And today. it is obvious that there had to be Einsatzgruppen Chiefs. Because the territory was so vast there had to be a connective system, even if only a loose one.

Q Witness, perhaps I am stupid, but I still don't understand why you interrupted the line of orders which you followed concerning the Einsatzgruppe Chiefs, the Hitler decree the Einsatzkommando leaders and any the channel of command was, Hitler decree - Einsatz leader. cutiond, a number of actions occurred. This includes me and also the kommando leaders. That is obvious, but if in Schmiedenberg, Pretsch, and in Dueben, in one of those three places, an order was not only given in the Einsatzgruppe Chiefs but also Sonderkommando and Einsatzkommando chiefs, I cannot help that. the Einsatzkommando carried it out?

DR. GAWLIK: I want to object to this question. I don't see the relevanty of this question to the line of defense of my colleague Hoffmann.

THE PRESIDENT: If it is in the nature of cross-examination, which it is, Dr. Hoffmann has the right to extract as much benefit as he can from the witness for the benefit of his own client, so that it's entirely up to the witness as to whether the statement by Dr. Hoffmann as put to him is correct or not, so the objection is overruled.

Q To explain Dr. Gawlik's attitude, I wanted to say that I act as defence counsel for an Einsatzkommando Chief and therefore it is important for me to know whether he is made responsible for the Hitler Decree immediately or whether you come in between. Up to now this has net been shown and that is why I ask you. neither a kommando leader, nor an Einsatzgruppen chief. That is my opinion.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand from that answer that Adolf Hitler is now charged with all the war crimes no one else is responsible? Is that what I get from your comment?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, what I mean is the decree was issued; for the fact that it was issued, Hitler as Supreme Commander is alone responsible because he gave it.

Q (By Dr. Hoffmann) Let us leave this subject. Obviously we cannot agree, witness, Another question: You said you cannot state how many executions were carried out in your Einsatzgruppe? manner; Did you know how many Jews, gypsies, and other people to be killed were in the territory of your Einsatzkommando?

A I say "we" expressly. We knew as little about this as about the total figures of the population there.

Q Do you know how many remained afterwards? this decree out to the full extent. To repeat my question, did you know how many survived, yes, or not

A To this clear question I can only say, "no." opinion that no Einsatzkommando leader did not carry out the decree to the full extent, but he did, in fact, carry it out fully? Fuehrer did not carry out the decree completely.

Q But you are not quite sure?

A I might mention that I didn't look through all the woods in Russia to see whether any Jews remained. the individual kommando leaders, yes, or no? were just as obedient soldiers as I was.

Q Do you consider it obedient to carry out such a decree? can help to win the war against an enemy, which at that time and even now threatens not only Europe, if that order was given to us as soldiers, we had to carry it out. of the Einsatzkommando leaders had this same opinion as you, you think therefore that that order was carried out to the full extent, is that right?

Q But apart from that, you don't know?

A What the others did I don't know. BY THE PRESIDENT: as you know?

A I don't know, Your Honor, of anywhere it was not carried out, I have no proof that it was carried out to the full extent, because a kommando leader might have said for some reason or other, "I won't do it, and nobody will find out." I don't know that anything like that happened, but I cannot say now that it actually did not happen. Decree was aimed at Bolchevism and that therefore you believed it to be just? and the Soviet Officials were to be executed? You agreed with that?

A Your Honor, please don't take it amiss if I can't say yes fullheartedly. After this decree had been given by the Fuehrer I considered it necessary to carry out this decree. you believe you had to obey orders, is that the interpretation I am to get from your answer? Socialist I heard the speech of the Fuehrer on the 22d of June, 1941, when he described the opponent in the East And I realized the meaning of his speech and when the decree was given I carried out this order in order to win the war against the Bolchevists. was the way to win the war and you believed the war to be just, because you had heard Hitler say so in this famous speech on July 22d, 1941, or whatever date it was? might be of vital importance.

Q It doesn't need to extend far. The question is simply, "Did you agree with the order and did you execute the order, because you believed that as a National Socialist man, as a patriot, as a soldier, it was necessary to execute this order in order to win the war against Bolchevism against Russia, did you agree with the order"? essary to kill hundreds of thousands of defenseless people, men, women, and children unarmed, did you agree with that?

no misgivings about it? it seriously. I have said that repeatedly, but opposite to the personal misgivings and the weightof these thoughts, there was the order and my personal misgivings and my personal ideas for me as a soldier would become inconsistant for me being a soldier, I was not allowed to follow my personal misgivings and ideas.

Q Did you have any misgivings at the time?

Q Then you did not agree with the order? and it was contrary to my nature to kill defenseless people.

Q And you believe it was wrong to kill, especially women and children? so, because there was Fuehrer Decree. to shoot down women and children.

A No, I did not hold that opinion owing to my convictions. It was my conviction that it had to be done.

Q Then you were in full accord with the order?

Q You either did or din not have misgivings. Did you have misgivings?

to the carrying cut of this order, but owing to the situation at the time -

Q Answer the question simply. Did you have misgivings? Did you have some reluctance? Did you feel some revulsion in the execution of this order? to carry it out.

Q Did you have misgivings? Answer that question.

Q Then you did not agree with the order? You had misgivings. You were reluctance You felt that there was something wrong; therefore, you had misgivings; therefore to that extend, you did not agree with the order. Now please answer that question. it was inhumane and unjust to strike down defenseless woman and children, is that right? it a terrible duty to have to shoot these women and children.

Q Now let us stick to the issue. I asked you a number of times whether you did or did not have misgivings and now I get the direct answer from you; you did have misgivings; you did not like this job.

A. No.

Q Very well. Then to that extent you believed there was something wrong with the order? and that it was necessary. I also know for sure -to execute the order in order to destroy the enemy in order to win the war, why did you have any misgivings?

something morally wrong? and these helpless women and children. You saw nothing morally wrong in that?

Q You saw nothing morally wrong about it? I do not hesitate to answer.

Q It isn't a question of being decisive. It is a question of telling the truth. Now you either thought this order was right or it was wrong. Now if it was wrong tell us it was wrong. If it was right, tell us it was right. Tell us if it was right or wrong. There is certainly no disposition to coerce you to give one answer or the other, we want the truth because you must understand that this is certainly a very pehnomenal thing for people to be shot down without an opportunity to defend themselves, to explain their case, there was no opportunity given at all. Therefore, it is a very phenomenal situation so that it is entirely in order that we ask of you who was in this operation whether you thought it was right or wrong and that is all there is to it. Now you either agreed with this order or you did not agree with it. because you agreed with it?

A I already said that I had misgivings. It was with reluctance and it was a fight between duty and conscience add the realization that this measure was necessary in order to fight Bolshevism.

Q Then you did not agree with it completely? Let me point out to you witness, that when a soldier goes into battle, he has no misgivings.

He is going in to fight. He knows that his opponent is armed. He knows that he is fighting for his country and he may kill. Further, afterwards, when he comes back and goes home he sleeps tranquilly that night, if he comes out alive, and he has no misgivings, no reluctance. On the contrary, there is enthusiasm for the combat. Now, here you say you did have some misgivings; you did entertain some reluctance, so therefore, I ask you whether if you did entertain That reluctance, If you did not believe at the time that there was something wrong with the order. was part of our aim of the war and therefore it was necessary.

Q Very well. Then the Tribunal will accept from your answer that you saw nothing wrong with the order, even though it did involve the killing of defenseless human beings. That is what we draw from your answer.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Tribunal will be in recess until two o'clock.

(A recess was taken until 1400 hours.)

9The Tribunal reconvened at 1400 hours)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT. Any further examination of the defendant Naumann? If not he will return to the defendant's dock.

DR. GAWLIK (for the defendant Seibert): Your Honor, for the time being I have concluded my introduction of evidence in the case of Naumann. However, I reserve the right to introduce other evidence at a later date.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have in mind witnesses, or documents, Dr. Gawlik?

DR. GAWLIK: Only documents, your Honor, that is all.

THE PRESIDENT: That right will be reserved.

(The witness was excused)

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel for defendant Schulz?

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I would like to make an announcement on behalf of the Prosecution. By order of the Tribunal dated 29 September the witness Haennecke was declared a prosecution witness. In the meantime, the Prosecution has finished its interrogation of the witness Haennecke. Defense counsel for defendant Schulz requests Haennecke as a defense witness. There is no objection on the part of the Prosecution that Defense counsel call Haennecke as a defense witness. Moreover, the Prosecution would like to reserve the right to introduce an affidavit of said witness at a later date.

THE PRESIDENT: Your statement is self-explanatory and needs no comment.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Thank you, your Honor.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: (for the defendant Schulz): Your Honor, before I may call the witness for the defendant Schulz to the witness stand, I would like to make a short statement.

I had a conversation with the defendant concerning the witness Haennecke and we finally agreed not to call Haennecke as a witness a I have an affidavit which I will introduce at a later date. However, on the 2nd of October of this year I made a written application to this Tribunal to place certain witnesses at my disposal whose names we re mentioned on that list. So far, with the exception of the witness Haennecke, I have heard nothing at all of the witnesses. That is the reason why I would refer again to that application and ask the Tribunal kindly to comply with my request so that I can possibly, at a later date, call in those witnesses and subject them to our direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you please indicate the names of those witnesses?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: At the time I had requested the witnesses: Reinhold Braeder, Alfred Faust, Dr. Lauer, Dr. Ogilwi, Alfred Schwarting, Dr. Joseph Steiner and Hans Wanninger? your Honors. Approximately 14 days ago I gave my Document Book I for Translation, So far I have not been able to receive a single copy in English. I only have copies in German. Therefore, it is not possible for me to introduce those documents, in particular, during the examination of the witness. I would appreciate it if this Tribunal would give me an opportunity of introducing those documents at a later date. Ana an additional fact is, that for the short period of time which was placed at my disposal I have not received all affidavits which I intend to introduce. This is due to the fact that the mail service is rather slow and a few affidavits are still to be expected from Austria.

I would therefore, appreciate it if the Tribunal would take notice of these matters as well.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal, of course, will allow you to present those affidavits and those documents when they are available and ready for presentation.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Then I would appreciate it if the Tribunal would order that the defendant Schulz be brought to the witness stand as a witness in his own behalf.

ERWIN SCHULZ; a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE SPAIGHT: Raise your right hand and repeat after me: will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath)

JUDGE SPAIGHT: You may be seated. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: full name and the details about you? November 1900 in Berlin. My last place of service was Salzburg in Austria, where I also lived. studies, and your professional background, witness? of the Koclnische Gymnasium in Berlin. I remained there without interruption until "Unter Prima" that is until I was 17. On the 11th of April 1918 -- I was 17 at that time With that I interrupted my studies. After having received my infantry basic training in the autumn of 1918 I was transferred to the Field Recruit Depot of the Fifth Guard Infantry Division in France.

Due to the Armistice of the 9th of November 1918 I was no longer used for front line assignment. I participated in the retreats from France towards Germany, and early in 1919 I was discharged from the Army as a simple private. served in the first World War did you receive any decorations?

A No, I didn't, In 1934 - that was the only time I received the general modal which was issued to all participants of the first World War. 1919, witness?

A I returned to my old school class. That is to say, I returned to the Cologne Gymnasium in Berlin and towards the end of 1919 I graduated. That was the examination for veterans of the first World War. finished that school?

A It was my intention to become a physician. However, I could not possibly carry out my plan to study medicine because my father did not have the means to pay for the expenses involved in such a study. My intent to carry out those particular studies in the medical training of the Army did not succeed due to the collapse of the German Army at the time and the dissolution of the German army. I would have chosen that way as might have been suggested to me to do because within the framework of that training the expenses would, of course, be borne by the Army. On one condition, however namely, that after I would have completed my examination I would have had to join the army for a period of eight years in the medical service.

As a child already, when he was very young, he became an orphan. When he was 18 he volunteerd into the Army and, to be exact, it was the same regiment in which I later served. My father did service there for approximately 12 years, and he thus gained access to a position as an official of the State in the civil service. My father first joined the Berlin police, but after a comparatively short time he was called in by the Berlin magistrate for his extraordinary services in the police. He was rather young at the time -- that was in 1902 -- when he was placed in charge of the administration in the Waterworks at Lichtenberg, which was part of the Berlin Hamburg Works and he remained there until he was released and received a pension due to retirement in 1924.

At the end he was administration inspector. My father explained low official.

My mother also did not have a fortune My mother was of four became a half-orphan.

Q. Now , witness, after having deviated from the normal now to our professional background.

What was the profession you had chosen under the circumstances?

A. As both of my parents had a very severe childhood behind them, and a very severe life altogether, they had make it their task to have me study.

Considering conditions in 1919, after the reasons of convenience, to choose the study of law.

Due to this a selection of a professional or other career later on.

That is examination.

At the end of the second term the first signs of in flation could be noticed easily.

My father lost all the money he

Q. Now, witness, I come now to your studies for the career as a police officer.

What did you do to get that job?

A. Before I answer that question, Mr. Counsel, may I state that I personally helped along with my own upkeep.

I worked as a simple clerk in the bookkeeping department of the Dresdner bank in Berlin.

In 1923 I went to Hamburg with the intention to continuing my studies of law as a student I was employed in an auditing department, but the inflation, however, had set in in the meantime, and the devaluation of money made it absolutely impossible for me to save up any money. Unfortunately at the time we had to live from hand to mouth in the worst sense of the saying. Through a friend of mine I found out that the Bremen Police were looking for police officers. Again led by the career of my father, I decided to apply there for a job, and particularly since I had all the necessary qualifications for such a job, and, at the same time, I hoped to have lots of time while I was there to continue studying in order to carry on from those two terms which I had mentioned before. I received my order of inscription after I had been there, and on the termination of my notice, the 5 November 1923, I joined the "Schutzpolizei", the protective police in Bremen.

Q. In what capacity did you do it. Were you in an official position, in a position of a civil servant, or were you bound by a contract?

A. I became apolice official , in other words, I became an official according to the German code for officials. After two years, approximately, I received a so-called citizenship of Bremen. I also received a document to prove that.

Q. What was your activity then, and your further training with the police, witness?

A. As I had the qualification of having served in the army I became a police sergeant. As police sergeant I had one simple advantage, which was to be able to jump some of the prescribed number of courses. However, as a police sergeant, according to directives prescribed by law, I had to go through some courses, and finally passes an examination before I became an officer; the same as applied to all the other officials. On 1 March 1924, I became a T/5. On 17 May 1924 I became a sergeant.

On 1 February 1925, after having completed the staff sergeant examination, I became a staff sergeant. On 12 April 1924, after I passed another examination, I became official code instructor which is about the same as staff sergeant. On 1 July 1925, I became a full sergeant, and the same year I passed my officer's examination. It was on 1 August 1926 that I became a Lieutenant, what we call in German Zugmachtmeister. During all these phases of my development I was put through ail the branches of the police departments, and trained in all those branches, I served in the police service as "commissarischer" lieutenant and I went through special guard duty with cur patrol, and so on, and I also worked with the traffic police for a while. Then after that there was a special training in the mounted police; then on the military motor patrols, and in the identification department.

Q. I understand that after you passed your examination on 1 august you became an officer. Why did it take so long, witness?

A. The reason for that is that at the time those members of the Army and the police were under the control of the Entente Commission; agencies which had been prescribed by the Entente Commission could not be circumvented in any way. As the Bremen police corps was comparatively young, and as no vacancy could be expected very soon, a special commission was granted by the Entente Committee to two comrades of mine and myself, and we finally became what I referred to before when speaking of the KommisarLieutenant, which stands for a lieutenant with a special commission. This commission became effective on 1 August 1926; a full commission officer's position could only start on 1 November 1927.

Q. Due to thatposition as a police lieutenant did your field of activity change in any way?

A. Generally speaking, there was hardly any change. I remained in the Wachbereitschaft, within the service, that is to say, I was working in the traffic division of the service, and also in the police service.

By special request I also went through the criminal police branch, and in order to increase my knowledge within the field of police work within that assignment. In 1928 I was transferred to the Police School in Bremen, and in the first year of my activity in the Police School in Bremen I took over the training of the use of weapons, and in the second year of my activity in the police school, I was assigned as teacher in police matters. They had special classes for police training of non-commissioned officers.

Q. During that period of time did you have a political activity, or anything of that kind?

A. No. I was not active in any political way. Political activities were discarded by me anyway, as I was at all times of the opinion that a civil servant is a servant of the State and not a servant of a party. I also always complied with the principle during the entire time of my activity. A political attitude also was discarded by me, because the commander of the Protective Police in Bremen, General Gaspari, had stated in hiw own free way that his officers werenot to join any party, nor were they to represent one of the parties in public in any way. After that I denounced any political activity. After that I was transferred to the Political Police in Bremen, that is, the end of 1930. The Political Police of Bremen was called the Central Police Office.

Q. You stated, witness, that you were not active in any way in political matters, nor did you have any political attitude, how was it, witness, that you were then transferred to the political police?

A. My transfer to the Political police took place because one of the special vacancies was created for a special expert, and I was theone who had been assigned to that duty, and I went down there. In any case, political points of view were entirely out of question for me when I was transferred there, and they could not possibly be considered because the Political Police had nothing whatsoever to do with politics directly; their activity waslimited to serving all political parties, regardless of what kind of parties they were.

It was decided after my transfer to the Central Police Office was made, as a matter of fact, that I was not to become a member of any party, nor was I permitted to be a member of any party.

Q. Who was the man in charge of the Political Police, and who was that police officer subordinate to?

A. The man in charge of that agency was Police Captain Kruse. The agency itself was in direct service with the Division of Police called the Senatory. (interruption).

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

THE WITNESS: The Police Senatory in Bremen is approximately the same as a Minister of interior, in other countries. It is a term used within the structure of the Police Division, and it is approximately the same as it is today. Bremen is a City-State, and with the official name of "Free Trade City of Bremen."
BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Can you tell us what political group this Police Captain belonged to?

A. then I joined the Political Police Senator Deichmann was the police officer. Senator Deichmann was a member of the SPD, the then political party of Germany. His successor became Senator von Sprecklesen. Idon't remember the exact date when this occurred, but according to my recollection he was a member of the German People's Party.

Herr Kaisen of Bremen was also a member of the Senate. He is the present Senator in Bremen. organized, what was the structure of the Political Police at the time? different than all other branches. As I stated before, the manager was a police captain. That police branch was subdivided into two sub-divisions, and they were assigned the Roman number I, and the Roman number II. Of these two sub-divisions, the sub-division Roman number I dealt with the entire activity of the political parties. Subdivision Roman II were the Intelligence Sub-division, what is to say, for matters in connection with high treason. That sub-division was staffed almost entirely with members of the Protective Police branch - the Schultzpelizei. The Criminal investigation Department had also been assigned to this department dealing with executive matters, to take care of interrogations and investigations.

Q How long were you a member of the Political Police. How long were you avice there? whatsoever from 1930 to 1939.

Q Now we come to 1933, witness. How did the incidents of that year influence your office and agency?

A First of all, there was no change whatsoever. The structure and at the same time the personnel was kept up in the same way. All the members and high officials of that agency remained with one exception. Not one single man belonged to the Party, but there was a change in the Police Senator's Office. Of course, the new Police Senator was a member of the NSDAP. The Police Senator was at the same time in charge of legal matters, and his official title was "Senator for Internal Matters and Justice." For a short period officers of the SA and officers were transferred to our office as commissionars for special employee relations.

These men were nothing but Party members without a professional background. However, the Police Senator later removed them all at once, because they were not very proficient with their jobs.

Q With this activity in 1933, did any change occur then?

A No. From an organizational point of view, there was no change at all. Even in the field of competencies, it all remained the same. After a few weeks, I assume it was approximately in June or July 1933, the agency simply assigned a new title to this branch, and it was called the Gestapo, Secret State Police, in Bremen; that happened with all the other offices in the Reich; that was its only title. 1933?

A I was still in Subdivision I. In November 1933 the man in charge of the agency, Captain Kruse, was transferred back to the Schutzpelizei, the Protective Police. A political point of view might have been responsible for that transfer. At the same dates the Political Police became detached from the Police Senator's supervision that is from its independent position it had and for a short while it was subordinate to the Department of Criminal Police. It was under the supervision of SS-Sturmbannfuehrer Criminal Police, however, changed quite soon, a short while after the Political Police again became independent as it had been before. Krebs took charge of the Political Police, and was at the end directly subordinate to the Police Senator. Again it was detached from the Criminal Police. The Criminal Police received a man especially for that purpose who was in charge of that Division. Krebs however, was not very reliable, and in 1934 he was entirely removed from the police service, or the police force. From that moment on I was made in charge of that agency. you became chief of Political Police in Bremen. The purpose for which I had all these questions answered in detail was to give this Tribunal a clear impression of the professional background of this defendant.

Actually at this present moment it would be necessary to speak about the development of the Police since 1933, from 1933 on. However, I believe I can consider these facts as well established now. However, I would like to point out that a decree in 1934 contained tasks of the Gestapo Secret State Police. Witness, what happened now to political opponents of the NSDAP, after the 30 January 1933, in Bremen?

concentration camp was established in the emmigration halls of the Nord-Deutscher Lloyed, which was a transport company, a liner company. At that time upon instigation by the Party and in coordination with the police senator, through the protection police or Schutzpolizei this camp was established. The man in charge of the main district was placed in charge of that matter. The establishment and guarding of that camp, however, was entrusted to Party-affiliated organizations. of the so-called concentration camp, which was also known as the Missler halls? camp, with the institution, nor did my chief have anything to do with it, and how far he was consulted in the establishment of that camp I cannot say.

Q Did you know anything about the conditions in that camp, Witness?

A I couldn't tell you from my own knowledge anything about conditions in that camp, as I never visited the camp. However, through a Party member who was working as a confidence man for me ever since 1933 I found out that a few attacks took place in that camp.

Q Did you do anything about it thereupon, Witness? senator through normal channels. The men immediately demanded an investigation, and if my recollection is correct, he wanted to have that investigation carried out by the public prosecutor in Bremen. That investigation proved the facts which instigated my investigation. The guards were immediately relieved of their duties and the police officer was immediately transferred as a punishment.

Q Did the camp as such remain in existence, Witness?

A The camp was dissolved towards the end of 1933. After Captain Kruse had left I suggested to the police senator the dissolution of the Camp myself, and I also asked him to use Christmas as an amnesty date for all the prisoners and to have them released.

My proposal was complied with, as I explicitly stated that I would assume responsibility for it, namely, that the public security would not be endangered in any way by the release of chase prisoners. questions. Witness, what was the reason that you joined the NSDAP?

A Two reasons were decisive for my having joined the NSDAP. I was thrown into the maelstrom by exactly the same enthusiasm which the entire German people had at the time, because I also at the time was of the conviction that after the years and years of sufferings, of fights, brothers against brothers, the National Socialist movement would indeed be in a good position to unite the German people and to help them lead the way. I also had an opportunity to observe with what idealism men and women of all circles and of all social levels, believing in being saved from the misery at the time, immediately volunteered for that organization and believed in that organization. This working for the Fatherland and for the freedom of all the citizens of that country, already, prior to 1933, had gained my sympathy. In spice of that at the time I had certain misgivings to join the Party, as the large number of converts provoked that criticism on the part of all veteran members of the Party; they called them opportunists and similar names. On the other hand, however, I recognized the necessity to actually show one's attitude openly for this new movement, and particularly in the special position which I was, I had to get my way through in the Party as a Party member who was on the same level as all the others. However, I would like to expressly point out that my inner enthusiasm was the main moving force for my having joined the Party, and it was only the second position that it was necessity that forced me to join the Party.

Q When did you actually join the Party, Witness? March, 1933, and on the 1st of May, 1933, I was accepted as a member of the Party.

Q Did you at any time join the other SS organization? say in 1935, and I received a corresponding rank. At the time I was a captain and I was kept as a captain in the SS, that is to say as an SS-Nauptsturmfuehrer.

Q I shall come back to that, Witness, at a later date. In this connection, as far as this correspondence of rank was concerned, after the membership in the NSDAP had finally come through, did your attitude and the official position which you held, change in any way? personal attitude. On the contrary, I was of the conviction that my inner attitude was in tune with the aims of the Party, and particularly since publications of all sorts pointed cut and gave proof of the reconstruction, of the tremendous reconstruction which was being carried out, and proved both the power as well as the purity of the Party.

Q However, you had seen, Witness, hadn't you, that after the seizure of the power certain excesses took place?

A Yes, indeed. I had seen those excesses. However, I considered these to be certain results which cannot be avoided in a revolution. Those things simply could not be avoided in this revolution which took place, and also it must be considered that prior to 1933 innumerable members of the Party, that is to say NSDAP members, were being beaten up by political opponents right in the middle of the street and two SA men were shot to death in Bremen. what your attitude was about the excesses which took place in the socalled concentration camp in Bremen. Now, let me interpolate a question. Did you yourself have anything to do with the arrest or with the placing of the commitment to the camp of those persons, did you have anything to do yourself with that? issioners for Special Tasks which had been assigned to those duties by the Party, and how far my former chief participated in this is beyond my knowledge.

However, one thing should be noted, that he couldn't possibly have done anything about it anyway at that time. Those were nothing but transition instances, and as I have stated before, the two commissioners who had been assigned to those duties were later on released by Police Senator Lauer after somebody convined him of the fact that they were absolutely not fit for that job. on the 1st of February, 1934, you became a police captain, is that correct?

Q Were you, at the same time, put in charge of that agency? With that I mean the Gestapo, the Secret State Police, in Bremen?

A No. When my chief, Captain Kruse, in 1933 returned to the normal service of the Schutzpolizei, I deputized for him, and I was placed in charge for only a short period of time. something for certain people who had been arrested. You told us about the dissolution of this Bremen concentration camp, and the results which it had, that all the prisoners were released, and that you took the responsibility for these people, you vouched for them. Can you tell us now in connection with this, your way of handling matters, can you give us any further examples?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If your Honor please, the Prosecution fails to see the relevancy of this line of questioning. I do think the witness has explained fully what he was doing and why he was doing it. I don't think another line of questioning can be started now. He has informed the Tribunal quite well what his point of view in this connection was.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you intend to establish by continuing this line of questioning?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, I would like to state that the defendant, who since 1923 was with the police as an expert, and who later on was transferred to the RSHA, to the Reich Security Main Office, was not a member of the Gestapo.

I would like to prove that he is in no way connected with any crimes that are being charged against this organization, or the Gestapo. That is the reason why I would like to prove a few preliminary things which occurred; how the defendant accepted it, how he helped political opponents, and also how he had them released from custody against rules and regulations. I consider it, therefore, important to deal with those points briefly in direct examination. This, for me, is one of the most Important points of evidence concerning the third count of the indictment. I would like to proceed here in a historical chronological manner, and when we come to 1941, I would like to speak about the assignment of the defendant and the Russian campaign.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If your Honor please, counsel for the defense is certainly aware of the fact that the defendant is charged under Count No. III only for having been a member of the criminal organization after 1939 and not between 1933 to 1939. Therefore, the Prosecution still fails to see the relevancy of this line of questioning.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, the answers to various questions will expplain why the defendant, since the first of September 1939, was still a member of that organization, namely, as I will prove later on, which is the fact that he remained in the same position as before, and he also acted against the assumption that he had anything to do with crimes here.

THE PRESIDENT: I presume that it is your intention to attempt to show that the defendant, via a logical development of affairs, arrived at the situation in which he found himself in 1941, is that your purpose?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes, yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: We will allow you to proceed a little bit further along that line, and then, Mr. Hochwald, you may renew your objection if you still think he is going too far.

(A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ULMER: (Attorney for the Defendant Six): Your Honor, may I ask that for tomorrow Saturday, the 18th, and Monday, the 20th, that Defendant Six be excused from attendance so that I can prepare with him his statement on the witness stand?

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Six will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow, Saturday, and Monday.

DR. ULMER: Thank you.

DR. STUEBINGER (For the Defendant Jost): Your Honor, as deputy for Dr. Alfred Schwarz, I wish to make an application that Defendant Jost be excused for tomorrow from participating so that his defense may be prepared. I also ask to consider that the prison personnel be informed about this so that the defendant will not be brought here by mistake as has happened repeatedly.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. I will instruct the Marshal to make note of the fact that the Defendant Jost is not to be brought to the court house tomorrow, and, for the purposes of the record, the Defendant Jost will be excused from attendance tomorrow. Naturally, it is understood that he will be ready on Monday to come into court.

DR. STUEBINGER: Your Honor, I shall inform Dr.Schwarz of this.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, the Prosecution has been informed -

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Mr. Horlick Hochwald.

MR. HORLICK Hochwald: If the Tribunal please, the Prosecution has been informed that after the case of the Defendant Schulz , the case of the Defendant Jost will be put on.

THE PRESIDENT: That is right.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: But unfortunately, we have no information as who is to take the stand and whose case is to be discussed after Jost's case. The Prosecution of course would like to know who will take the stand afterwards.

THE PRESIDENT: I thought that I made it clear, but now so that everyone will be informed, the order will be as follows: At the present time we are hearing the case of Schulz. Following Schulz, we will hear the case of Jost. Following Jost, we will hear the case of Six, and then proceed in accordance with the seating arrangement of the defendants. Rasch is being skipped for the present, until we learn something more about his physical condition.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

DR. DURCHHOLZ (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz): Your Honor, Defendant Schulz, while working with the police in Bremen and other cities had the opportunity to show his political attitude and his views as to the political occurrences, and to show his attitude toward his political opponents. It was my intention to let the witness describe a few cases here, however, having a few affidavits at my disposal, I shall submit these occurrences to the Tribunal in the form of affidavits and for that reason I limit myself to allowing the witness describe only a few incidents.

THE PRESIDENT: That is entirely agreeable to the Tribunal.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: The defendant repeatedly had the opportunity while working with the police to be in contact with Jews. Therefore, I consider it important that the defendant now may make some explanation on that point.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: towards the Jews?

Q If "Anti-Semitic" means hatred and destruction I have never been "Anti-Semitic." My so-called "Anti-Semitic" attitude only went to that extent as the immoral influence of the Jews which I saw in my native country, in policy, economics, and culture, which had great power here and which limited the development of our own forces and put them aside, and I wanted the influence of the Jews to be reduced to a normal level. The individual Jew meant exactly the same to me as any other follow human being. If a Jew was an honorable man, his race or religious opinions were of no interest to me. towards the Jewish progroms in 1938? November 1938, I was in Munich. I took the next train back to Bremen. Here I found that the Anti-Jewish demonstrations had been performed by the SA in Bremen. Later, I realized that compared to the occurrences in other cities the extent in Bremen was not quite so bad. In spite of this, a few cases of theft had occurred. Immediately I gave instructions to find out who had done it; and in agreement with the Criminal Police, I ordered the stolen items to be returned to their rightful owners. Here I succeeded in nearly all cases, especially in the one concerning the Jewish Jeweler Fischbein to whom I was able to return his entire property which had been stolen from him, although the SA strongly opposed to this measure. Two SA men who had killed an elderly Jewish couple were found by my agency. They were arrested and were reported; as the proceedings which recently took place in Bremen shows, this report was handed on to the Prosecution, where - according to investigation - the proceedings were stopped by order of higher authorities.

My views as to the events of the 8th of November 1938, I expressed during an official discussion where all members of my office took part, clearly and frankly describing them as to be unworthy of the German people. I clearly recollect two incidents where two young Jewesses owing to an affidavit given by their mothers before a lawyer were said to have originated illigimately. I had this certified officially, so giving them an opportunity to enter it in to the files of the register office. After that they were no longer considered full blooded Jews. I adopted this attitude, because I admired the sacrifice which mothers male here. when I now mention the name of Dr. Rosenack? Herr Dr. Rosenack would no doubt be in a position to testify. Professor Rosenack was an attorney in Bremen, he was the son of a Jewish Rabby. For many years, from 1934 until he emigrated to the States, I think in 1937 or 1938 I discussed all affairs of the Jewish population in Bremen with him. He negotiated with me as an equal partner. I esteemed him greatly as a human being, because of his bravery I was promoted lieutenant during World War I. He had been wounded and had the Iron Cross distinction. Before he emigrated to the States, he visited me and thanked me for my loyal attitude towards his follow Jews.

He asked me to look after the interests of the Jews after he had left. As long as I was in Bremen I kept my word to him. That was up to the year 1939. The address of Dr. Rosenack has not been determined definitely but I believe he is living in New York.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: As soon as I get the translations I shall submit a great number of affidavits by the witnesses mentioned here about these and other occurrences, and I shall introduce them to the Tribunal.

Q (By Dr. Durchholz) Witness, will you please tell the Tribunal when, and in what manner, you had official and private contact with the SS. formalities I was, according to my rank as captain, drafted into the SS as a Hauptsturmfuehrer. The document stating this fact is contained in my personal files, which without exception I handed out to the CIC in Salzburg in the year 1945. This original document as others concerning my promotions, unfortunately, I cannot submit here because when my personal files were returned to me in Nuernberg last year they had already been taken out, but I presume that these papers are in the files of some American agency.

Q Why were you promoted in the SS at that time? with my promotion as lieutenant of the police, or rather, as official, as it was done automatically with everyone throughout the Police Force. Bremen, Where did you go to after that? transferred from Bremen and was put in charge of the State police agency in Reichenberg. I still want to mention that before my transfer to Reichenberg I was transferred to Graz for about 8 weeks in spring of 1938, for about 6 weeks to Aussig, when our troops occupied the Sudeten area, and in to fall of 1938 for about 8 weeks to Olmuetz.

Q What activity did you have in Graz? What was your work there? of Austria, in March 1938. It was my job to take care of the security there and to set up a state police office in Graz according to Reich principles..

DR. DURCHHOLZ: May I point out to the High Tribunal, that in connection with the defendants activity in Graz where he particularly looked after political persecutees, I have a number of affidavits which I shall submit where, for example, the Archbishop there was released through him, as wall as a number of college professors and a man who was a Minister then an is a Minister now Were released through the defendant.

Q ( By Dr. Durchholz) Witness, after Graz you returned to Bremen? remained there until the fall of 1938. At that time I received the order to take over charge of an Einsatzkommando in the Sudeten area.

Q You just used this expression "Einsatzkommando." You were drafted to an Einsatzkommando when the Sudeten area was occupied, were you not? Could this Einsatzkommando perhaps be compared with the Einsatzkommandos of 1941 in Russia, which will be discussed later on? Or did it mean something different? same as the Einsatzkommando and the Einsatzgroups set up in Russia.

At that time there were already an Einsatzgruppe which conducted a Commando's marching into an area which it, and the Einsatzkommandos who were intended for certain areas. The only difference between them was that they were not strictly subordinated to the military commanders and, as it should be, they were merely meant for police tasks. In spite of this, even at that time the Einsatzkommandos were subordinate to military commanders during army operations to such an extent as the military commander also had the executive power. area, were you ordered back to Bremen - and then you again took part in the occupation of Czechoslovakia and joined the Einsatzkommando there?

A Yes. The development was the same again, when I arrived in Olmuetz nobody had been arrested yet. The Einsatzkommando merely were given a search book according to which certain persons who had proved to endanger the security had been arrested - persons who had exposed themselves. I still remember that most of them were formerly ethnic Germans who, when Hitler had taken over in 1933, had emigrated and developed an anti-German activity in Czechoslovakia. There were also a few Czech citizens among them -- for example, remember that in this list for arrests the police director for Olmuetz, Dr. Bender, had been intended to be arrested as well. Before I carried out this order, however, I got myself some information on how he did his duty, and in particular whether he worked against Germany, and about his attitude about racial Germans within his region. Since I did not hear anything to that effect, not even from racial Germans, and nobody was against this man, I did not carry out this order for arrest. I discussed the matter personally with Dr. Bender very frankly, and when he gave me his word of honor not to escape, I fulfilled his request to let him go to Prague in order to settle his private affairs there.

This actually happened, and Dr. Bender, as long as I was in Olmuetz, was completely a free man. proceed against Jews in particular?

A No. There was no such order, "Neither for my activity in Austria, nor in the Sudeten region, nor in Czechoslovakia - that is the later Protectorate - were there ordered any measures against the Jewish population. assignment? was given in the year 1941; I did not take part in any other assignment.

Q But these were actual peacetime assignments. After 1939 when assignments to Poland, France, Holland, Norway, and so forth, took place, did you take part in this, too? other countries during the war. As I said already, merely for the year 1941 I was in the Russian campaign. to the State police office in Reichenberg, and from here you were sent to Hamburg? started for you, did it not? Will you please state something briefly to that affect? sent to Hamburg as Commissar Inspector for the corps area district 10.

This is a new time, a new sphere in my work in the Security Police because after that time I left the executive. in the Security Police means? Ohlendorf already has given ample explanation on that point. The official tasks of an inspector were merely of an inspectional character. He had to supervise organisational and personnel matters, to visit local offices and to see if everything was conducted in the proper manner, and to straighten out differences between the Police and the Party, if necessary, to settle them, and finally, the entire Security police was to be represented by him. My main task I saw in looking after my men, giving great importance to their training, in order to avoid by all means that the standard became lower by the influence of the war.

Q Did the inspector have factual powers? Did he have any authority to give orders? orders. He had no executive power.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: About the witness activity in Hamburg I shall also submit affidavits by persons who worked together with him and whom he met there somehow else and whom he helped there.

Q (By Dr. Durchholz) Witness -

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel, I presume you are gathering those affidavits as you go along, and as quickly as you can. You are not waiting until the very end to get them?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: activity in Berlin in March of 1941. In what capacity?

Q That is the Group which was competent in the RSHA?

A Yes, in the RSHA. That is the Group which was competent for training and education, and, normally also, for the affairs of young members to join the staff, The latter question, of course, during the war was of hardly any importance, While being in charge of Group I-B at the same time I was put in charge of the Fuehrer School -- school for leaders. I simultaneously performed both tasks at the school house in Berlin/Charlottenburg. The schools were very important because they were competent for the passing of examinations opening careers of officials of intermediate and higher and leading positions. There were two official schools: one sub-leader school in Fuerstenberg, and a school for leaders in Charlottenburg. In Charlottenburg detectives were trained for the criminal police and for the State police, These schools were looked after by Group I-B, who conducted them. They were the ones responsible for the RSHA. The entire plan was worked out here, and also the material was put together and handed on to the schools. In that way it was achieved that the schools followed a definite plan for the individual classes. They had the same means for teaching, and all those participating in the training courses, therefore, always were instructed according to the same principles throughout. Owing to the development of the war the training for the agencies themselves was no longer of so high a standard because a number of the best experts, owing to the distribution, had been taken away from the schools or did not find sufficient time, to take care of this training.

For that reason it was made a duty of the schools, in spite -- or rather I should say, just because of the war, that the export training be more thorough and even more concentrated. In order to achieve this aim I avoided all that was unnecessary. We did not do as much sports, and only kept up so much as was necessary to keep our pupils physically fit. My military training was discontinued entirely. In the same way, My instruction courses, for the State police and, the criminal police who had been conducted separately until this, were to be joined together. The schooling of both departments was therefore conducted together in favor of the members of the state police who got a good training in criminology that way.

Q An intermediate question, please. Were these schools set up by the Nazis after 1933, or had they existed oven before? not founded by the Nazi state but the continuation and development of an institution already in existence.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Thank you, That is enough.

Q (By Dr. Durchholz) Were the teachers in these schools political functionaries and officials of the NSDAP? member of the NSDAP, was not necessary, and not required. The only thing that was required was the expert knowledge, the personal attitude and the professional skill. Most of the teachers were members of the criminal police because they had the best expert training.

Q The last question about these schools for leaders? How long did such a training course take?

war, took 9 months,

Q You were a commander of this school for leaders, then? And after that, you were assigned to go to Russia?

Q Now I come to your assignment in Russia. How, and when, did you receive the order for your assignment in Russia in 1941? in charge of the school of leaders and Group leader of I B. At the time I was SS-Standartenfuehrer and colonel in the police. About May of 1941 the Chief of Office I, Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach, gave me the order that the school should be prepared to train people for future members for the executive staff. He based this measure on the fact that there were too few leaders. This shortage came about because meanwhile France had been occupied, and so had Poland and Belgium. Soon after that the order came that the members of this training course should be transferred to Praetsch where, at the time, the school for sub-leaders of the Security Police was still in existence. Approximately at the same time, only a few days later, did I receive the order according to which I was to be put in charge of an Einsatzkommando myself. The aim for the Einsatzkommando was not made known at the time. I remember distinctly that it was often assumed that we were going to attack England. gathered in Praetsch of all places? because there a school was available, and also in the surroundings there were suitable rooms -- for example, inns and other localities.

The school building alone was not sufficient. Apart from settling people in Praetsch, people were also accomodated in the surroundings in Dueben and Schmiedeberg.

Q What happened in Praetsch? repeatedly, because at the time I was just moving from Hamburg to Berlin. For that reason I am not able to give a detailed report about the activities in Praetsch.

that? I lived in a room of a school for leaders, while my apartment was still in Karlstrasse, in Hamburg. My wife was there still, and about the middle of May 1941, the house and my apartment at Hamburg were bombed, or, rather a bomb fell near on the house opposite, and, therefore, my house was badly damaged. For that reason it was of great importance to me to get my wife away from there, also because of the repeated raids. and to take her to Berlin with me. When the General of the Police, whose name was Keller, was transferred, I was able to take over his apartment in Berlin - Wilmersdorf. Thus, by this lucky chance I was able to carry out my removal from Hamburg to Berlin, and this happened just at that time when I had been ordered to Pretsch. With approval of the Chief of Personnel I was released from being billeted in Pretsch. A decisive faster there also was the fact that I was still training for my new task, which was more important than staying in Pretsch inactive, even if only temporary. I was ready to be called away at any time, of course, and I could be at the collection point within a few hours. My property from Hamburg arrived in Berlin at the beginning of July and about that time I was fully occupeid in looking for my apartment.

Q And when were you actually in Pretsch? the forces, and I had to take part in this inspection. About two days before that I travelled there for that reason, and used that same opportunity to greet the men assigned to me, and to inspect their services.

Q What kind of service was that?

A There was a military training service. Most of the members of the Security Police needed a refresher course. Curing these days training was being conducted for the Armament Service; also secret maneuvers were carried out in order to get the trainees used to the new methods in the maneuvers, as they were no longer used to these. I also remember that the transfer of forces in the area under secrecy was being studied.

The training was done by members of the Waffen--SS, which was also assigned to help there. The second day was completely taken up by inspecting the territory and fixing the dates. return to Berlin?

A I returned to Berlin after the inspection. I had to hurry up now to complete the setup of my apartment, because one could expect to be moved any moment. was made known. You told me that this Decree was not known to you before your assignment, is that correct?

A Yes, that is correct. I only heard about the so-called Streckenbach Decree when Herr Wartenberg on Good Friday of this year interrogated me for the first time. was it not? Can you now explain why you did not hear of this speech of Streckenbach and this Fuehrer Decree? in Pretsch all the time. point? Schmiedelberg, when it was made known on the radios that the German Wehrmacht had crossed the Russian borders. Sofar as I remember that was on a Sunday. That day remained in my memory because on that day for the first time I had my apartment set up completely, and had breakfast with my wife there, when the news was given on the radio. I, therefore, left for Schmiedeberg very soon. That was as far as I remember on 21 June 1941. The march from the collection point took palce on 23 June 1941.

Q How did you know of your commitment?

Shortly before the inspection in Pretsch in the Prinz Albrech Palace in Berlin, this had taken place, the speech was held there under the auspices of the whole Einsatzgruppen Chiefs and the Einsatzgruppen leaders, who were there. However, I am not able to say that they all took part.

Q And what did Heydrich say during this meeting? ly pointed out that the fight which would soon take place would be the hardest and most bitter the German people had ever gone through. In his inspections, in his speech, and in his attitude, he did not leave any doubt about the seriousness of the situation. He pointed out and stated that in the fight to come not only the people were fighting against another people, but for the first time ideology was fighting against another ideology. He also informed us about the huge territory in Russia, and the difficulties of the fighting in this territory. He explained that Bolshevism would not stop from using every means of fighting, as Lenin had already written; emphasizing there in particular the part the partisans were to play, which Lenin and others had written about, and this could not be misunderstood. That every one should be sure to understand that in this fight Jews would definitely take their part, and that in this fight everything was set at stake, and the one side which gave in would be the one to be overcome. For that reason all measures had to be taken against the Jews in particular The experience in Poland had shown this. Ho pointed out that the Security Police in the rear of the Army territory would be exposed to the attacks of the partisans. For that reason he decided to train them in the use of their weapons, and how to be protected by such weapons of the Police and the Waffen-SS. He also explained the subordination system to the Wehrmacht. These were the main points that Heydrich made, sofar as I remember, but I want to emphasize particularly that any words about extermination or final solution were never mentionedhere. Also the socalled Commissar Orders were not mentioned during this discussion, either.

THE PRESIDENT: I assume we are about to take up another phase of the situation, and in view of the fact this might be a good place to recess for the day. The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock. Please, remember, at nine o'clock, and will be in session until twelve o'clock, and that will finish the session for tomorrow.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is in recess until nine-thirty hours tomorrow.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 18 October 1947, 0930 hours) of America; against Otto Ohlendorf, et al,

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A. Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. DURCHHOLZ (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz): I would like to continue with the direct examination of the witness.

DR. LUMMERT (Attorney for the Defendant Blume): Your Honor, I would like the Defendant Blume to be excused from this morning's session because I would like to prepare his defense with him. Schulz on the witness stand on Monday. I have a few questions to ask him. The reason that I am mentioning this is in case his examination will be finished today.

THE PRESIDENT: If his examination is not finished today, then, of course, you may examine him on Monday, but if his examination should be finished an appreciable period of time prior to the hour of adjournment, we would ask you to do the cross-examination at once, because otherwise, there would be that interval which would not be very satisfactory.

I might ask, Doctor -- How do you pronounce your name? Durchholz?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: -- Dr. Durchholz if he anticipates that he will have finished with the examination by noon.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I don't think that I will finish completely today, THE PRESIDENT: I see. In which event, of course, you may examine on Monday.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Further, Defendant Blume will be excused from attendance in court today and will he escorted from the courtroom.

(The Defendant Blume was excused.)

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ (Attorney for Defendant Schulz):

Q.- Witness, yesterday we were interrupted at a point when you were telling us that you heard a speech by Heydrich in Berlin, in which he spoke about the coming campaign in Russia, in which he did not mention execution, extermination orders or the so-called Commissar order. As I saw from the documents, nevertheless, Heydrich mentioned the Russian campaign more than once. What do you have to say about this?

A.- I only know of his one speech. If any other speeches were supposed to have been held at Pretsch, I can only say that I do not know anything about it, because apart from those days I have mentioned, I wasn't there.

Q.- Is it possible that such a speech is not in your memory any more?

A.- I consider that completely out of the question for an event of such importance I could not have forgotten. Furthermore, my statements and the documents submitted here will show that I could have no knowledge about the order which had been handed down by Streckenbach.

Q.- Can you now tell me, please, how things developed in Pretsch?

A.- The exactness of the dates which I am now going to give you, I cannot absolutely guarantee, since it is only my memory which I have at my disposal. I have no documents. Pretsch and Schmiedeberg started; they were fully motorized. The group to which I was assigned consisted of the so-called "Advance Commandos" 4a and 4b, the Kommando 5, which I was to command, and Kommando 6. The leader of the group was Brigadier General of Police Rasch.

First of all, we went as far as Liegnitz. On the next day we continued to Gleizitz, where we remained for three days, as I remember. Here the Kommandos of the Protective Police joined us. From Gleiwitz, we continued on to Cracow, where we spent one night. On the next morning we continued to Dewitsa. Hwer we garrisoned in the troop quarters. On the 1st of July, about, we reached Radymno at the then new Russian frontier. On the following morning we continued to Lemberg. We reached Lemberg as far as I remember about three days after it was taken. As far as I recall, it must have been about the 2nd of July. There was a large group of people in front of this building, mostly weeping and wailing women. As we found out later on, this was the prison in which their relatives who had been killed were. At the headquarters I found out where I was to be accommodated. It was the building in which the Russian NKWD had been previously quartered. Before that it had been an administration building of the Lemberg Electrical Works. had left, a very great number of Lemberg citizens, Ukrainian and Polish inhabitants of other towns and villages had been killed in this prison and in other prisons. Furthermore, there were many corpses of German men and officers, among them many Air Corps officers, and many of them were found mutilated. There was a great bitterness and excitement among the Lemberg population against the Jewish sector of the population.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Concerning these incidents in Lemberg, Your Honor, which took place before the German troops, marched into Lemberg, I would like to refer to one of the Prosecution's documents, which I have already seen and read in its photostatic copy, but which has not yet been submitted as a Prosecution Exhibit. This is Document NO-2651. That is an Operational Report of the 31st of July, 1941.

I would like to reserve the right to submit this document as my own later on. Lemberg are briefly mentioned in Prosecution Exhibit 116 in Document Book III-B. This is Document No. NO-4537, on page 32 of the German text, to which I am now referring.

Q. (By Dr. Durchholz): Witness, please continue.

Mr. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, the document quoted by Dr. Durchholz was not offered by the prosecution, but, of course, there is no objection on the part of the prosecution that it is offered by Dr. Durchholz and we will furnish him, if he wants it, with a photostatic copy of the document.

Dr. Durchholz has received it.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you intend to introduce that now?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: No, I would like to submit it later with my document book. I have not had it translated, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A.- On the next day Dr. Rasch informed us to the effect that the killed people in Lemberg amounted to about 5,000. It has been determined without any doubt that the arrests and killings had taken place under the leadership of Jewish functionaries and with the participation of the Jewish inhabitants of Lemberg. That was the reason why there was such an excitement against the Jewish population on the part of the Lemberg citizens.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you mean by "Jewish Functionaries"?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, these were Russian Communist Functionaries of Jewish faith.

THE PRESIDENT: They were office holders of the Soviet nation who happened to be of the Jewish race?

THE WITNESS: Allegedly, yes.

A. (Continued) There was also great excitment among the German troops because of members of the Wehrmacht, who had been killed. The Army commander, in agreement with the Lemberg authorities, had decided to set up a militia immediately.

THE PRESIDENT: What was the date of these happenings?

THE WITNESS: My arrival in Lemberg was about the 2d of July, and I said -

THE PRESIDENT: Year.

THE WITNESS: 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

A. (Continued) And Dr. Rasch told us what had taken place. I think I just said that. On the following day, that is the 3d of July, 1941....

THE PRESIDENT: What were the Russians doing there at that time?

THE WITNESS: At our time they were no longer there.

DR. DURCHHOLD: Your Honor, I think I can clarify this doubt. On the occasion of the Polish Campaign, Lemberg, which was then Polish, had been conquered by the German troops and had been occupied by them. Then Germany and Russian concluded an agreement, according to which Lemberg was to go over to Russia. Therefore, in 1941, Lemberg was occupied for the second time by the Germans. Lemberg had then been Russian.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, but by July 3, you had overrun Lemberg, had you not?

DR. DURCHHOLD: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: The German troops had got beyond Lemberg?

DR. DURCHHOLD: In July 1941, the German troops had taken Lemberg from the Russians.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but I understood you to say that these excesses occurred on July 3.

DR. DURCHHOLD: No.

THE WITNESS: No.

DR. DURCHHOLD: No, it was before the Russian troops left the city. From the document which I shall submit later, you will see that these excesses were committed by the Russians against the Lemberg population before the Germans marched in, about the 25th and the 26th of June, 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: That was prior to Schulz's appearance in Lemberg?

DR. DURCHHOLD: Schulz came to Lemberg only after the German troops had taken Lemberg.

THE PRESIDENT: After the excesses had occurred?

DR. DURCHHOLD: Yes, after the excesses. He saw the results of these excesses with his comrades,

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A. (Continued) The militia had orders to arrest the Jewish population of Lemberg and also those who were suspected of having participated in these killings. May I add here, Your Honor, that this is a description by Dr. Rasch, which he himself got from the German Army commander of Lemberg. localities. I must add here that a larger unit of the Security Police of Cracow from the Government General had had arrived there and was also informed of these facts. I don't know what missions were given to what units. undertook to carry out the arrests. As far as I was informed, they were carried out as ordered, namely, without using any violence. Non-Jews were supposed to have been COURT II-A CASE IX among these too, and these were also designated as perpetrators or participants.

able to observe that interrogations were carried on uninterruptedly and that part of the RSDS was isolated from another part. As far as I remember, Dr. Rasch made known on the following day that a Fuehrer order had been given, according to which the guilty ones and the participants in these murders, which were against International Law, were to be executed in reprisal and if I remember correctly, in connection with this decree the Army command order was also made known, according to which the political Commissars and Functionaries were to be executed.

Q. Is this a basic order?

A. Yes.

Q. Please give me the exact wording of this order.

A. The order read out by Dr. Rasch was to the following effect: First of all, it went into the position of the Security Police, namely, the security of the operational area was its main position, and the security of the rear Army area. Then it continued about like this: the Fuehrer has ordered in the interest of the combatting troops that all Commissars and all Communist, Functionaries, Spies, agents, saboteurs, and looters be shot immediately, since they operate in the rear of the combat troops and represent a deadly danger. This order was top secret.

Q. Weren't there any details given about this?

A. Yes, Dr. Rasch gave the following explanations: First, the Functionaries set up by the Communist Party, Spies, agents, and saboteurs are chosen fanatics, who would use any means at their disposal to undermine order and to destroy the combat morale of the troops.

The persons used by the Communist party are to be estimated more highly in their value to the party than the members of the Nazi party. The functionaries of the Communist party can only have been given their mission because they have already proved their worth and herewith they are good risks for the Party. They are bound to their mission with their lives because in case of betrayal, or in case of treason, they immediately have to pay with their lives. Second, we have to be especially careful about the Jews. They have entered into an embittered fight. The Jews also are carriers of destructive tendencies in the rear of combat troops. Third, the Russian has announced before all the world that he does not consider himself bound by any international law. And his measures are performed accordingly

- and our measures, too, have to be performed accordingly. This was the statement which Dr. Rasch made.

Q How did you accept this order?

A I was under the impression of the Lemberg incidents. Nevertheless, I reacted against this order since I considered it as incorrect; politically incorrect, also. I had serious misgivings, but I knew that in my own disposition I was inclined toward, kindness and I ascribed this conflict to my nature. From the conduct of the enemy as it had been determned, I believed that I had to force myself to a greater harshness, but I hardly succeeded. My inner feelings were against the measures which had been ordered. But when I thought it over conscientiously, and when I left out all feeling, I had to determine that law, and feeling, had nothing to do with each other, I had seen the thousands of murdered people and the many mutilated corpses and I had smelt the odor which lay heavily over Lemberg, and I saw the many weeping men, women and children who were looking for their relatives among the corpses. We always saw people in the street who kept carrying their dead home in imporvised coffins. The soldiers were terrified by the mutilated corpses of their comrades. Therefore, I could see no wrong in the reprisals ordered by the Fuehrer, and in the so-called Commissar Order -- even though I justified this myself, and even though I considered these necessary measures as incorrect.

But I did decide, - and I acted according to it -- to give it my own limits by asking that the guilt be proven in order to exclude any wilfulness. like to go into your disposition -- your opinion about these orderslater. Now please describe the events in Russia - without your personal opinion.

A On the following day the executions took place. They were not in the hands of Einsatzkommando 5. I don't know to what extent the agency of the General Government was used for this. The order for the Lemberg executions was given by Dr. Rasch, and the execution was ordered by him. I personally, on the morning of that day, went into town. When I returned about noon I was informed that I had already been looked for. Einsatzkommando 5 had received orders to continue the executions that afternoon. I immediately reported to the building of the Group Staff in order to speak to Dr. Rasch. His Chief of Staff told me that he was not there. I therefore asked the Chief of Staff to revoke; the order issued to Einsatzkommando 5 since neither I nor the members of my Commando were prepared for such a task. The Chief of Staff answered me that Dr. Rasch had expressly ordered that the Einsatzkommando 5 was to carry out these executions since the other commander was to be relieved. A further conversation was useless. I assembled my men and spoke with them about this order. I told them that this is a reprisal measure ordered by the Fuehrer. I pointed out to the great difficulty of this deed. I demanded that everyone perform it with seriousness and with dignity. I told the officers in the presence of the troops that they were to observe this order carefully and remove anyone, and report about it to me, who would violate this dignity in any manner. I recognized in the serious demeanor of my men how terribly difficult it was for them to execute this order. I gave directives to start immediately in order to use the short time available and give my men their orders.

Every man was to be assigned his place exactly, so that the carrying out of the executions would proceed exactly, and without any loss of time for the victims. At the place, I tell my men once more about the reason for these executions and I pointed out especially that the investigations which had been conducted had determined definitely the crime or the participation in the crimes on the part of the victims in the killings which had taken place in Lemberg.

The bringing in of the voctims was done by another Commando. The burying was done by the Lemberg militia under the supervision of this Commando, Whether any members of the General Government agencies were used here, I don't know. After I had personally convinced myself that a doctor was also present and that everything was carried out conscientiously, I went back to town after the first execution since I already had set down a deadline for our continues march. According to what I remember, five executions were carried out on that day, each time involving about 18 people. First I went to my quarters in order to get my papers. quarters. field where the prisoners had been collected. I went to the window where I saw that some Army unit had gone to this field and was chasing the prisoners around and was mistreating them. Without hesitation I went to the quarters of Rasch in order to inform him of what I saw and in order to ask him to intervene immediately. But he had not yet returned. When I reproached the Chief of Staff for not interfering he told me that it was none of my business to intervene here if the soldiers gave vent to their wrath. In the interest of these tortured people I could no longer carry out any negotiations. I ran to this field and saw two majors of the Army. I asked them to stop this shameless demonstration immediately. Since I was very excited one of them immediately pulled out a whistle and put a stop to this demonstration.

I had the back gate of the field opened and let all of the prisoners out. I also freed other people who had been destined for execution. In about two minutes the whole field was empty. I could no longer get get hold of either of the two majors -- or the units. They had disappeared just as quickly. I immediately ordered a driver to drive me to the place of execution and to inform them that the executions were finished. There were at least 2,000 prisoners in that field. I was at first terrified myself when I saw this empty field in front of me for I feared that I had dons more in my excitement than I could account for, In the evening of the same day Criminal Commissar, Dr. Krieger looked me up and told me follows: "I warn you, people are saying bad things about you because you concern yourself with matters which are none of your business." I told him that I shall answer for that myself, It is unheard of that Hoffmann did not intervene even though these were prisoners who were under the protection and guard of the Security Police. About one hour after this conversation I reported to Rasch in order to tell him about what had happened. He cut me off with the words that he had already been informed. I was very much surprised that nothing further had happened. On this occasion I received the approval to advance the next day. BY THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. were released from this collecting field; one part was to be destined for execution, I knew that; what was to be done with the other prisoners, I don't know.

Q What was the date of this happening?

Q You arrived on July 2nd?

A We arrived around the 2nd of July in Lemberg. On the 3d of July, as I have already said, the order of Dr. Rasch took place and now I cannot exactly guaranted the date - it could have been the 4th or 5th of July when these events took place.

by Dr. Rasch and the executions?

Q One day. And wit hin that time the investigations were made as to those responsible for the previous mas s acre?

AAnother Einsatzkommando was responsible for this. They conducted investigations for about two days, and as I have already said, in cooperation with the Lemberg authorities, with the militia, and I could see -- myself did not participate -- tha t interrogations were carried on continuously, and that after these interrogations of the entire number of prisoners on th is field poeple were taken out continuously. HOW many these were, I don't know. I assume that it amounted to about 300 persons.

Q 300 persons that did what? prisoners on this field.

Q 300 persons sched uled for execution?

Q You said 300 people were taken out... but you didn't say why they were taken out. the larger number, and those were the one s who were destined for the executions. That was in the process of carrying out reprisals.

Q Were there any women among them?

utions. That was in the process of carrying out reprisals.

Q Were there any women among them?

A No, not one singl e woman. Only men. place on the 4th, and you have indicated that one day intervened -- what ever the dates were -- be tween the order and the execution, we must conclude that all the inv estigations which were made were made within the period of 24 hours. Is that right?

A. No, your honor. I think it is a matter of 48 hours. I can be mistaken here. I cannot guarantee it exactly. I would remember better if I had participated in the investigations myself. I only cod d give a description of the events, the way I saw them, because I lived in the same building. How these investigations were actually conducted, I don't know, I only point to the fact that a large number of men were executed by another Einsatzkommando.

Q Which one was that, do you know?

Q No, which Einsatzkommando was it?

Q Six?

AAnd parts of units from the General Government. There was a larger Commando which had arrived from the General Government which was already stationed in Lemberg. These units from the General Government followed immediately because they had already been ordered from Berlin, that the old Polish territory which had become Russian, was now to be reoccupied because this territory was to be incorporated into the General Government also. your arrival?

AAS perpetrators?

Q No, no, no; as victims. You say that the Russians had killed 5,000 -- or whatever the number was. Who were the victims -- they were Poles, weren't they?

A They were Ukrainians and Ploles; men and women -- whether there were any Germans among them, I don't know. There were very many German soldiers and men; they were also found killed.

Q German soldiers?

Q Wasn't that Russian territory at the time?

A Yes; it was Russian territory but, your Honor, we were two or three days behind the combat troops, and here it was probably a ma tter of German armed units which had previously been taken prisoners.

Above all, probably air Force officers who had been taken prisoners. Above all, probably Air Force officers who had been shot down.

THE PRESIDENT: proceed,

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I shall Come back to this incident later and I shall submit a document, and I shall bring in an eye witness who can give a description of this and who will say that this is a matter of a large number of German prisoners who were also killed at that time. BY DR. DUHCHHOLZ: lives of those who had been destined for execution?

A Whether that is true for all of these, I don't know because I don't remember what was to happen with these people. I can only confirm it for a part of these people. In any case, I have spared them of any tortures. else you saw as you continued to advance.

not guarantee the dates, we left Lemberg, Since the reads were clodded, we advanced very slowly, and we had to spend the night at Brody. The following day we continued to Dubnew. Here we remained almost for one week. Since the front had come to a standstill in Dubnew similar events had taken place as already had taken place in Lemberg. In the Dubnew prisons there were several hundred people, Ukranians for the most part; women and men who had been killed, and the population again told us that the executions had been carried out by Jewish Functionaries. A priest and a woman who had hidden themselves among the corpses, and who had been saved, confirmed these statements.

THE PRESIDENT: Just for the purpose of clarification, because this phrase is apparently used frequently, the phrase "Jewish Functionaries", let me ask if we are to understand by that phrase you mean officials of the Soviet Government who were of the Jewish Race?

THE WITNESS: Not officials in every case, Your Honor, but any kind of functionaries of the Communist Party who were of the Jewish Faith.

THE PRESIDENT: Members of the Communist Party holding aposition of some responsibility who also were of the Jewish Faith, is that the definition?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor. A priest and a woman who had hidden themselves among the corpses, and who had been saved, confirmed these statements. The woman was in the hospital with cuts in the throat from a bayonet; another woman about twenty-four years old could not be heard since she had become insane. The leadership over these executions in the Dubnew prison, according to the statements by these witnesses, was supposed to have been held by the commandant, allegedly, with his daughter: At that time his name was determined, but I can not remember it now. The prisoners had been shot with pistols through the holes in the door. When they had been shot soldiers appeared and stabbed the executed people with their bayonets.

THE PRESIDENT: When you say soldiers, please indicate the nationality of the soldiers?

THE WITNESS: They were Russian soldiers. On this occasion the Priest and the above woman had hidden among the corpses, and the woman received those bayonet wounds in her throat. I don't believe I am telling an untruth if I mention that my Kommando did not carry out any executions in Dubnow, since no more guilty persons were found, or were denounced by the population.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand you to say that this woman told her story about what had happened?

THE PRESIDENT: She had received a bayonet thrust in the throat?

A Yes she had a bayonet wound in the neck. I saw her myself. The cut went through there (indicating side of neck) on the side of the throat.

THE PRESIDENT: It did not effect her speaking ability?

A No, Your Honor, it did not. The people who had participated in this had fled, and the Jewish inhabitants who had remained were not guilty. At Dudnow I had to detail a detachment to another place. There the army command of the 6th Army was located, about the day of the advance from Dubnow, a criminal commissar from the General Government arrived and took over an area as belonging to the General Government. On 13th of July I received the order to proceed to Shitemir. We started from Dubnew about the 14th of July. We were stopped on the way as the Kommando suffered losses during an air attack, or during air attacks. The Russian army had broken through, and a continued advance to Shitemir was not possible. Dr. Rasch, who was in Svier with his staff gave me orders to proceed to Shepetawka, which was about fifty kilome ters south of Svier. Here the forces had to be committed for their own safety exclusively, because parts of cut off Russian forces, were active in the forests around Shepetewka, and they were active continually in small scale attacks. Only on 22 July was I able to continue and my dest ination was Berditschew, which I reached around the 23 July. I was quartered in barracks near the headquarters of Rundstedt's army Group, two detachments were sheltered in barracks, as these were closer to the center of the town.

I remained in Berditschew about four weeks, since the front had become stabilized at Kiev. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: now I consider it fitting if you now briefly describe the activity of your Einsatzkommando -- what was the mission of your Einsatzkommando altogether?

A The field of activity was very extensive. The job was made more difficult because we arrived at even a more severe iron curtain than exists even today. Everything was new to us, and had no comparison with previous standards. The area, the people, the language, already brought about great difficulties. The measures of the opponent in Lemberg and in Dubnew, the continuous actions of individual fighters, by combat groups, and by individual people armed to the teeth who had been hidden in the woods, who were often and frequently in possission of empty artillery guns and anti- tank guns, communication troops, and sabotage corps, all these made things very very difficult, but the most difficult were the innumeralbe very welltrained and unbelievably well sabotaged communication centers in the rear of our Army areas. These with incredible cleverness interfered with our Army, with the administrative agency of our army, and with the military units used by the Army. Even though I was hardly four weeks in Russia, activity by infiltration of these forces already had assumed a dangerous preparation.

could not even be controlled or examined or taken care of. These infiltrated forces had their direct communications to cutoff troop units, and partisan units. Thus for them, they communicated intelligence about the Wehrmacht units, and about their strength. Sabotage acts of Army installations took place day and night continually. Within the stress of prisoners of war who clodded up the roads there were likewise important intelligence men of the other side. Hardly a night passed without people being hidden in the dense forests with communication missions, and these people amounted to a great detail of work and great patience. Added to this was the danger in which each unit found itself. The investigation of the auxiliary toops used by the Army, these Were interpreters, health officers, kitchen personnel; the investigation of these people took up a great amount of time and patience, since training had to be naturally laboriously done by interpreters, and it must be considered here that in this area the amount of denunciation was very great, but even among these people who denounced them, there were agents who had the intentions and also succeeded in their intentions to make everything unsafe and suspicious of each other. Of greatest importance for the Army leaders were the news of intelligence about Russian war efforts, and the Russian ammunition plants, and the armaments, since nothing was known about this. When the Armies first opposed each other, it was only too clearly to be seen that Russia in its war on Finland had, by sacrificing its reputation in world opinion, camouflaged its war potentiality. The first intelligence reports from the Ural Mountains made the Army agencie really, or sit-up. These intelligence activities had to be carried on by nature of the circumstances. Furthermore, the COURT II-A CASE IX Kommandos had to look for their own food, for their own maintenance, for the equipment, the vehicles had to be overhauled, and all of that went with it.

Then the daily reports came in from the population, reports about munition dumps, about agents. Here it was difficult to spot all of these reports. Furthermore, the militia kommandos had to be investigated, for we had found out that here also forces of the Russian Intelligence Service had been infiltrated. Since other organizations were looking, reports had to be received and passed on which concerned this, especially with regard to agriculture, the harvest was ready to be collected, but there were no tractors, no harvesting machines, not even sickles and tines. We stood there completely empty handed, The Security Police also had to bother their heads about this, and had to inform and to mobilize the competent authorities. In addition there were many other details which are not worth mentioning.

Q. Report now what happened after that?

A. After about two weeks' stay in Berditschew, the kommando leaders were ordered to report to Shitemir, where the staff of Dr. Rasch was quartered. Here Dr Rasch informed us that Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln had been there, and had reported that the Reich Fuehrer-SS had ordered to take which measures against the Jews. It had been determined without doubt that the Russian side had ordered to have the SS members and Party members shot. As soon as such measures were being taken on the Russian side, they would also have to be taken on our side. All suspected Jews were, therefore, to be shot, Consideration was to be given only where they Were indispensible as workers. Women and children were to be shot also in order not to have any avengers remain. We were horrified, and COURT II-A, CASE IX raised objection, but they were not with a remark that an order which was given had to be obeyed.

I raised the question whether the RSHA was informed of this, and whether it represented the same opinion. Dr. Rasch answered me that was, of course, the case since the Higher-SS and Police Leader Jeckelm had passed on the order of the Reichfuehrer, this order was binding on everybody, regardless. Here for the first time we saw the dictorial power of the Higher-SS and Police Leader.

THE PRESIDENT: What date was that so we may observe the chronology of events?

THE WITNESS: That must have been about the beginning of the August, the first third of August, If I had to give a date I would say between the 10th and 12th of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you,

THE WITNESS: It was Certainly not later than that,

THE PRESIDENT: Very well,

THE WITNESS: I myself was firmly convinced at the time that such a development was not done with the agreement of Heydrich or the RSHA, for I never had heard of anything of this kind, nor had experienced it, and, I would like to add here once more, that this opinion had certainly existed in myself, because I had Heard of this order for the first time, since I did not know about the Streckenbach order, due to my absence from Protsch at the time it was given. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. What did you do as a result of this order. Please limit yourself to facts only?

A. Having returned to Berditschew, I discussed these incidents with my internalls among my leaders. I had great confidence in them. I could not very well tell them everything which depressed me, since a thoughtless word would have brought about more harm than good, but I thought COURT II-A CASE IX that I could tell from their conduct that they agreed with me.

After the order had been given, and since the work performed by Jews was of a decisive importance, I told them to see to it above all that the Jewish population be used for work exclusively. I gave them a way out in the interest of my own people, as well as in the interest of the victims, which was to give a misleading report. I had misgivings about this order whether such a measure was fitting or not, but I believe that a misleading report might excuse such a motive. In their reports the detachment commanders were to report about as follows: In locality "X" there were three-hundred Jews. Nov only 280 more who are indispensible as laborers. Since many Jews had fled from those villages, one could merely use these, perhaps, who had fled among these which no longer could be used for work, and, thus we were not telling the untruth, as I did not want to have any lies in my reports, and I told these officers that in my opinion, the order which had now been given, could not possibly have the approval of the RSHA, and I started to wonder how to make out these reports. The Einsatzkommando did have signaling equipment, but it could only wire via the Einsatzgruppe itself, This was therefore not possible. I intended to write a letter to Streckenbach, but I also expressed my worry that the route by APO would be too long.

who needed a furlough urgently. I have forgotten the name of therman. He was a reserve soldier in the Waffen-SS. I know that he was a farmer and that he owns a farm in Schleswig-Holstein. He was destribed to no as reliable. Despite the restriction on furloughs he did receive a furlough, and he received the mission to travel by way of Berlin on his furlough and personally deliver ft letter to Streckenbach. In this letter I asked that Streckenbach might recall me to Berlin for any reason whatsoever as I had to report to him about matters which I could only report orally. The official way was not possible. Since he knew me he would be convinced that I would express such a request only for very urgent reasons which I had never expressed before. The men was sent on his furlough with this letter on the following day. I directed my officers to conduct themselves as they had so far, to avoid any brutal measure and to use the harshest measures only if all the requirements were given. But above all the men were to be given so much police work that the variety of their reports would show that they were being urgently used. The reports told me that my officers did understand what I told them. ordering me to report to Berlin. In the meantime I heard by rumors that Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln, together with a major group, among whom there was one member of the Security police as far as I knew, had carried out executions of Jews in the entire area. Jeckeln himself at the time was in Stara Constantinovich.

Q. Did Jeckeln belong to your Einsatzgruppe C?

A. No, Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln was Higher SS and Police Leader for the area of Army Group South. His power of command had all security and police units under him in that area, insofar as the SS units were not purely Army units. As Higher SS and Police Leader he was the representative of the Reichsfuehrer-SS in his own area. As I was told he had major units of the regular police with him who were exclusively destined to carry out executions of Jews.

This fact is underlined by a report which is to be found in Document Book I, Exhibit 27, Document No. 3257-PS on page 138. That is page 3 of this report. It reads as follows:

"The Jewish population, after the combat actions, has remained unharmed for the moment," Only weeks, sometimes months later a systematic execution of the Jews was undertaken by units of the regular police. This action went from east to west. It was done publicly and by using some Ukrainian militia, often, unfortunately, with the participation of volunteers from the Army.

Q. Did Jeckeln also come into your area?

A. I just wanted to mention this When I received the radio message which ordered me to report to Berlin various detachments of Jeckeln arrived in Berditschew. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, would you say that generally the Jews were quite opposed to the German forces and attempted to interfere with their progress?

A. I don't understand,

Q. Would you say that generally there was a hostility on the part of the Jewish population toward German forces of all kinds?

A. Not in general, no.

Q. Well, then, do you disagree with the prevalent idea of the National Socialist idea that the Jews were enemies to the best interests of the Reich?

A. I must say, it wasnot to be wondered at, your Honor, considering the intolerance of the Germans against Jewry, one could not expect a friendly attitude from the Jews.

Q. Then you would say that generally there was an unfriendly attitude on the part of the Jews toward the Germans generally speaking?

A. I understood the question to say whether I am of the opinion that the opinion of the Jews toward the Germans was not friendly.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I believe that that is definitely true.

Q. Yes.

A. And I had expressed it to the effect that this attitude is not to be wondered at.

Q. Yes, and would you say generally that they were hostile to the German forces and where they could attempted to interfere with their progress?

A. I can't say that in general for the Jewish population, but it is true that among the terrorists and saboteurs and functionaries and among the intelligence men and all these forces whom I described before, doubtlessly there was a great number of Russian citizens of the Jewish faith, to express myself quite definitely.

Q. Would you say in this particular area to which this report refers, the one you read from that there was an organized resistance on the part of the Jews toward the German forces?

A. Your Honor, I cannot tell you that, and I ask you not to interpret my statements to the effect that I want to confirm, that I want to state any facts in this document which are not known to me. I only want to point out in this report that here it was not the Security Police who did this by themselves, but that Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln with units of the regular police, to which no member of the Security Police belonged, became effective in this area.

Q. Do I understand then that you were not familiar with the local situation in that area referred to in the report from which you just read?

A. No, not to any extent.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DB. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. You were just telling us whether Jeckeln was also active in your area. I think that was also the question of his Honor.

A. When I received the radio message to report to Berlin and that advanced detachment of Jeckeln appeared in Berditschew, an officer whom I questioned told me that Jeckeln was being moved from Stara Constantinovich to Berditschew.

My whole thought was to avoid a meeting between my kommando and his and to be active in other localities in such a manner so as not to disturb his police activities and still to chose localities in which one could not expect any great Jewish actions, Therefore, when I prepared my trip to Berlin on the 23rd of August, I gave the order to move my staff to Skwira immediately where one of my detachments had already set up headquarters. Skwira is about ninety kilometers east of Berditschew. The detachments were to be used in the same manner further east. This order was carried out on the 26th of August. As I heard later from a detachment commander the three detachments were in Swenigorodka, Tarashja, and the third was near Stavishe on a collective farm.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, if it is your intention to have a recess. I would like to propose that it be now because the succeeding part should not be interrupted.

THE PRESIDENT: The proposal is received with welcome. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken) Court2-a case 9

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. DURCHHOLD (Attorney for the defendant Schulz):

Q. Witness, you tols us at the end of the last session that you succeeded in being called to Berlin in order to see Strenckenbach. Just tell me exactly what happened in Berlin.

A On the 24th of August I left for Berlin. As far as I can recall I arrived there on the 27th of August. I can recall this date rather clearly because the date of my arrical in Berlin was just before the birthday of my wife and so I was able to spend her birthday with her. I was unable to see Streckenbach on that same day.

It may have been on the 28th or 29th of August, I don't remember this quite clearly, but then I reported to Streckenbach in detail, and I told him what order Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln had issued through Dr. Rasch, in particular, that women and children were not to be saved. I described to him very much in detail just what effects this would be bound to have and I told him how monstruous the conscience of these people concerned had been. issued it, he told me that such an order would just mean plain murder. In this connection I would like to emphasize that this statement on his part referred to the form of the order, which was passed on by Rasch and which stated as a reason for this measure that women and children should be shot so that no vendetta would arise. I also expressed that at the time of my interrogations at Oberursel. I would like to comment on that again later on. Heydrich about that subject as soon as possible. On that occasion I asked him to submit my request for transfer also in case this order should be maintained.

Several days passed, because Heydrich was not theere. If I am not mistaken he was at Prague at that time. Several days later, Streckenbach asked me to come and see him and he told me on that occasion that Heydrich also had misgivings about the manner in which this order had been issued.

be changed because a Fuehrer ordere demanded that these measures should me maintained as long as the opponent was also using these measures, and as long as they were necessary. I again repeated my request for transfer because I told him that I was not able to carry out such an order, or to announce such an order to my man. He then told me that this had already been done because my transfer had already been requested by another agency, Which described me as not being enough, at the same time. Streckenbach announced me that Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer had been appointed as my successor and that he would be notified immeduately.

Q You told me that you requested a transfer. On that occasion didn't you have the feeling that you were very selfish and that you were letting your men down?

A Yes, I did have that feeling. When I was traveling from Russia to Berlin, I realized quite clearly that if those orders should be maintained, that I would never be able to agree to it in my inner feeling.

However, I would like to emphasize that my own mental consitution was not the only thing which took me to Berlin.

When I left Russia I simply could not imagine that this order should be valid, I considered it to be a result of the doings of an over fanatical worker. At this time I would like to point out again at that period of time I did not have the least idea of the Fuehrer Order, which had already been announced.

Dr. Rasch had not discussed it with me, either on any occasion. I therefore hoped that I would be able to get a decision in Berlin which would mean liberation to all persons concerned, from the mental burden it had imposed upon all of us. After all, I did not were concerned. I assumed at the time that these happenings in Einsatsgruppe C had occured, who was a great fanatix, and that for this reason Einsatzgruppe C was occupying a social position. When I considered the idea of my transfer, the question arose within me whether my attitude was dishonorable or cowardly before my men a the men of whom I was in charge.

I can assure that my request for my transfer was very hard for me. However, I could not act differently, especially since I had realized quite clearly that it would mean a difference whether I had to carry out an order as s soldier or whether I as an officer in a leading position would issue such an order, I was unable men which I myself refuted throrough;y within myself, orders which I was simply unable to understand, I participated in one single execution of 18 people at Lemberg, and I therefore know that at that time I had to use up all my energy in order to avoid losing my outer appearance, and from this experience I knew what this order meant. However, I would like to emphasize here that my own opinion is not to be any criticism on the actions of anybody else who, from his own inner deep conviction, may have harbored a different opinion and who represents it at this time. I was frequently reproached for my alledged softness. I had to bear this repraoch and I did bear it. ing to his disposition. He just cannot alter his basic constitution. At that time, although O know that I was a man who was fully ready to do his duty, I was unable to raise a strong enough will in order to issue an order which I was unable to give. However, I would also like to point out in this respect that my request of transfer probably would not have been approved if Streckenbach had not heldped me out in a friendly manner and if my transfer had not been requested by another party. Also, the possibility that I could approach Streckenbach, as I was able to do, certainly was only possible to very few people since I, as a commander of the officer candidate school, was subordinated to the Office Chief One, I had a very close official relationship with him.

by way of Streckenbach because you had a particularly close personal relationship with him?

A Yes, only because of that reason. However, that I did not only think of myself is shwon by the fact that I was also successful in being able to have the officers candidate training course sent back of which I was in charge. Although for the Einsatzgruppem this lack of officers candidates meant a severe burden for some time, which they did not let go without objections, in spite of their objections the recall was carried out.

Q How were you able to rescind this reaching training course? circumstances he should see to it that the officer candidates should be taken off. I described to him that these valuables men, if they should remain, under such orders, they would completely deteriorate as officers. However, this was the contrary of what this traning course was trying to achieve, Under such a way of giving orders, these officers wither would have to degenerate mentally or they would become so brutal that they be completely unsuitable as leaders of human beings, Streckenbach agreed with my opinion and he assured me that he would report to Heydrich once more.

Again I had to wait for several days. Then I was notified by him that Heydrich had shown full understanding for the case and that he had also ordered that this training course be interrupted and withdranw at once.

In this way I at least had some partial success.

Q Once you had been in Berlin did you again return to Russia?

A Yes. After all, I had to turn over my detachment to my successor, who was Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer. In the meantime, he had already been notified to that effect. Approximately on the 12th of September 1941 I left Berlin. I left for Skwira where my detachment had moved in the meantime.

In my affidavit of the 26th of May 1947 in Document Book 1, on pages 134 and 135 of the German text, Exhibit No. 26, Document No. 3644, I have stated that approximately on the 26th of September 1941 my successor arrived at that locality. This date, however, is not correct. The mistake was an by the fact that I did not know any more, Kiev. I told Mr. Wartenberg at that time that the change of my position to Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer followed immediately in connection with the fall of Kiev. Since, however, I now know the difference from the documents, I can tell them to you with rather certainty. Accordingly, Kiev fell on the 19th of September, so that at the very latest, on the 21st of September, or probably already on the day before, Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer arrived at my locality and took over the command. My return journey to Berlin followed on the 25th of September. I am also able to determine this date from the documents. From this it becomes evident that Dr. Rasch arrived at Kiev on the 25th of September.

At that time, however, he came from Nowoukrainke, to Skwira, where he was stationed in the school were I was also s taying. He stayed there overnight together with the Chief of Staff. Since it had become very late at that time, and he was unable to move on during the night on account of the strongly mined streets. On that occasion I immediately reported leaving his sphere. On the following morning, on the 25th of September, Dr. Rasch went to trip to Berlin.

from Russia?

A Yes. Approximately at the same time when I relinquished my command, the members of the training course were also recalled by radio message. Until 1 October 1941 they were to report to Group 1-B at Berlin, at the school there. Right on the spot I was able to convince myself that with the exception of one who was killed in battle and several cases of delay owing to special difficulties, all of them were back in time. In agreement with the Chief of Personnel, they were granted a furlough until the 1 November 1941. use this occasion in order to tell the training course something about your judgment of the war measures taken in the East?

A Yes. Since I had found out that those people partly had to fight the same strong inner conflict, I felt it to be my duty to tell them my opinion quite clearly, with the intention to give them some inner support. I thought that in their faces I saw the mirror of their feelings, that their thoughts did not differ from my own. However, probably all of them could not find the right way in their inner struggle between right, duty and their feelings; they were confronted with a horrible picture of an atrocious war; a constant propaganda began running on them with the eternal motto: "The Jews are trying to exterminate Germany." Finally they began to believe it. They just clenched their teeth and did their duty. Perhaps they did so to test that they were doing their very best in order to pacify their own souls. I assembled the members of the training course in the assembly hall of the officers candidate school, and first talked to them about general matters. With regard to measures caused by the war in the East, I finally concluded with the following words: "I know that part of you with clenched teeth had to fulfill a hard duty which was contrary to their inner feelings. This assignment brought something different to them than they had hoped for and what they had wished, namely that Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.they would be able to prove their worth in combat at the front.

However, I told them I was expecting one thing from them, even if it has been said that these measures were necessary, because the opponent provoked these things, and, even if they acted in a deepest conviction of what they ware doing was right and necessary, each one of them should clearly realize that this was a terrible experience. I told them that I prohibited them to talk about these things. That these things were too serious to serve assa subject of a conversation. However, those who were bragging about the shooting of Jaws, those people I would remove from the training course, because they had character deficiency. People who maintained such an attitude certainly were not fit to be officers. assignment in Russia, I am now coming to several individual questions. In your opinion was there a possibility of launching protest against the orders which were issued by Hitler? which I spent there during my assignment, two phases of development must be observed. First of all we have the Fuehrer Order, which was contained in the so-called Commissar Order, and which was supplemented by the Barbaressa Order, and, secondly, we have the other order which was issued by Jackelm in August. The first possibility of objecting to this order wasat the time of our assignment, and it was too late at that time in my opinion, or of what I don't know -- it would have been unsuccessful because of the fact that the first order, the so-called Commissar Order, after all, existed already actually as a Fuehrer Order as the result of mutual discussion between the OKH and other agencies. Here there would have been the first possibility of raising an objection. If inspite of this, this order had still been issued, thus we had to assume with certainty that the details in particular with regard to the legal aspects should have been conscientiously discussed; for how can the legality be doubted if higher responsible commanding agencies Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.do issue them; and this order did not result from any local situation, but from the very beginning it was considered to be applicable to all territories in the East.

The measures which ware taken, therefore, had to be considered as being necessary for the combat troops, and as being inevitable. This could not have been a political measure alone, because the order was issued by the OKH, the High Command of the Army. Therefore, in this case the objection would have had to be raised already by the Highest Command Agency of the Wehrmacht. The first observations during the campaign in Russia led to recognize very clearly that a very fierce opponent was confronting us who just like we had to fight for existence or his extermination, and accordingly he chose his methods. Also William Henry Chamberlain writes in the "New Leaders" in an article "The Permanent Crisis", that in this connection we have to quote Lenin: "It is necessary to apply every method no matter how mean, howdeceitful, how illegal it may be, in order to serve the Communist Idea." Could we reproach legally our opponent with these measures, with that repudiation of the existing International Law which was so well known to the world, his methods for the extermination and weakening of his arch-enemy? His attitude required other harsh measures considering our self-preservation. That was an opinion which I also had succeeded in obtaining, even against my own inner feelings. Within the framework of the order which was given to me, I did in our behalf, and absolutely saw to it, that the measures which resulted from self-defense, and from the urgent circumstances, which were necessary for the security of troops, and the security of areas they were entitled to, in my opinion, should not exceed the permissible limits. I want to add in this respect that my judgment may have been wrong. If from the Russian side, measures were taken with terrible severity against the civilian population, as well as against German soldiers. I can understand that when these facts became known by the local Wehrmacht agencies in this first phase, when the order was given. There were no objections that these measures were even emphasized to be urgently necessary.

However, I can not understand it that no objections were raised against the second phase of development by the Wehrmacht commanders. But the responsibility remained with the Wehrmacht Agencies; they were in charge of the executing power; only with their consent could happen what actually had happened. Even silent toleration in such serious cases must be compared with consent. Whether the Wehrmacht commanders with their objections expected to be successful or not, in my opinion, this didn't matter at all for the time being. However, as long as the Wehrmacht did not do anything at all in the way of making objections, any steps from any other side were completely impossible and useless. After all, the question could have been put to them just how can you raise objections to measures against which even the Wehrmacht does not have any objection. However, the failure to object at that time meant consent, and consent was played on equal basis with necessity. Only under these circumstances things could develop as they actually did, especially as without any doubt, for example, Jeckelm had sufficient fanatics at his disposal who instead of impeding the carrying out of these measures would always press to have them carried out; and who were able to do so because no effective obstruction was placed in their path.

However, this avalanche would just roll over the little man who tried to raise an objection. In this way my own description of things in Berlin, in which I did not only tell them of this development but where I also told them about the mental destruction of the individual person, was found not to have any reaction. I am also firmly convinced of the fact that the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen also would have been unsuccessful in raising an objection if an objection had not been issued by the command agencies of the Wehrmacht. agencies were bearing the responsibility for the tasks which were forced upon the Security Police. But from above there came no obstruction but only instigation.

Q What was your own attitude towards that? there was an order which was not so firmly limited I determined that criminal activity of the person concerned had to be the basis for the most harsh measure it required. In this connection I would like to point out once more that the sequence of time with regard to this order within the Einsatzgruppen C took another course as far as I was concerned. I ordered that no shootings were to take place without that reasons for the execution were examined conscientiously, and that the persons concerned, the victim as well as the person who had to carry out the execution, was told that in every case the necessity of the situation had to be taken into consideration and had to be decisive. I myself regretted it most that no court martials were established. They were refused by the Keitel Order and by pointing out the fact that the Russians did not use any court martials either. Here the Wehrmacht did not raise any objection either. It could and should have reserved for itself the right to institute court martials. of a formal proceed. I accepted officers to head these small detachments who had been professional policemen and officials in the police Court No. IIA-Case No. 9.for many years, and who, furthermore, in their training course had shown themselves to be very conscientious and that they had received some legal training.

Without their personal decision no execution could be carried out. I was unable to reserve my own decision in this matter because all prerequisites for that were lacking, and they had been given the right to make the decisions. However, I am still grateful to fate, even today, that the officers who worked under me were humane and decent, and if I may express myself so, in this connection: they were quite reasonable. Order, could not have prevented anyone not carrying out any more executions, and it would have given everyone the possibility of correcting me if they were not in agreement with my opinion. However, none of them did that. This also becomes evident from the documents. It should have been proven by them.

Q At Zhitomir weren't you informed of the other order by Jeckeln? announced. about that supplementary order? civilized nations and international law is concerned, I am unable to decide. I am not a legal expert. However, the fact is that Russia did not recognize International Law, and the ruthlessness of the methods which they employed could be clearly seen by all. Is it that under these circumstances the partner is also bound to International Law? After all I no longer was able to see any International Law. The fact is that the German measures toward the Western powers were never used. In this, however, one should see a premeditated action. That is the way the little man in the street looked at it, and he was certainly convinced of the fact, in his bitter fulfilling of his duty, that if he had refused to obey these orders, it would have cost his own life Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.and he did not believe that he was doing any wrong.

Whether, in consideration of these things, we are dealing with something wrong here, that probably would have to be decided by an International Court of Law. However, regardless of the fact whether this was wrong or not, I was unable to give my inner agreement to these measures, and I did not do it. you any extensive comment on the subject because my requested and approved transfer liberated me from this issuing of orders. ments, I want to ask you one more brief question. Yesterday when we discussed your official assignment you mentioned the fact that even before your assignment in Russia you were in charge of Einsatzkommandos. Was this decisive it any way for your assignment in Russia later on? be approximately the same, especially since I did not know the Streckenbach order, since I was absent from Pretsch. With the exception of the statements of Heydrich, which I have told you about already, I did not hear any details about the assignment in Russia which could even have lead me to conclude that such special tasks would be demanded of me. Only subsequently I heard of the statement of Heydrich that more severe measures would have to be taken against the Jews, and here I had to give it another meaning than I did at the moment when I reported to him. At the time, in any case, I really did not assume that shootings on a major scale were intended or planned, Even though up to that period of time I had been a member of the Security Police for eight years, I myself never had received any order or ever heard of an order which would have dealt with the shooting of Jews.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I am now coming to the discussion of the Prosecution documents which the Prosecution has introduced so far. I would like to ask this Tribunal and the Prosecution to have the following volumes at hand, Volume I, Volume II-A, II-C and III-C, because I Court No. IIA, Case No. 9.shall only discuss documents from these volumes.

THE PRESIDENT: Those documentsbooks will undoubtedly be available on Monday when we will reconvene at nine-thirty O'clock.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 20 October 1947, at 0930 hours.)

THE MATSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. MANDRY: (For Defendant Sandberger): Your Honors, my client has been ill for several days and for that reason I could not work on the questionnaire. I ask that my client be excused from attending today and tomorrow, and I would be very grateful if he would be released immediately.

THE PRESIDENT: Who is your client?

DR. MANDRY: Sandberger.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in Court today and tomorrow, in accordance with Dr. Mandry's request.

DR. MANDRY: Your Honor, may he be taken down immediately to room 55?

THE PRESIDENT: He is in Room 55 now?

DR. MANDRY. No, he is still here. He wants to be taken to Room 55.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Marshal will have the defendant Sandberger escorted to Room 55 so that he may confer with his attorney.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, may I continue with the direct examination?

THE PRESIDENT: You may. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. Witness, on Saturday when we concluded the session we intended to look at the document books. I now ask you to make general statements, briefly, on the documents.

A. Yes. From the very beginning I want to express very clearly that my leaders and myself do not want to be identified with the manner in which the reports were made, because it was disgusting. The wording in the reports is not the same wording as it was in the original reports. The contents surely only contain part of the original reports. The contents and the way it is written are the result of not in every respect very pure imagination of the staff leader of Einsatzgruppe D. Sturmbennfuehrer Hoffmann. Hoffmann was a defficiency character. He was as uncontrolled by ambitious; as he was dishonest. Everybody was afraid of him because his intrigues. This is not only my opinion of today; this opinion I told him to his face, and described it to Dr. Rasch in a report of several pages. This was even my only personal report during the Russian campaign. How Hoffmann got his statement and figures. I can't imagine at all. Surely, in order to shine he took everything down in favor of the Einsatzgruppen and what the Commandos in other offices did according to their duty. For example, the measures of the Commandos Jeckeln, and also the measures of the commandos of the army, the Wehrmacht. His devilish report about the resettlement measures in Kiev alone is a proof of his character. Hoffmann was released and relieved of the Security Police and at that time I told him myself that he was dismissed. If, in spite of his untrue statement the documents prove that my previous statements are at least basically correct, I can only be grateful.

Q. About the occurrences in Lemberg which have already been mentioned, do you want to say anything in addition to that?

A. Yes. I believe that it is not necessary to state anything more about it because it will not express anything further than what I have already said. May I add that the events in Lemberg at the time were shown to the foreign press, and to foreign representatives also. allowed to make three corrections.

Q. Witness, which document are concerned here?

A. It is my affidavit in Volume 1, Exhibit 26, Document No. 3644, on page 132 of the German text. Here it reads, in the first sentence, in the German text in the third line from the top, "according to which guilty persons and those suspected were to be shot as reprisals"; hut I stated in the record; "According to which the guilty persons and the participants were to be shot as reprisals." This mistake I did not notice because "suspected persons" were mentioned previously in connection with arrests. I can submit also the original from which I dictated - and which I put at Herr Wartenberg is temporarily disposal. In this connection may I mention that the statements which I gave here I have previously given to Herr Wartenger in the same manner. Please, make corrections. In the last sentence of this paragraph it reads; "It saw Dr. Rasch on the place of execution." That is right. But in this connection it gives the impression that this happened during the executions carried out by Einsatzkommando 6. That is not so. I saw him when Einsatzkommando 5 carried out the first execution. I told Mr. Wartenberg about this at the time but as the text had already been written he told me that I could clarify this during my examination, which I would like to have done by this now.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, the witness has stated that he has the original. What does he mean by that?

DR. MANDRY: At the time he had made the statements at Herr Wartenberg's request himself, and gave them to him, and the affidavit was then made up out of those statements. The witness still has the original which he gave to Herr Wartenberg at the time, and this was shortened and excerpts taken out.

THE PRESIDENT: You mean the original in his own writing?

DR. MANDRY: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: How did this get back to him once he gave it to Wartenberg?

WITNESS: Herr Wartenberg gave it back to me personally; or one of the gentlemen of the prosecution gave it back to me.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Do I understand that this so-called original which you possess differs in some essential point from the affidavit which you signed, and which is now an exhibit?

WITNESS: No, your Honor. That is not what I tried to tell you. It was merely that the wording is incorrect. The actual statement is absolutely correct; only the connection might give the wrong impression here. That is all I wanted to clarify.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. If even the connection is such that an improper inference may be drawn from the affidavit and you regard this as of some importance, why wasn't Mr. Wartenberg questioned on this when he was here in Court?

WITNESS: Your Honor, these mistakes I informed my defense counsel about when I saw the document immeidately; and Herr Durchholz at the time when it was submitted also objected to it. And you, your Honor, granted to Herr Durchholz that this correction be carried out when I was examined here.

THE PRESIDENT: That is entirely correct. But I am now wondering why Dr. Durchholz didn't question Mr. Wartenberg on this feature.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, I did not consider this clarification. so important as to question Herr Wartenberg here. I believe it sufficient to merely ask the witness to clarify it. The facts, actually, are correct. Only they appear to have been taken out of the connection and are not very clear.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Proceed. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. On page 6 of the same document it says, under number 7, "About the 6th or 7th day after the executions..." - but actually it should read: "About the 6th or 7th day after my arrival in Lemberg." This is shown, and is obvious, from the way I described things previously because on the 6th or 7th day after the executions I was already in Dubus. This is merely a correction as to the date.

Q. Does that finish Lemberg?

A. Yes.

Q. While advancing, you stayed, in Dubno for about six days. What happened there?

A. I think here I can make a brief statement, too. I have already described the events in Dubno, and surviving witnesses were examined on the events. The entire events were handed over to a dective Commissar in the General Go vernment who was competent on this, because as previously Polish territory it was to belong again to the area of the General Go vernment. I think I do not state anything incorrect if I repeat that in Dubno no executions were carried out by Einsatzkommando 5. In Dubno I had to give part of my detachment to Kreminig. According to my opinion the AOK-6 had requested them to go there. At first I thought that this would happen only at Shepitowka, but now I recollect it having been already at Dubno. The two other detachments alternated took over patrol and guard duties and the one off duty had to look after the supplies for the providing as well as for the preparing of food, because the detachments were independent and looked after this themselves. Also vehicles and equipment had to be maintained.

Q. From Dubno you moved to Shepitovka, did you not? Anything special to be said about this?

A. Shepitovka was surrounded by very dense and thick woods for many kilometers, and in these woods troops were hidden who were well armed, and constantly attacked small units, so that even during the day the streets could only be passed in convoy. During the night they were closed to traffic. My two part detachments - the third was still being absent - were performing patrol and guard duties day and night. Inquiries were made also; an Intelligence Section was set up, If I remember correctly, while staying in Shepitovka two people who were caught because they proved to be partisans were shot. The detachment in Kreminev also, as far as I remember, at the order of the Army Command had reported two or three shootings.

As far as I remember these were persons who had made armed attacks on individual vehicles of the Wehrmacht, where a driver was killed.

Q. On 25 July, approximately, you arrived in Berditschew, and there you stayed until you left for Berlin on the 24th of August - approximately?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you want to state anything about that?

A. Here, systematical security work was started. May I refer to the report I have given already? My detachments -- the third one had returned in the meantime -- I set up in such a manner that the one dealt with the city area itself, the second detachment looked after the surroundings of Berditschew, and the third one I kept for special tasks because at that time the harvest had to be brought in the various small cities had to be given Mayors and the collective farms their managers and this had become very important because these areas -that is, the small cities and the collective farms -- did not have any leaders.

Q. Did you hear anything about executions during that time?

A. Yes, All the time while I stayed in Berditschew, as far as I remember only two major cases of executions occurred. One was in Berditschew where, at the order of the Wehrmacht, on the citadel such persons were shot who during the fighting for Berditschew had been caught as armed partisans, and had been put to prison at the citadel by the Army. The other case was at Schmelnik, where a real terror group had appeared, who, apart from other criminal deeds, had murdered 25 Ukrainians who had cooperated with the local German commander.

Q. Let us now skip over to the individual documents. In Volume 3-C, Exhibit No. 130 of the Prosecution, Document NO-3841, that is on page 98 of the German text, - it is your affidavit in O berursel of 20 December 1945, and there it says under figure 1, at the top, second sentence, I quote: "After the end of 1931 until 1934 I was Referent to the Political Department of the Police in Bremen."

Are the dates correct?

A. No, they are not correct. It should say, "approximately at the end of 1930" - as I have already stated here.

Q. Very well. In the same document on page 4 of this document, it says in the last sentence of paragraph 6, I quote:"Streckenbach himself described the activity of the Einsatzgruppen in the East to me as murder." what do you want to state to that?

A. When I made my statements I stated my opinion on this, too, and I believe I have clarified the occurrence already. May I point out that when disussing these events at Oberwisch in 1945, we merely dealt with Einsatzgruppe-C. In Oberwischat the time I was only asked about these three events which are contained in this affidavit. I myself only gave confirmations of the previous questions. This statement by Streckenbach referred not to the entire activity of the Einsatzgruppen, but It also was connected with the actual wording which Obergruppen fuhrer Jekelm at the time had handed to Dr. Rasch. He thus expressed that the order transmitted in that form, namely that "women and children are to be shot so that there will be no vendetta", was an invitation to take part in murder. This position did not refer to the Fuehrer order as I already pointed out, I would like to ask that this be corrected.

Q. Please look now at document book II-C, which is Exhibit No. 82, Document No. NO-2947. That is the Operational Report No. 47 of 9 August 1941. On page 5 of this document it says, "That in Berditschew in 45 houses of Jews a great number of stolen goods were stored which was distributed among the suffering Ukranian population." Witness, do you wish to state anything on that?

A. Sofar as I remember, these were not stolen, but hoarded goods, such as food. etc. At the time, these were put at the disposal of the population, because if these had been stolen goods, that is looted property, surely, COURT IIA CASE IX measures would have been taken, which in this report have not been mentioned, and, sofar as I remember were not issued, either, but if measures would have been taken, then surely the Einsatz group doubtlessly would have reported on it.

Q. May I ask you to look at the same document, on page 7 of this document, where it states: "Furthermore Einsatzcommando-V until now has shot 74 Jews." Please say something about that?

A. I have the following comment to make on this. Shortly after I arrived in Berditschew, an officer of the Wehrmacht reported to me when I visited this Wehrmacht agency, that they had persons who had been arrested in the Citadel who were to be executed, because during the fighting for Berditschew they had been caught with arms, and had been taken to the Citadel. Since he pointed out to me from the very beginning that according to the instructions the Security Police had to carry out this task, I told him about this, and, therefore, asked a leader of the sub-command in Berditschew to carry it out, and I investigated the case. Two or three, or perhaps, four days later, Dr. Rasch visited me at Berditschew, and informed me that when he just visisted the Army group, they had objected to the fact that the executions had not been carried out as yet. Under the circumstances I had to ask the sub-commando leader to examine the occurrence, and to investigate it. I no longer am able to give the exact number of those arrested. The figure given may be correct. I do not think, however, that all persons were executed. The executions were carried out in the Citadel in the presence of the commandant, and the occupational troops were present too. I think we can say for certain that there were not only Jews, These statements COURT II-A CASE IX probably would have been made by Stabsfuehrer Hoffman, because he Seemed to like it better to out it that way into his reports.

I shall show, for example, that an incorrect statement was made on another occasion as well. This document is also of importance, because in connection with the situation Report No. 2, it can be shown that the reports were not always correct. This Situation Report No. 2 is in this same document book, on pages 6 to 15 of the German Text. It is Exhibit No. 69, Document No. 2652, Situation Report No. 2, the time of the report 29 July to 14 August, 1941. In the Situation Report No. 47, to which I compared this present Situation Report, is on page 80 of the German Text, and is correct. It shows that in Shitomir the public execution of a Jew, age 60, who had been a judge since 1918, and in who, when interrogated had admitted to have carried out one-thousand murders, and, this man was to be killed together with his hangman. In Situation Report No. II, which I have just indicated, it shows on page 14, that this man was hanged in Berditschew, while numerous people attended the execution. This is not true. Ii only this One document had existed, surely, I would have been blamed for this. However, the situation Report No. II, almost has verbally the same contents as the Situation Report No. 47. If these reports are compared, one can see that the names mentioned, the names of the cities, are not the same. In Situation Report No. 2, it says, on page 13, in Berditschew, 222 Jews were shot. I must add the same to this --

THE PRESIDENT: You are referring to page 13. Now I do not find page 13 in this report in our document book. Mr Hochwald, do we have it in our document book?

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I am sorry, we don't have it there, and it certainly must be somewhere else; if the COURT II-A CASE IX witness can refer to which page of the original?

THE PRESIDENT: No, he means page 13 of the original. If he is referring to page 13 of the original, I want to draw attention to the fact that on page 13 in the English Document Book, I find page 11 with the original excerpt, and, then the next itme is page 20, of the original excerpt.

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: That is right.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I made a mistake here. I get the wrong figures for the pages. It is page 13 in the German text, not the document page.

THE PRESIDENT: That is right. I am referring to page 13 of the original, as you indicated, and that page 13 does not appear in our document book.

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Page 9 of the original document, Your Honor.

THE INTERPRETER: It is page 9 of the original document.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, you may proceed.

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: It is page 9 of the original document book.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, we found it.

THE WITNESS: There it shows you that in Berditschew 222 Jews were shot, but according to the Situation Report No. 47 it is shown that the EK-V shot 74 Jews, and another command shot 148 people. I repeat, if this document were the only one in existence, surely because I was in Berditschew, I would have been blamed for them all.

THE PRESIDENT: Where is the Situation Report No. 46 that you are referring to?

DR. DORCHHOLZ: Your Honor, it is Situation Report of No. 47, it is Exhibit No. 82.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. DORCHHOLZ: Document No. 2947.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: It is on page 66 of the document

THE PRESIDENT: I know that is the one he referred to before, but we had difficulty in locating his specific reference even in that document.

DR. DORCHHOLZ: Your Honor, unfortunately I do not have the English Document Book, else I would have tried to indicate the pages in the English document book to make things easier.

THE PRESIDENT: when you quote from a document, or refer to a document, it might be well to indicate the page and the paragraph of the original as it is shown here, and that would help us to locate the specific item being discussed.

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Your Honor, the specific item to which the witness has now just referred to, the shooting of the 74 Jews, is in the middle of page 71 of the document.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Thank you very much.

THE WITNESS: The comparison with Situation Report No. 2 is finished now. I now want to show you Situation Report No. 47, and return to it. I want to point out page 80 of the German text, that is page 13 of the original, where the activity of the police regiment of the Higher Police and SS Chief is mentioned, and it reports on the shootings, I am talking about this, and asked that I may repeat it based on other documents in order to show this activity is particular. The units in Chorestkow were continuously active in the entire territory, therefore, it is not only possible or probable, but in my opinion it is certain that the statements as to the activity of these units were reported by my partcommandos as well. If such measures were carried out in their territory. In the Situation Report No. 47, on page 6 of this document, that is page 12 of the original - - -no, on page 10, of the original, Your Honor, in Tarmopol and in Chorestkow where pogroms took place that is, they tried to do this. For the sake of order, I wish to point out that Einsatxcommando-V was never in these localities; also according to the following statements on pages 11 and 12 of the original, in Shitomir, Trojanow, Krostyschew, Tscherjaschow, Jaslow, Polonna, Proskura, and Winnica & Barcarow that first, except for Zaslow and Polonna belonged to my territory, I do not know, because these localities I dan not find in the map at my disposal.

Q Now in Document Book II-C, Document No. NO3151, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 73, page 31 in the German text -

DR. DURCHHOLZ: That is the Situation Report No. 86, of 17 September 1941, I quote: on page 2 of this document, German text, and in paragraph four the following: "Einsatzkommando-V at the time is distributed over a large territory, and it is combing out the villages of this area systematically. Among others, several Bolshevistic mayors and chiefs of collective farms were taken care of."

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: 9continuing) Apart from that several insane people were eliminated, who had the task to blow up railroad tracks and bridges and to carry out other acts of sabotage." Witness, what do you wish to comment on this? did not report. I am sure. In my statement I have already mentioned that a part-commando was systematically assigned not to "take care of" mayors and chiefs of collective farms, but rather to appoint such men. I assume that in this Situation Report something wrong has been reported, because I can not remember and I consider it quite impossible that here systematically mayors and chiefs of collective farms, without any special reason, should have been executed. I do not want to exclude the fact that such cases may have happened, because in my report on the activity of my kommando, I have already expressed that Russian agents were very clever to put their agents into such positions and to use their influence and there, under the cloak of reliability, they had a great deal of influence. They gave them espionage orders, and, therefore, they helped the intelligence service. If this would have happened, and I would have mentioned that, surely Herr Hoffmann would have reported it in detail, because he liked to make reports. He says in the following paragraph: "Four executions were carried out in Ulanow, and 18 in Uledowka," this was reported and the figures mentioned.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, do I understand you to say that Bolshevistic mayors were not executed?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, in this report, no executions are mentioned at all. They are just general statements that Einsatzcommando, V systemacally had the task to eliminate mayors and chiefs of collective farms, to get rid of them.

THE PRESIDENT: I understood you to say a few moments ago that it was not correct that Bolshevistic mayors had been executed. Is that what I understood you to say?

A I said, Your Honor, that this generalization is not correct. I had given the job to a Teil kommando in order to appoint mayors and chiefs of collective farms; I, therefore, think it is impossible that the Teil kommando could have been active here to get rid of them systematically, but I do not want to say that it could not have happened, that the mayor, or chief of collective farm was executed, because he was an agent or a saboteur of some sort.

Only the generalization is not correct. not be executed merely because they were Bolshevist mayors? be something in addition to being a Bolshevist and a Communist and a Mayor in order to be executed? able action.

Q But didn't the original Fuehrer Order actually include all Communist-functionaries? Communist-functionary? commit some punishable act against the German forces in order to be liquidated?

A. Your Honor, then I think I misunderstood your previous question. If a Bolshevist mayor was still in his position, and he was arrested in a deadly danger in the rear of the fighting army.

Q. Yes. Well then, we come back to the report and we find that this statement is correct.

"Among others, several B olshevist mayors and " - I can't pronounce that word -- "were taken care of."

Now, that means that the Bolshevist mayors were executed, does it not?

A. Your Honor, when such a person was arrested, and I never said this was not done then it must have happened.

I merely objected because any more.

They certainly had disappeared.

Q. But if further they were taken care of in the words of the report, and the phrase "taken care of " did not, I understand, mean

A. Naturally, your Honor.

Q. Very well. As a matter of curiosity what does that long word which I stumbled over mean, "Kulchose," well, I won't make an

A. Kolchose, your Honor. That is a collective farm.

Q. I see.

A. And these are chiefs of the collective farms. THE PRESIDENT: Very,well, thank you.

A. (Continuing) In the upper paragraph on Page 33 of the German text it is reported that in Chmielnik 229 Jews were dealt with.

This figure has been invented.

May I ask to compare it to another document?

German text. Page 25 of the original.

MR. HORLICK -HOCHWALD: Page 93 of Document Book I, your Honor.

A. (Continuing) It is a situation report, No. 60, of 22 august 1941. Here it says on Page 2 of the document at the bottom, "After the commander of the locality had been relieved and a new commander had not yet been appointed, the Jewish population used the opportunity to terrorize the Ukrainians and to spread the rumor that the Russians would now return in order to take revenge on the Ukrainians with murder during the night. In a neighboring village, according to an inhabitant ---" Now, please note the wording, "by Jews and Communists".

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. The difficulty in our locating whatever quotation is being read is that the witness states Page 2, after we once get the document, and he apparently is referring to Page 2 as it is listed in the document book, but I think it would be more specific if he referred to the page of the original. Now this document --

THE WITNESS: Page 26 of the original -

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. I think it would be much better if he did that because we have the pages listed in our book in accordance with the original. First we have here "Page 25 of the original, page 26 of the original, Page 27 of the original," and if you merely make that reference then we can immediately locate what he is going to read from, and then he might also indicate what paragraph of that page. Now, he is referring to Page 26, is that correct?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: This is Page 94.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, Page 26 of the original. Which paragraph?

THE WITNESS: Of the original, the top of the page.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A. (Continuing) "After the former local commander had been relieved and before a new one was appointed, the Jewish population at once turned this occasion to advantage by terrorizing the Ukrainians and by spreading the rumor that the Russians would come back to take a bloody revenge.

According to the reports of an inhabitant, Jews and Communists killed 25 Ukrainians altogether in a neighboring village." Please note Jews and Communists. "The Jews tried to block the approach to Chmielnik--" Please may I add how wrong the terms of this report are in its whole tendency? While in the previous sentence Jews and Communists were mentioned, suddenly Einsatzgruppe only reports about Jews now. I continue to quote. " --by stretching a rope across the road, thus making a trap for motor cars. The commanding officer of a construction company and a fully loaded personnel carrier could evade the trap only at the very last minute." previously, to fight the Jewish excesses extensive actions were taken. The localities concerned are surrounded and prominent Communist Jews are taken. The Ghetto, or rather the houses of the Jews are combed out systematically. Together with the local kommando and the militia lists of the known Communists still existing, there are made, and they were searched. In Chmielnik 100 Jews and Communists have been found.

THE PRESIDENT: It would seem here that we are straining at nets. You indicated that in one sentence the phrase "Jews and Communists" was used, that phrase. Then you say that this must be an error because in the following sentence they only say Jews tried to block the road with a rope, but in the next paragraph we come back again to the phrase "Jews and Communists".

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I want to explain the following, the manner in which the reports were nude. They were not made by my my kommando, but I merely wanted to point out, I wanted to show how the person in the Einsatzgruppe making the report deviates from the facts.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't see where there is much of a difference if in one place a man says, "Jews and Communists," end in the next sentence he only mentions Jews, end then later on he says, "Jews and Communists". Wherein do you find such a difference?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, this situation report, which actually was made four weeks later than the document we discussed first, itstates, "During the cleaning action carried out in Chmielnik 229 Jews could be dealt with." That is the document I started off from, and I merely compared them to show that there were not only Jews, but that the other document proves wit out doubt that there were bands of Communists among them. Doubtlessly there were also Jews, That was the reason why I compared this document with the other one.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I don't intend, of course, to argue with you on this and you are certainly entitled to your interpretation of the two documents, but I must confess that I don't see this great difference which you seem to draw from a comparison of the documents. In the former document the statement is made that 229 Jews were taken care of. In the other document a reference is made to Jews and Jewish Communists. That still does not eliminate the possibility that 229 Jews were killed, merely because in the succeeding document to which you referred there is the additional phrase used of "Jewish Communists". That does not destroy the original reference to 229 Jews.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: It does not say in the document "Jewish Communists" but only "Communists".

THE PRESIDENT: My document says "Jewish Communists", Jews and Jewish Communists.

THE WITNESS: Everything is mixed up in the reports of the Einsatzgruppe. That is what I wanted to point out.

THE PRESIDENT: But I don't see this mix-up. They say very flatly, definitively, clearly and specifically that 229 Jews were taken care of, and when they say "taken care of " we know that they don't mean to lodge them and put them up at a hotel.

It means that they were executed.

THE WITNESS: Of course, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: That is very specific. Inthis other document the reference is made to the activities of the Jews and and the Communists. This is a little more specific, a little more in detail, a littlemore graphic. It tells the story about the stretching, of the rope across the road, it tells about their various activities, and that is the reason they were executed.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, it will be best if I tell you how it happened as far as I remember, according to my recollection. May I start. One day the local commander of Chmielnik came to me who had been, appointed as new local commander. His rank was captain, with him was an officer of the Army Group South, These two described to me very excitedly the events in Chmielnik and the murder of twenty-five Ukrainians. The reason was because they had worked together with the German Army agencies, according to the request of the officer of the Army Group South I asked the Toil command leader -- Sorry, I made a mistake, I gave the local commander a. Toil command. The events in Chmielnik were investigated very carefully and the following impression was given:

still heavily armed, were hidden in the woods. With the assistance of many inhabitants of villages they actually terrorized, the area, and the biggest event of these was when twenty-five Ukrainians were murdered. A Russian officer made out requisition papers. With the assistance of local inhabitants he got food and cattle. The skins of the cattle were given to the local commanders during the night, as settlement, as payment, and were taken near his house. These settlement bills gave both the unit and name of the Russian officer. letters. He actually did not feel safe any longer with his few soldiers. Several other things occurred. I cannot remember the details any more. For example, the car trap. One trio investigations took four to five days. As far as I remember a Wehrmacht unit was also appointed to search the woods, and the troops hiding in the woods went south. At the order of the Army, the Wehrmacht, that is at the order of the local commander, those who participated in the terrorizing, were shot. The command was in the hands of the local commander. As far as I remember at the time about ninety persons were shot.

THE PRESIDENT: Were these Russians, ninety Russians were shot?

THE WITNESS; Russian inhabitants of the City of Chmielnik. Not only Jews, but, say three Communists, members of the terror group, among them a number of Jews, were executed.

THE PRESIDENT: But your narrative tells us of the terrorization by Russian soldiers who were hidden in the woods.

THE WITNESS: These Russian soldiers in the woods used, the local inhabitants in the City of Chmielnik, for example, to get food, to get cattle and other things.

The local inhabitants helped them, and these local inhabitants helped, these troops who were still hiding in the wood, and they got the things for them which they needed. These inhabitants also carried out terrorizing. Their own population was threatened. It was said that the Russians would return, and twenty-five Ukrainians were murdered of whom it had been said that they had collaborated with the Germans. Of course. I cannot remember everything. I can only tell you what I remember.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

THE WITNESS: I believe that about ninety persons, including a number of Jews, were shot. The measure was not taken because they were Jews but because they had acted as terrorists, and also had arms which they were not allowed to have. I remember this case in detail because after a few days the local commander and the mayor and an officer of the Army came to me, and thanked me for the assistance. The local commander thanked me in particular, because through these events he had been able to strengthen his forces, he got reinforcements. If I mention a service of thanksgiving, a religious service, this is not meant to be in bad taste, out if it was mentioned at the time it was only meant to emphasize the fact that the population actually felt that they had been relieved of terror. since this figure is incorrect, of course the other figures will also not be right.

THE PRESIDENT: While you are on this question of figures, do I understand now that you approve of both these reports but differ from them only in the matter of the figures?

THE WITNESS: Yes, your Honor. The executions were carried out. As far as I remember there were nineth persons in Chmielnik but never 229.

THE PRESIDENT: You claim, then, that 229 is excessive?

THE WITNESS: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: What about the following paragraph where it says that your kommando took care of 506 Bolshevists and Jews in the course of fourteen days. Do you claim that figure also in incorrect?

THE WITNESS: Yes, your Honor. I just indicated this, Since this figure 229 is incorrect, doubtlessly the other figure will also be wrong. How this figure, 506, was made up, I can't imagine at all.

THE PRESIDENT: Again I say I am not attempting to argue with you, out I am wondering how the report can be so correct in everything else, out yet be wrong only in the matter of the figures?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I can only explain this because the Einsatzgruppe did not think that the report by the Einsatzkommando was not high enough and on their own authority they reported higher figures. I think I can presume that almost for certain because men of the Einsatzgruppe once told me about this, that Hoffmann sent false reports to Berlin, but perhaps there is a possibility that during Dr. Rasch's investigation, more details can De found out about this.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, may I explain something briefly to you which I think still is not clarified? This concerns an execution of about ninety persons executed by the Wehrmacht. Einsatzkommando 5, that is the witness, had nothing to do with this execution, only based on the reports here he wants to prove that the reports made by Stahsleiter Hoffmann at the time are not correct.

The defendant had nothing at all to do with these executions.

THE PRESIDENT: The form and substance then of the witness's explanation is that generally the reports are true as to what. transpired there, but insofar as he is concerned only ninety people were executed, and these ninety represented individuals who had been proved guilty of sabotage and acts of violence, Is that what we take from his testimony?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. You wanted to talk about the insane persons yet, didn't you?

A. Concerning the Insane persons mentioned before, I remember that actually on one occasion I believe two persons were taken who had orders to carry out sabotage, and who were insane. A generalization of this, however, as the group report shows again, according to which the NKVD preferred to use such persons to carry out sabotage, certainly the person making the reports invented this. In the reports of Einsatzgruppe 5, this has certainly never been mentioned.

Q. I now ask you to look at Document Book II-A.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose we take our morning recess now. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. DURCHHOLD: (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz) Your Honor, in reference to the incidents described by the witness in Chmelnik and in Berdischew, there seem to be a few unclarities. Therefore, may I briefly summarize what the witness wanted to say with his testimony. September, 1941, according to the report 229 Jews were executed in Chmelnik.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If your Honors please, the explanations of defense counsel are entirely immaterial at this time. I do think at the time of the closing argument or in the closing brief, such an explanation may be made, but not just now. The. Tribunal has asked the witness what he wanted to express. He also explained to the Tribunal and the Tribunal has summarized the statements of the witness and the witness has said, "Of course, very well, that is what I was thinking," I do think a further explanation on the part of the defense counsel can be only entirely argumentative.

THE PRESIDENT: It will be unnecessary, Dr. Durchhold, to relate again what the witness said or even to summarize the evidence. If there is any specific item that you desire to direct the Tribunal's attention to, because of any misunderstanding or because of any error, we will entertain whatever you have to say on that subject.

DR. DURCHHOLD: I don't want to argue, Your Honor, about what the defendant has said. I merely wanted to correct an unclarity.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If there is something incorrect, defense counsel can make a correction by asking questions, but not by explaining himself.

THE PRESIDENT: I think that might be better. Just call the witness' attention to the particular item, and, if there is an error, he has an opportunity to correct it.

DR. DURCHHOLD: Yes, I shall ask the witness questions.

BY DR. DURCHHOLD:

Q Witness, were 229 Jews executed in Chmelnik? were some Jews.

Q Were you in Chmelnik at that time?

Q When did you hear about these executions in Chmelnik? incidents, after the executions had been carried out by the Commandant of Shmelnik.

Q Did you give this order for the executions in Chmelnik? Chmelnik.

DR. DURCHHOLD: I think this clarifies the matter.

THE PRESIDENT: When you say, "Village Commandant" you refer to the commandant of what, of what organization?

THE WITNESS: Of the German Army, Your Honor.

Q Now I refer to Document Book II-A. This is Prosecution Exhibit No. 46, page 9 of the original document, Document NO-3149, Operational Report 88, of the 19th of September, 1941. I quote on page 9 of the original, first paragraph, "Between 24 August and 30 august 1941, Einsatzkommando 5 carried through 157 executions by shooting comprising Jews, officials, and saboteurs." Witness, what is your comment on this? because during the time of this report I was in Berlin, but I would like to point out that it can be seen from the text that these are not expressly Jewish actions. In the number given, certainly, executions done by other units are also included. Maybe the erroneous reports are responsible for these figures, about which I spoke yesterday, but are responsible for these figures, about which I spoke yesterday, but I would like to draw the Tribunal's attention to the fact that in this same document in the following sentence it is pointed out that a Kommando of the Higher SS and Police Leaders executed 1,303 Jews, among them 875 Jewesses of over 12 years of age.

These incidents took place in Berditschew, but at a time when I had left Berditschew. but it is not only probable but certain that the activities of these Kommandos are also listed in the reports of the detachments of my Kommando. I personally was in Berlin during this time, and I was not carried in the reports of my group. Therefore, for this time and for the following period, I cannot take the full responsibility. I take the responsibility for the fact that my limited order was kept up to the fullest extent, even though at the beginning of August, that is, 2 weeks before this period which is mentioned here, I was given the order in Shitomir to execute all Jews who were not able to work, including women and children.

At this opportunity, I would also like to add that during my month's stay, from the 23rd of July until the 24th of August in Berditschew, 12,000 Jews were living in Berditschew. During this entire month, as far as I remember, the exception of this one single execution at the citadel, no executions took place, even though during my stay in Berditschew after the 24th of August t e order was already valid to execute all Jews not able to work. At the time about 3,000 Jews, in order to be able to preserve them as workers, were employed in the airport in Berditschef. BY THE PRESIDENT: out, what do you mean by your "limited order"? phases of the order are to be considered; since I was not in Pretsch at the time the Fuehrer order given there by Streckenbach was unknown to me.

Q I don't want the whole history; just what was your "limited order"?

A Dr. Rasch gave the order, according to which functionaries, saboteurs, that is, functionaries, altogether, agents, and so forth, were to be executed. I limited this order, insofar as I told my detachment commanders in every case that guilt would have to be proved.

Q Yes. Now you say that this was carried out, that your limited order was respected even in your absence?

Q This sentence which you read from the report states, "Between 24 August and 30 August, 1941, Einsatzkommando 5 carried through 157 executions by shooting, comprising Jews, officials and saboteurs." your limited and qualified order.

A Your Honor, I can't say whether this report is correct, because during this time I was in Berlin and I did not see the reports. I merely wanted to point out that from the number alone, it seemed to me to be correct, because it is my conviction that the order which was issued at the beginning of August, according to which all Jews not fit to work were to be shot, was not carried out. the ones who were executed, would it not be reasonable to suppose that Jews were executed only because they were Jews, because, since you also listed officials and saboteurs, if the Jews had been killed, because they were saboteurs, then they would come within that classification and not merely because they were Jews.

A Your Honor, that is the way it was. I pointed out that the Jews were not merely shot because they were Jews, but only if they were actually active as functionaries, saboteurs, agents, and so forth. You can see this from my report or from the reports of my detachment commanders it can also be seen. That is why I said at the beginning that the Einsatzgruppe made up their own reports, but beyond that Berlin also changed the orders and they did not reporduce those facts which my detachment commanders reported. A report which was made out by my detachment commanders looked about as follows: "So-and-so many saboteurs or functionaries or looters were executed," and then perhaps they mentioned among these there were so-and-so many Jews. That about is the way the reports read which came from my detachment commanders. what is said in here has nothing to do with my own reports. the report, does not exclude the interpretation that under "Jews" you could have had also women and children, because you have in two other categories, officials and saboteurs? but I believe I can depend on the reliability of my commander who never reported to me about an execution of women and children.

Q Well, now, let me ask you just one question very specifically: Do you accept this statement in the report as is? Jews there could be included women and children? it can of course, be assumed that that was the case.

Q That it could have included women and children? Let me out it this way: This statement as it now reads could be interpreted that some people were killed only because they were Jews and within the group of Jews there could have been women and children, but you now tell us that this is incorrect and that as a matter of fact no women and children were killed.

Is that what we want to draw from what you have said? says that 875 Jewish women were killed and they became women Jewesses only because they were beyond the age of 12, so that, therefore, that could have included also young girls. Now do you refute that part of the report also?

A No, Your Honor. I just said that here the Kommandos of the Higher SS and Police Leaders actually executed women and children as Jews. Because of this I wanted to point out that this took place despite the existence of my order, despite of this order. These did not take place in my Kommando, because I went to Berlin to object to this order to shoot women and children. I wanted to prevent this, but on the part of the Higher SS and Police Leaders it did take place.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand your explanation. BY DR. DURCHHOLD (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz) order to shoot women and children? which women and children were executed by any detachment of Einsatzkommando 5? Jewesses under 12 years of age? Kommando did not cooperate.

Q Now I come to Document Book II-C; this is the Document NO-3146, Operational Report 94 of the 25th of September, 1941, Prosecution Exhibit 81, page 15 of the original document. I quote the second paragraph, second sentence:

"Einsatzkommando 5, for the period between 31 August and 6 September 1941, reports the liquidation of 90 political officials and 290 Jews;"

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWADL: Your Honor, that's on page 64 of the English Document Book, last paragraph.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I have located it. Thank you.

Q Witness, please comment on this: one, during this period I was in Berlin. Here I would like to point out that the activity of the Higher SS and Police Leaders is mentioned particularly. It says there that his units in the Month of August executed 44,125 persons, mostly Jews. I point out the activities of these units again and again, because I am convinced of the fact that the Einsatzkommandos of Einsatzgruppe C were charged with the figures of these units for a great part. made report of its own all about executions or that the Einsatzgruppe C in whose area Jakeln worked included their figures in its own reports? gruppe C can be shown that they are mentioned along in the report, but I would like to point this out. I may seem tasteless if I express myself in this way, but with the everlasting pressure to report figures, it is completely possible that the detachment leaders in order to spare their men and make life easier for themselves reported some executions which were carried out by others as their own. I would like to say that I myself looked for a way out and I gave my detachment commanders a way out to be able to give erroneous reports, misleading reports, for instance, to have them report that in a certain locality so many Jews lived formerly abd now only so many are listed, and the fact that some of them fled should not be mentioned, but just left open in order to make it seem to the Group Staff that an Einsatzkommando actually killed those people.

perhpas it is to be criticized, but it is a way out of a desparate situation and it is too entirely possible that Herr Hoffmann whom I knew personally was so ambitious for figures and thus satisfied his desire from these reports and even exaggerated them and that he added zeros and therefore reported completely distorted facts and that he used such means to gain attention when I was in Shitomir already.

Q Now please look at Document Book II-A. This is in reference to Operational Report 1-11 of the 12th of October, 1941, Prosecution Exhibit No. 38, Document NO-3155 on page 4 of the original document, second paragraph. I quote: Einsatzkommando 5 in the time of the 7th of September until the 5th of October executed 207 political functionaries, 112 saboteurs and looters, as well as 8,800 Jews." Witness, please comment on this.

A. Quite apart from the fact that this report covered a period of 15 days, which was after I left the command, the story I told you shows that I did not give such an order. I can say the same thing with certainty about my detachment who, around the 25th or 26th of September 1941, were ordered back to Berlin and were already in Berlin at the latest by the 1st of October 1941. This is doubtless an action which took place after I was relieved. I would like also to point out that after I returned from Berlin, which was about the 15th of September, and where I expected my already designated successor in Skwira, I no longer received any more reports and I did not see any more reports. The detachment leaders who during my Week's stay in Skwira were with me in conference., did not tell me of any type of action, with the exception of the fact that in the entire area the units of the Higher So and Police Leaders were especially active there. With this I do not want to say that the Einsatzkommando did net carry out any executions when I was in Skwira; they certainly did take place wherever it was necessary. But the prosecution seems to have documents according to which these executions took place in Berditschew, or near Berdischew, for it says in the indictment, on page 13, by using the same figures and dates, under "S", I quote: "During the time of the 7th of September 1941 to the 5th of October 1941, Einsatzkommando 5 in the surroundings of Berditschew murdered 8,800 Jews and 207 political functionaries." In this document the mention of this locality is missing. As I said, my Einsatzkommando left Berditschew on the 26th of August. My small Commando staff was used in a school in Skwira. Skwira is about 90 kilometers east of Berditschew. The three other detachments were moved to places which were even further east, about 80 to 100 kilometers east of Skwira, that is, 150 kilometers away from Berditschew.

As long as I was in Skwira - and that takes in the' period of 15 September to 24 September - no detachment of Einsatzkommando 5 left its garrison in a westerly direction, perhaps these things are connected with the advance in Kiev - I cannot say that - for Einsatzkommando 5 went to Kiev after leaving Skwira. This can be gathered in Document Book 1, Exhibit No. 30, Document No-3140, page 150 of the German tent, page 9 of the original. There it says:

"A Vorkommando "(that is, an advance detachment) "of the Sonderkommando 4a left by Obersturmfuehrers Haefner and Janssen, 50 men strong, arrived on 19 September 1941 with the fighting troop in Kiev. The advance detachment of the Gruppe arrived there on the 12st of September, while the Gruppe staff followed on the 25th of September." they are important for me when I was recalled from Skwira.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we understand, witness, that you are telling us that the statement in the report contained in Document NO-3155 regarding the activities of Einsatzkommand 5 is in error, and that instead of Einsatzkommand 5 it was Sonderkomnando 4a, is that what we are to gather from you now?

THE WITNESS: No, your Honor, I didn't want to say that. I merely pointed out that Einsatzkommando 5 was not even in Berditschew, but was about 100 to 150 kiloments away from Berditschew, and the document which I just mentioned shows that Einsatzkommando 5 soon afterwards arrived in Kiev. I don't know whether Einsatzkommando 5, after I was recalled, was committed in Berditschew. As long as I was in Skwira during this week which I mentioned, Einsatzkommando 5 was not in Berditschew.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I believe the witness made a mistake. He meant Kiev. Not Berditschew.

WITNESS: Yes, Berditschew. According to the indictment these 8,800 Jews were killed in the vicinity of Berditschew.

THE PRESIDENT: But wherein do you draw this explaination about Einsatzkommando 5 from Document No-3140? Did you understand my question?

WITNESS: I have the document NO-3140 in front of me.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, well, you read from that document from what you read you now tell us that perhaps Einsatzkommando 5 was in the area of Kiev. How do you draw that conclusion from this document.

WITNESS: On page 16 of the original of this document it says,--

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, very well; I have found that. And that explains what you Were telling us. Why, then, did you read about Sonderkommando 4a? What did that have to do with the story? That Sonderkommando was in Kiev.

WITNESS: I merely read the text, your Honor, in order to show that first of all the Gruppe staff was in Kiev, and secondly, Einsatzkommando 5 was together with the Gruppe. I didn't want to say anything about Commando 4a. I merely wanted to mention a sentence which began with that.

THE PRESIDENT: It seems to me that if you had merely called our attention to page 16 of the original you would have achieved all that because paragraph 2 on page 16 maked Sonderkommando 4a and Einsatzkommando 5 stationed in Kiev, isn't that correct?

WITNESS: Yes, your Honor. That is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: That is just a little excursion then, when you read about 4a in the first paragraph of page 9.

WITNESS: I don't understand your question, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: WELL, it isn't important. I was only calling attention to the fact that you read a statement which in no way bore out your contention that Einsatzkommando 5 was in Kiev - whereas if you had read from page 16 that would have explained it to us at once, and what we went through seems wasted motion, that's all.

WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Proceed. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. Now I am coming to Document Book II-C, Exhibit 75, Document NO-3404-A, Operational Report 119, of the 20th of October 1941. This Operational Report mentions Einsatzkommando 5, and says that in Uman and in other cities this Commando was active.

Witness, what do you have to say about this?

A. Here I can only say the same as I said about the preceding document. I received no reports about these actions from my detachments since the report mentioned here reports about a period of time when I was already in Berlin. About the incidents in Uman I can say nothing. They are completely unknown to me. No one discussed incidents in Uman with me. The city of Uman itself did not belong to my area at all. Therefore, I consider it probable in this case, too, that the command of the Higher SS and Police Leader was active there. How Uman got into the reports of Einsatzkommando 5 I cannot say at all. I personally was never questioned, nor have I ever given an order to go to Unman. Uman itself is several hundred kilometers away from Skwira. Einsatzkommando was divided into three detachments -- the detachment which was closest to it, namely, in Swenigorodka, was also 100 kilometers away from Uman; and I again hope this is not considered COURT II-A CASE IX in bad taste - but I consider it technically impossible that such a small detachment which consisted of about 30 people could, on one single day, execute 1,400 Jews.

Here, too, I can only say that I have never given such a report, and that I would not have given such an order. Quite apart from the fact that on the 23rd of September I handed over my command to my successor. I only mention it because this mentions a plan, and if a plan had proceded this action, I would doubtlessly have known about it. I may ask that Dr. Rasch be interrogated about this during his examination. I can say nothing about Uman.

Q. Witness, the Prosecution charges you in a number of other documents with having participated in executions. These are the documents which are contained in Document Book II-C, Exhibit No. 72, Document No. 2850, that is the Operational Report 132 of the 12th of November 1941. Then, in the same Document Book, Document No. 2832, Exhibit 79, that is the Operational Report 135 of the 19th of November 1941; and in the same book, Document No. 2827, Exhibit 74, that is Operational Report 143 of the 8th of December 1941. What do you have to say about these documents?

A. They all were made out after my time, and, of course, I cannot say anything about them. It may be of interest to look at Exhibit 72 in Document Book II-C, Document No. 2832, that is Operational Report 132, on page 19 of the original.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you say Operational Report No. 132? Here it is listed as 135.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: 132, your Honor. 132, 135 and 143.

Witness: It might be useful to mention Operational Report 132, even though this is after my time and have nothing to say about it. I mention it only to underling the incorrectness and inexactitude of the report and to show that Einsatzkommandos are charged with things with which they had nothing to do. In Operational Report 132, on page 19 of the original-

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: 135 of the English document book, your Honor.

WITNESS: It says that Einsatzkommando 5 executed, from the 28th of September to the 4th of October, so and so many functionaries in Kriwoi-rog; and in the time of the 28th September until the 4th of October it killed so and so many functionaries in Dnepopetrowsk.

book, Exhibit 79, Document 2832, page 57 of the German. There it says, on page 22 of the original-

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Page 57 of the English, your Honor.

WITNESS: (continuing)... that "Einsatzkommando 5 is busy in the district of the Dnjeprbogen (bend of the Dnjepr) since the 6th of October 1941. Apart from extensive rural districts the following towns, all of a definitely industrial character and densely populated", namely, Dnjepropetrowsk, etc. This shows that Einsatzkommando 5 was not at all active in this area but that this was the area of Einsatzkommando 6. I mention this merely to underline the unreliability of the reports. Otherwise, I have nothing to say about the other documents because they are after my time. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. May I make a concluding question. According to the indictment, letters "U", "V" and "W" - the witness as leader of Einsatzkommando 5 is charged with having participated in executions which took place from the 20th of October 1941 to the 24th of January 1942.

Witness, were you in Russia during this time at all?

A. About the 28th or 29th of September 1941 I returned to Berlin from Russia, and after that time I never returned to Russia.

Q. And at what time did you officially hand over the command of Einsatzkommando 5?

A. I handed over my command just when Kiev was captured. That is why I mention the dates from the document, in order to emphasize that at the latest, one or two days after Kiev was taken, I turned over my command to Obersturmbannfuehrer Mayer.

Q. Were you ever in Kiev?

A. NO; from Skwira I went by way of Berditschew back to Berlin.

Q. In your Einsatzkommando 5, did you ever order measures against Gypsies or so-called racially inferior people?

A. No, I don't know such an order at all.

Q. Was there a gas van in Einsatzkommando 5?

A. No, not during my time.

Q. Do you know of any mistreatment of prisoners of war and of civilian populations?

A. They are unknown to me. They would have been severely punished by me, for the detachment commanders -I told the detachment commanders, and at every other fitting opportunity, not to commit any indecensies or mistreatment, and to conduct themselves decently and cleanly at all times.

Q. Did your Commando carry out any destruction of personal property?

A. No, I don't know of any single case where such a destruction was carried out.

Q. The prosecution charges that valuables were taken from the victims or from the people to be executed. What do you know about this?

A. In my Einsatzkommando this was not the case. Such valuables were given to the relatives of the victims. If such relatives were not present these valuables were handed over to Einsatzgruppe as per order. How the Einsatzgruppe disposed of them, I don't know. I can merely remember that some cash of insignificant value was handed over to the Einsatzgruppe. Valuables were not present at all.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, this concludes the examination of the witness in the Russian assignment. After this I want to come back to his activity in the Office I of the R SHA.

And then, in conclusion, to his activity in Salzburg as the local police chief. I believe that I shall conclude the direct examination after a short While, but I consider this a proper time for a recess.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Before we recess: Mr. Hochwald, these two localities mentioned by Dr. Durchholz -- Salzburg and Berlin -- insofar as the offices of the RSHA are concerned -- do they come within the purview of the charges in the indictment?

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Certainly not as far as the activity of the defendant in Berlin is concerned.

THE PRESIDENT: Is he charged with any crime committed in Berlin or Salzburg?

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: No, he is not, sir. This question would only be relevant as to a decision on Count No. 3.

THE PRESIDENT: I see, Is that your purpose, Dr. Durchholz?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will be in recess until one forty-five.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1345 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: The Tribunal please, inasmuch as the witness has finished his testimony concerning Counts One and Two of the Indictment, and of what the witness is going to say now, can only have a certain relevency as to Count Three of the Indictment, the Prosecutiln is willing to concede that in the RSHA after his return from Russia. and in his position asinspector of the SIPO and SD in Salzburg, the witness did not commit any act and did not reveive any knowledge which would have made him guilty on Count Three in the Indictment, that in order to save time and to make the trial expedient.

THE PRESIDENT: We gather from what you say then, that whatever the defendant is charged with in the Indictment, has or has not been answered by the testimony up to this point, and that anything further which might be said would shed no more light on Count Three.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That is correct, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: And you are willing to concede that regardless of what he might say in connection with his activity in Berlin, and in Salzburg, it would not incriminate him under Count Three.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: We want to submit that, when he says now, and I do expect he will say so, that he did nothing incriminating in the period after returning from Russia and in Salzburg and Berlin, so we will submit to this statement.

THE PRESIDENT: Count Three is rather a broad Count. Insofar asthe defendant would testify to what happened following his return to Berlin, the Tribunal understands that the Prosecution does not charge him with participating in any criminality after that time.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Therefore, efforts on that point would be irrelevent.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Yes, that is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: But if the witness might want to explain what he did in Berlin before in order to expulgate himself from the charge under Count Three, then that would be relevant.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That is what we understand, but the witness has already testified, and the testimony of the witness from now on should come at the time after ids return to Berlin, in the beginning of November 1941, until the end of the war, and what I want to express to the Tribunal is that we see the liability of the witness under Count Three any time previous, first, let's state the date as 1 November 1941-

THE PRESIDENT: Until the termination of his activity in Russia.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchlolz; what have you to say to this?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, the defendant is charged under Count Three because he was amember of the SS after 1 September 1939, and remained a member of the SS after that date. The IMT had determined, that a defendant is guilty if he remained a member of this organization which has been declared criminal after that date and asto his direct examination the witness has given detailed statements that he does not want to identify himself with the crimes committed by this organization, He showed the reasons which were decisive for him to act in the manner as he did, and he wants now to prove the reasons why he remained in this organization, that is, only to be mitigating, and insofar as any crimes were ordered, after his assignment in Russia, to avoid such crimes. For that reason it is important for the defense that he may prove his personal attitude as to individual events, and his position later. Of particular importance seems to be the attitude he adopted in Salzburg later, and may I say that the witness in Salzburg received the well known Air Force Order, according to which the parachutists of the enemy who had jumped, without interference from the police, should be lynched by the excited population.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, now that you understand the position of the Prosecution, you may proceed with your examination of the defendant, keeping in mind it is not necessary to respond to any charge along the lines mentioned by Mr. Hochwald. You may examine him, but perhaps you may do it a little more briefly than you had intended orginally, because of the concession made by the Prosecution.

DR. DURCHHOLD: Very well. I shall try to make the questions as brief as possible, but I consider it necessary to give an overall picture of the personality of the witness. I therefore ask that I may address the questions as I had intended to.

THE PRESIDENT : You may proceed.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. Witness, after returning from Russia, you were in command of the Officers Training School of the Security Police again, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Before your assignment to Russia, and after your assignment in Russia, you tried through directives you gave to the participants to show them how to conduct themselves asfuture police leaders. May I ask you very briefly, with a few brief words to explain the attitude which you asked the participants to take?

A. I shall try to be as brief aspossible. First of all I'll answer the question whether this has no connection and no relevency. Owing to my experiences in Russia I felt it to be my duty to train the young officers at the Officers Training School very carefully. As a basic idea I always told them that they had to be an example, becuase a living. example is the best education. I pointed out to them the difference between the ideas of being a leader and being a superior. First of all I used the phrase, "Master Race," the slogan "Master Race" and gave them two explanations, which in German sounds so very similar, and yet they are so entirely different, namely, the socalled "Master Race" or "Master man," and the socalled"Masterly man", or the "domineering man"? I compared these ideas to other ideas as well, which in my opinion were often misused drastically, the ideas of strictness on the one hand and, brutality on the other hand, and at the same time the difference between weakness and kindness.

Many people can not see any difference between them. Finally, I also got the concept of selection, which particularly within the SS was a very important word. I clearly said that within the Security Police we were further from representing a selection, and we had to try everything possible through energy and hard work, and by giving our best to become better, but that we could only consider ourselves to be a selection when, using fair self-criticion, we could say that the least one amongst us was as good as the best amongst an average man. I particularly emphasized that it was of importance to be humane and chivalrous.

Q. You then became chief of Gruppe-I-A in the Reich Security Main Office, were you not? While there did you have anything to do with the executive there?

A. No, the Group-I-A was that group within Office-I which dealt with personnel questions. They were subdivided into six referatedepartments. If I may tell you about the departments of the Referate and what they dealt with: Department -I dealt with general official measures, distinctions, terms, and employing personnel in occupied territory.

Department 2 dealt with personnel files of State police. Department 3 with personnel filesof the criminal police. Department 4, the personnel files of the SD. Department 5 SS matters. Here, in all the departments of the Security Police all matters of promotions were dealt with; from here it went to personnel Main Office, which decided promotions. The RSHA were not entitled to promote anyone on their own authority with the SS. They also had no authority to regulate the reasons for promotions. They were strictly laid down, and had to be followed according to the proscribed measures. Department 6 which later came to Office-II, dealt with and looked after the relatives of people who had fallen in battle, and the casualties. Then there was a department for organization which merely dealt with organizational affairs of the inner construction,

Q. Then you became chief of Office-I. Please tell us in one sentence what Office-I meant?

A. Office-I dealt with personnel matters. Previously they had been connected with Office-II. When Streckenbach went to the WaffenSS, those two offices were separated completely. Office-I then had four departments: Group I-A which I have just mentioned, personnel; Group I-B, training and education, about which I have already talked, and---

THE PRESIDENT: Your attorney said to answer in one sentence. Now you were to give us a brief outline of the office. It might be interesting but to go into any long detail discussion of all the movements and mechinationsof the Office is scarcely necessary.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. Another question, witness. Did you have any close connection with Himmler?

A. No, I had no connection with Himmler, except during four lectures, when sofar as I remember he was in Hamburg, and one in Koenigsberg, once in Berlin, and once in Salzburg, when he talked to the counter intellegence.

Apart from that I had no connections with Himmler. During these lectures, I did not have any close contact with Himmler. I never went to him with discussions.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you hear his Posen speech in October 1943?

A. No, Your Honor. Sofar as I wasinformed, only the group of leaders, that is, people above the rank of group leaders participated in those meetings. I myself wasnever in Posen. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q. Now I'll talk about your last activity in Salzburg. Where and what was your task when you went to Salzburg? March 1944 I was relieved from my job as Office Chief, and sent to Salzburg as commander of the Security Police. It was not of any importance that I held a rank of Chief of the Security Police only as an honorary rank, because actually I was nothing but an inspector. My intention to use this position to give orders was refused to me by Berlin at the time. If I had the title of Commander of the Security Police, this was only because with that title I wason equal basis with the office chiefs, while the title "inspector" would have meant down grading. I started to work in Salzburg on 1 May 1944. At the same time I was in the section North of the Drau as representative of the Higher Police and SS Leader Obergruppenfuehrer Rossler, who was handling a special task in Laibach, and there dealt with the anti-band actions south of the Drau River, and he was quite independent in his power as commander. His representative in this field was SS-Brigadefuehrer General Hahn. My position as such remained the same asit had been in Hamburg.

Q. Now in the Salzburg special events occurred about which, in your official position, you had to explain what your attitude was. What were they?

A. Apart from the constant events which also made some impression four big events are of most important ones. On 20 July 1944, the socalled Air Force Order, "Fliegerbefehl", which had become known as"Augen zu erlass", taking over the POW Department from the Reichfuehrer--SS, and finally the actual capitualtion, from that, if I am asked to state my opinion about these events now that I have to be brief, I can only mention the fact that I managed in Salzburg to deal with the events on 20 July in such a manner that they took place without any great interference on the part of the population. In comradely cooperation with the commanding general in Salzburg I could solve these problems, and no arrests were carried out, and no measures were taken and no persons were involved. About the same time a top secret order, the air force order wasgiven, which had become known under the name of ' 'Augen/zu/Befehl'. I was instructed myself to make this order known in the agencies in the proper manner. Apart from that I didn't agree with.

I considered these announcements a great danger, the results might have been dangerous, and for that reason I put it into the safe and didn't announce it.

Q. Will you please state what the contents of this order were?

were?

A Yes. Actually it had become known incorrectly, and that is what I wanted to explain. I did announce this order later because it was talked about, and it was said that this order contained something, that all parachutists were to be shot. I then announced this order because I had to prove to the commanders that the shooting of parachutists was not at all mentioned in this order, but that merely the police had been instructed not to take a part if the population lynched parachutists who came down. The police was not to interfere with this. That was one reason why I did not announce this order. I could never understand that the police, who should look after order and security, should permit injustice.

In Salzburg too, no difficulties arose. Parachutists who came down were handed over to the Wehrmacht officers. In one case one airman was saved out of the River Salzach by the police.

About August 1944 Reichfuehrer Himmler became chief of the POW's and the Higher SS and Police Leaders became higher commanders of the POW's within intelligence service. Since the Higher SS and Police Leader was absent from Salzburg, on my own authority, although I was not competent to do this, I took responsibility for the POW department. In very many cases I could help POW's. Most of all in spite of some officers, during heavy air attack I gave them opportunity to go into air-raid shelters and saw to it in every way that even under the most difficult conditions Red Cross parcels were sent to them, and saw to it carefully that the Geneva Contention was kept to in the strictest manner. I believe I will be able to conclude the subject because I just heard now an affidavit has arrived from the officers concerned who confirm this. I can add only that in spite of the great difficulties which occurred during the last moments of the tragedy in Salzburg, and also in the Alps Mountains no POW and no foreign workerswas done any harm. When they were given over on the day of the capitulation it Was done in the best of order without any occurrences or incidents, and Salzburg itself could also be handed over in the proper manner.

helped that Salzburg surrendered without a fight and asked the Wehrmacht and the Party officers to let Salzburg surrencer without a fight? every city was considered a fortress. The refusal to obey such orders would be dealt with by a court martial, and mostly very severe punishments were conferred. According to this Salzburg started to work on their defense. During the first discussion with the Reich Defense Commissar I managed to convince the Gauleiter and Defense Commissar of the fact that there was no sense in doing this because this city was of no military importance and it could not help operations to defend such a city at all. Since the Commanding General Ringel also followed my suggestions and the Regierungspraesident also supported my views, the Reich Defense Commissar tried to ask the higher offices whether they could avoid defending the City of Salzburg and declare Salzburg an open city, also because of the man hospitals in Salzburg at the time. At another stage I managed, with the support of the Regierungspraesident, Dr. Lauer, to convince the Reich Defense Commissar as well that the blocked region in front of Salzburg no longer should exist not to give the approaching opponent the impression that Salzburg was to be defended. We also succeeded to stop people from preparing to blow up bridges so that Salzburg as a city remained intact. The third point was merely the Alps fortress behind Salzburg, and which as such was not really a fortress at all. I did not succeed because the old 'Fuehrer decree still existed, that this Alf fortress was to be defended, and General Kesselring wanted to have this defense carried out. In this Alp fortress all authorities in Salzburg were informed in a proper manner to resist the approaching American Army, or rather to hand over the city and to surrender it in good order, which actually happened then.

and order and particularly took care of it that the 20,000 POW's which were in the Alp fortress were well looked after, and that the foreign workers were treated in a proper manner. On the day of the capitulation, without even one incident, the entire territory of Salzburg, without any signs of lack of organization, could be surrendered. Army authorities. Where was this?

A This was on the Zell Am See Lake on the day of capitulation. That is 8 May, 1945.

Q And why did you do this? the twenty-five years when I worked in the police, and the orders I had given there, I wanted to be present where my men were, whom I had led throughout this time. In the hour of the capitulation it was decisive whether I remained faithful to the basic principles which I had expressed and announced. One of these principles was in the hour of danger the leader should always be with hismen. That is why I surrendered.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, I have therewith concluded the direct examination of the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: The witness is now available for cross-examination on the part of defense counsel. BY DR. LUMMERT (for Defendant Blume): of 1941 did you come from the east and return to Berlin? because I was in Berlin one or two days before my wife's birthday. That is the 27th or 28th of August, 1941. time, of the RSHA? 28th or 29th.

at the time as well? Please answer yesor no.

Q Did he talk to you?

Q Was the Defendant Blume already in Berlin at the time?

Q What did Streckenbach tell you about Blume at the time?

A It was in accord with my own statements. When I saw Streckenbach at the time and described to him the conscience troubles of the men and also told him about my own state of mind he told me that it was the same with Blume, Blume already had been recalled because he was too soft, too humane.

Q Did Streckenbach's statement show that Blume had already returned to Berlin?

Q According to Streckenbach's statement did you understand that the Defendant Blume had tried to avoid this order for shooting as far as possible? Streckenbach explained to me that Blume was in the same state of mind as myself.

DR. LUMMERT: Thank you. I have no further questions. BY DR. GICK (For the defendant Strauch):

Q Witness, in Document Book III-A for "Apple", Exhibit 106, Document 2966, German Page 34, I am afraid I don't know the English page, there Strauch since February '42 is described as Commander of the Sipo and the SD in White Ruthenia. May I submit this document to you? Actually he is only mentioned as representative in the documents in March '42. Only on the 22nd of March, 1942, did he start his service. According to your general knowledge about the conditions in the personnel office, how does this difference in the statements in the personnel files conform with the statements in other documents concerning actual taking over of the power of command? I want to put it: from an office chief upwards was very complicated. within the official dhannels of the central office. The personnel chief did not have power of authority over the personnel entirely. When office chiefs were appointed, the Chief of the Security police had first to be asked about it. When this discussion was completed, according to his instructions, the draft was made out. It looked about as follows: At the top right there was, the date; "Berlin" -- The day wasleft open -- and the month and the year. When this order was ready the special offices also had to sign it that means that it had to be sent on to the Offices III, IV and V, so that they could eventually make an objection against the person because possibly this might concern their field of activity as a commander.

There a few days elapsed until the circulation was finally concluded in the adjutant's office of the Chief of the Security Police: it might have taken up to three weeks. Then the paper was submitted to the chief for signature, and this signature was only given after a time e.g. in cases of absence. Even there sometimes it was possible that it had to be left there for two or three weeks. This happened repeatedly, and the day of the actual signature was then given and filled in on the empty space on the top. But since many of the offices had already approved it previously, the signature of the chief could not be doubted, it happened that an order was given through teletype so that in such cases between the actual day of duty and the date of the document there were considerable differences of time. given about the middle of March and reached Defendant Strauch, about that date, and only then Strauch started to work there?

A I cannot state my opinion on Strauch's personal case, but I think there is a possibility according to what I have said previously.

Q Then a second question. Do you know from your activity with the RSHA that Strauch in White Ruthenia almost entirely worked on armed investigation of partisans, so that he wasofficially reproached that his own work as to security police information service thus was neglected?

A Yes, that is right. I know that Strauch, whether with or against his will I, cannot decide off hand, of course, had nearly got into a position of dependence towards Gruppenfuehrer von Dem Bach who took him particularly under his wing in order to use him for partisan combatting. For that reason he himself therefor was forced, particularly as his chief in the Higher Police and SS official in his district to deal with him very closely in the partisan combatting. So he was reproached for being more active in that field than in the sphere of the security police.

DR. GICK:Thank you. I have no further questions.

DR. SURHOLT: (For Defendant Dr. Rasch): The defense of Dr. Rasch asks to reserve the right to address questions to Defendant Schulz also at a later date. As reason I give the following. The defense does not know about the facts the witness just stated. My defendant himself is not present. I an, of course, not in a position on my own authority to put questions here extemporaneously.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Surholt, were you present during the examination of the Defendant Schulz? Were you present during the examination of the present defendant?

DR. SURHOLT: Yes, except for ten minutes, I believe.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you are familiar with what he has testified to.

DR. SURHOLT: Yes, I know that.

THE PRESIDENT: And you have had contact with your client right along, have you not?

DR. SURHOLT: Yes, I talked to him on Saturday, Saturday afternoon, but the witness has stated a lot today as well.

THE PRESIDENT: That is what I am leading up to, that the only part o this witness's testimony which has not now been related or related to your client is that which he testified to this morning.

DR. SURHOLT: That is not correct, because it is impossible to talk to Rasch for a long time. After about half an hour or an hour he is exhausted. Apart from that, the technical possibilities of having discussions with him are very difficult. Rasch is together in one room with several others in hospital, and it is obvious that I have to wait very long until he is taken to another room, and that is very difficult altogether, in order to discuss matters with him at all. Apart from that his mental state at the moment is such that one cannot say that his mind, is working actively now. HE makes many incorrect statements, the incorrectness of which is found later. His memory is not working so that it is very difficult to help him to understand the way the proceedings are going.

Apart from that, quite honestly, I am not in a position, -- let us say, when a defendant like Defendant Schulz is in the witness box and for two days and making statements continuously -- to remember all that, even when I make short notes, and to remember everything that might be of importance to my client, because this defendant as subordinate to Rasch and has stated a great deal concerning my client.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Surholt, what you have just stated how is not a valid excuse.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Surholt, what you have stated in the latter part of your statement is not a valid excuse because every Defense Counsel is confronted with the same situation. He listens to the witness and then he must immediately stop to the podium and begin to examine, and he must make notes as best he can. That is a lawyer's job; that is what I had to do when I was practicing law. But what you have stated with regard to the condition of your client is another matter, and certainly we give full weight to what you have said to the Tribunal so that we will permit you to do one of two things. You may, if you wish cross-examine the witness in such fields as you now feel you are sufficiently familiar with and have already talked over with your client, reserving the remainder of your cross-examination to a later day; or you may, if you wish, decline to cross-examine now and at a later date cross-examine the witness Schulz completely at one time.

DR. SURHOLT: I would prefer that.

THE PRESIDENT: You would prefer the latter?

DR. SURHOLT: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. That right will be reserved to you then.

DR. SURHOLT: Your Honor, may I address another word to the Court? I know and agree to the way you understand the duties of a Defense Counsel, but there is a great difference that after each session I cannot talk to my client about the testimony of a witness and I cannot discuss with him anything a witness may have said and ask my client to clarify it.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the very reason we made the ruling we did. Mr. Hochwald, do you have anything to say about this?

MR. HORLICH-HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, if the Defense will question at a later date the Defendant Schulz concerning his connection with Rasch and so on may the right be reserved to the Prosecution to cross-examine Schulz on such questions which may arise out of this, later?

THE PRESIDENT: That right naturally follows, Mr. Hochwald, will be reserved to the Prosecution.

Any other Defense counsel ready? BY DR. HOFFMANN: (Counsel for Defendant Nosske) Q.- Witness, you were personnel expert in the RSHA?

A.- Yes.

Q.- In that position you had to know about all institutions in the RSHA, did you not? Not the way they worked, perhaps, but about the fact of their existence?

A.- Yes.

Q.- I would now like to ask you: Was there a top staff in the organization of the Einsatzgruppen?

A.- I have never heard of that expression.

Q.- Was there a Staff Command of Security Police and SD?

A.- I have never heard that description either.

Q.- And now only one more question to you. Could you tell me your views about the way in which orders were passed on? That is, the Hitler Decree, and the official channels through which it was sent to the various agencies of the Einsatzkommandos?

A.- Yes, I believe that this official channel is very clear. First of all, it must have come from the Fuehrer himself. For the Police in its entirety it must have come via Himmler;from Himmler it must have gone via the Main Office Chiefs, that is at least by the Chief of the Main office of the Police, the Regular Police, because such men had been put at their disposal. And for the Security Office, via the Chief of the Security Police-- that is Heydrich-- then it must have been handed down in such a manner that the Einsatzgruppen were informed by the Einsatzgruppen chiefs and the Einsatzkommando leaders were informed by the Einsatzgruppen chiefs.

BY DR. MAYER (Counsel for defendant Steimle):

Q.- Witness, as a former Gruppen chief for personnel questions in the RSHA, do you know anything about the way Steimle was transferred to Office VI?

A.- The Chief of Office VI, Schellenberg, dealt with Steimle's transfer and tried to achieve it for some time. I remember that at the time I tried very hard to get Steimle to Office VI because Schellenberg at the time was just setting up his office, and Himmler bothered him very much in this, and almost daily either he or his experts were in my office in order to try to get some personnel. I therefore tried to bring Steimle there as well, particularly as Steimle himself would have liked to go there. If I remember correctly, basically his office chief, Ohlendorf had approved this.

Q.- And why did you not succeed in this?

A.O Steimle's transfer for Office VI was put aside by Streckenbach temporarily. What detailed reasons were decisive for this, I do not know However, they may have consisted in the fact that between the two office chiefs there was not very much close cooperation.

I want to add something. Schellenberg's requests for personnel at the time went to such an extent that they could not have been confirmed.

Q.- In any case, Streckenbach refused, isn't that right?

A.- Yes.

Q.- Did you know whether Schellbenback tried to have Steimle transferred to Office VI at such a time when Steimle was already in command of a Kommando in Russia?

A.- Yes, I also remember that. The Russian Campaign was decisive for Schllenberg to call me up at my office and to inquire about the position regarding Steimle. On that occasion he told me "If Steimle goes to Russia now I surely won't have a chance of getting him to my office for a long time to come." For that same reason, if I remember cor rectly, that same day I tried again and asked Streckenbach to give us Steimle.

Streckenbach told me then that Steimle, after he had finished in Russia, would be sent to Office VI, Q.- How did you manage to get Steimle to Office VI after all -- and earlier than Streckenbach had intended this to happen?

A.- I think Streckenbach did not have anything to do with that because, if I remember correctly, shortly after I took over Office I, Steimle was sent to Office VI.

Q.- When did this happen?

A.- I took over Office 1 on 1 February 1943.

Q.- And soon after you transferred -

A.- I cannot remember all the details but I know that it was very soon after, because Schellenberg would not let go.

Q.- Thank you, BY DR.FRITZ (Counsel for Defendant Fendler):

Q.- Witness, since when have you known the defendant Fendler?

A.- I met Fendler when I got the order, in the spring of 1943, to take an Einsatzkommando in Oppelm. In this Einsatzkommando Fendler was assigned to me as an SD expert.

Q.- What jobs did he have at the time when he was SD expert in the Kommando?

A.- The tasks of the Einsatzkommanders at the time were such that as long as the army itself was mobile they looked after the locations, housings, and saw to it that a proper office was set up. was Fendler's task to make these preparations for a final office.

Q.- Was the manner in which this SD Office, was set up and founded the same as in the agencies in the Reich?

A.- I think I can say that they were exactly the same.

Q.- Do I understand you correctly to gag that Defendant Fendler at the time, even when Czechoslovakia was occupied, was not active in the executive staff?

A.- He had nothing to do with the executive staff. The executive tasks were dealt with by a Criminal Commissar.

Q.- In the year 1940 Fendler became a candidate for the so-called Executive Service (Leitender Dienst). Will you please inform the Tribunal what was considered to be the Executive Service?And candidate for Executive service?

A.- This position was set up as a result of the shortage of personnel owing to the war. Since all available personnel were put at the disposal of the Wehrmacht and the command offices and since the police and the Wehrmacht themselves who legally had the duty of handing on men stopped to transfer men, the Security Police was in an emergency state, to supply their own candidates for leaders and chiefs. For that reason, a great number of men were chosen whose abilities were above the averabe. Their character had to be good enough for this, as well. After they were selected these men were put together in special training courses, and had to study law at one of the universities. When they completed this law course and had trained with the administrative offices, such as the County Councillor, the Government President, and so forth, these men then passed their final State examination before the Main Testing Commissioner, in Berlin. They became assessors and started their careers in the Executive Service. Throughout this training they were called Candidates in the Executive Service.

Q.- They studied law like any other students at a German university?

A.- They had to matriculate and graduate from the university; they had to satisfactorily complete all the terms; they had to take part in lectures; they had to participate in seminars, and do every bit of it.

Q.- During that time, did they cease to work in their official capacity?

A.- During the time of the course, they were excused from their offices which they held, because they had been taken from all departments and during this time they belonged to Office I, and Office I looked after them.

Q.- When Fendler was a candidate for the Executive Staff just like the other candidates, in the summer of 1941, was he sent to Pretsch, on the Elbe River, and from there ordered to go to an Einsatzkommando, or did he volunteer to do this?

A.- The candidates for training for this Executive Staff, at the order of the Chief of the Security Police, in May 1941, owing to the lack of leaders at the time, were all given jobs and ordered to go to Pretsch. This was a military order and therefore nobody could volunteer, of course.

Q.- Were these candidates informed in Berlin as to the purpose of their job?

A.- No, they were not informed about this, and nobody could have done this because there was nobody who knew it himself.

Q.- Did the candidates have the opportunity to object to going to Pretsch?

A.- First of all, one could not object because that would have been military disobedience; and, secondly, there was no reason for it.

Q.- Were the candidates informed about all this in Pretsch, what tasks the Einsatzkommandos had and what their job were to be in the East?

A.- I cannot state in detail about this because I don't know about any such order, but I don't think so because if these candidates of the Executive Staff were given more detailed information this information would have reached the leaders in my command as well and they would have told me about it.

Q.- Did you meet Fendler in Russia during the assignment?

A.- No.

Q.- Do you know who was the Commander of Einsatzkommando IV-B?

A.- The Commander of Einsatzkommando IV-B was Oberregierungsrat Hermann. I know him very well personally because he was in charge of this training course and had also been at the officers' candidate school.

Q.- Can you tell me any more details about the attitude of Hermann in his office?

A.- Hermann was the typical German civil servant; very conscientious correct down to the last detail, sometimes even correct to such an extent that one could consider him pedantic.

Q.- Defendant Fendler states that Hermann, from the beginning of the assignment until September 1941, never was on leave and never left the Kommando for any other reason either. Do you know anything about this?

A.- I know this for the same reasons as I have said before. Hermann was in charge of the training course, this training course for the candidates of the Executive Staff, and I expected him to return to Berlin. When I returned to Berlin Hermann had not yet arrived, but he arrived a few days later so that I know that during the Russian Campaign he was not in Berlin.

Q.- How long did Fendler belong to the Executive Staff, and when did he complete his training?

A.- He belonged to one of the first selective training courses? If I remember correctly, it must have been in 1940. And he also was one of the first to pass the final examination. That was in the fall of 1943.

Q.- That should have been in August. Is that possible?

A.- Yes, that is quite possible.

Q.- Where was Fendler transferred to after that?

A.- When they finished their studies and when they had passed their assessor's examination, the candidates for the Executive Staff were sent back to the different departments of the Security Police, and according to the request and their ability they were trained in several branches. At the time, Fendler, was sent to Office VI.

Q.- What did they deal with there?

A.- Foreign Defense.

Q.- could a member of the SD or a candidate for the Executive Staff during the war leave the SD?

A.- Of course that was not possible because, according to orders, it had been prohibited. Heydrich considered any such request, tantamount to desertion.

Q.- Are you able to give your private opinion and your official opinion of the defendant Fendler?

A.- So many people passed through the Officers' Training School that I do not remember every one in detail, of course, and cannot judge them. But I think I can state briefly that Herr Fendler if he had not been perfect, officially; if his character had not been good, he would hat have been able to remain in the training course. I think that is the general judgment I can give.

DR. FRITZ (Counsel for Defendant Fendler): I have no further questions, Your Honor. During the examination of Schulz it was pointed out to me that the Interpreter once interpreted Executive Service rather than Leading Service. Might the word not be translated as Leading Service -- rather than Executive Service? The Prosecution pointed it out to me that that is the correct translation.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, do you agree that this correction is in order?

MR. HORLICH-HOCHWALD: I do think that the translation "Executive Service" for Leitender Dienst is much better an explanation than Leading Executive.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. Aschenauer (Attorney for the Defendant Ohlendorf):

Q: Witness, do I take it from the answer to one of the counsel's questions about the channel of the Fuehrer order and about the execution of certain people in Russia that you claim that in all cases it first went to the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe and then later to the Einsatzkommando leaders and not as it has been stated previously in Pretsch, to all Einsatzgruppen chiefs and to all Einsatzkommando chiefs?

A: I answered the question of Dr. Hoffmann the way I understood it. He asked me what thenormal channel was. I didn't know the say it was presented in Pretsch because I wasn't there. If the Deputy of the Chief of the Security Police presented this order before the Einsatzgruppe Chiefs and the Einsatzkommando chiefs, in such a case a repeated order to the Einsatzkommando leaders would be unnecessary.

DR. ASCHENAUER: Thank you. I have no further question.

DR. MAYER (Attorney for the Defendant Steimle): Your Honor, I ask that the Defendant Steimle be excused from court tomorrow, Tuesday and the next day, Wednesday, so that we can prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Steimle will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow, which is Tuesday, and Friday so that he may prepare his defense.

DR. MAYER: Wednesday, Your Honor, not Friday.

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry. Tuesday and Wednesday.

DR. MAYER: Thank you.

DR. HOFFMANN (Attorney for the Defendant Nosske): Your Honor, would you permit me another question to the witness?

THE PRESIDENT: We always permit you another question, Dr. Hoffmann.

BY DR. HOFFMANN (For Defendant Nosske):

Q: Witness, may I ask you, you were the leader of an Einsatzkommando?

A: Yes.

Q: To whom did you feel responsible about the order which you received, to the Fuehrer himself or to your Einsatzgruppe Chief?

A: First of all to my Einsatzgruppe Chief.

Q: And why?

A: That was my next superior to whom I had to report.

Q: Only to report?

A: Yes, I also got my directives from him and I have also said that I received my orders from my Einsatzgruppe Chief personally. The first one received in Lemberg, and the second one in Shitomir.

DR. HOFFMANN: Thank you. BY DR. KLINERT (Attorney for the Defendant Seibert):

Q: Witness, I have a few questions. In Document Book III-D, German text. page 83, Document No-2969, Exhibit 162 -- do you have this document? On the promotion sheet of Seibert among the experts of Amt I SS Brigadier General Schulz is mentioned. Are you SSBrigadier General Schulz?

A: Yes. Then I was Group Chief I-A.

Q: Do you make any claims about the correctness and completeness of these orders, or are there mistakes possible?

A: Yes, mistakes are possible.

Q: How are these mistakes to be explained?

A: Unfortunately, and I have regretted this several times, there are mistakes in filing. That is first of all because the various agencies did not keep their records up to date. Often it was the fault of the person himself, when he forgot to inform us about any changes which were important, but which did not seem important to him.

Sometimes some mistaken statements might appear so that the files were not in every way correct. Certainly they could not guarantee not to make mistakes.

Q: Did mistakes occur frequently?

A: Yes, very frequently. Since you ask me that, I remember one case when a man was refused promotion by Himmler because after having been married for a long time lie had only one child. I tried to clarify this matter and I found out that this man had four children already, but he himself had forgotten to list those four children on his files so that there was a mistake.

A: That is enough for this point. What ran: did members of the Police get when they were taken into the Security Police and SD?

A: May I have the question again?

Q: What rank did members of the Police and Army get when they were transferred into the Security Police or SD?

A: The later service decree was basic. They were taken over in the same rank which they held in the police.

DR. KLINERT: Thank you. I have no further questions. BY DR. FICHT (FOR THE DEFENDANT HAENSCH, not for Defendant Biberstein -- in the absence of Haensch's counsel):

Q: Witness, I have a few questions which refer to your activity as a representative of Office I in the RSHA. While in your activity as Office Chief later on, what did you know about the Defendant Haensch? Do you know that in June 1942 Haensch was already back in Berlin with the RSHA?

A: Yes, I can remember this, because it belongs to the general activity of the Group Chief I-A, because in June I took this group over, after my predecessor had assumed his new duties.

Q: Is it correct that Haensch down to the time he left the RSHA in August 1943 stayed with this Office I?

A: Yes, Haensch was Chief of Group I-D, which was dissolved after he left there and Haensch then went to Denmark.

Q: I would like to ask you about this later. Did the Defendant Haensch in July 1942 ask you in a written form to give him a furlough? Do you know anything about this?

A: Yes, this correspondence is in my recollection, because I asked Streckenbach whether there were any objections to this and because I personally answered his letter and I granted him his furlough.

Q: Can you say anything about Haensch's earning the Merit Cross Second Class and that he told you that he had already been awarded this by the Army, and when was this?

A: I also remember that case, for Haensch belonged to Office I and I was glad to be able to give him a decoration and I was very much disappointed when he told me that he already had the Order of Merit, Second Class, because he had gotten it from the Army.

Q: Is it correct that. this happened about August or September, 1942?

A: Yes, that might be possible.

Q: Was Haensch's activity only in Office I of the RSHA?

A: I don't know any other activity of his.

Q: What activity did he perform in what field?

A: He was in charge of Group I-D, Disciplinary and Legal matters.

Q: Were welfare matters concerned with that?

A: Partly, yes.

Q: What about the cooperation that Haensch carried on with the other detriments of the RSHA? Did he have anything else to do with other offices? Did he have any insight in other offices?

A: He had actually nothing to do with the activity of the other offices, since he only took care of disciplinary matters.

Q: AS personnel expert, you probably could say something about the manner in which the defendant Haensch worked. What was his manner of work? What kind of a man was he?

A: Haensch was very correct, sometimes exaggeratedly conscientious and as his job demanded of him, he was not open to bribes and he had the best will to be just, as far as he could.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ficht, when you use the phrase which you did, namely, "How was the Defendant Haensch in his work" or words to that effect, we are speaking very vaguely and guardedly. We are not talking about a streetcar conducor or a police man. We are talking about someone who is charged with the execution of an order which involved the killing of human beings. Now, if you ask him if he was conscientious in the discharge of his duty, if he did his work well, and this witness replied, "Yes, he did it well, and sometimes even did better than was expected of him", and if we are thinking of that order, we must assume that he killed more people than the order required him to kill, so I merely want to call to your attention that when you use generic language of that kind that it is capable of an interpretation not so favorable to your client. I would therefore suggest, to be very specific and not to use general terns what sort of a man was he and did he do his work well, because if in the eyes of his superiors, if we accept this order as it has been given to us, here in court, the more women and children who we re killed, the better the work was done.

DR. FICHT: I beg the Tribunal's pardon. This was merely to be an introductory question to my next question. Therefore, the special purpose was not evident. May I perhaps ask my next question so that you can sec what I am driving at?

THE PRESIDENT: By all means, but just let me suggest to you and to other defense counsel that this is a very unusual type of a case and we can't use general terms in appraising a man's character. You say, "What is his character?" "His character was a good character"! "How did he do is work" "He did it well". Keep in mind what his work was, andin the eyes of his superior what was regarded as good character.

Q: (By Dr. Ficht): Witness, is it correct that the Defendant Haensch made many enemies in the office, because he refused to whitewash mistakes!

A: Yes, I know of such cases.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, there is another question which is absolutely meaningless and if one would want to take an interpretation unfavorable to the defendant, he easily could. "Did he whitewash mistakes?" Now what kind of mistakes? A mistake in the eyes of his superior might be the killing of only 500 instead of 1,000 that would be a mistake in the eyes of the superior, would it not? Your questions have to be very specific. Otherwise they either mean nothing or they mean something that you don't intend they should mean.

BY DR. FICHT: Haensch. Is it correct that he tried to get out of the RSHA, and by his own initiative got a position with the Reich Commissar in Denmark?

Q Do you know... were any offers made to you by Kaltenbruenner in order to keep you in your former position. When by order of Kaltenbrunner Gruppe 1-D was dissolved, Kaltenbrunner had the intention to have the disciplinary expert under his immediate supervision, and he had already selected a person for this position.

Q Make it brief, witness. The whole story is rot necessary.

A But this is how the offer came to be made. Because Haensch had to get out, Kaltenbrunner offered him a position as commander in the General Government. This position Haensch refused at the time, and according to his wish he was employed by the Reich Commissar in Denmark. Office I, including Haensch's office?

A Do you mean the reports in these document books? known. did they discuss the Jewish executions in any way?

A I cannot remember any case. I don't think see however, for Streckenbach would not have found such conferences to his taste. returned to the RSHA from his Russian assignment, had asked the severe punishment of a Gestapo man because he had mistreated a Jew?

A Yes: I know this case because I passed it on to him. It was an assessor of the State Police, Berlin: the message was given to me by telephone that this assessor had conducted himself in an inacceptable way

-- where and how I don't know anymore. the proceedings were immediately started by Haensch, and severe punishment was asked. If I remember correctly this assessor was punished very severely. At any rate he was dismissed immediately from the service. BY THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, now, You say someone was punished because he mistreated a Jew.

Q what did he do; how did he mistreat this Jew? gated -- where it was, I don't know, your Honor....

Q How did this assessor mistreat the Jew? Now, give us a direct answer to that question.

Q He struck a Jew out in the street. That is what he was charged with?

Q Yes. Now, did this assessor participate in the execution of any Jews?

A No, it had nothing to do with that at all. This incident took place in Be lin, your Honor.

Q Oh, this incident took place in Berlin?

Q And when was this, what year? in Berlin to strike a Jew? It can be proven at any time that several such cases did happen.

Q What was a Jew doing in Berlin m 1943? I thought they had been sent away long before 1942, to Treblinka, Lublin and Auschwitz... Jews in Berlin. Not individual Jews, but quite a number. It was evident because just at that time the markings of the Jews with the so-called Star of David has been instituted.

Q Do you know of this incident yourself? Do you have personal knowledge of it?

A I don't know who it was, but somebody called me up. I immediately sent for the Berlin agency chief of the State Police and I gave the order that that assessor was to be interrogated. I immediately sent this correspondence to Mr. Haensch, and then they duly investigated it. May I point out that some time later proceedings were inititated against other State police agencies in Berlin--this was also in 1943-when even death sentences were meted out because such people had committed offenses on Jewish property. It would not be very difficult to bring proof of this by witnesses. Death sentences and large prison sentences and downgrades were given out. of Berlin, yourself?

Q You don't know the name of the Jew, do you?

A Noo I don't, your Honor, but it can be determined who was the assessor.

Q Yes, but it is important that we we know more than that. We want to know why this assessor was punished, if he was. I would suggest, Dr. Ficht, that if you intend to make anything of this episode that you will have to submit evidence a little more specific; not merely that this witness overheard something over the telephone, and then he sent someone out, and finally someone was punished.... It would be very interesting to the Tribunal to get some direct evidence that a Jew was struck on the streets of Berlin in 1943 and that this assessor-- was he a member of the SS, this assessor?

WITNESS: The Gestapo.

THE PRESIDENT: (continuing) Gestapo? Yes; that is even more interesting -- that a member of the Gestapo was punished because ho struck a Jew in Berlin in 1943. Very well. Proceed. BY DR. FICHT: My last question. the Security Police and the SD, Haensch was in Prague?

A Yes, I know that. At that time 1 was ordered to see that this conference was taken care of, and that the guests. were housed.

DR. FICHT: No further questions. BY DR. RATZ (for defendant Radetzky):

Q Witness, do you know Radetzky?

Q When, and where, did you get to know him? 4a at that time?

Q You were later Department Head in the RSHA. What time was that? I, and I remained in that capacity until the first of April 1944.

Q Was Radetzky with you in Berlin at that time?

Q What did he want from you? ceased and that he be relieved from the Security Police. He told me especially that the service in the Security Police was not agreeable to him. Radetzky was a Baltic German and knew Russian conditions very well, and in Shitomir already he told me that he considered the war measures in Russia as very wrong.

Q What did you tell Radetzky as an answer to this? old office of the repatriation of Germans, but this refused by the Chief. earlier date? wishing to be recalled, and that the man in charge of personnel came to see me, and brought the police along and from this I could tell that Radetzky made such en attempt before. I don't know exactly how it was done, but he did make an attempt to leave the Security Police.

Q Thus your help for him had no success? teletype.

Q Do you know what activity Radetsky wanted to get into?

A What exactly hewanted to do. I don't know. I merely conversed with him, and I tried to get him into Office-VI, where there was a possibility for him to work in his field. In Office-VI they were locking for a liaison officer for liaison in the Russian Vlassow Army.

Q Do you know whether he was later transferred to Office-VI? elapsed. He actually did get in Office-VI later on. to-wit, that RAdetsky might get a different job. For what reason did you do this? which he assumed to talk about these things frankly. I knew Radetscky as a very profound human being, and I wanted to help him to be able to follow his wishes. you know how he got into the service of the RSHA? furherer Dr. Kroeger, who at that time was ableto leave the Security Police. Dr. Kroeger himself was a Baltic German, and interpreters were needed for the Russian Campahign, and, thus, Dr. Kroeger had commanded a few of his fellow countrymen to be used as fellow interpreters. Among these was Radetsky. to the RSHA? obligated to serve. service means in reference to membership in the RSHA and the SD. Was he a member of the SD, or how is this matter of emergency service to be explained?

emergency service, nor of the State Police or the SS. He joined as a civilian, and he was used in the agency as he was needed. If he was to be used in the war, he had to wear a uniform corresponding to his position, his rank and his salary. A cording to theses he then was assigned to the rank, and thus, he became a so-called "Uniform wearer," It might sound very strange but that is the way it was. These "Uniform wearers" were addressed by the SS rank but could not designate themselves as SS-members. that these are in Document Book III-O. Document NO-4771. Exhibit No. 139, which is on page 45 of the German text, the last document in this volume-- (hands document to the witness). Here it says in the text that SS-Sturmbannfuehrer (NDV) Haldemos von Radetsky is to be transferred." Please tell the Tribumal what this designation means?

A You mean this desgination "NDV"?

Q Yes? under war emergency.

Q Why is this designation added immediately after the "Sturmbannfuehrer"? not an active member of the SS. If he had been one obligated to serve under war emergency, and at the same time an active SS-Leader, then this designation would not have appeared.

Q If I understand you correctly, this designation "NDV" is to mean that Radetsky only got into the SS by way of this emergency service status?

A Well, that question is not correctly put. He did not get into the SS, but he merely wore a SS-uniform.

Q In this document there is a handwritten note "File, Sturmbannfuehrer is not needed." After you signed the document, orsince you signed the document, you can perhaps say what this note means? as a Sturmbannfuehrer, because he only held this rank as in this emergency service status. by the commando. the SS, by the Reich fuehrer. Please tell the Tribunal what you have to say about this note? the matter of the Vlassow Army in his own staff, and for this purpose he was looking for a liaison officer who spoke Russian, that was Radetsky, but this assignment to that field did not come off, because Office VI took over the matters concerning the Vlassow Army. Thus, there Radetsky went directly to Office-VI.

Q DR. RATZ: Your Honr, I would like to state something in connection with this personal file. It is actually outside of the examination of this witness. Photostates of the documents have been made available, among them a photostatic copy of this document which we are just discussing. I have now found out that one page has been torn out of this collection, and therefore, I went to the document room and the document room explained that this missing page would not be handed over by order of the Prosecution. I, therefore, tried again to secure this missing page but this was refused once more. I believe it is not right to tear out one page from this document which belongs altogether, especially since the Prosecution in their letter 4 September 1947, told us expressly that the document room was to deliver to any defense counsel complete photostatic copies.

THE PRESIDENT: We don't argue the matter as to whether it was right-- We don't need to argue the matter as to whether it is right to tear out a page because it is obvious that a page should not be torn out.

Let us find out first whether a page was removed, and, if go, why, and then we will consider the situation.

MR HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, I can possibly give the information in regard to this matter. In between the personal file of the defendant Radetsky there are different independent letters. One letter which had nothing to do with the file itself was removed from the file, and will be handed in by the Prosecution at another time. But I can now inform the Tribunal that this is a completely independent document; a letter which not a part of these forms which the Tribuual sees here.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you intend to submit it later into evidence?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I doo Your Honor, at another time.

THE PRESIDENT: And do you intend to submit that letter in evidence?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: We do, your Honor, but at another time.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you intend to submit it as rebuttal, or how do you intend to get it into evidence?

MR. HORLICK HOCHWADL: We want eventually to put it to the witness either in cross-examination or put it in as rebuttal.

THE PRESIDENT: You do not regard it as part of your case in chief?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: No, sir; we did not. We put in this document entirely only to show that the Defendant Radetzky was a member of the SS and of the SD, of course. If Defendant Radetzky denies that, I do think this document is proof enough to show that be was a member of the SS and of the SD, so it is not a part of our case in chief.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ratz, the Prosecution has the right to present its case as it sees fit, just as defense counsel have the same right. Now, you were assured that that document will be available at a later date, so therefore I don't think it is necessary to spend any more time on that document, especially in view of the fact that you are not now presenting the case of von Radetzky. You are merely cross-examining this witness. You have not yet reached your client's case. BY DR. RATZ:

Q Witness, a few further questions. Later you were commander of the Security Police and SD in Salzburg. In this capacity did you meet Radetzky again?

A Yes. Radetzky came to Salzburg. At the time it was in the last few weeks before the capitulation. He came there in his capacity as liaison officer of the Vlassow Army. At the time I spoke to him, and I told him that I considered the defense of Salzburg under the circumstances as very senseless, but there was still one more difficulty to be overcome. That was the development of a tremendous activity by Russian Generals who were active in volunteer armies. These Russian generals wanted to set up a new corps around Salzburg because they did not want to be used in the fight against their own countrymen.

They wanted to be used to fight the Western Powers. It was very difficult to regulate this matter since a liaison with the leading agencies in the north of the Reich was very difficult. This was difficult because the Gau-Leader of Linz was prepared to use this volunteer corps.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, Witness, you are going into a history of the Vlassow Army and the strategy of the letter days of the war. Now, Dr. Ratz merely asked you if you saw von Radetzky at Salzburg and what you talked about or what you had to do with that defendant, Now, let's get directly to that point, and you can give us the other background only in the event it becomes necessary in your discussion of whatever transpired between you and von Radetzky.

THE WITNESS: Yes. we have to thank Radetzky for preventing these plans from maturing. This army was not formed, and the Russian generals, if I remember correctly, were at the disposal of the American commander after the capitulation.

Q (By Dr. Ratz) At the end of the war was Radetzky still a uniform wearer or had his relationship to the RSHA changed?

A I can't tell you any more than the fact that he had come to the Security Police on an emergency status. this emergency service or to evade the orders given him? he was in the Security Police on an emergency status he was also under the jurisdiction of the SS and Police and he would have had to account for it before a court martial.

DR. RATZ: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, just for the clarity of the record, when you spoke of the Russian generals, you, of course, meant those Russian generals who were fighting on the same side as Germany?

THE WITNESS: Yes, those who were on the German side in the Vlassow Army and other volunteer corps.

If I remember correctly there was General Tokol and General von Manteuffel, and other names. I don't remember.

THE PRESIDENT: I thought it might be better to have that clarified on the record.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. HAEHN (For Defendant Ruehl):

Q Witness, during the direct examination and today's cross-examination by Dr. Fritz, you have described a course for candidates of the executive service whose members were then detailed to the Einsatzgruppen as a group. You have also testified that you succeeded in getting the participants of this course, recalled, and that this course again continued in October 1941 in Berlin. course? that since 1941, at the latest October, 1941, he was away from his unit, the detachment 10-B of Einsatzgruppe D, that he left it finally. course returned.

Q Before this you mentioned in the cross-examination of Dr. Fritz that the candidates for this executive service, after completion of the course, were used as their qualifications and their potentialities indicated. Were there any exceptions for reasons of emergency service? of persons has to be distributed, and too high a percentage expresses the same wish, not all these wishes could be satisfied. the course, expressed the desire to be accepted in the Criminal Police?

A I can't say it with certainty, but I think it was the case for I listened to the wishes personally.

DR. HAEHN: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Do any other defense counsel desire to crossexamine?

(No response.)

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, due to the lateness of the hours, perhaps you would prefer to begin your cross-examination tomorrow morning.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWASD: Yes, your Honor, I only have two questions about the same document as was put to the witness by defense counsel for the Defendant Radetzky. Perhaps I should be permitted to ask this now.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, by all means. BY MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD:

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I, your Honors, again refer to Document Book III-C and to Document No 4771, which is on Page 22 of the English, I shall quote from Page 26 of the English, 29 of the German. Radetzky was not a member of the SS?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I gather this from the document which was submitted to me.

Q All right. Will you look now on Page 29 of the German, Page 26 of the English, and I would like to read to you. a letter to the Chief of the SS Personnel Main office, Berlin SW-11, Prinz Albrechtstrasse 9. This letter is dated 13 December 1939.

"I would ask so promote SS Untersturmfuehrer Waldemar von Radetzky, SS No. --" and so forth, "leader of the staff of SS Upper-Section Marthe, to the rank of SS Obersturmfuehrer, SS Untersturmfuehrer v.

Radetzky was personally accepted into the Schutzstaffel by the Reichfuehrer SS."

Do you still maintain that Radetzky was not a member of the SS?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I don't know these incidents. I ask you now whether you still maintain that Radetzky was not a member of the SS. Please answer this question.

A I don't believe this is necessary. I don't know in what form he got into the SS. somebody who was accepted by Himmler himself into the SS could not be a member of this organization?

A If he was personally accepted by Himmler?

THE PRESIDENT: It isn't necessary. It is very clear.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: That is all I have to ask on this document, your Honor. May I then start my cross-examination tomorrow?

THE PRESIDENT: Then, Witness, to that extent you modify your previous statement about von Radetzky? You would say then from this letter that he must have been a member of the SS?

THE WITNESS: I didn't read the letter yet, but if the things are as they were described, that he was accepted by the Reichsfuehrer, SS, I cannot deny it. I don't know anything but what was submitted to me, I first met Radetzky in 1939 when he was already Sturmbannfuehrer and already in an emergency status in the Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: When you described the system of allowing certain individuals to wear uniforms, even though not members of the SS, you were describing a general situation?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that was a general situation. These men received a spedial identification card that was a temporary identification card. The men had the obligation that if they were returned from the occupied territory where they were uniform wearers they had to hand in their uniform again and could not consider themselves as SS members.

This was the third class of officers.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 21 October 1947, at 0930 hours.)

Otto Ohlendorf, et al., defendants sitting at Nurnberg

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel to cross examine the witness Schulz? If not, Mr. Hochwald, you may continue with your crossexamination. BY MR. HOCHWALD: in May 1933, is that correct? earlier?

Q Not earlier that that?

Q Why did you join the Party before 1932? of the State Police in Bremen.

Q Was that the only reason?

Q Wasn't it the reason that you being a member of the Political Police were able to render much more valuable service to the Party and to the SS if you were only a comouflaged member; I mean that you were not a member actually, but that your superiors didn't know that you were a member of the Party, and in this way was it not possible for you to help the Party much better in this position?

Q All right, that was not the case. What was your rank in the service on 1 January 1933?

Q 1st Lieutenant?

Q And on 1 August 1939?

A On 1st August 1939? Sofar as I remember I was Regierungsteat. (Governor Council)

Q Yes but what was your military rank? You were a Police Officer here your not?

A Yes, here I must give a some what lengthy explanation. In 1923 I joined the Protectice Police, and until the end of the year of 1938 I was police offer all the time, and a member of the police, and, thus, I belonged to the Main Office of the Regular Police. As a result of the police reorganization in 1939 some kind of decision had to be made whether I was to remain as a member of the Main Office Regular Police, or whether I should go to the Security Police, thus, in the year of 1938 I was released from the Main Office Regular Police, and I was transferred from the Main Office Regular Police to the Main Office Security Police. The Main Office Security Police didn't dispose of their office positions, and, thus, as Police Captain, that was my rank at the time, I was transferred as a government counsellor. the orderly of police was the rank of Captain, is that correct, in 1938?

Q And you were not promoted in 1939? dates are here in the document.

Q When did you become a Standartenfuehrer? in Hamburg.

Q That called for the rank of a colonel, is that right?

Q That was in 1940, was it not?

Q When were you promoted to Oberfuehrer? were promoted Oberfuehrer?

A No, not directly when I returned from Russia. For at the end of September I returned from Russia, and if I remember correctly that promotion to Oberfuehrer became effective on 9 November.

Q On 9 November you were promoted to Oberfuehrer?

A Yes, I think so. But this is in my personal file which I gave the CIC and that must have all my information. general?

A Yes, that is right. That is an intermediate promotion for officials, that is, because there is no such equivalent rank.

Q When were you promoted to the rank of brigadier-general? original date as of October 1942, as I remember it.

Q That was the highest rank you achieved? the so-called Sudeten country, in Aussign and in Reichenberg, is that correct?

Q Was that in 1938?

Q Where were you after the occupation of the Protectorate? leadership of the State Police in Reichenberg, and sofar as I remember that was effective 1 June 1939.

Q How long did you stay in Reichenberg? the documents to show this, until I was transferred to Hamburg, and that I think was on 1 March 1940.

Q What was your position there?

A Where? In Reichenberg I was Head of the Police Agency, and I was Governor Councillor. you not? during the time that you were there in command?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I can not tell you exactly.

Q Approximately? were there?

A I can not say that definitely, because I don't know it exactly. But any kind of a large scale arrest didn't take place during my time. On the contrary, I used an expert who was especially given the job to see that the Jewish property was confiscated in an orderly manner. fiscated then? property was already undertaken, and in this field I found a lot of disorder.

This disorder caused me to create order, and to use an expert on the job, who carefully confiscasted the Jewish property, and wherever any agencies had taken hold of some furniture, everything was carefully confiscated and was reported to the Chief Minister of Finance.

Q What was the name of this expert?

A That was the Police Inspector Spaet, if I remember correctly?

Q What happened to the people who were arrested at that time? Were they sent to a concentration camp? Office, for I did not have the power to make decisions in this matter. possible? yes.

Q You were also in Olmuetz?

Q When was that? 1939.

Q 15 March 1939, is that correct? In Olmuetz? date.

Q You were there for eight weeks, approximately?

Q What was your position ther, Herr Schulz?

Q You were commander of an Einsatzkommando, is that correct?

A Yes, that is right, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q Were you the highest Gestapo officer in charge in Olmuetz? Einsatzgruppen chief who had his headquarters in Prague.

Q But in the Olmuetz you were the highest, were you not?

Security Police suspects of persons who were endangering the security of the occupying forces, mostly ethnic Germans who were immigrating from Germany, and also the pure Czechs, is that correct? A I didn't quite get the question, exactly. against the security of the German forces were arrested, did I understand you correctly? arrested?

A No, at the moment I can not remember. Certainly not because they were Jews only.

Q You are sure of that?

A Mr. Prosecutor, there are many years in between, and I don't know that exactly but it can not have been a decisive number. I ask you to consider that the Einsatzcommando was a preparatory agency which only created a prerequisite for localities for the agencies to be set up later. that time, were you not? Czechs, as you mentioned, and surely if they were Jews. Were they sent to concentration camps? concentration camps, from Olmuetz, I don't know that.

Q Nobody was sent to Buchenwald?

Q Who was sent to Buchenwald without your order? case. another concentration camp just without having the approval of the Gestapo? of the Einsatzgruppe, is that correct?

Q In May 1941?

Q Who communicated this order to you? tion?

A With two exceptions, Mr. Prosecutor. Namely I was in Pretsch at the time of the inspection and the two days before we marched to Russia, after the war had been declared on them.

Q I meant it that way, I didn't think you going. I meant the inspection only when Heydrich was there. Can you tell the Tribunal where these three places are located? Schnieberg, some kilometers away from Pretsch.

Q What province of Germany is that?

Q Is that in Eastern Germany, is it not?

A Well, that depends what borders you are considering. This is on the road to Leipsig. satzgruppen?

Q Who was present at this inspection?

A That Mr. Prosecutor, I can not tell you definitely. All the Einsatzgruppen kommandos were distributed among the various localities and on that day of the inspection they were gatherd together on the marching field near Schniedeberg. A very few hours before the inspection all the commandos gathered together, and lined up in the open square, and then the inspection took place by Heydrich, and after the inspection they marched out of this place down the road.

Q You don't remember of one of the defendants being present at this inspection? Einsatzgruppen -- Einsatzkommando leader of Einsatzgruppe V were present.

Please keep in mind that at that time - I did not know about the distribution of the various offices among the various commandos. I know that in Schniedeberg in a bar where part of the Einsatzkommando was quartered, Dr. Rasch was there, so far as I remember, and, I also believe to have seen Sturmbannfuehrer Hennecke and I also think that I saw Herr Blobel, and I think Herr Hermann was there, too, but I can not tell you that definitely, whether this was on the day of the inspection or whether this was in the last days before we started to march out. is that correct?

A Mr. Prosecutor, if I did mention any other name it would be an assumption so I can not tell you definitely.

Q Was Streckenbach present? and Heydrich undertook the inspection.

Q Did you speak to Streckenbach on that occasion?

Q Nothing else, no conversation? before the inspection you were called to a meeting in the Prince Albert Palais in Berlin to Heydrich, and Heydrich informed the people present about the task of the Einsatzgruppen, and especially about the war against Russia, is that correct?

Q Who of the defendants in the dock was present at that meeting?

A I think I can say definitely that Herr Ohlendorf was there. As for the others, I don't know. Ohlendorf?

A There were several, Mr. Prosecutor, but I can't tell you that definitely who was there. I know, for instance, that Gruppenfuehrer Nebe was there.

I also know that Dr. Stahliger was there. I think if you were to mention any names to me I think I can remember that I saw them, but otherwise I really cannot say with certainty which of the defendants were there.

Q Neither Naumann nor Rasch?

A Dr. Rasch, I think, was there, yes.

Q Was the defendant Naumann there?

A Naumann I cannot recall. I cannot tell you that definitely.

Q Was Streckenbach present at that meeting?

Q Did you speak to him?

A I did not talk to him personally. As I remember this incident we were together in this hall, and we had to wait for sometime until Heydrich arrived. During the time Streckenbach was present and there was a general conversation, but a special personal conversation between myself and Streckenbach did not take place. some excesses on the part of the Nazi regime when Hitler came to power, is that correct? to be the effect or a transit period which would soon disappear. and 1941, especially of excess against Jews, Socialists, Communists, and other enemies of the Nazi regime? duties.

Q Many of such cases?

Q You were all the time an officer of the Gestapo. You can hardly have been ignorant of the fact that great numbers of Jews, Communists, and other enemies of National Socialism were sent to concentration camps for an unlimited period of time without having been afforded trial, is that correct?

camp who was not previously carefully interrogated. Excesses did not take place under my leadership.

Q I did not mean in your office. I just asked about your general knowledge. valid for me would also be valid for others. I cannot imagine that according to the directives which were issued by the RSHA without any reason anyone would be put into a concentration camp, for the decision about bringing anyone into a concentration camp lay with the RSHA itself. Therefore, reasons had to be given for such measures. don't you?

Q In the light of this experience, how do you interpret Heydrich's remark at the meeting, this meeting which we have just discussed, that the most severe measures against Jews would have to be taken during the campaign against Russia? would have to be taken. Heydrich expressed himself as follows, as I said in my direct examination: "Also against Jewry one would have to take more severe measures. The experiences in Poland taught us that."

Q All right. Will you tell the Tribunal how you interpreted these words of Heydrich? arrests, that is, send people to concentration camps or Ghettos, or other such possibilities. I did not think about these things in detail.

Q You went to Einsatzkommando in Russia. You must have had some idea what you were going to do there.

A May I have this question repeated, please? were you of the opinion that this would not be a part of the task of the Einsatzgruppen? executions had been ordered. to do? You said what you did not expect. I want you to say what you did expect.

A Mr. Prosecutor, I had to leave that up to the situation. I did not go to Russia with a predisposition about what was to be done and with clear orders, but first I had to see with what events should be confronted. If someone assigns me a job, I cannot say, I cannot judge the situation until I have seen how it develops. you and the other persons present during this meeting?

Q And you didn't think at all about what eventually would be done to these measures against the Jews? danger could be accomplished by arrests, for previously, although I had already been eight years with the Security Police, I had never received an order to shoot Jews, and never did I hear up to that time that such an order had been given. the opinion that all Jews were to be arrested?

Q But didn't you know of severe measures that had been taken in Germany from 1933 on?

scale. That this was my opinion I can emphasize by the fact that after I reported back to Berlin, To Streckenbach, I expressed very clearly that there should be another solution to eliminating danger than shooting. of July, is that right? This conference you just spoke about, that was on the 28th or 29th of July?

Q Oh, I am sorry. You told Streckenbach in detail about the order Obergruppenfuehrer Jeckeln had issued. This order was handed down to you by Dr. Rasch, and then in particular women and children were not to be saved.

Q Did you read the order to him verbatim, didn't you? could not read it, but the way I remember it I presented it orally. murder, is that correct? way it had been given, namely to include women and children, I just don't remember what type of wording was used. Dr. Rasch had given a limitation, but I can't remember the exact wording. I presented this to Streckenbach with the explanation that women and children were to be shot so that there would be no avengers. satzgruppe C in this conference, is that correct?

A I could only refer to this Einsatzgruppe C, Mr. Prosecutor, because I did not know the other Einsatzgruppen. satzgruppe C.

afterwards I had a more detailed, more personal conversation with Streckenbach in which he told me his own opinion about these war measures in the East. This, his personal opinion, was not being debated in the order given by Jeckeln. that the activities of the Einsatzgruppen are plain murder? by Jeckeln and handed over by Dr. Rasch in Zhitomir. I am referring to Document Book III-C, page 61 of the English. This is NO-3841, Prosecution's Exhibit 130, page 101 of the German. It is the last thing in paragraph 6 of the affidavit. There it reads, "Streckenbach himself described the activity of the Einsatzgruppen in the East to me as murder." Oberursel when I was interrogated.

Q Is it not true that the word "Einsatzgruppen" is used here, in plural, which means in itself that more than one Einsatzgruppe was meant, does it not? As the sentence is worded here it means that all Einsatzgruppen in the East were meant, is that correct?

AAccording to this wording yes, Mr. Prosecutor, but at the time my defense counsel Mr. Durchholz, asked that this thing be corrected, and the Tribunal has informed Mr. Durchholz that this correction can be made. I also ask that you take from the text here that all this conference only referred to Einsatzgruppe C, since the name of Dr. Rasch was mentioned before. I also would like to say that in the year 1945 I still did not have the knowledge about the extent of the activities of the Einsatzgruppen which I have today. It maybe that I overlooked this at the time, and I think that is understandable, for I did not know at that time what a tremendous difference this one letter might have. Otherwise I would have looked even more carefully at what I had testified to.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q.- Witness, do I understand you to say that now in 1947 you know more of what happened in 1941 than you did in 1945 when necessarily you were closer chronologically to the former date?

A.- Yes, Your Honor.

Q.- How do you explain that?

A.- I did not have the knowledge about the extent of the activities.

Q.- Well, what school did you go to after 1945 that you learned about the activities of the Einsatzgruppen?

A.- After 1945 it became known to us in Obernrsel what is to be discussed, or what was discussed before the great court about the Einsatzgruppen. I can still remember very exactly that I was extremely surprised at the time to hear the number of 90,000 executions from the lips of Herr Ohlendorf.

Q.- Witness, but what I am speaking of is this. In 1945 you had a certain personal knowledge, first-hand cognizance of what was done by the Einsatzgruppen, that is correct, isn't it?

A.- Yes, Your Honor.

Q.- Now, so far as your own personal observation is concerned, that could not have increased with the passage of time, and especially when you were in prison?

A.- Whether I was surprised -

Q.- So, therefore, whatever you knew in 1945 you knew, and you could not increase your personal knowledge of what had happened previously by the passage of time, that is to say up until 1947?

A.- I don't know how you mean this question, your Honor.

Q.- Yes. Let me make an illustration. Let's suppose that in 1940 I made a trip to Australia.

A.- Yes.

Q.- In 1941 I would remember what happened in 1940.

A.- Yes? Your Honor.

Q.- In 1945, I couldn't remember more than I remembered in 1941, could I?

A.- Doubtlessly not, Your Honor.

Q.- Very well. That is the reason I don't understand why you say to us that in 1947 you know more about what the Einsatzgruppen did than you did in 1945.

A.- From my own experience I did not know this, Your Honor, but it is obvious that during these years in the camps, as well as otherwise we talked about what happened and what the events were.

Q.- What you mean is that you learned more about the activities of other people since 1945?

A.- Yes, that is what I wanted to explain, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY MR. HORLICH-HOCHWALD:

Q.- You made here a differentiation between the Hitler order as testified to by the Defendants Ohlendorf and Naumann, and the order of Jeckeln which was handed down to you by Rasch?

A.- That is right.

Q.- You explained this difference twice. Unfortunately, I am still not aware where the main difference lies. Will you tell the Tribunal where you see this colossal difference between these two orders.

A.- Mr. Prosecutor, I think you have misunderstood me. There were two orders for me. The first order was made known to me in Lemberg, I think, in connection with the reprisals which had been ordered there.

Q.- May I just interrupt you a moment. You do speak about this order?

A.- Yes.

Q.-You do speak about the Hitler order which, according to your testimony, was not known to you as you had not been in Pretsch when it was handed down by Heydrich?

A.- Yes.

Q.- But I understood your testimony to the effect that there was a difference between the Hitler order and the order that was handed down by Jeckeln. I personally fail to see the difference, and I would like you to explain to the Tribunal where you see the difference.

A.- Mr. Prosecutor, you might admit that there is a tremendous difference where an order of the Chief of Staff is passed on, and as expressed with that clarity by Herr Ohlendorf, and this measure has to looked upon as a war-emergency measure. This is an order which the Chief of Staff is free to five, and this order has to be accepted; but in Whitomir where there was no talk of the Chief of Staff but where it was said the Reichsfuehrer who had handed down such an order and did not give the reason of absolute war emergency for this measure but merely said that no avengers should arise, then there must be a great difference in this. At least that was the way I saw it, and this reason and the fact that we were not told at the time that the Fuehrer had or dered it had developed great doubts within me and great uncertainty.

Q.- All right, that I can understand, but what I cannot understand is one thing. When you came to Streckenbach on the 28th or 29th of August, Streckenhbach knew about the fact that this order was given by the head of the State. He knew why it was given and he knew how it was given. What I personally cannot understand is the fact that he answered you when you gave him all these facts, "This is plain murder." Will you explain that to the Tribunal?

A.- Well, I can remember, Mr. Prosecutor, that Streckehbach was also very excited about this way of issuing orders, for I expressed my conviction about it to him.

Q.- And he agreed with you?

A.- And I also told him, how am I going to explain this? I told him how this strange order was interpreted by the other Einsatzkommando lea ders who were present at the conference.

Q.- But will you tell the Tribunal why didn't Streckenbach tell you, which would have been the only natural reaction, "The way Rasch told the thing to you is wrong, but the order in itself is right. It is a war emergency. It is ordered by the Fuehrer." That is the thing which I absolutely am unable to understand from your testimony, and you possibly can inform the Tribunal how that happened.

A.- Mr. Prosecutor, I cannot remember the wording of this order, and please try to imagine yourself in my situation for when I came to Streckehbach I still did not know that this order had been given already announced at Pretsch. That this Fuehrer order actually existed, he did not keep from me.

Q.- May I interrupt you a minute? You testified here in direct that he promise I you to contact Heydrich, and several days later, as Heydrich was agsent at that time in Prague, he came back and told you about the Hitler order. This is the thing about which I want to have information. The order of Rasch was an order, which said, that all suspected Jews and their families were to be killed so that no avengers could survive. The Defendant Ohlendorf and the Defendant Naumann have testified here that a Fuehrer order was in existence that all Jews, suspected or not, were to be killed, men, women and children, in order as the Defendant Ohlendorf said, to safeguard the momentary and future security of the Reich. The "safeguarding of the future security" and the phrase "no avengers should survive" to me has absolutely the same meaning, no difference. What I do see only is that the order of Rasch was not as far reaching as the Hitler order. The Hitler order said, "all." Rasch's order said only "the suspected." I still fail to see that when you told your story to a man who undoubtedly knows about the Hitler order that this man goes on and says, "This is plain murder,"

A Mr. Prosecutor, I did not discuss this with Herr Streckenbach with so much precision, for the simple reason that my recall had already been made known. If this dismissal had not been granted I would have discussed this with Streckenbach in ever greater detail, but, as I took it from the conversations which I had with him and in which I described to him the tremendous spiritual distress of the men and I described it to him very passionately, in this case I can point out to you that my description at that time and my decision at that time to see Streckenbach and to tell him about these things was just as difficult as it is to discuss these things before you today. have no explanation of this reaction of Streckenbach?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I don't remember the exact course of the conversation. I just know the one fact, that Streckenbach was very much exited about the way of issuing orders and this can be traced back to the fact that I myself was so aroused, and this is the reason why I designated Dr. Rasch was ruthless, that without consideration of the feelings of men, he merely gave this bare fact, without even giving us an explanation in order to quiet down our agitation. Thus the conversation developed and thus I told Streckenbach that this is impossible. "How can such a measure be carried out? How can it be ordered with these bare two words?" And in this situation, Streckenbach had agreed that this was unheard of, this manner of making an order known. BY THE PRESIDENT :

Q Witness, did Streckenbach criticize the Fuehrer Order? Did he say anything which could logically be interpreted as a condemnation of the original Fuehrer Order itself?

A Yes, Your Honor, I can say that he did. Streckenbach was as much aroused by the war measures in the East as anyone else. Dr. Rasch interpreted it? and told him what had happened with Rasch and what had happened to me as a result of the manner of issuing orders.

Q No, let us adhere to my original question. Did Streckenbach criticize, condemn, or disparage the original Fuehrer Order, which has been so clearly described by the first two defendants, Ohlendorf and Naumann? considered the Fuehrer Code as very cruel, if I may express it that way. order, wasn't he, to the Einsatzgruppen leaders?

A I don't know this from my own experience. you know that, at least, since 1945, since you have been studying this? of heart from the time that he originally gave the order?

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honor, would you please repeat the question; it did not come through. must have had a change of heart between the time that he originally gave the order to Ohlendorf and the time that you spoke with him as to the manner in which Rasch was executing the order?

announced an order because he was obliged to do so. It is possible that a man is obligated to announce an order without approving it himself. Even a soldier will criticize orders -

Q Very well, I understand that. I did not know that when Streckenbach gave the order originally that he had any reservations about it, but from what you tell me now, I am to believe that Streckenbach at no time approved of the order, but merely passed it on, because it was his duty as an officer to do so. Streckenbach. I merely know them from the situation as it developed in this conversation which I had with him.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Thank you. BY DR. HORLICK-Hochwald: one question and I would like you to answer this question first with "yes" or "no" and then you can explain it to us. Did Streckenbach on the 28th or 29th, when you told him your story about Rasch, tell you that a Fuehrer Order existed or not? existed.

Q So you change your testimony. In Direct, you said he told you that he would refer to Heydrich and that a few days later he came back from Heydrich and told you then that there was a Fuehrer Order existing.

A Mr. Prosecutor, in reference to the fact of the existing Fuehrer Order I did not want to cinfine myself to a date, but merely wanted to mention the fact that Streckenbach did make known to me the existence of this Fuehrer Order.

that a Fuehrer Order existed, is that right?

A I cannot say definitely, I don't know. intervention with Heydrich about these happenings in the East or whether he told you immediately that nothing can be done in this respect, as an order of Hitler was just given him?

A This possibility existed, Mr. Prosecutor. May I only point out that I really cannot remember the conversation exactly. I can only remember the fact that Streckenbach was aroused by the way in which this order was issued and that he also promised me he would speak with Heydrich to clarify these matters. The possibility exists that he also told me at that time that it cannot be changed, but whether this was before the conversation with Heydrich or after the conversation with Heydrich I cannot remember, even though I have a pretty good memory.

Q All right. You testified here that you had a very close official relationship with Streckenbach, is that correct?

Q How were your personal relations? friendly. a job with an Einsatzkommando?

A Yes, I think so, Mr. Prosecutor. This reproach of being soft pursued me for a long time, but it was unjust, for in order to clarify these mixed feelings I tried to describe these concepts of brutality, of harshness, of goodness and softness of leader and superior to my students in the training course.

Streckenbach knew that I was absolutely an opponent of any brutality measures and this fact, Mr. Prosecutor, can be proven for the entire time of my 25 years in Police work. He was the man who handed down to you the order that you would have to take the command of an Einsatzkommando. You were on excellent official and personal terms with him and he never told you what kind of tasks you would be confronted with. Do you want to comment on that?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor. The message that I should take over an Einsatzkommando reached me in the same way as it reached all others. I received a teletype message just as everybody else. Streckenbach did not tell me in any way that this assignment included the execution of human beings.

Q He never told you? BY THE PRESIDENT: of human beings?

A I heard about that when the order of Dr. Rasch was made known in Lemberg. Here the Commissar Order was announced and explained in the building in Lemberg, according to which all Communists and Functionaries, and all others, whom I mentioned in the direct examination -- This order was made known at Lemberg and then it was explained what a tremendous danger the functionaries represented in Russia.

Q Very well. Very well. How much time elapsed between the receipt of the teletype which merely informed you you were to take command of an Einsatzkommando and when you learned the exact nature of the duties you were to execute? an Einsatzkommando, reached me in May 1941, and the announcement of the order in Lemberg took place in the beginning of July.

Q When? you were entirely ignorant of what was expected of you as the leader of a very important expedition?

Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: also know that you were too soft as you expressed it?

A I just don't knew, Mr. Prosecutor.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Horlick-Hochwald, I don't know whether I misunderstood the witness, but my recollection is that he said that he was reputed as being too soft and then he added, "But this observation was unjust," Did I understand you to say that, Witness?

THE WITNESS: Yes, insofar as I didn't get a chance yesterday to develop this subject further -

THE PRESIDENT: No, just about 15 minutes ago you said that "Everybody said I was too soft, but it was unjust to say that."

THE WITNESS: I consider this reproach of softness toward me as wrong, because, if I may express it this way, I see a difference between goodness arid softness. Softness is something bad. Goodheartedness is not.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, I merely wanted to call Mr. HorlichHochwald's attention and not to say that the witness was soft, with the assumption that he admitted softness. He absolutely denies softness.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: So I withdraw my question.

Q (By Mr. Horlich-Hochwald) I now would like to turn to the events in Lemberg. You have stated in your testimony that according to the information you received from the Defendant Rasch and according to your own information, a great number of citizens of Lemberg, Ukrainians and Poles, had been killed in the Lemberg prison, is that correct?

A Yes, that's right.

officers, Which had been found mutilated. tion of Lemberg under the leadership of officials of the Jewish faith. Is that correct?

A Yes, Jewish Commissars. I would like to emphasize here that these are not my own findings, but it was the description which Dr. Rasch gave us, and it was evident that there was great tension between the Jewish population and the rest. These are merely facts which I can state here. I would like to quote your testimony: "The militia had received an order to arrest the Jewish popjlation of Lemberg and also those who were suspected of having participated in these killings." Does that mean all Jews in Lemberg were arrested?

A Well, at any rate, a very great part: on the field in Lemberg, as I have described it, I saw that there were about 2,000 to 3,000 male Jews among whom there were also some Non-Jews. I cannot give you the ratio, but these people had been arrested. or not, just for the simple reason that they were Jews, is that right? large number it is out of the question that an arrest was carried out only after thorough investigation. as to the killings of the Ukrainians and Poles. Did I understand you correctly?

A That's right, Mr. Prosecutor. The way Dr. Rasch described it to us, a special Fuehrer Order arrived from Berlin but the way it was told to us it was meant only as a reprisal measure for Lemberg.

Q It was a special order then for this one incident? Do I understand you correctly?

Q When was this order issued? first days of July. As far as I remember, I arrived in Lemberg about the 2d of July and it must have been around the 3d or 4th of July, but I really do not know the exact day.

Q It was immediately after you came to Lemberg? same day. killed, approximately?

AAccording to what Dr. Rasch said, it was supposed to have been about 5,000 people.

Q And how many Germans?

A I cannot give you the number. I don't know.

A I cannot even give you an approximate number, because I don't know. ordered and carried out, for the killing of the Poles and the Ukrainians or for the mutilation or eventual killing of the members of the German forces? about the fact of the order. I don't know its contents.

Q In other words, you don't know which. These are two completely different actions. You as an old police officer will certainly understand that: On the one hand, killing of civilian population before the German Wehrmacht came to Lemberg. On the other hand, killing of members of the armed forces, is it not? So you do not know for which of these two acts the reprisals were ordered.

the entire killings in Lemberg. the German, soldiers? reprisal order that beside this special reprisal order there was a general order of Hitler that all Jews, Gypsies, and Communists should be killed? contrary, only the order was announced, which I mentioned here, namely, the so-called Commissar Order, excerpts from the Barbarossa Order, and I can remember exactly that when these orders were announced, one of them lay before him in a printed form and that it was top secret. cated this order?

A Of the defendants I do not believe anyone was there. I cannot say definitely. Kommando 4b had arrived there first, but had continued very soon afterwards. Then Kommando 6 was there, and how many other Kommandos were there while passing through, I cannot say. Furthermore a large Einsatz Staff from the General Government was there.

Q You don't remember any of the defendants being present? limited order of reprisals and the Commissar Order by requesting the proof of the guilt of the people who were to be executed, is that correct?

Q What exactly, Herr Schulz, do you mean by that? as far as it concerned the functionaries, did not have any restriction. If one did not limit this concept of functionary, it could be interpreted wilfully. In order to avoid this wilfullness in interpretation, I demanded that in every case guilt would have to be determined. This, of course, was not necessary with the others, such as saboteurs and looters, for a saboteru has already committed a punitive action, otherwise one could not designate him as a saboteur.

it, is that right?

A Yes, that' right.

Q I am also interested in how you limited the reprisal order. Will you tell that to the Tribunal? for I had no competence nor opportunity to limit or correct this order in any way, for the execution of this order was exclusively in the hands of Dr. Rasch, personally. trial before they were executed?

in which we were billeted, and withe the participation of the Lemberg population, probably some officials of member of the police, interrogations took place continuously from morning to night.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, I think it is very clear to the Tribunal that there was no trial in the accepted understanding of that word. And he has indicated what they did. They interrogated th suspects, and then made their decisions.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Yes, sir. I withdraw my question, then. Well, did not-

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald. I am informed that in about two minutes the film will have consumed itself. So let us take our recess now.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: May I proceed, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. BY DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If I am not mistaken, Herr Schulz, you answered the question of the Tribunal as to how long a time was at the disposal of the investigating authorities in Lemberg, - at the utmost 48 hours. Is that correct? As far as I recollect I followed my statement, I arrived on the second of July, and if I remember it correctly on the following day the arrests were made, and according to my memory, and also according to the statement I made, on the 6th or 7th day after I had arrived in Lemberg, I went on. As the day of our march was the day after the execution had taken place, the interval between that day of our arrival and the day of our march must have been the day of the interrogations.

Q Who carried out these investigations? in change, and a larger unit of the General Government. took part in this investigation?

A No, I cannot say exactly, Mr. Prosecutor, because I did not take part myself in these matters and I did not investigate about them, but I assume that there must have been over 50 to 60 people taking part in that. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q You mean investigating?

A Yes, those people who carried out the investigations. That is the number which I can estimate, approximately. Those people were in the building, but I cannot say that with certainty. the Einsatzkammando? part in it, as far as I can see. I may add here that I cannot say with certainty -- in the building there was quite a lot of traffice, as it were, and I saw that many police officials took part in these investigations and interrogations. I cannot say anything further, your Honor.

Q How many were there in your command? and about 50 members of the regular police. They latter were, of course, also trained police officials which were trained in ordinary police service.

Q So that you had a personnel of 73 people?

Q In your Commando there were 73?

A Well, those were trained as police officials, yes; they were professional police officials.

command?

A You mean the total number?

A Including the drivers?

AApproximately 200, your Honor. Of these, there were about 50 drivers.

Q 50 drivers. Give me the breakdown of those 200 people. 50 drivers, and then what? 25 members of the Security Police, that is, State Police, Criminal Police, and SD. Furthermore, there were about 50 drivers. 50 members of the Waffen-SS and 50 members of the regular police, and there were a few additional members who were interpreters. That is approximately the breakdown.

Q Yes. Now, excluding the drivers - you then had, let us say, approximately about 150 men?

Q Yes; now, of these 150, one-third were engaged in this interrogation work, because you said 50 to 60. of people in the building. Of my own Commando men had been assigned to this. My Commandoo that is, No. 5, did not participate in the interrogations in Lemberg. My Commando was ready to march because I had been given the order to march off as soon as possible. Only because of these happenings in Lemberg I was prevented from marching on.

THE COURT: But your kommando participated in the executions? least my kommando was ordered to take part in these executions. Were executed? interrogations. You say you don't know who conducted the investigations; no one from your kommando sat in on the investigations, and you have no knowledge of what the investigations really brought out. Now is it you did not interest yourself a little more, since you were so concerned about seeing to it that no innocent people suffered? kommando had anything to do whatever with this task, because I have already mentioned that my kommando was ready to march, and should have marched on.

A (continuing) The distribution of the task was subordinate to the commander who was in charge of the task, generally, and who was in the same building, and who also made the necessary decisions. I believe that he would have disapproved very strongly if I had also taken part in the officialship. were executed, you do not of your own personal knowledge know whether they were all guilty, or not. - - just a moment, the switch is turned off, I am getting only the German. me that the individual cases were examined. executed by your kommando?

Q Were you given a list of those who were to be executed?

A No, Your Honor, I was not given that. The supervision of all of these executions was under the Einsatzkommando-VI, and even the investigation of the people charged with crimes was carried out by this kommando, and that on that day my kommando only had to supply the execution squad, having received an immediate oredr from Dr. Rasch.

Q How did you know who was to be executed?

A We were informed of this by Dr. Rasch, that is, that the participants were to be executed as reprisals. I am not informed, whether when reprisal measures are carried out,there arises the question of guilt at all, whether it is of any importance whatsoever, I can not decide that. the execution of individuals whose guilt you personally were not as sure of?

A I only knew the cases had been examined. The order had been given to examine also these cases, and I had assumed that the careful decision, of the Einsatzgruppe chiefs were right and that the executions which were carreid out were justified, once they were reprisals officers?

A No, I didn't doubt it, mainly because I could observe, Your Honor that some of the arrested people were always separated. From these observations I had to assume that these people who were separated had been examined and interrogated. certain place where they were awaiting your arrival? Lemberg. I had to deploy my Einsatzkommado there to carry out these executions. The victims, or the people who were to be executed were taken there by trucks in consignments of eighteen to twenty people, or they were taken there by Einsatzkommando-VI, or by people of the general government, I don't know exactly, and the militia also handled the burying of these people.

I already said my kommando was only in charge of the carrying out of the executions. of to Streckenbach prior to the executions?

A No, Your Honor, this order was not made known at Lemberg. This order, which I complained about, was the one proclaimed at the beginning of August, around the 10th of August, approximately, and it was proclaimed in Shitomir.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Hochwald. BY MR HOCHWALD: each involving about eighteen people, by your Einsatzkommando? Rasch were carried out in connection with this reprisal?

A That I can not say Mr. Prosecutor, I can not remember, I don't know. I think I can remember that that there were reprisals - that the number was established by the Fuhrer, but I don't know this number. you received from Rasch in the beginning of August in Shitomir? announced this order?

A Of the defendants, nobody was present. It is possible that Herr Blobel was there, but I am not certain that he was present. It is certain that Herr Naumann was there, and Dr. Kroeger. There were a few other gentleman but I don't remember the names. there was a Fuehrer Order in existence, which in essence had the same content within the order he gave you as handed down by Jekeln from Himmler?

Q Nobody said such a thing? opposition against this order of Rasch's?

A Yes, I did. Not only I objected but also other people, other comrades who were present. They most decidedly complained about it.

Q What exactly did you say?

A I can not remember the exact words. I do not remember them. Because I did not know that I would have to repeat them one day. It was within the framework of general discussion whether it would have been practicable under the conditions to complain, and to speak about it, I don't know. I am not able to decide about this, and I decided on that occasion to act, and, I merely asked questions whether the RSHA, the Reich Security Main Office in Berlin knew about these orders, and, whether the RSHA agreed to them. Whereupon, as I already said, in direct examination, Rasch answered that was absolutely certain, if the highest Police and SS Leader, the Obergruppenfuehrer Jekeln decreed such an order, then that was valid for all.

Q For all. Not only for the Einsatzgruppe-C, is that right?

A I may ask you what you mean by "all"?

Q You said that it was so that this order came from Himmler? C? and SS Leader Jekeln. Jekeln was competent for the Einsatzgruppe-C. Einsatzgruppe, which should not be valid for all of them, as the order for one Einsatzgruppe alone was issued by the group-commander, but not by the Gruppenfuehrer Himmler, who was in charge of all SS troops?

A That may be so in spite of this. I heard that on the part of Obergruppenfuehrer Jekeln, he was known to be a fanatic, that more was actually done, and more was actually decreed than perhaps was necessary and wanted, that I assumed at the time.

Q Did you see something in writing from Rasch, as to this order?

A No, I didn't, I didn't see anything in writing. which possibly would be more than was requested on which this order of Jekeln was based? that it came really from Himmler? then operated? Rundstedt?

Q What was your collaboration with the Army authorities? service, although in the short time of my stay in Russia I had no possibility, of course, and no opportunity to have a definite relation at all. I must inform you that during all these times, during the time I was in Russia, I was on the move all the time. you have connections with the lower army unit - the lower level? various agencies between the I-C, mainly, was done through a liaison man who had been appointed by myself.

Q So you had a regular liaison officer at Reicheman's headquarters?

A No, he was not in Reichenau's Headquarters. I han another liaison officer when I was in Berditschew with Army Group South and I dismissed the liaison officer for this task, because Army Group South was in Berditschew itself.

Q Who was commander of this Army Group? from that part of the Army to execute people? you?

A Probably through I.C.

Q And One-C handed this request to your liaison officer?

A No, he didn't.

Q You never got it?

Q Who got the order from One-C, the execution order, I mean?

A I do not know what order you are referring to? more times you received a request from the part of the Army to execute people, your answer was, yes. I then asked you how the chain of command was, how this order reached you, your answer was, it was over the One-C. My question now is, from the One-C whom did the order reach from the One-C?

A It was like this. Shortly after my arrival in Berditschew I visited him, and on the occasion of this visit to the Army South, I was told that in the case of Berditschew the arrested people were in the Citadel in Beritschew who had been arrested as partisans bearing arms in the fight at Berditschew , and I was asked to settle matter there and then.

Q. Who asked you that?

A. I am not in a position now to tell you the name.

Q. It must not be a name;which office of the Army requested it from you?

A. I think it must be an officer who was collaborating with the One-C, that he was an officer of One-C itself ,b ecause apart from this one visit I never visited the Army group south again.

Q. Then if I understand you correctly, then you executed people only on the basis of telephone or teletype requests without knowing anything as to the circumstances?

A. No.

Q. Only for the simple reason that an officer in an Army office asked you to do that , is that correct?

A. No, that is absolutely a mistake. I also explained the matter in a very different way. They were made known to me on occasions of such discussions, and then I ordered the investigation of these things. As I said,yesterday, I passed this on to subCommander of my command, and this officer did not have the opportunity or chance to deal with it immediately, and so even I was reminded by Dr. Rasch, my chief, when, a few days later he inspected my command, and told me that complaints had been received, and that the executions of these partisans, who were arrested in were in the Citadel, had not been carried out and only then I gave sub-commander the order again , and I asked him to investigate the matter. This investigation took place at the Citadel.

Q. And the Teilkommando leader settled the question with Wehrmacht immediately then? No, I understand you differently, I understand that it was left to your discretion and to the alscretion of the subordinates of yours t as to whether these people should be executed, as you said, the last investigation was left to one of your sub-commanders, is that correct?

A. The investigation was carried out by the commander of a subdetachment, after conclusion of the investigation . In this case the Wehrmacht decided how it was to be handled after that. I, myself, did not give any such order.

Q. Is it not true that the sub-commander was responsible to you and not to the Army?

A. Yes, they were subordinate to me, but I was subordinate to the Army; the Army could give orders to me and to my detachments.

Q. I only wonder that the sub-commander who was responsible reported to the Army and not to you.

A. Certainly, he also reported to me, but the people arrested at Berditschew were under military arrest at the Citadel, and, consequently, the authorities who arrested them had to be informed.

Q. But you received the requests for executions and not your sub-commander, and you gave him the order to investigate the matter, so, it seems to me more natural that you would have been informed about the effect of this investigation, and you could make then your recommendation to the Army, is it not true?

A. I could have done so, yes, but in this case I passed it onto the sub-commander who was in charge of the investigation.

Q. All right. You testified in this connection about another execution which was carried out in Suichnik, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Who ordered this execution?

A. I already described this event. I believe that it is known, but 'll repeat it again. One day --

Q. May I interrupt you a moment; I only want to know who ordered this execution, then you can explain. Say, first, who ordered it?

A. The order was given by the local commander in Smolensk, who was the local commander at this town.

Q. Was he in a position to give yousuch an order?

A. The local commander did not pass on this order to me; that he made all these rules which he had to set up for his area as the commander of the town.

Q. To whom exactly did he give the order?

A. He gave this order to a detachment leader, whom I had put at his disposal for investigation at Smolensk.

Q. Was this sub-command leader responsible to you, or to the local commander?

A. He was subordinate of myself who was appointed by me to carry out the task for the Wehrmacht.

Q. Alright, did you ever receive orders to kill insane people.

A. I cannot remember having received an order to execute insane people.

Q. Did you ever kill insane -- I don't mean that you killed them, but under your command were there insane people executed?

A. I do not know of such a case.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal whether a Gestapo Leitstell is an office of the Gestapo?

A. I don't think I understand this question?

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal whether a Gestapo Leitstelle is a Gestapo Office?

A. A Gestapo Leitstelle is an official agency, yes.

Q.An office of the Gestapo, I asked.

A. A state police Leitstelle is an agency of the state police for one particular district of administration.

Q. May I rephrase my question? Does the Gestapo Leitstelle belong to the officesof the Gestapo?

A. Certainly.

Q. And a Gestapo Aussenstelle?

A. That is a subsidiary office of the Gestapo main office.

Q. A subsidiary office of the Gestapo, is it not?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Commandos and officers of such offices were members of the Gestapo, were they not?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. You told the Tribunal further what an inspecteur of the Security Police and the SD is. Is it not true that all Gestapo offices were under the supervision of either the Commander-in-Chief or the Inspecteur of the Security Police and the SD?

A. I don't think I understood your question correctly.

Q. Is it not true that all Gestapo offices of a certain area were under the supervision of the Commander in Chief or of the Inspecteur of the Security Police and the SD?

A. This was a different organization. Within the Reich territory itself there were the inspectors, so-called. The inspectors had no executive power. In the occupied territories, however, there were kommanders of the police and the SD, the executive power of whom was a much larger one, although, of course, they were tied to the orders of the central office, that is the RSHA, the Reich Security Main Office.

Q. But wasthe inspecteur of the Security Police and the SD a member of the Gestapo, a Gestapo officer?

A. That depended, Mr. Prosecutor. They were taken from all three departments of the Security Service of the SD. There were inspecteurs who were taken from the State Police; inspecteurs who came from the SD; and also inspecteurs who came from the Criminal Police, but in their capacity as inspecteurs they were taken from their former activities within the other department and were subordinated immediately to the Chief of the Security Police.

I think this answers your question, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q. That was perfectly correct. So it is possible that somebody can be supervising the Gestapo without being a member of it. Will you tell that to the Tribunal?

A. Yes, I mean the word "supervision" is perhaps not quite the right word here, If you mean the inspecteur, his task, at least within this department, wasto take care that all things were carried out in an orderly manner without that the inspecteur as such was not certified to give any orders for the carrying out of these tasks.

Q. No activities whatsoever, no executive activities whatsoever?

A. The inspecteur had no executive power.

Q. Who made the reports which were sent from Einsatzkommando V to Einsatzgruppe C?

A. They were drafted by the subkommanders.

Q. Did the subkommanders direct and send them to Einsatzgruppe C?

A. Not in every case. As a rule they were sent via the Einsatzkommando. These reports were not only drafted and made but by the subkommanders but even by individual collaborators.

Q. So it is true then that you received these reports, did you not?

A. Yes, I think I can say that.

Q. Did you read these reports before they were sent on?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. Did you receive copies of the reports which were made by Einsatzgruppe C to the RSHA ?

A. No, I didn't receive such reports. I did not even receive copies from my own Einsatzkommando, because our Einsatzkommando had about three or four typewriters only, and basically only original reports were passed on.

Q. How then did you receive knowledge about the reports which were sent from Einsatzgruppe C to the RSHA?

A. Not at all. I never received reports from the Einsatzgruppe to the RSHA.

Q. You testified here in direct that you made a personal report to Rasch concerning the activities of his Staff Leader, Hoffmann. You further testified that Hoffmann was the man who made the reports.

A. Yes, I did so. My report to Dr. Rasxh did not only deal with the activity of Dr. Hoffmann, but with his human attitude which I criticized most vividly in this report. This had nothing to do with his reporting on individual brunches of his activity.

Q. How do you know then that Hoffmann made the reports?

A. I knew that from my discussions which I had with the Einsatzgruppe in Zhitomir. At least three or four times I have visited in Einsatzgruppe in Zhitomir.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal whether the Defendant Rasch did see the reports of Hoffmann before they were sent on?

A. What happens within the Einsatzgruppe itself, I am not able to say.

Q. So you cannot testify to the fact then that these reports were made only by Hoffmann as you stated in your direct examination, is that correct?

A. No, I cannot say that.

Q. Do you know whether it is true or not that Hoffmann and Rasch were on very friendly terms?

A. Generally it was assumed that Hoffmann and Rasch were on very close terms.

Q. What were your own relations to Rasch?

A. They were not of a very friendly nature.

Q. You stated in one of your affidavits which is in evidence that Rasch distinguished himself by extraordinary ruthlessness.

A. I think I used the term, "ruthlessness", but it was more or less in the same line, which I have already mentioned before. He was absolutely cold and void of feeling, and he passed on these very hard orders and severe orders without even trying to explain the necessity of such orders. There were some other points as well which caused me to estimate him, therefore, asan extremely cruel and ruthless man.

Q. Can you tell -- then, the other points?

A. I can only give reasons for this from his general appearance, his general personality. I cannot at the moment remember any individual details, Mr. Prosecutor. you about these terrible orders, but you did not find it ruthless that he carried out these terrible orders, is that correct? Do I understand you correctly?

A. I think that your question was unneccessary, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q. You need not answer it.

A. In that case I will not answer it.

Q. When you were recalled from the East and returned to the RSHA did you ever report personally to Streckenbach or Heydrich on the activities of the Einsatzgruppen?

A. Already on the occasion of my first trip to Berlin I reported to Streckenbach explicitly, and after my return I did not omit to give him another detailed description about conditions in Russia. After all it then led also to Hoffmann's dismissal from the Security police as far as the person himself is concerned.

Q. Did you talk to Heydrich about the Hitler order?

A. No, I did not. I had hardly any relation or personal relation to Heydrich. I talked about it to Streckenbach, personally and I asked him to see Heydrich about it. This indeed was difficult. I said to Streckenbach that I would be prepared to report to Heydrich myself because Heydrich had then been appointed Reichprotector in Prague, and only stayed in Berlin for just very few days at a time.

After my return from Russia I never again saw Heydrich in Berlin.

Q. Apart from this information you gave to Streckenbach, did you make an attempt to have the order that all Jews, gypsies and Communists were to be killed withdrawn?

A. I know nothing about gypsies. May I have your question repeated, Mr. Prosecutor?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, you need not specify what the order was each time you mention it. It is the Fuehrer order. I think the Tribunal knows which order it is, and the witness knows, so just say "that order, the Fuehrer order".

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: I am so sorry, Sir.

Q. (By Mr. Horlick-Hochwald) Did you then make an attempt?

A. It was the purpose of my visit in Berlin, anyhow.

Q. I am sorry. You misunderstood me. I asked you when you were called back from the East.

A. Yes.

Q. It was at the end of September, you say. Did you then afterwards, when you returned, when you were in a quite high position in the RSHA, did you use your influence to do anything to have this order withdrawn?

A. After my return I discussed it with Streckenbach again, and I reported about the events in the East as I had experienced them myself, and although I knew that they were now being stopped, I discussed them in great detail with Dr. Kaltenbrunner at the very beginning, and one of my first requests in 1943 when I became the personnel chief was the request to have a general inspecteur appointed who, independently from all offices, would supervise the offices, mainly within the East in order to find out what was actually happening there. This inspecteur general was refused to me; but I succeeded to have a trustee at my disposal in order to examine and investigate conditions in the East which I no longer was able to survey. Standartenfuehrer Dr. Canaris on my personal request, received this order from Kaltenbrunner, the personal order to make an inspection tour through the Eastern Territories and to report to him without any restraint what so ever what he had seen and heard. This report on the part of Dr. Canaris, which contained many pages and still showed up many shortcomings, was submitted to Obergruppenfuehrer Dr. Kaltenbrunner, and on the basis of this report there was an absolute clean-up. about assigning the Security police also with the combat of partisans. At the beginning I succeeded in this to the extent that in my opening speech as Chief of Group I, I could inform the chiefs of all three departments that the soldierly tasks of the security police, which was an unusual kind of task for the police, the playing at soldiers, was to be discontinued, and that with the agreement of Kaltenbrunner the Security Police in the East would only deal with matters of security policy from than on.

Q. Am I correct in assuming that it is your contention that nobody way ever executed by units under your command unless he was found guilty of a very serious crime and of an overt act which endangered the security of the German Army, is that correct?

A. That was my intention yes.

Q. I did not ask whether it was your intention. I asked you whether you state here that nobody else than guilty persons were ever executed by units under you command?

A. According to the reports which are submitted here, I was of the conviction that actually only guilty people were executed.

Q. This procedure was in direct contradiction to the order of Rasch asyou had received it in Zhitomir, is it not?

A. At least it is a very strong limitation asit were . At least after the order of August it was an absolute contradiction, yes.

Q. Did your refusal to carry out this order impair your career in the Gestapo?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, I may ask you not to use the word "refusal" because I did not refuse to obey an order. To refuse to obey an order means to tell a superior officer: "I refuse to carry out this order." This I did not do. I, myself, looked for a way out, and I did find a way out. Because of this way out I was not reproached. That is right Whether this way out was ever found out at all, I am not able to say. But that I exercised the greatest restraint, this fact was well known.

Q. Wasit known then to your superiors, at least to a certain extent, that your activities in Russia had been a failure?

A. I must assume so, because as Streckenbach informed me, my discharge was carried out because I was not hard and severe enough.

Q. Who promoted your Oberfulner, Herr Schulz?

A. I presume that this was done on the suggestion of Office I.

Q. Antschef I was Streckenbach?

A. Was Streckenbach, yes.

Q. And it was Himmler who promoted you at the time there, is that not correct?

A. That is correct. Such promotions could only have been done by Himmler.

Q. Why?

A. I am afraid I cannot say that. That was a certain date of promotion, and I was promoted together with a number of other people.

Q. It is a question of memory. I introduce now Document 4957 This will be Prosecution Exhibit 176, Your Honors. Will you turn first to the last page. There are special remarks on the last page, handwritten. Defense counsel will be good enough to hand them out to you. and I will read them. It is obviously a remark made by you, is it not, this handwritten remark?

A. I don't know which remark you are referring to.

Q. The last remark. I will show it to you. It is better to take this. Here is the document. Do you have the document here? Is that your handwriting, Mr. Schulz?

A. Yes, it is my handwriting.

Q. I would like to quote: "From the beginning of 1931 I occupied a particularly confidential position with regard to the SS and also to the Kreis leadership of the NSDAP because of my position then as Referent in the Central Police Office of Bremen (Political police). My entrance into the Party only after 30 January 1933 resulted from the express wish of the then SS-Unit Leader." examination expressly why you did not join the Party earlier and asked you expressly about your reason, that you said that my contention was not correct?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, in this form the statement carries more weight than is actually the case, because such a close relationship was not really the case.

Q. will you look at Page 1 of the Document and now we shall find why you were promoted Senior Colonel? I quote: "I hereby promote you, effective 9 November 1941, to SS-Oberfuehrer because of outstanding service in the Einsatz." Will you tell the Tribunal, Mr. Schulz, whether the words "in the Einsatz" means your activity in the East?

A. That is possible, yes, but I do not think that if merits are talked about here that this only concerns the shootingof people. There were also other tasks, Mr. Prosecutor, which were my own task. The execution of people was an extraordinarily difficult subsidiary task which I carried out with extreme suffering, and I think I have explained that. I have gone into details about it, and God knows I did not take it easy, and I found a way of my own which perhaps not everybody would have found. The merit was in achieving, to secure the rear Army territory, if this has to be pointed out at all, not the shooting and execution of people wasthe merit.

Mr. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Tribunal before you did see the document. Before you had the document before you, you told the Tribunal, "I have not idea why I was promoted."

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45.

( A recess was taken unti 1345 hours.)

--- --- (The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours, October 21, 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HEIM (Attorney for the Defendant Blobel): Your Honor, I ask that the Defendant Blobel be excused from tomorrow morning's session, since he will have to appear as a witness in his own defense within a few days and so that he can prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Blobel will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow morning.

DR. HEIM: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: You're welcome.

Do you desire to present any further questions?

Dr. DURCHHOLZ (Attorney for the Defendant Schulz): Your Honor, I would like to ask a few questions in re-direct.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. DURCHHOLD (Attorney for Defendant Schulz):

Q. Witness, I come back to the document previously submitted by the prosecution, NO-4957, Prosecution Exhibit 176. On page 1 of this document, your promotion to SS-Oberfuehrer is made effective as of the 9th of November, 1941. I ask you now, did you keep this secret up to this time for any reason?

A. No secret has been revealed about my person in this document, b ecause the original document listing all my promotions was handed to the CIC when I was arrested in Salzburg in the year 1945. I gave all my papers to the CIC and no document was lacking, not even this one.

Q. Was this promotion a promotion because of favoritism?

A. No, this promotion was no promotion like that. It was not out of order.

Q. Did your seniority warrant this promotion?

A. Yes.

Q. On the next to the last page of this document, it is noted under the 22d of March,1943, that since the beginning of 1931 you held a special relationship of confidence to the SS and NSDAP. Can you explain to me what this relationship of confidence consisted of?

A. This relationship isn't anything special. That I sympathised with the Nazi Party before 1933 I have already said in my examination; that I tried to achieve a relationship of confidence was not only in the interest of the Party but in my own interest,namely, it was through this relationship that it was often possible to prevent conflicts between political opponents and street fights.

Q. At that time did you show any favoritism towards members of the Nazi Party or SS?

A. No, never.

Q. Didn't you in the year 1932 have a Higher SS leader arrested?

A. Yes, even the one I have mentioned as a witness here, that was the SS leader of the SS Unit in Bremen. Shortly before the assumption of power, he was arrested for being suspected in a murder as a s result of a personal investigation on my part and brought into the prison pending trial. Only after the assumption of power, through the new Party agencies, was he released from this prison.

Q. Did you have especially close connections withthe Party? Were you active in propaganda?

A. No.

Q. Did you regularly attend Party meetings?

A. No, I didn't consider then important and visited them very rarely.

Q. Did you have any personal ties with Party leaders?

A. No.

Q. Now I come to another point. Did you consider yourself a camouflaged member of the Party before 1933?

A. No.

Q. Now I come to your activity in the Sudentenland. You were in Reichenberg and in Clmuetz. In cross-examination this morning something unclear seems to have cropped up. One could assume that you had appointed a Commissar in Reichenberg who had the job , by your order, to secure Jewish property. What activity is concerned here?

A. As far as I can remember, I said that when I took this agency over I found great disorder; Party agencies end other authorities had taken some of the property of the refugees and other Jews. They had taken furniture and Office equipment for their own use. This disorder I eliminated and in this I had to put up with great opposition among these agencies.

Q. Thus, you wanted to accomplish that it would be impossible for people who had nothing to do with this to enrich themselves with Jewish property?

A. Yes, that was the reason why I appointed an official; not a Commissar, but an official.

Q. Did you not cause arrests in Reichenberg of such people who on their own enriched themselves with Jewish property ?

A. Yes, several persons.

Q. Were proceedings initiated against these people by your order?

A. Yes, proceedings were started, against them.

Q. On your order?

A. Yes.

Q. Who ordered these confiscations of property, you or other agencies?

A. The confiscation was ordered by the Higher Finance Minister.

Q. Do you remember that after the war broke out with Poland,the then Gauleiter Henlein asked you to take Czechs into protective custody?

A. When war broke out with Poland, Gauleiter Henlein asked me to come and see him and he demanded of me that all leading or even prominent Czechs be taken into protective custody. At that time I told Gauleiter Henlein that the conduct of the Czech minorities, as far as I could see in my three months' activity there, was correct and loyal so that I did not consider such a measure as justified and that I even was afraid to embitter the Czech minority by this measure.

Gauleiter Henlein answered me, "You must admit that I know the Czechs better." Nevertheless I told him that I considered this measure as superfluous and that I would guarantee that no unrest would result. Then I promised him to make up a list of such people who are known to be prominent . On this basis of this promise, Henlein agreed to refrain from the protective custody, if it turned cut that I was right. No arrests were ordered and the Czech inhabitants of the Sudetenland conducted themselves absolutely loyally during the Polish campaign. Not only in this case, but also in all other cases, I have always represented the interests of humanity.

of a search book certain people would have to be arrested, Who ordered this? our duties. It had been prepared by the RSHA. or other people? Thus I mentioned that in this list Police Director Dr. Bender was included too. cause they were Jews or were any other prerequisites necessary? was a Jew. I have already mentioned Dr. Rosenach,as a witness. I worked with him for four years uninterruptedly and in an absolutely friendly manner.

Q Were you competent to send people go a concentration camp?

A I personally had no power of decision about this. The decision lay with the RSHA. heard about excesses on the part of the Party. Were these matters within your competence or were these excesses of other agencies or other authorities? of my competence. As long as I held an official position, not a single human being was mistreated. If this had been the case, I would have severely punished a man who did such a thing.

Q I want to come back briefly to the order of Heydrich. Did you expect that your assignment in Russia would be merely the liquidation of Jews and others who are considered politically unreliable?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, the witness testified that when he received the order, he did not know that he was going to do and it wasn't until a month later that he ascertained its exact nature.

It seems that we have covered this particular subject.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I merely mentioned it because it came up in cross-examination and one might get the wrong idea from it this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: You are not required to cover the ground which is covered in cross-examination, if you have already addressed yourself to that subject in the direct examination. You are only to pick up what he brought in extra to what you introduced in the direct examination. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: didn't remember all the events in Russia, especially since one assumed that somehow they kept the events in Russia secret. When did you hear what the Einsatzgruppen did in Russia?

Q I shall formulate it differently. Before the end of the war, did you find out to the full extent what activities the Einsatzgruppen carried out in Russia, as far as the many executions are concerned? about softness was made unjustly. Do you mean to say by that that you were not soft enough in Russia, that, therefore, you carried out all measures which had been ordered without hesitation?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, the witness very clearly stated that by softness he meant lack of moral fibre. He didn't want it to be confused with good heartedness. He denied being soft, but accepted the attribute of good-heartedness. I think that covered that.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: If this statement was given, I consider this question as answered.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q I come back briefly to the events in Lemberg. Witness, did you have anything to do with the arrests of the Jews in Lemberg?

Q Did you not release arrested Jews on that field?

because they were Jews?

THE PRESIDENT: It seems he covered that pretty thoroughly, Dr. Durochholz. He told the whole story. He said investigations were made, and only those who had participated in massacres were executed. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ:

Q I come now to another question. You told us that during the investigation in Lemberg the militia participated. Which militia was this? German or some other? from the Lemberg population -- that is, indigenous personnel.

Q Poles?

Q Didn't the Mayor of Lemberg participate in these investigations?

Q How many Einsatzkommandos were in Lemberg at that time?

A Temporarily there were four Commandos there: Commando 4b, Commando 5, Commando 6, and this Commando from the General Government. Commando 4b was the first one to leave. person give it to your Einsatzkommando?

A The order was given by Brigadier General Dr. Rasch.

Q Were those executions of hostages? out executions only if punishable actions had been determined previously?

THE PRESIDENT: He's covered that ground.

BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: Who gave the order for the executions on the citadel in Shmielnik?

A This question is wrong. Once there was an execution on the citadel in Berditschew.

Q Who gave the order in Shmielnik? by the town commandant. to your commander. Russia, as you have described it, would not have been disadvantageous for your career in the police, for you said that you did not execute the orders such as they should have been executed. Was this known to the Higher agencies?

A This answer I have already confirmed; otherwise, my dismissal would not have come about. to carry out the order?

THE PRESIDENT: I think he's covered that. He stated what it would mean to disobey an order.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I have finished the redirect examination. to examine, I want to make a short statement. I ask that you permit me to call three witnesses so that I may examine them here in Court. These are: Dr. Steiner; Alfred Faust, and Alfred Schwarting. I shall do without the other witnesses.

DR. HOCHWALD: Your Honors, please, it would be helpful if Dr. Durchholz would inform the Tribunal on what subjects these three witnesses are going to testify. Are they character witnesses, or can they testify as to crimes charged in the indictment?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: These three witnesses are to testify as to how the defendant conducted himself in his activity in the Gestapo. As far as the witness Steiner is concerned, he is a representative of the Catholic Church in Austria. In the case of the witness Faust, he is leading Social Democrat in Bremen.

And the witness Schwarting is the person whom the defendant appointed to a void excesses on the part of the police. These points are connected with Count 3 of the indictment -- Membership in a criminal organization.

DR. HOCHWALD: If your Honors please, it seems clear from the Statement of Dr. Durchholz that all of the witnesses are going to testify only on Count 3, and more or less on very similar subjects. It seems to the prosecution sufficient if only one of the witnesses would appear, and the other two give their testimony in the form of an affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know whether that would be satisfactory to you, Dr. Durchholz. But we will say this. That if we allow the three witnesses, they will be restricted to what you have indicated will be the subject of their interrogation, and from what you have said it would appear that ten minutes to each witness might be enough in Court.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes. I shall confine myself to very brief questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Then these witnesses will be permitted. Are they here now?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: No, they are not here yet. I shall call them when they arrive here.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, does that mean that otherwise you have terminated the presentation of the evidence in the case of the defendant Schulz?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. It is unfortunate that the witnesses are not here because we prefer, naturally, that the witnesses testify at the same time that the defendant does. But through no fault of yours the witnesses are not here -- but we do hope that this situation does not repeat itself, and that we can have witnesses here simultaneously with the presentation of the defendant for whom they will testify.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, I had asked for these witnesses some time ago.

THE PRESIDENT: I have said it -- it is no fault of yours; Dr. Durchholz.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honors, as far as the submission of my documents is concerned, I have just heard before that my document book one, in the English language, has been given to the prosecution. Since I want to submit Document Book 2, I consider it useful to submit the two document books together at a later date.

THE PRESIDENT: It might be interesting to known Dr. Durchholz, that submitting your document book to the prosecution is not quite enough. The Tribunal should get a chance to look at it, too. We have not received it.

Mr. Hochwald, do you have any further questions of the witness?

DR. HOCHWALD: The prosecution has no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Just a question or two.

DR. HEIM (for the defendant Blobel): BY DR. HEIM: detachment leaders made up reports and that these reports always went to Einsatzkommando 5. Can you tell me from your own knowledge whether this channel of reporting was used also in the other Einsatzkommandos and Special Commandos? but during my cross examination I think I told the prosecutor that it could have been possible that they took a shorter way, especially with the difficult communication in Russia. How the other Einsatzkommandos regulated their channels, I don't know. There was no SOP about this channel.

Q witness, now the last question. Thus you cannot claim, if I understand you correctly, that this channel of reporting, as you have described it this morning for Einsatzkommando 5, also was used for the Special Commando 4?

DR. HEIM: Thank you. I have no further questions. BY THE PRESIDENT: officers school sent, generally?

A You mean the pupils of the school for executive service? normally they didn't get any assignment after the school. The usual courses were taken in that school: the training courses for criminal commissars for the State Police, and for the criminal police. These training courses were prescribed. After a training course was completed an examination had to be passed, and promotion depended on the passing of the examination, according to the Reich regulations. came to your school for extra instruction?

A No, your Honor, they were not officers on an assignment; the men who came to my school were no officers as yet. They were officer candidates. They were taken from the agencies of the whole Reich and were ordered to the school if they were up for promotion. The course lasted 9 months. After completion of this course, and after the passing of the examination -- if somebody failed, it, without this examination -they wont back to their old agencies. while they were at your school? of this course. the official attitude of the Reich government towards the Jews?

way, nothing was said in this course. The ideological training only saw to it that everyone was informed of the developments of the Nazi party and about the career of the Fuehrer. Party, certainly something was said about the Jewish problem, was it not?

A I don't think so, your Honor. This was a special school. The education of human beings as such in their daily duties was a matter for their own agencies to take care of. I may emphasize expressly that in this school no education for hatred or contempt for any people ever took place.

Socialist party insofar as it concerns the Jaws, a program of hatred and contempt? Reich government thought of the Jewish problem, since it did not involve hatred and contempt? an ideological or religious nature is discussed in detail: but there was no time for that at that school: nor were there any qualified teachers to deal with the questions. I may say that I, as commander of the school, would have hardly been in a position to give a survey of the history of the Jewish people. lasted 9 months, although you were training men to act for the Reich in various fields of security work, and that although the Jewish problem was a major problem in the Reich, and although there was this specific order from the Fuehrer that the Jews in the occupied territories ware to be executed - at any rate, to be placed under observation -- that in spite of all that, not a word was said about the Jewish situation in the instruction of these students in your school? question when discussing legislation, but any type of educational questions which immediately touched upon the Jewish problem were not discussed in this school.

Q I understand that you taught chivalry. Now, just what did this course in chivalry consist of? What were the students instructed to do along chivalrous lines? them a survey of their duties as future leaders. Among these duties I included an appeal to humanity and chivalry. I demanded of every single one that he set a good example, and that his conduct always he such that he could answer for it to himself; that, above all, he should never make demands of other people which he could not perform himself.

could always answer for it to himself. Was he ever instructed that he should conduct himself in such a way that he should give answer to a Supreme Being? leaving your school?

Q Were they trained and qualified to enter Einsatzkommandos? Einsatzkommando, did not take place in the school at all. for an Einsatzcommando job, either, but you were sent to one. I am asking if the graduates of your school would be amendable for assignment to Einsatzkommandos. entered into the execution of the Fuehrer Order in an Einsatzkommando, could they have executed that order, as it was sent down through the line of command, and yet have been faithful to the code of chivalry which you instructed them on? It was not valid for the entire time--could one execute that order and yet be true to the code of chivalry which you taught in your school?

A Your Honor, that is difficult to answer. This was an order which people had to obey.

Q I don't know why it is difficult to answer. You taught chivalry. You volunteered that. No one asked you. You said you taught students chivalry, and these students, just like all other graduates of army schools, could be subjected to the Fuehrer Order; and they are now in the field, and they have this order to go out and execute, and they remember your code of chivalry. Can they execute the order and still be true to this coda of chivalry?

Q Then you feel disinclined to answer? right explanation. I now put myself in the situation of a man who has been obediently educated. I can imagine that the feeling for gallantry as such would not be destroyed by the fact that a harsh order must be followed -- but may I make the following explanation. If I take the fact that the enemy in Russia carried on a very severe war, and thereby challenged such harsh measures on the other side -thus, if the measures of the enemy are declared as unchivalrous, then I don't think it is up to me to designate my own measures as such. population because Russia had not lived up to the code of chivalry. Is that what you are telling us?

A Your Honor, that is very difficult. One has to consider the concept of morality and law. I am not enough of a philosopher to analyze the concept of morality, and I am not enough of a jurist to define the concept of law; but if my morality is equivalent to guilt, then it is very difficult to say - for the gruesome war raged through the years - if this whole war was immoral, then the Fuehrer Order as a part of this war, is also immoral. But I cannot get myself to claim that. in what was done.

people. had been massacred, and as a reprisal measure certain individuals were taken into custody and executed. Is that correct?

A Yes, arrests were made, and executions were ordered; yes. massacre of Jews. Hadn't the German forces themselves executed Poles in Poland?

A I don't know that, your Honor. numbers - hundreds of thousands - of Poles were executed... you don't know that? learning that Poles had been massacred by the Russians, you believed that the order to conduct the reprisal was based upon the revulsion on the part of the German forces against the execution of helpless Poles?

Q Yes, perhaps it Was a little involved. During the Polish invasion, Poles were executed merely because they were Poles. Documents indicate that that actually happened. The German forces executed Poles, civilians. Now, it seems strange that since the German forces, when they were allied with the Russian forces, executed Poles, that they would suddenly demand reprisals because Poles had been executed by the Russians.

A Your Horror, I can only say this one thing. I don't know the detailed circumstances of this order. I merely had to accept the fact that here the Fuehrer had ordered reprisals, but German Wehrmacht soldiers had also been killed, and I also would like to point out the fact that in the Polish campaign, Germans had also been murdered before. What the connections are here, and what caused the head of the State to give this order, I just don't know.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, I think that covers it. The Marshall will return the defendant to the defendants' dock. Dr. Schwarz for the defendant, Jost, are you ready to proceed?

Dr. SCHWARZ: Yes. Dr. SCHWARZ for the defendant Jost.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

HEINZ JOST, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE SPEIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me: I swear by God, the Almighty and Omniscient, that I will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath)

JUDGE SPEIGHT: You may be seated.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, may I please begin with the direct examination of the defendant Jost.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. BY DR. SCHWARZ: person?

A My name is Heinz Jost. I was born on 9 July 1904 in Molzhausen, District of Marburg. I am the oldest of three brothers. The next brother is a druggist, and the youngest is a physician. I am married and have one child.

Q What were your parents, witness? Hessen. Both parents come from families of officials.

Q In what manner were you educated in your parent's home?

accordingly. Both parents were Catholics. and my mother was very devout. My parents tried to give me the traditional upbringing of a decent, honest and respected citizen,and they chose for me an academic career. they? who educated us to do our duty, to be just and honest, and to love the Fatherland and its people. In his political opinion he was a liberal and democrat, and before and after the first World War he was active in the Democratic Party. Later on, disappointed about the development, in Germany, he joined the Nazi Party.

Q What education did you have?

Q And what came after that? in Benzheim Hessen.

Q How did you education proceed after that? 1923 to 1927. I attended the University at Giessen, and I spent one term at Munich. I completed my studies in the Spring of 1927, and passed my Bar Examination. career?

A I spent this time in the District Court of Darmstadt; at the District Court and at the office of the Landrat, with a lawyer, and with the Labor Court.

Q Did you pass the assessor examination, if so, when and where? the Assessor examination, that is, the State examination, and was with the Hessen District Court in Darmstadt until the end of 1930.

a part in your political development? for my political development, the experience of the First World War. the loss of that war, and the post-war years, awakened my interest in all questions concerned with my Fatherland. During my time as a student, I was very active in sports, and in this activity I met people from all classes, especially from the working class. I got to know the people very early in my life, whom I would not have met otherwise. I not only got to know these people from the working class, as honest and decent people, but I also gained insight into their needs and their worries. I saw and recognized their economic position; their primitive and modest living conditions. In other words, I came to grips with the social problems of our time through personal knowledge. Above all, I saw, outside of this material distress, that this German worker held a position outside of his people, and was not considered as a full member of the people. One even denied him his human dignity. After I had entered the University, I joined a student organization, and here I got to know the bourgeois life from which I myself came, but into which I now gained more of an insight. I saw the social exclusiveness, the so-called narrow attitude and narrowmindedness, and conceit of the bourgeois himself. During that time I became conscious of a deep rift within the German people, that there were actually two classes who speak the same language, but who were actually foreign to each other, and could not speak to each other on the same terms. This condition occupied my mind very much without my knowing how it could be changed. Around that time I became acquainted with the philosophy of the Nazi Party.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, would you want to suspend now for the afternoon recess, and then take it up immediately after we reconvene?

DR. SCHWARZ: Yes, Your Honor.

The PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Mr. Hochwald.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I would like to make a correction. I offered this morning NO-4957, and by mistake gave it is Document No. 176.

THE PRESIDENT: Exhibit number, you mean?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Exhibit No. 176. It should be, Your Honors, Exhibit 177, as Exhibit 176 was reserved for one of the two documents which were handed to Naumann in cross-examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Your statement will be sufficient to make the correction on the record.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Thank you, Your Honor.

DR. ULMER: Defense counsel, Dr. Ulmer, for the Defendant Dr. Six. not finish what I had in mind for the preparation of his case. I would be very grateful to you if the Defendant Six will be freed from session tomorrow morning as well.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Six will be excused from attendance in Court tomorrow morning in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. MAYER: Dr. Mayer for the Defendant Braune. morrow morning for the preparation of his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Braune will be excused in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, may I proceed with the examination of the Defendant Jost?

THE PRESIDENT: Please do. BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q Mr. Witness, we talked about your entry into the NSDAP. When did you join the NSDAP and in what manner?

AAt the beginning of 1928 I joined the NSDAP. At that time there was no large organization of any kind. There were only a few members of the Party in those days.

Everybody did want he thought he had to do. The political activity mainly consisted of spreading of propaganda, distribution of papers, pamphlets and leaflets and in eager discussions between individuals, discussing politics with men and women who were of other opinions, and with the attempt of trying to convince others of the justifiability of their political opinions. Only in later years, that was in 1930 and 1931, the first organizations or organizational outlines started. At some periods I had the office of a cashier or as a local administrator, or sometimes I was in charge of propaganda, according to whatever the office was doing. because of my professional career I could not become active in this unit. Definitely I joined the SA in 1931. I joined the SA as a simple soldier. I was promoted automatically and when I joined the SD in 1934 I had the rank of an Obersturmbannfuehrer. In 1935 I was promoted SS Hauptsturmbannfuehrer; in 1936 I became a Standartenfuehrer; in 1937 I became an Oberfuehrer and in 1939 I became a Brigadefuehrer. state examination, I settled in Lorsch which is in Hessen, which is the country I come from, as a lawyer. I stayed there in this profession for about two years, and in the middle of March 1933, as requested by the Hessen Government, I took over the police office in Worms. From autumn 1933 to March 1934 I was in charge of the police office in Giessen.

Q What was the reason for your leaving the police? Government, I had to carry out measures of the SA so that I felt that I should ask to be relieved and to look for another job in Berlin.

Q And what job came in question when you went to Berlin?

Labor Front, totake part in the new foundation of a re-settlement section. This was a department in which I could develop my social political interests, but this department was actually never founded, and at that time, it was in the summer of 1934, I became acquainted for the first time with the SD.

Q How did your joining the SD come about? saw many things that one liked very much but many things also that one did not like. This new authoritarian state had not created any possibility until then to improve on shortcomings and mistakes or to create a Possibility to abolish them or to contribute toward their abolishment. Thus it seemed to me that there should be an organizetion which should be created to be prepared, without any individual interest, to deal with all features of the public life - negative or positive - and to report about the results of this work to the competent legal authorities, without serving their own interests in any executive capacity whatsoever. This organization seemed to me most welcome, or at least an organization of that kind seemed to me most welcome. As model for this activity the British Secret Service would serve in which each individual Englishman, in fulfilling his national duty, had to takepart as a matter of course, without having the actual feeling to be an agent or to do something dishonorable . Such, on a voluntary basis, by cooperation of honorary members this organization was to be built up. This ideology agreed with my own opinions, and therefore, I decided to join this young organization.

Q Is this question answered then, Witness?

Q What was your actual activity in the SD until 1939? to have no contact and nothing to do with the activity which I just described. I was given the task to create an counter-intelligence In the German language "Abwehr" is an organization which has as its task to find out and to explore activities of foreign information within the German Reich,territory.

Until this point there were in German two agencies which dealt with this task; the one was the Count intelligence Department of the Wehrmacht and the other was the Counter Intelligence Department of the Gestapo, the Secret State Police. The first was mainly dealing with military matters in counter-intelligence questions and the protection of military objects, while the Counter-Intelligence Department of the Secret State Police worked within the framework of general police matters and had as its task to clarify cases of espionnage and to search for perpetrators with the usual general police means. These two organizations did not seem by any means sufficient in order to create enough security to protect the country against foreign enemy agents and this was to be the new field of activities of the new SD with its own means and its own possibilities. The SD was to be installed as a third organization and its main tasks were to be the following: foreign information services in general, that is, as far as it was possible, to study their histories and organizations, and manner of working, their methods and distribution of tasks and such matters. Furthermore, there was the task to build up a preventative counter-intelligence; that is, by Instituting a network of voluntary workers and collaborators to make it difficult for the foreign intelligence service to work; that is, to carry out measures which were suited to protect military objects and others exposed to sabotage against enemy activity. to the setting up of various subsidiary organizations, especially in industry, such as protective institutions, plant security institutions, and similar things, without actually creating on actual uniform schedule of organization.

The measures themselves were carried out by the Economic and Labor Offices who were interested in this whereas the SD worked in an advisory capacity. the Reich Security Main Office? intelligence activity in the SD discontinued in Autumn 1939. The organization was dissolved and the tasks on the whole were redistributed according to the now re-organization and were given over to the Secret State Police. I had taken part in the Staff of the Third Army as chief of the Civil Administration, in the middle of October, 1939, I was entrusted with the leadership of the newly established Office VI within the RSHA. Plans for the creation of a foreign intelligence service and information service in foreign countries were not new then, but until that point, or, practically until the outbreak of the war, they had got stuck and were only be put into practice when Office VI was established. As the Office III of the Reich Main Security Office, that is, the SD for German territory, to deal with the general reporting about all spheres within the Reich and to organize such a service, thus, in the same summer, Office VI had the task by reporting from foreign countries to get information which was to be made available to all the Reich Offices. The building up of this young organization was very difficult during the war when the borders were closed and there were Eastern and Western front lines. Personnel and material were lacking so that in the first month of the young office our main task consisted of keeping up with the organizational work and catching up with the work which had not been done during peace time.

After months, that is about in Spring, 1940, the basic organizational work had been concluded and the reporting activities concerning all foreign countries could begin. Even here the basic rule was adhered that the whole work should only be performed with the help of honorable collaborators and no care was taken that the collaborators in question should be a member of the SS or a Party member, but the main question was to find collaborators who were able to see and judge conditions and happenings in other countries with good common sense.

Q Witness, who was your chief at that time? after Office VI was formed, was the Chief of the RSHA, Heydrich. Security Main Office? the beginning of September, 1941; that is, until that point I held office in the RSHA.

Q What were the reasons for your leaving the RSHA then? political information service, independent from other offices of the RSHA, and knowingly independent from the Gestapo, the Secret State Police was met with quite some resistance on the part of Gruppenfuehrer Mueller who was the Chief of this office. This man, whom I just mentioned as well as Heydrich had visualized on entirely different development when the RSHA and Office VI had been initiated. Especially Mueller had believed then that the SD and the young Office VI could be regarded as a sort of Information Service for his own office

THE PRESIDENT: May I interrupt please? Mr. Heath, I would like to ask you a question.

MR. HEATH: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you charging the present defendant with criminality insofar as his membership, or, activity, rather, in the RSHA is concerned? Are there any specific offenses which allegedly have been committed by him in the RSHA aside from being a member of the SS organization?

MR. HEATH: If your Honor please, I'd better call on Mr. Clancy who knows. I don't know.

MR. GLANCY: NO, sir, this is only a collateral issue. The only significance in that is the fact that AMT VI, which the witness has just mentioned as being their foreign counter-intelligence service as found by the SMT, was part of the SD, but what we are mentioning here is only a collateral issue to what we have brought here.

THE PRESIDENT: This background, Dr. Schwarz, is, of course, important. A general picture is always important. A general background is naturally important, but I am wondering whether it is necessary to go into so much detail.

DR. SCHWARZ: I beg your pardon, Your Honor. I believe that it will be possible that the defendant could cut this a little shorter, but it seems that he wants to express his opinion as to his relations to Chief Mueller, because it is most important for his later activity and for the relationship to Heydrich, but I would like to ask the defendant to make it a little shorter perhaps.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of what you have said, it becomes obvious that what he is talking about is relevant and important.

I might make this observation: That since we have been sitting here, our greatest difficulty with witnesses has been that they speak too rapidly. Now this present defendant is a refreshing contradiction to that, in that he speaks slowly, and I am just hoping that we don't all go to sleep, because of the very leisurely manner in which he is testifying. Perhaps he might speed it up just a little bit.

Dr. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I have already told the defendant that he could speak a little faster. I think he will do it during the further course of his examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. of the RSHA. Please make a statement as to how far you went in the RSHA. to change the Office VI into an Information Service which would serve the Gestapo, the Secret State Police, was not complied with by myself. In my view Office VI was to be an agency which must by all means be independent and must be an agency to serve all offices and agencies of the Reich and all leadership offices, with information supply as it would become necessary -- such an agency must not be supported or dependent from one office, especially not from a political police.

21 Oct 1947-A_MSD_25_1_Arminger (Hildesheimer) and from this opposition open discussions about the field of tasks resulted, and during the further months and years, there were considerable disputes. The reproach that Office VI was of no importance whatsoever to Office IV, for instance, was of course supposted by me, and there was also the reproach that the work of Office VI was not in the interest of the Secret State Police. There was a reproach of separatism or sabotage. There was also the reproach that the office was politically unreliable and other such reproaches eventually lead to the fact that one day Office VI received no further funds for its activity. It was said it was of no further value to the Secret Police. in the opinion and in the attitude of Heydrich and Mueller and in the lack of understanding of an independent unpolitical information service. All these disputes made successful work in Office VI impossible when eventually at last it came to Heydrich using political reasons, asking which in fact I could not fullfill. He reproached nor or at least he requested me to divorce my wife because she was not a National Socialist and if I was not capable of taking care of my wife, who was not a National Socialist, I would not be capable of taking care of my office, so I asked to be relieved of my office. tht is, until the end of the organization, by the end of August 1941, I was transferred to the Ministry East, which I had not asked for, that is, at least I did not select the Ministry East myself. I was transferred there without my having asked for it.

Q Were you still paid by the Reich Security Main Office? RSHA. At the same time, according to my war service, I was also a part of the Security Police as the Ministry East could not immediately create a position for me.

21 Oct 1947-A_MSD_25_2_Arminger (Hildesheimer)

Q What happened when you were relieved from the RSHA? vacant for me in the Ministry East, and waited for such a position.

Q Did Heydrich at any time offer you a position? Ministry East, Heydrich attempted on two occasions to reinstate me in his sphere of powe , by offering me once a commanding position somewhere, and on another occasion he offered me the position of an SS and Police Leader.

Q Witness, what was your attitude towards these two offers?

A I refused both offers mainly for three reasons. First of all, I was not interested in police questions and I did not think that I was suitable to deal with such Questions. Secondly, under all circumstances. I wanted to Leave this sphere of influence of Heydrich because after all these years of disputes and personal differences I did not feel inclined and I did not have the intention to serve him in any way whatsoever. Only after a transfer to or changing over into another position would it become possible for me to become my own master.

Q How did Heydrich take your refusal?

A Heydrich's basic characteristic was his manial distrust of other people. Thus his offer must be understood. He mustrusted everybody, even his closest collaborator and above all he was afraid of the fact that if one of his close collaborators transferred to another agency that he might become dangerous. When, therefore, he regretted having suggested to have me released for the Ministry East and he attempted to get me back,or at least, he made such proposals to me. My hope, however, was to remain in charge of an administrative office or department which would have been well in accordance with my personal inclination. your relations with Heydrich would ever become more severe?

21 Oct 1947_A_MSD_23_3_Arminger (Hildesheimer) did not do any thing at all to abolish the difficulties which had thus been created. sent on an information tour.

A Yes, that is true. In February of 1942, I received a letter then from the Chief of Office I of the RSHA. That Was Streckenbach, which contained the order for me to report to the Eastern Administration and to go on an information tour to the Eastern Occupied Territories. On the occasion of a discussion I had with Heydrich a few days later, he confirmed this order and he asked me to discuss the actual carrying out of this trip with the Ministry East, which I actually did. your activity in Einsatzgruppe A, as the commander of a SIPO and the SD, Ostland. When and where did the order reach you to take over the leadership of Einsatzkommando A? which began in the beginning of March, 1942, during my stay in Smolensk, in fact, approximately on the 24th of 25th of March, 1942, an order reached me. This order was to the effect that I was to get in touch with the Chief of Einsatzgruppe A; that I was to become Ehief of the Einsatzgruppe North, and the Secuity Police and the SD. Eastern Territories and that any regulations in accordance with this would be made later. This order had been signed by Heydrich. I thus received the order to take over those agencies which until that date had been handled by Stahlegger who had been iklled a few days previously.

Q.- Witness, when you received this order was anybody present?

A.- Yes, when I received this order Sturmbannfuehrer, the then Sturmbannfuehrer Karl Henneke, and my adjutant Gerd Nyhoegen.

Q.- What impression did the receipt of this letter make on you?

A.- It was not only surprising to me, but it was most moving. It was a surprise because after I had been appointed into the Ministry of the East I never counted on an assignment in the sphere of influence, of Heydrich, because I believed that once and for all I had been taken over by another agency, another office, and therefore that a separation from Heydrich had been definite. This hope had been destroyed by the receipt of this letter, but in spite of this I decided to undertake steps for the revocation of such a assignment.

Q.- Did you mention this misgiving to Henneke?

A.- Yes, I mentioned this to Henneke who, as I said, was present at that moment. I told him of my intention, and I told him that I was going to try to go back to Berlin as soon as possible in order to reach Heydrich personally, and thus to have this order revoked, if possible.

Q.- Why were you so interested in having this order revoked?

A.- I have already explained for what reasons I did not want to be entrusted with police work, and for what reasons I did not want to work under the sphere of influence of Heydrich. Before I had received this letter I had a discussion with the above mentioned Henneke, and I had told him that I myself, personally, would not be in a position to carry out execution orders, and it was no sooner said than the teletype arrived which appointed me to a post, where doubtlessly I would come into contact with such orders.

Q.- Witness, how did it come about that you made that remark to Henneke that you would not be able to carry out execution orders? Did Hanneke say anything to you about this?

A.- I had been informed through Henneke of happenings in the Ukraine which overwhelmed me so that I did not know how I could deal with this problem at all.

Q.- Witness, was this order by Heydrich which you had received, binding for you?

A.- The order was signed by Heydrich, as I already said, and I was still paid by the RSHA, my war appointment was to be Chief of the Security Police -- so Heydrich was justified in sending this order to me, and I was under duty to comply with this order.

Q.- Now, what did you do when you received the order?

A.- I had to comply with the order and I went to Riga. There I arrived at the earliest on the 28th of March 1942. I think it must have been a Sunday. On Monday, which was the 29th of March, I took over the office and I immediately telephoned Berlin in order to ask how and where could I get hold of Heydrich. I received information that Heydrich was on the way and he was expected back in Berlin for the week-end. Two or three days later I decided to go to Berlin myself. At the moment of my departure a teletype arrived which announced Heydrich's visit for the very same day. That was either the 31st of March or the 1st of April 1942.

Q.- What urged you to have a discussion with Heydrich?

A.- I was going to try, during that discussion with Heydrich, to have him revoke the order, or at least to give me time to think it over. Furthermore I knew - at least in case he did not withdraw his order, that I would get orders by him, personally. As my questions to the former adjutant of my precedessor Stahlegger concerning orders, especially about the treatment of Jews, were to the effect that such an order had never been received in writing, he told me that this order, before the beginning of the assignment, was given to the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen and Einsatzkommandos verbally, and that was the Fuehrer Order which had been carried out by the Einsatzgruppe A.

Q.- Was that order in force at that time, witness?

A.- Yes, the order was at that time in force, although at that point, or at the time before, within the Reich Commissariat of the Eastern territories, that is not in the territory of the Einsatzgruppe but in the territory that had been taken over by the civil administration for reason of labor allocation and assignment or for economical reasons, - for those reasons this order had actually not been carried out completely. Withdrawal of the order had not been received, but the measures were, for the mentioned reasons, not no longer carried out.

Q.- Witness, how did your discussion with Heydrich take place, and what was the result?

A.- If Heydrich's suddent visit was not a surprising fact more it was his behavior, He was most charming, and he behaved in a very kind manner, such as I had not seen in him for many years. He tried in a very cordial manner to discuss all kinds of matters which had nothing to do with the actual question. Obviously, his intention was to get me into a receptive mood in order to say then finally: "Now I have already offered you on various occasions to become a commander. Through the sudden death of Stahlecker we now have the possibility to comply with this wish of mine, and I hope that this new task will be a pleasing one to you. I objected a few times, and gave the reason for my objection, and repeated to him what I had already told him on former occasions, and it was that I was not suitable person for police matters, that I had not counted on a re-employment in his own sphere, that I had innerly separated myself from him and wanted to prepare myself for my future task. I saw it my duty to draw his attention to the fact that he himself, before the start of the Russian campaign, had refused a proposal to employ me in the Eastern assignment, giving the reasons that I was ill and as far as my nerves were concerned, not in a state to take part in such a campaign. Apart from that, when I left the Office VI he had also said that my state of health was such that for this reason alone it would be adequate for me to leave the charge of Office VI.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, this might be a good point at which to suspend; and youmight indicate to the witness that after a little spurt of speed he once more dropped back to a somnolent state. You might ask him..... I am sorry .... I merely wanted to say that the witness responded immediately to our suggestion that he increased the speed of delivery, but then he became tired very quickly and once more has dropped back to his rather somnolent delivery. You might tell him this evening to have a good rest and perhaps tomorrow morning he can speak with a little more speed, especially in view of the fact that he already has his material prepared, We don't intend to request that a witness adapt himself to any particular kind of delivery, but I do think he could speak a little more rapidly.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, may I say that during these last days the defendant has had much work to do, and has been in a rundown state, because during that time the whole day was spent in the preparation of the defense of the defendant. I think that a quiet night will give the defendant the possibility to comply with the wishes of the Tribunal tomorrow.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much.

DR. KOESSL (for the defendant Ott): I would like to ask the Tribunal to escuse the Defendant Ott tomorrow, as he also has to prepare his defense. Furthermore, I would ask to represent now my colleague Dr. Gawlik to excuse the Defendant Seibert on Wednesday and Thursday, also in order to prepare his case.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendants Ott and Seibert will be excused tomorrow; and Seibert also on Thursday - so that they may confer with their respective counsel in preparing their case for the defense. thirty.

(The Tribunal recessed until 0930 hours, 22 October 1947).

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued)

DR. SCHWARZ: Dr. Schwartz for the Defendant Jost. the defendant I would like to make a short statement. Evidently Jost was yesterday not in the position any longer to go on with his own case. I have already taken the liberty to put a request in, on the 9th of October, for a medical examination of the Defendant Jost. This request, however, referred to the state of healt of the Defendant Jost at an earlier date. The defendant now tells me that he is afraid he is no longer able to concentrate on his defense after a very short time to the extent which would be necessary to comply with the wishes of the Tribunal and to defend himself in his own case. be feasible to have the Defendant Jost examined, or at least to determine his state of health in order to establish whether he is in a position at the moment to go on with his defense. If the Tribunal believes that it cannot grant this request, I would like to ask the Tribunal to consider the state of health of the Defendant Jost and to bear it in mindin the further development of the defense.

THE PRESIDENT: There is no reason why a physical examination of the defendant may not be had.

DR. SCHWARZ: I do not know, your Honor. As I said, I have made a request in writing on the 9th of October. This request has not yet been ruled on and has not yet been granted.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will immediately instruct the jail physician to conduct a physical examination of the defendant at the first opportunity. In the meantime we will proceed with the examination of the defendant, and there will be no disposition on the part of the Tribunal to cause him to testify in any manner which might in any way interfere with the normal processes of thinking and speaking. increase the tempo of his speaking that for a short while he did, and he seemed to speak very normally and responded quickly and acted as any normal person would. So there is nothing visible to this Tribunal which would suggest that the defendant is not able to conduct his defense here in open court. We will continue in the normal fashion and then perhaps at noontime we can have this physical examination conducted.

DR. SCHWARZ:Yes, your Honor. I appreciate the regard that the Tribunal showed yesterday for this defendant. I agree to the proposal of your Honor, and I shall proceed now with the direct examination of the defendant.

As to my stating my case, the fact, for instance, that my state of health was not such that I would be able to fulfillthese tasks, he told me, "You are not going to be put in charge of any Einsatz tasks, but you will have the task of a commander, and as I am going to give these tasks to you, you will fulfill them." Further objections on my part he did not accept. After this dispute had taken place in this form for sometime, he came to the conclusion that if indeed I did not want to accept this task permanently, he would have to order me to take over this task temporarily until a definite successor would have been found. At the moment no such commander was at his disposal. I would have to do this for a fewweeks at least. Thus through my resistance I had accomplished that at least I would no definitely be appointed as a commander, or at least not permanently. these tasks, and what your assignment would be, what it would consist of?

A Heydrich said the following: "Your main or your only task will be to act as my representative, and that you should express to the Higher SS and Police Leader and especially to the Reich Commissar, that the Security Police and the SD are willing to collaborate closely with the civil administration. We want to be an integral part of the civil administration, engaged in building up its work, and the foundations are now being laid for a long time to come.

"Stahlegger" who was my predecessor, "has not been able to fulfillthis task. He only dealt with the Einsatzgruppe and the Army. These assignments are only of a temporary nature, and therefore they are no longer very important to me. The Kommandos of the Einsatzgruppen are practically only working for the Army, and they have no tasks in connection with the Security Police." Einsatzgruppe could not be taken over by another leader, because, as he said, there was no commander at his disposal at the moment.

Naturally I had to report to the Chief of the Army Group and thus keep up contacts with the Army. The assignment itself would be carried out by the kommandos ashe had already said, and it would be carried out independently with agreement and approval of the Army. It would suffice if the senior leader in Krasnogvardeisk would deal with the few assignments which were still the tasks of the Einsatzgruppe. I told him that I did not want to have further conflicts with the Chief of Office IV, Mueller, and these conflicts would result if I took over this task. He answered, "I told you what your assignment is. The executive power is not your business but that is the task of the kommandos who are working as independent authorities with the General Command. They know their tasks and you do not have to bother with them. Furthermore, I forbid you any participation in partisan warfare or in any operation. I do not want to see a second case Stahlecker. I shall go to White Rutheniamyself in the near future. There I have to give my own directives, especially concerning Commissar Kruge."

In fact, a few days before I had stated in front of witnesses, that I did not feel myself in a position to carry out such measures. I knew that this would be the only opportunity to express my attitude. If I became unfaithful, as it were, to myself, I would never have the opportunity again to express my opinion, and therefore I asked him whether the order could not be revoked for the Reich Commissariat Eastland. I added literally, I quote: "Obergruppenfuehere, you have known me now for the last eight years, and I would like to tell you that I cannot imagine myself carrying out such measures." time, was, "Perhaps we can consider a resettlement of the question." Whether he actually meant this or whether it was just an answer for the sake of an answer in order to make it easier for me to take over this task, I cannot decide today. In any case I believed this statement of his, and this statement was sufficient for me at the moment, even though of course, it meant in no way the revoking of the Fuehrer order; but I hoped that at least for the territories governed by the civil administration a different policy would be possible and prevailing conditions might be changed. Furthermore I was of the opinion, I was convinced in fact, that from many sides and authorities objections would be received against then Fuehrer order, for instance, on the part of the High Generals, or from other authoritative agencies within the Government, and also on the side of the church, of foreign powers, and by the bishops. I could not imagine that nothing would happen as a result. It was soon to be established, however, that my hope was unfounded.

Q Were not the decrees of the RSHA mentioned in this discussion? discuss a decree of the RSHA in Office IV which had just been received. It concerned the treatment of Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians who were within the Reich authority for allocation of labor and who received special treatment on the part of the police. This decree was signed by Heydrich and was only valid for the Reich territory.

It was only reported to the office, to the agency in the Eastern Territories. That is, it was not to be applied there, but one could have applies it analogously. The decree had been worked out very carefully and very conscientiously, and I attacked this decree, and I drew Heydrich's attention to the fact that this form of treatment was impossible. Heydrich's attention to the fact that this form of treatment was impossible. Heydrich at first pretended at least not to be able to remember this decree at the moment, although it was only a few days old, and he promised to change the decree according to my suggestions. The decree itself provided for severe punishment of the above-named people, but I do not remember at the moment the actual distirbution of the punishments and to which of the offenses these punishments were to be applied. The effect was that after ten days a second decree was issued which completely revoked the first decree, and thus any special treatment or inferiority status of the above-mentioned nationality groups or personal groups was revoked.

Q Witness, what assignemtn did Heydrich give you in this discussion? office buildings, rooms, different authorities, different relations to superiors, different tasks and assignments and responsibilities. These are the two offices of the Chief of Einsatzgruppe A with the Army Group North, and the other post was the Commander of the Security Police and the SD in the Reich Commissariat

Eastland. Both were in accordance with what had been discussed with Heydrich. were your assignemtns and tasks as its chief?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, may I show this on the map?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, indeed.

A The northern front went in the following direction. North it went to St. Petersburg to approximately this point, South it went to point which I can't show exactly on the amp, because it doesn't list the necessary places. This was the front of the Army Group North. At this front, or, shall we say, behind this front, in the rear Army territory, there was the Einsatzgruppe A. That was the field of activities of Einsatzgruppe A. This was the territory which was bordered by the front in the East and in the West it was bordered by the civil administration territory. It went here and went to the west, where there was Estonia, which had teen under civil administration for the last few months, out it was still operational territory and to that extent this was under the responsible competence of the rear Army territory. In this Army territory there was an overlapping of Army and civil authority. In this territory was the Group Staff of Einsatzgruppe A. Here in Krasnogwardeisk was the Kommando of Krasnogwardeisk. The Group Staff and Commando of Krasnogwardeisk were practically one single unit. Another Kommando was here, immediately at the front, at Loknia; that was within the territory of the Operational theatre of the 16th Army. Up here in the North was the 18th Army and this was the 16th Army. Detachment Ia was responsible, which was stationed in Reval and was under the command of Sandberger. The assignments of the Detachment Krasnogwardeisk were at this time essentially counter-espionage and counter-sabotage, combatting Bolshevist activities of any kind, whatsoever, or counter-acting of enemy propaganda, and so on, and the third task -- and this was the main one - was by order of the Army to carry out intelligence missions about Leningrad and small partisan *ands in the vicinity. Fifth, to support field detachments in their security and administrative tasks.

its original field of activities. For the last few months it had been at the front and had held a sector of about 30 to 40 kilometers and, of course, was mainly busy with this task and was therefore subordinated to the competent Army group since it had a combat assignment. Assignments as they had been originally planned in the Einsatz order were not being carried out by this particular detachment. The influence of the Einsatzgruppe itself or my own interest in this detachment was non-existent. chiefs concerning their authority and responsibilities, I may refer to the statements of the Defendant Ohlendorf concerning this point, which are valid just as much for this territory as for other territories. as a commander of the South Group within the Reich Commissariat Eastern Territories? which was administered which had been governed by a civil administration for months. That was the Reich Commissariat Eastland. The Reich Commissariat Eastland included the formerly independent Baltic States, Estonia, Lithuania, and Latvia, which had been independent until 1940 and then had been taken over by Russia in the well-known way and which in 1941 came under German domination.

These three countries are three entirely different ones. They are different people, different cultures, different languages and still these three countries have a certain unity and they come under the term

Staat Balticum. Added to this territory as a sort of an appendix there was the territory of White Ruthenia, which is not marked on this map, but which is about this territory. This is mainly former Russian territory with Russian, or rather White Ruthenian population. They are Slavs, who, however, in their looks and also in their language are somewhat different from the Russian population, therefore, the term, White Russian, or White Ruthenia.

This territory had no contact with the Baltic and had also no historical or organic connections of any kind with it. supreme official of the Reich. Subordinated to him personally was the Higher SS and Police Leaders who dealt with all police and SS matters. Under him, in turn, there was the Commander of the Regular Police and the Commander of the Security Police, who, in this case, was myself. These countries which were now called a General District were headed by a General Commissar, as the men who actually wielded power in these territories. He ruled his country according to the points of view and the requirements necessary for his particular territory. Lithuania was governed in a different manner than Estonia and Estonia, accordingly, was governed in a different manner from Latvia and White Ruthenia was governed in a different manner and regarded in a different light. their respective countries received directives from the Reich Minister for the Eastern Occupied countries. They received different orders, but he left a free hand to the individual commander and he did so because after all, they were different territories, different countries, which could not be governed in a uniform manner. question? were headed by the Commissar General, all SS and police matters were dealt with by a Police Commissar. Under this SS and Police Leader were, according to the organization in the Reich Commissariat, the Commander of the Regular Police and the Commander of the Security Police and the SD. These commanders of the SD and the Security Police could receive orders from the Reichsfuehrer himself, and the Chief of the German Police and the Chief of the Security Police and SD, individual agencies of the Reich Security main Office, the Commander in Chief of the Security Police, the General Commissar, the Higher Police and SS Leader or the Police and SS Leader. Einsatzgruppen within the Army territory and the Office of the Security Police and SD in the territory of the civil administration? kommandos to rule the Army rear area are known. I am not speaking about the special orders. The same applies to the territory under the civil administration. Here also our tasks consisted of detecting Communist activities in any shape whatsoever. In that respect one could speak of an identical task for both. But the difference is that the assignments in the operational theater were determined by the activity of the Army, While in the area under civil administration other requirements existed. Here the first thing is that the German government has to build up and install its administrative apparatus, because the countries, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania had their own independent governments and in the distribution of authority, there was a great difference between the individual countries. Furthermore in these territories the economy had to be re-built. According to this, the activity of the Security Police and the SD also had to do other tasks and with the reinstitution of the civil governments, the commanders were installed who thus become regular administrative officers within the civil administration; now they are no longer operational units which have been formed and established for a certain purpose and sphere.

These commanders took over the tasks and assignments of the Criminal Police and tasks and assignment of Administrative Police and other regular police assignments. established which was set up in stages. In Lithuania, for instance, it was set up a little before it was established in Latvia, in Latvia before it was installed in Estonia. One could say that by autumn 1941 it was established.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, the defendant is charged with certain crimes in the indictment, specifically as the Chief of Einsatzgruppe A, and is being called upon to answer for the executions which took place in the territory which he was governing. Now you have been giving us quite a detailed account of the administration of this area, of this land Is this all very appropriate and relevant to the defense? Do you intend to show that by what he is now describing, the defendant is not responsible to the charges in the indictment, or is this just general background.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, the statements of the defendant are basically necessary for the further defense of the defendant, or, at least, they are necessary as such, but they are also necessary and important for a few individual cases with which he had been charged by the prosecution. Furthermore, this particular point of the defense of the defendant will be concluded very shortly and after that he can be very much briefer.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Proceed.

A (Continued) With the beginning of the civil administration, with the establishment of the civil administration, the activities of the Einsatzgruppen were concluded in these territories, and Einsatzkommandos at the time when I took office were not active in the territory which was governed by civil administration, with the exception of the one which I had just mentioned, which was active in Estonia. There, there was a civil administration, as well as the military authority, which cooperate with each other.

Referring to this, I wish to correct the No. 3 of my affidavit of the 20th of June, 1947. In my interrogations I repeatedly pointed out that units of the Einsatzgruppe A were not active in the territory just mentioned, but the interrogator maintained the contrary and eventually I became insecure and lacking the power of concentration I answered with this statement which you will find under No. 3.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, I believe that the defendant and the defense counsel have had ample opportunity while Mr. Wartenberg, the interrogator, was here to attack and to correct any phase of the affidavit which he wished. It seems it is a little late and a poor time to do so.

THE PRESIDENT: It is true that Defense Counsel had an opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Wartenberg, but the defendant also has the right to state his side of the case, so that objection is overruled. Proceed.

A (Continued) The same is valid for No. 5, which seems to be a typographical mistake. There it says, "It is known that during my time of office in Einsatzgruppe A," and it says "in" and it should say "with", because units of the Einsatzgruppe A, or kommandos of the Einsatzgruppe, as it becomes quite evident from the statements, could not have taken part in these activities. the Army? already been mentioned: on various occasions, it happened that the Kommandos, of course, were bound by the orders of the Army and had to obey orders of the Army, exactly as any other Army unit and they had to obey these orders and to comply with the wishes of the Army and nobody had any influence on the Army and its orders, orders which had existed for months. with Heydrich. What did you do after this discussion?

a few days in order to settle some personal affairs in Berlin. After I returned, I reported through my local commander to my local chief, the Higher SS and Police Leader, Obergruppenfuehrer Jekeln. I told him about my discussion with Heydrich, especially about the fact that my activity would only be temporary and would not last. In this lengthy discussion, the subject of treatment of Jews was touched upon and I told him of the utternaces that Heydrich had made which had given me reason for optimism and from this optimistic mood which I was in, I stated the subject to him in a rather optimistic light.

As I said before, on a former occasion I could speak to him openly and I believed that I could talk to him openly and frankly because this utterance on the part of Heydrich had given me the reason. In all frankness I expressed my opinion to him, opinion as to this question, and I made it quite clear to him that I regarded this Fuehrer Order as untenable, and that eventually one would arrive at the conclusion to change it or even to revoke it in some of the territories. This remark of mine was objected to by him, and he reproached Heydrich betterly and said, "Heydrich wants to sabotage the Fuehrer Order. The Security Police suffers from an excess of humanitarian feeling." And he told me that he would disregard entirely Heydrich's intentions. For him only the Fuehrer Order was valid, which would be carried out strictly by him, and in this connection the word "responsibility" was mentioned. He said that for him there was only one responsibility to carry out, regardless, any order which he had received. I objectwould perhaps have the possibility of finding out and perhaps would know about this. He would probably have had a reason for telling me that it might be revoked. All objections on my part met with no success, and Jekeln said that the Fuehrer Order would be valid for him until it was actually revoked. I told him in what form I had expressed myself as to this question in front of Heydrich. After I had achieved nothing in this matter, I discussed the situation of the position of the people who were forced to carry out this order personally, and I told him that these people would suffer severe psychologic al damage through this.

The question of this responsibility would have to be examined one day. His answer was, I quote: "I have thought and considered this very carefully, and if I catch somebody who objects to this or breaks down, then he will also be shot." At this moment it became clear to me in what position those were who were under Jekeln's subordination because, according to this, there could be no doubt as to the consequences for refusing to obey the order.

But even if such an order was carried out the SS man could still suffer a tragedy if he could not bear such responsibility. It was, therefore, of no avail, what he did. In this discussion the commander of the regular police was present, General Jadicke, and Administrative Counsel Alexander Landgraf. I had been made most insecure after this discussion, but I relied on the remarks that Heydrich had made to me. Jekeln himself gave no orders to me, and did not entrust me with any measures as far as the subject had been closed. But he did not tell me whether, and if, and where, he considered his orders of carrying through these measures. This discussion had taken place a few days after Easter.

Q What was your state of health at this time, witness? paralyzed. I had serious rheumatism in my joints, which was the result of this psychological state. Furthermore, my thyroid glands and my nerves were in a very serious state. This state of health had deteriorated within the course of the years throughout all these disputes with Heydrich and other leaders, and that was also the reason why I told Heydrich that I did not consider myself fit to carry out such tasks entrusted to me. The physician who treated me asked me to have myself relieved for long stretches from this work. Of course, I could not carry out all my offices due to my state of health.

Q In what way did you carry on your services? Kauen in order to visit the local commander.

Q What was the purpose and the result of this visit? study conditions in Lithuania. I wanted to meet the commander, and I wanted to establish what kind of personality he was. On this occasion I found out that the Jews who were still alive in Lithuania generally were still employed as far as they were fit to work. As tion was not its aim because, after all, a part of the Jews was to remain alive - that was for me the tragedy of it all - because the families were to be parted, and I do not know who of the victims would have to be pitied more.

I could not overcome this thought and I could not pass on the order. After a few days I recognized that something had to be done, and I decided to visit Heydrich again and to make a last, though probably unsuccessful attempt to change his mind. Whether there would be a possibility to see him at all, I did not know, but I was going to try it in any case and I would at least succeed in being recalled, because he told me, after all, that I was to remain only for a few weeks. I asked to see Heydrich, but I did not get an appointment. I reported in the meantime to the 16th Army. I visited the commander of Loknia, I reported to the commander of Estonia, and I tried to find out about the state of the Jewish question because I thought at that time there were still Jews in existence. Here again I believed him, that it was my express wish that no measures of this kind were to be carried out in the future because I was still hopeful that another outcome might be possible.

The discussion that I asked for with Heydrich took place on the Friday before Whitsuntide in 1942. In my whole life I have never had a more difficult interview. This was not only the most difficult one. When I visited him I had already been in the possession of the order for three weeks, without having passed it on, and now I, of course, had to face reproaches and charges. The reception Heydrich gave me was a freezing coldness. He did not even reply when I greeted him. There was no trace of the joviality with which he had received me two weekd earlier in Riga. The same cold relations had been reestablished. He did not pay attention to what I had to say. He looked into his files. He did not seem interested in anything I had to say. I told him about my report to the Chief of the Army Group about the relation between the Army and his agencies, but this did not seem to interest him. After I told him a few personnel matters I told him about the visit of Rosenberg in the Eastern territory. That was the first which aroused his interests. And then I told him of my visit in Kauen. And this opportunity I used to tell him that I had come to him because I was very, very worried, and I told him explicitly and in great details the psychological constitution of individual men whom I had gotten to know, in order to show him what effects these orders had on his men. For tactical reasons this appeared to be the only way to start discussing this particular subject because the care for his men was the only point about which he was sensitive. He was immediately willing to discuss this subject, and he immediately said that everything should be done for these men, that they must be able to go on furlough, and accommodations were to be arranged for them in the Black Forest. I told him that that was taken for granted. And I told him that ther could be no improvement in the psychological state of the men as long as these men were under this psychological pressure of these events, and that the events were not over, and that they would take place again. And there would be no cure as long as this would go on, if there would be a cure at all. I told him that this had gone on long enough, that the first thing was to take care of the persons who were in spiritual difficulties, and here, indeed, there was Spiritual distress, and that is what I wanted to tell him.

With this explanation I wanted to put a weapon into his hands, and wanted to influence him, and wanted to tell him that thus he could do something himself, that he could change his order, and to recommend that Heydrich, being in a difficult position himself, and being bound by the Fuehrer Order--but if I wanted to achieve anything at all this seemed to me the only possible way in order to influence him and to cause him to taky any steps whatsoever. I believe that I can say that he was impressed by my statements. He did not say anything at all to start with, and he seemed to consider things very seriously. When I saw him in this mood I asked him about my new orders, whether I was to remain in Riga, and I reminded him that he had promised me that I should only have to stay a few weeks, whether he was not willing now to appoint a successor here and now.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. "Successor." You said "Predecessor."

INTERPRETER: Yes, successor.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, this might be a convenient time to have our recess. So the Tribunal will be in recess now for 15 minutes.

DR. SCHWARZ: I beg your pardon, your Honor, the answer to this question will only take one or two minutes. Would it be all right with the Tribunal if he would finish it.

THE PRESIDENT : By all means, continue.

A (By the witness) As soon as I mentioned this question of my transfer, his mood was changed. He got up from his chair and he said in a very severe voice, "Yes, I will talk to the Reichsfuehrer on your behalf. In 8 or 10 days you will leave your post and will be transferred to another office." In other words, - "You will be interested to know that also your friend Best, in Paris" -- he had been the former Chief of Office I in the Reich Security Main Office and had been relieved two years ago, and he was at that time the military administrative chief and he had the rank of a Major General. "Best also has asked to be trans ferred to another office and he will receive that, but he will not get what he wants.

I shall see to it that he should serve as a simple private at the Eastern front. Thus we will see if he will ever return at all." for Best would also be my own fate, because this could not be interpreted otherwise. He gave some brief instructions to his adjutant about the successor, or at least reminded him to appoint a successor, and now this question had been concluded.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, this might be a good opportunity to recess.

THE PRESIDENT: I might ask a question. You said, witness, that when you asked for a successor that Heydrich's manner changed. You had told us that in the early part of the discussion he was very frigid. Do you understand by your explanation that he suddenly became more friendly or more frigid?

A (by the witness) He had received me in a very cool manner -that is, in a forbidding manner, but he became more interested when I told him about the Reich Minister Rosenberg who had visited the Eastern territory.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but I am only trying to understand what you meant when you said his manner changed -- did he become more cordial, or less cordial?

A (by the witness) Yes, but I told him about the spiritual distress of these people, and then he was in a rather soft mood again, and this caused him to get up from his chair and to become cold again, and forbidding; this melancholy mood had vanished within one second when he noticed that I wanted to leave all this.

THE PRESIDENT: Then he went through the Tropical zones...the Arctic Zone, the Temperate Zone, and then back again to the Arctic Zone?

A (By the witness) Yes, yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

)A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. RIEDIGER: Dr. Riediger for the defendant Haensch. Your Honor, may I ask you that the defendant Haensch be excused this afternoon because we want to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Haensch will be excused this afternoon in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. FITCH: Dr. Fitch for the defendant Bieberstein. Your Honor, for the same reason I ask that my defendant be excused for this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT: Tomorrow afternoon and not tomorrow morning?

DR. FITCH: Yes, only in the afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, the defendant Bieberstein will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon in accordance with request of his counsel.

DR. MAYER: Dr. Mayer for the defendant Steimle. Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Steimle be excused tomorrow morning and tomorrow afternoon as well in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Steimle will be excused from attendance in court all day tomorrow in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. MAYER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

DR. SCHWARZ: Thank you, Your Honor. BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q. Witness, you talked about your discussion with Heydrich at the end, just before recess. After that were you transferred?

A. No. About five days after this discussion, Tuesday or Wednesday after Whitsumtide the attempt against the life of Heydrich occurred as a result of which he died a few days later. For that reason they now transferred me, and then from there I went to the troops, as I expected.

Q. Did you try anything else to got your transfer through?

A. After Heydrich had been buried I reported to Himmler who temporarily took over the Security Police and the SD. He had not appointed a successor for Heydrich yet, but I was not received, and he informed me that I should return to Riga, I was to hear from him sometime.

Q. what was the result of the Heydrich order concerning you?

A. Heydrich was dead but the order still existed, of course, After his death I could not expect to be threatened to carry out this order, because of his death, but I did not know whether Office IV, Mueller or anybody else, might not threaten me to carry out this order.

THE PRESIDENT: What was the date of your last conversation with Heydrich?

THE WITNESS: The Friday before Whitsuntide.

THE PRESIDENT: Can you give us a calender date, because Whitsuntide changes, varies according to the year.

THE WITNESS: It should have been about the 22nd of May, if I remember correctly, and the attack on him was shortly after Whitsuntide.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Schwarz) Witness, you described to us how when you visited the kommandos you explained to the kommando leaders and asked them not to carry out the Fuehrer order for the time being. Now, what was your attitude to the officials in the other offices?

A. My attitude to the other officials concerning the order, I did not have to adopt any particular attitude, I only had to explain something to them in another respect. During a roll call of the office I pointed out that the Jew also has legal protection, his life, his property and his person, and this was wrong for that reason.

Q. Witness, did you or your office get similar orders like the Heydrich order?

A. Soon after I returned to Riga a leader of a kommando in Krasnogvardeisk, that is one of the Einsatzgruppe in the Army territory, said that an Army agency -- it might have been the corps in Krasnogvardeisk, but it might have been another agency, I can't remember exactly -- this agency had ordered him to liquidate the inmates of an insane asylum because the building was required as an Army billet.

I asked this leader excitedly whether he had already done anything to that effect. He said no. I told him, "Go and report in my name, that I forbid the carrying out of this measure, and in future I will not allow such orders to be given. Should the person giving the order still retain this opinion I shall complain to the Chief of the Army Group immediately."

Q. What order did the kommando leader bring back?

A. After a few days it was reported to me, ver soon afterwards, that owing to my instructions and directives this measure had not been carried out. I heard no more about it after that.

Q. Your opinion concerning the liquidation of Jews, did you also express it to other people?

A. The end of July, beginning of August 1942, I was called to the Reich Commissar in Riga. He asked me what the Jewish situation was. He asked me how many Jews remained in the East. He wanted to discuss something with me. He said, "I would like to report to the Furhrer now that the Eastland has no Jews left." I was very surprised about this statement, and fearing a similar order I stated, "I cannot take the responsibility to carry out such measures, and I cannot expect it of myself or of the men under my command. Those who want to give the orders have to carry them out themselves. Jeckeln also knows my view." After this, my reply, there was a long silence until I said after sometime that such measures were not carried out. "Yes, I can imagine," was that reply, "that it is very difficult for those men." I had assumed then that the Army does not agree to carry out such measures because many of the Jews work in the Army plants. After a few meaningless words the discussion was thus closed. It is to prove the actual responsibility and in the interests of historical truth to state this here and to show the pressure under which each of these people was, and the more he was affected by the circumstances and the pressure of it, the lower his rank was because if a Reich Commissar could not do anything about such orders, surely some low-ranking Unter or Obersturmfuehrer of about twenty-five years of age cannot do anything either.

But this discussion also proves that within this order not only the agencies of the Security Police and the SD were concerned, for this shows, as I have Said, the question of responsibility and shows it very clearly. For we personally the confirmation of these facts could be of disadvantage because I am convinced that my statement and the discussion will not be confirmed. Personally I don't care. At the time I did not care what reply I gave, and now I don't care. If a Reich Commissar had The courage at the time to state such an opinion, then I should state this opinion now as well. At the time I stated my opinion, and I repeat that my fate in immaterial to me in this connection, but for the sake of historical truth I have said this.

Q. Witness, was there any third party present during these discussions, or did you inform any third parties about the contents of this discussion?

A. Yes, after I returned to my office I informed my adjutant, and after returning to my apartment I informed the Commander Jadicke who happened to be in my apartment at the time. He was visiting me for some reason. I informed Jadicke about the discussion. He was surprised and said, "But you were quite right. I congratulate you. That takes a lot of courage."

Q. Who became Reydrich's successor?

A. No successor was appointed, but Himmler dealt with the official business.

Q. Did that improve or make your position worse?

A. This forced me to insist on my transfer to Himmler. This was difficult because one could hardly speak to Himmler. Since Heydrich's death I continously tried. I followed him to Reval and Tilsit without being able to reach him. I had him celled up continously. All attempts were in vain.

But after this discussion with the Reich Commissar I now increased my efforts because of the pressure of the order under which I still stood and the possibility that this statement of mine towards the Reich Commissar be reported to Himmler or somebody. This was the reason to go to Himmler in a hurry. At the end of August I traveled to him without having been asked by him to go to him, and to visit him in his field command position. Although I had no appointment I was received by him.

Q. Will you give the Tribunal a short description of this discussion with Himmler?

A. Himmler received me without words.

THE PRESIDENT: Let us have the date.

A. (Continuing) 'Are you trying to tell us --' I said at the end of August, 23rd, 24th, 25th approximately, perhaps the 26th, that is the last third of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Between the 23rd and 26th of August?

THE WITNESS: Let's say between the 22nd and the 26th approximately.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A (continuing) Himmler received me with the words, "Are you trying to tell me that you had a row with Mueller, therefore you went back to this thing that had happened the year before?" I had not expected this and told him that that was not the reason why I had come to him, But he wanted to know what had happened between Mueller and myself. As I have tried to explain yesterday, I gave him a detailed. explanation of the development and the difference in the tasks that were in the Secret State Police and the Security Service, and during this discussion I tried to make it clear to him that owing to this difference in assignments, differences with Mueller had arisen, and that now it could not be certain that the SD could work successfully any more. I was repeatedly interrupted by him in this so that I was hardly able to give a continuous explanation. The remarks he made proved that he himself did not know anything about the differences in the tasks. He minimized the whole matter, of course, and showed his lack of interest in all these affairs. He concluded this discussion by exclaiming, "Are you trying to suggest to me that these tasks and these agencies have to be separated again?" I told him, "I consider it to be my duty, and I think I am authorized to make suggestions to that effect. I do not belong to the Reich Main Security Office any more. I only wanted to answer your question why these differences had arisen." He then replied, "Well, you are in Riga now, and everything is over there. You needn't bother about these questions any more." I now told him this was the very reason why I had come to him. I told him that Heydrich had only given me a temporary task in Riga, and owing to his death my transfer had not come about as it had been intended. I told him that it had been intended to put me into the Eastern Ministry, and now we discussed whether the tasks in the East were in my line. I told him at first it was only a matter of theory, but in the East one had to be practical. I said a definite sentence, and I talked about the executive problems which were difficult for the men, but I was interrupted and could not go on, and after that moment I hardly got a chance of talking again.

I was asked, "Are you a philosopher? what is the meaning of this? What do you mean, problems? All that is concerned are our orders." I think I have to explain this to you. "I have given the Handshuhbefehl, the glove order." I beg your pardon, I have to explain this. Himmler had given an order that when a superior was greeted or saluted the glove had to be taken from the hand. In the Army it was the other way around, the glove had to remain on the hand. Himmler said, "I have given this glove order. There are many who believe they do not have to bother about such an order because they don't like it. Anyone whom I meet who does not follow this order and obeys it in the strictest manner, I shall punish him very severely and harshly, and even if the contents of the order are ever so ridiculous, the contents of the order don't matter, all that matters is that it is an order, and those who don't obey the glove order prove that they do not want to carry out orders of great importance. Orders cannot be discussed or debated. Orders have to be obeyed, and that principle you don't seem to have realized yet. What is your age?" he asked. I replied, "I was born in 1904". "Oh, you are one of those people who never had any military training. No one here can be an officer or a general who cannot obey, because those who don't obey orders cannot give orders either. I must think about how I can train you to do this." having the possibility of replying to it. After sometime, while he was making these statements, he interrupted himself and looked at me rather surprised, and looked at me questioningly. He said, "Tell me, it has been reported to me that you have been ill. You are said to have had a nervous breakdown, is that right?" I confirmed this and said that for sometime I was hardly able to work. This was the reason why he changed the subject and his mood and explained and asked me whether I had a good physician. He mentioned a Dr. Fahrenkampf of Munich and became very friendly.

I was to be given in the Eastern Ministry. On this subject there was a general discussion during which he gave me some advice, what I should do if I should be put into the Eastern Administration sometime, and I could understand from this that he agreed to my transfer to this department. He did not make any difinite decision on the spot, but he sent me back, and as far as I remember, on the 2nd of September, 1942, that is about a week after this discussion, I received a teletype message which contained my transfer. generally? and I had no opportunity to have any personal relationship with him. This was the first opportunity to talk to him alone and at some length. The discussion took perhaps thirty to forty minutes. I had the possibility then to see him as a human being and to meet him personally, and the decisions I made on that occasion were not very favorable, although I realized that now my fate had been sealed, as far as that is concerned, because the criticism he used did not leave me any doubt. On the other hand, I was deeply moved because of the general spirit. That is that after that nothing could be changed in that order because one was not able even to discuss the order. The order was not explained. It was simply as order and one could not go beyond that. That was what overwhelmed me. In spite of all attempts I had made, nothing could be changed in principle.

I had kept back this Heydrich order. I talked to Heydrich twice and expressed my objection to the Reich Commissar. I tried to discuss the subject with Himmler, even if I was not able to discuss it properly. This did not change the order.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

A (Continuing) Owing to my rank and my position I had the possibility to discuss it again perhaps. Of all these defendants I held the highest rank at the time.

Page 1,178

I was the Senior Chief in the RSHA. For that reason I had some possibility to do this.

Himmler may have had consideration for me, owing to my bad health, but I wanted at least to talk about things other people could not discuss any more, but since I could not have this order cancelled and revoked, none of the defendants could have done so, not all of them together could have achieved this. could not be changed and that the individual cannot stop fate, even if he tries ever so hard. I could not know whether other people had also tried, whether they were successful.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you mean by that remark that it is impossible to change any circumstances, that everything is predestined beforehand?

THE WITNESS: No; that in this situation it was not possible for the individual to revoke this order, other people would have had to do this.

THE PRESIDENT: You use a very general phrase that one cannot change fate. If you intend to adhere to that doctrine, then these trials are of no importance and nothing can be achieved by way of intelligent inquiry into anything, that everything is predestined and moves along in accordance with a patterned design supernaturally.

THE WITNESS: I merely wanted to say that the individual who came under this order did not have the power or the opportunity to stop events; that stronger forces would have had to come to stop Hitler. That is what I tried to express.

THE PRESIDENT: You mean by those stronger forces, the Allies?

THE WITNESS : If necessary, that too.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q (By Dr. Schwarz) Witness, have you finished answering this question?

Q Were executions carried out according to your oder?

Q How about the extermination of political opponents?

THE PRESIDENT: Which order do you refer to, Dr. Schwarz? You say, there are no executions following his order, which order?

DR. SCHWARZ: The Fuehrer Order as well as the order by Heydrich.

THE PRESIDENT: You asked him if any executions followed his order. I assume you mean the defendant's order, Jost's order. Now which order was that? Let's be specific. Let's have the date.

DR. SCHWARZ: Certainly, Your Honor. what I mean, is all orders which he issued based on the fuehrer Order and the order by Heydrich, the last one discussed, maybe orders he was given from the higher authorities, and as a result of which he gave orders. I asked him whether he gave orders on his own authority.

THE PRESIDENT: I want to know the date of Jost's order, not the Hitler Order nor the Heydrich order.

DR. SCHWARZ: My question, whether he himself had given the orders, the defendant answered with "no."

THE PRESIDENT: Repeat your question, please.

DR. SCHWARZ: Were any executions carried out on your order?

THE WITNESS: No, I did not give any order.

THE PRESIDENT: You were following his orders, the defendant's orders, and the defendant replies he gave no orders.

DR. SCHWARZ: Well, I don't know about any order which he might have given.

THE PRESIDENTL Then he did not give an order?

DR. SCHWARZ: No, he did not give one. That is what his reply tells us.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

(By Dr. Schwarz) What about time question of the extermination of political opponents? the prosecution charges me, never took place. The reports prove that the Communists who endangered public security were interned. All internees and their position were examined. They were released, if there was no reason to keep them arrested any longer. Sometimes, however, numbers were released. In Riga on 1 May 1942 at my suggestion Communists were released who had not been charged with anything serious. Similar measures occured in Estonia. There too I made the suggestion. The commander himself had already previously followed his own decision and seen to it that a great number were released and some more people were going to be released.

Q Were you absent from your office a number of times?

A I was in Berlin four times: approximately, between the 2nd and 8th of April, between the 20th and 28th of May, between the 15th of June and the 13th of July. Apart from that, I was absent repeatedly when visiting other Army agencies, Army groups, visiting the rear army and inspecting detachments. deputy and your men in case you should be absent?

any decisions of basic importance without first asking me. I could always be reached by telephone so that I should be informed about important events. your transfer. After you were transferred from Riga, what job were you given? and I was promised to become liaison officer with the Army group Caucasus Mountains, but I never took up this assignment, because negotiations between the Ministry East and the High Command of the Army took so long that by that time the Caucasus Mountains had been lost.

Q Did you get an assignment in the Ministry East? concerning the execution of Jews or to undertake anything in this respect? Rosenberg. After that I had a long personal discussion, not within his office, because he wanted to meet me personally. During a very long and general discussion affairs in the East were also discussed. He talked about his relationship with Himmler, which was very bad at the time. He also talked about the SS and here also he had all kinds of objection. In this connection I used the opportunity to mention the execution in the East and to explain to him, how very hard and difficult this order was, to individual SS men in the East that it would not be fair to make him responsible for these events. Responsibility is in the hands of him or those who gave the orders, and now I tried to explain to him that there must be some way to discuss this with the Fuehrer.

Downcast he replied: "It is a Fuehrer Order. I can't do anything about it." "I have tried it," or something to the effect. In any case, he was very downcast. I then told him that carrying out such measures would have an effect for decades and would thus cause difficulties throughout the world; that the difficulties already in existence would be increased, and it would not really help at all. I briefly told him about my own attitude during my stay in the East, regarding this subject. That was definitely the last time I spoke on the Jewish question and discussed it with anyone who had some political importance. Of course, I did not state my personal opinion, but this discussion was the last one of all, because after that day, practically until the end of the war, I had no opportunity to discuss such things with anyone of any importance.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, are we to unterstand from what you have just stated, that Rosenberg was sympathetic to the Jews and their plight?

THE WITNESS: Sympathized is far too much. He certainly did not do that, but I think I could understand him to the effect, that these measures were not quite to his liking.

THE PRESIDENT: Did he criticize the Fuehrer Order with regard to the execution of the Jews?

THE WITNESS: By "criticizing", I mean decided objecting. No, he did not do that.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, in effect, he had not opposed the order?

THE WITNESS: I understood it to that effect that he did not consider the shootings right and that he had already mentioned this, but he couldn't do anything about it.

THE PRESIDENT: He did not than criticize the order?

THE WITNESS: By criticize I consider a stronger attitude.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, he spoke very unfavorably about the order.

THE WITNESS: Not about the order perhaps, but about the measures; that perhaps recognized it us a Fuerer Order, but he did not like the Actual measures.

THE PRESIDENT: But the order demanded the shooting, the execution, the killing of Jews. Did he speak unfavorably of that order?

THE WITNESS: He said "But it has been ordered; though I don't quite like it, either" or so something to that effect. That is, somehow he did not quite like it personally, but it just had been ordered.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it was more a shrug of the shoulders than it was a criticism?

THE WITNESS: That is what I was trying to say when I stated by "criticism" I mean something rather to the effect of a stronger objection, a determinate, obvious attitude.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Schwarz) Witness, you explained to the Tribunal that your assignment in the Caucasus did not actually take place. Did you get Another assignment, and where?

A. The assignment in the Caucasus, as I already mentioned, never come into effect. They tried to give me another assignment, not within the SS, but Himmler also objected to this. As a surprise, instead of an assignment, in the Spring of 1943, I was asked to report as Unterscharfuehrer to the (SS Body Guards) the Leibstandarte at Charkow in Russia, and so without any training, or any medical examination, I was sent to the front at once. Himmler had give this order and I had not been given any reasons for my being drafted into the Army.

Q. What did you understand by this measure?

A. I presumed that this was the result of my discussion with Himmler, or that it happened owing to some other complaints thus giving the reason why this measure had been taken so all of a sudden.

Q. Were you actually drafted then?

A. No, this never actually took place, because at that time the Ministry East had just decided to send me to an Army Group after all, so that I managed to postpone this drafting for some time. In the summer of 1943, I became liaison officer with an Army Group definitely and started to work with Army Group A in Nikolajew at the end of October, 1943. From the day I left my office in Riga until that time I thus had not been doing anything for 13 months.

Q. How long were you active in the Army Group?

A. In the Army Group itself, I acted as a liaison officer between the Ministry East and this Army Group. But there was practically no work for me to do on neither side. The only assignment I was given was that the Field Marshall von Kleist sent me to Berlin in order to speak to Rosenberg about the military situation and to cause him to talk to the Fuehrer and to ask him in the west. Rosenberg said he was not competent to deal with such a question. At the end of February, 1944, the Deputy Higher SS and Police Leader in Nikolajew, Obergruppenfuehrer Hildebrandt, offered me to propose me as commander of the Security Police and the SD, although he was not competent to do so, because it was his opinion that my assignment in the Army Group was unsuitable and would not last, because there were no work at all for me there. Hildebrandt really wanted to help me in getting me into a reasonable position again. This suggestion, which was very favorable for me I rejected, because under no COURT II-A CASE IX circumstances did I want to go to the police and I did not went to be once more under Himmler's authority.

And above all I by no means wanted to go back to an office, where I would risk to meet orders which I simply could not carry out. I gave reasons for my attitude, and I continued to reject this job. About this rejection and most likely about the reasons, a few days later, Hildebrandt made a report to Himmler. I was suddenly ordered to go back to Berlin and there at the end of March or the beginning of April, 1944, I suddenly received a Fuehrer Order that I was to join the Waffen-SS as Unterscharfuehrer.

Q. Witness, did you actually serve in the Waffen-SS.

A. Yes, I served as Underscharfuehrer until about the end of July 1944, but I was not able to carry out this duty. Owing to bad health I was sent to a mursing house. After that I remained at home until the end of the war.

Q. What significance did this assignment as Unterscharfuehrer have for you?

A. This drafting as Unterscharfuehrer, of course, took away my prestige, which I had according to my last position. It actually was a degradation, although it had not been formally stated as such, because I remained a Brigadefuehrer, a Major General. Through a circular to various high authorities of the SS and the Ministry of the Interior, the drafting which was to be valid until the end of the war was made known and had the denouncing effect which was wanted. On the 24th of April, 1945, I was taken prisoner by the Americans.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the equivalent Army rank to Unterscharfuehrer?

THE WITNESS: Corporal.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I now come to the last set of questions which is the membership in criminal organizations.

THE PRESIDENT: This might be a good point at which to suspend. The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours.)

(The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours, 22 October 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HOFFMAN (For the Defendant Nosske): Your Honor, I Would like to ask your permission to go back to a remark that was made yesterday on the occasion of the examination of the defendant Schulz. The execution of Poles was mentioned, and I was of the conviction that the translation mentioned hundreds of thousands of Poles. I do know the correctness and the consciousness of the Court, and I am quite sure that the Tribunal will clarify the matter. It was the document which had been submitted that was being discussed. I now took the liberty of referring to its literal text, as it had been submitted to the IMT. I have the document here. Literally of course, Himmler only talks about thousands of Poles, whereas the figure hundred thousand refers to people who were deported.

THE PRESIDENT: The decision of the International Military Tribunal speaks of the execution of Poles in a language which could allow the interpretation of hundreds of thousands. Hitler here is merely speaking of the thousand that had to be shot, He says thousands, then thousands, a hundred thousand. He does not include here those who were killed in the gas chambers. Do I understand, Dr. Hoffman, that it is your impression that the phrase "hundreds of thousands" is exaggerated, that there were not that many killed? Is that what I take your observation to be?

DR. HOFFMANN: Your Honor, I assumed that in consulting a document you will come back to this particular speech at Metz, which I have mentioned, and in this speech "hundred thousands" are being talked about who were deported and about thousands which were actually shot. If you have your knowledge, Your Honor, from other documents,where another picture comes into existence, in that case I do not want to express my attitude to you now, and that, of course, is not my task either; but I only thought that the contents of the speech in Metz, the impression created by this speech might prove to different, and this is why I come to speak of it once more Himmler's speech at Metz does not show that it was hundreds of thousands, but Himmler in.

Metz speaks only of thousands who were shot.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Dr, Hoffman, the equivocation results from your assumption that I was quoting from Himmler's speech. I was not. I was referring generally to the fact that from all the documents one can very easily conclude that hundreds of thousands of Poles were killed in Poland by the German forces and the decision of the IMT, I am rather confident, will bear out the correctness of that interpretation.

DR. HOFFMANN: I meant only from the point of view that your knowledge might be based on that particular speech in Metz, otherwise -

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I thank you for your interest.

DR. ULMER (for the Defendant Six): Your Honor, yesterday the Defendant Six was excused for today. Defendant Six is not in the room at the moment. There is the possibility that the Jost's defense will be finished in the afternoon, and I do not want to prolong by not having, the Defendant Six really at the disposal of the Court. Would you, therefore, take care that perhaps during the interval the defendant Six will come up.

THE PRESIDENT: The Marshal will take care of that.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor may I now proceed with the direct examination of the defendant? BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q.- Witness, you are charged by the Prosecution to have been a member of organizations declared criminal. I have a few questions to put to you in this connection Was the SD, and therewith Office VI, a Counter Intelligence Service of the Gestapo?

A.- Office VI in its organization, and especially in its field of tasks, as I have already explained yesterday when I talked about Office VI, was, as I said, independent; and therefore it was not a counter intelligence organization of the Secret State police.

Q.- Was your activity in Office VI any connection with the executive power?

A.- My task was mainly the supply of information from foreign countries.

Q.- How did it come about that you joined the SS?

A.- In Summer 1934 I entered the SD. Therefore, I became a member of the SD and it was thus I became an SS leader for the subsidiary organization of the SD.

Q.- Were you a member of the General SS?

A.- No, only a member of the SD.

Q.- Were you an honorary SS leader?

A.- No, I was a major general, I got the salary of an official.

Q.- Did you carry out any activity in the SS, apart from that?

A.- Not in the SD, not in the armed SS, the Waffen-SS.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I have now concluded my direct examination of the defendant, and I would now like to begin to submit, and to discuss the documents which concern the Defendant Jost as charged by the Prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: You will refer to the documents introduced by the Prosecution?

DR, SCHWARZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. NY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q.- Witness, I shall now show you Document Book I, page 23; it is Exhibit 5, Document 2890. It is the affidavit of Ohlendorf, of the 24th of April 1947.

THE PRESIDENT: Before the Witness answers that question, I would like to clarify a little matter that was brought up by Dr. Hoffmann. Dr. Hoffman, I want to call to your attention the text which I had in ind when I used the phrase "hundreds of thousands", and I think you will agree that I was justified in the use of that phrase when you hear what the IMT said in connection with the program of the German forces in Poland. The IMT describes the wholesale liquidations of poles, and then ends up this way:

"So successfully did the Germans carry out this polity in Poland that by the end of the war one-third of the population had been killed and the whole of the country devastated." Will you agree with me that one-third of the entire population of Poland would far exceed the phrase of "hundreds of thousands"?

DR. HOFFMANN: Unfortunately, I have to agree with this. Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well; thank you. BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q.- Witness, I ask you, in accordance with this document, were you ever personally used for assignments of the kind mentioned in this document? in this particular document. During the time of my activity there were no major operations in the war theater, and as a consequence there were no large numbers of prisoners of war; there was, therefore, no reason to act according to this order. I was not, in any case, ever asked for a decision in this matter.

Q. Witness, in Document Book I which is before you, will you please go to page 31, - I do not know the English page number I am afraid - it is page 20, it is Exhibit 7, English page 21, No. 4134. This is Operation Report 126 of the 29th of October 1941-

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, I must ask you to excuse my being here without a robe*on. I just come from Room 51. My defendant is at the disposal of another Court, and by mistake, he has been led to this room, I am afraid. I would, therefore, like your Honor to repeat you order that the defendant Biberstein should be put at my disposal in room 57.

THE PRESIDENT: Have we not excused him?

DR. BERGOLD: No, my colleague Dr. Ficht has informed your Honor that the defendant Biberstein should also be in Room 57 this afternoon, and your Honor was kind enough to pass the order that that could be done. But apparently the prison was not informed of this.

THE PRESIDENT: I see. We Seem to be having some difficulty with the identification of defendants. Did they by chance send some other defendant to room 57, instead of Biberstein?

DR. BERGOLDL: Yes.

DR. RIEDIGER (for defendant Haensch): The same is true in the case of Haensch. Your Honor was kind enough to have the defendant excused this afternoon, and the same happened to this defendant. He is not in room 57, in fact, but is here. But nobody else was Sent down either. But the order which was issued by Your Honor this morning has not been received by the prison.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, at least we have made this progress - that we didn't send the wrong person there. You remember a week ago they sent the Defendant Blobel, who COURT II-A CASE IX should be very easy to distinguish because of his board, instead of somebody else.

At any rate, The Marshal is instructed to have the Defendants Biberstein and Haensch conducted to room 57.

DR. BERGOLD: Thank you.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I refer to Document 1, German page 1, Exhibit 7, Document No-4134.
BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q. Witness, what have you got to say about this document? It is English page 27.

A. This document is meant to prove that the territory of assignment of the Einsatzgruppe 3, which was subordinated to Einsatzgruppe A, around the towns Baranowice and Minsk, that this Einsatzgruppe in fact was stationed in this territory of white Ruthenia. This report is of the 29th of October 1941, is no longer competent, during the time which was only half a year later, of course, Einsatzgruppe A, after a civil administration had been created was no longer responsible for this territory. Therefore, I gave this detailed description this morning concerning the difference between the Army sector and the civilian administrative Sector.

Q. Witness, I shall show you now Document Book III-A, German page 1, English page 1, and it is Exhibit 99, Document 4151. It is your affidavit of 27 June 1947. Would you tell the Tribunal any corrections you might have to make in this affidavit?

A. Concerning number 3 of this affidavit I have already given my opinion, this morning I stated the incorrectness which is that in the countries of Latvia and Lithuania there was no Einsatzkommando of that time. I also expressed myself to this effect in forming interrogations, and I said that only for Estonia with The Special Commando I-A, this COURT II-A CASE IX was still the case.

In spite of this it was taken into the affidavit according to the old drafting, and it was signed by me, as evidently I was in a state of lack of concentration and, therefore, unable, to contradict and to correct the statement. It is obvious that the detachment Loknia although it was mentioned priviously on various occasions, was not mentioned here, and was not taken into the affidavit.

Q: Will you also comment upon number four of the affidavit?

A: I have done so this this morning by speaking about the individual offices in Lithuania, and Latvia, and also in Estonia, I said that I took measures for the territory of the Einsatzgruppe-A, but no special decrees and of requests of this kind were necessary because in this territory there were no Jews, and, therefore, this particular order was not applied in those territories. My worry was mainly those territories where there were Jews. Heydrich had announced his visit in White Ruthenia, and by the beginning or the end of May he had actually come there, without notifying me of this visit of his, without having me accompany him, and without giving me any detail and any information about his visit afterwards.

Q: Will you please go to page No. 74 in the Document Book III-A, which is the front of you; it is the English page 53. It is Exhibit No. 100, Document NO-3256. This document concerns the operational report in USSR, and, is No. 191 of 10 August 1942 -- 10 April 1942. You are named here as the leader if Einsatzgruppe-A, and the commander-in-chief of the group, Eastern Territories. What have you got to say about these?

A: This document quite obviously reports that as independent agencies next to each other there are on the one hand the police commissioner, and the SD Service for Eastern Territories, and on the other hand there are commanders of the Security Police and SD, Eastern Territories, in the individual general district, and apart from this there is Einsatzgruppe-A as a special unit, which has nothing to do with the individual offices, and agencies which I just mentioned.

Q: Witness, do you want to conclude anything from this state of affairs, something concerning your own activities?

A: I clarified the point this morning by saying that the working of these two channels of command were different with these two agencies. In the general district the man who was locally responsible for SS and Police matters was the SS and Police Leader, and his chief was the commissar-general, the holder of the actual executive power for this territory. By this method the executive power of a commander is basically curtailed, and in my case there was a special curtailment due to Heydrich's special modification.

Q: Witness, please go to page 6 in the German text, III-A, English page 3, Exhibit No, 101, Document NO-USSR-41. This document shows that allegedly on 14 April 1944 -- 43 -42, it mentioned insane people were murdered. What do you have to say about that?

A: As this document concerns an event which happened in Riga, it is outside my field of command or the field of command of my Einsatzgruppe, and these units could not have taken part in this event. The document itself is a letter of the commander of the Security Police of Latvia, and it is addressed to the inhabitants Registration Office, in Riga, and, although it is addressed to this authority, this document was not found at that place, but it was found in the office of the sender. If it is to be regarded as an original document, it should have arrived at the adressee and not only the sender should have held it. So far as the content matter of the letter is concerned, I must say that it has not been known to me before, and was not known to me afterwards, if it had. I would have prevented the carrying out of those measures. If I had known of this measure, I also would have prevented the carrying out of it in Krasnogwardoisk. The document, however, is no proof of any kind that the shooting was actually carriedout by the authority concerned.

That was an order of which it is absolutely possible that it was issued by another agency, or that the carrying out was done by another agency. or, it was carried out by whoever gave the commander the order to make out this document.

Q: Witness, I shall now show you Document Book II-A, German page 147, English page, so far as I know. 133. It is Exhibit No. 56, Document NO-3277, of 24 April 1942. This document has been submitted only in excerpts by the Prosecution, therefore, I am showing you the photostat of this document, the contents of which I am referring to here. On page 19 of the document it says, amongst other things, "In the period of reporting 1272 people were executed." Will you please comment upon this?

A: The operation period of reporting only becomes understandable when reading the entire report. The time of report does not refer to the date given by the RSHA. 24/4/42 because as far as the Reich Security Main Office is concerned there was no period of reporting, but the period of reporting can only refer to the report of the offices of the agency who has drafted this report. This can be recognized if you only look at pages 2 to 18 of this report. From these pages 2 to 18 it becomes evident that it is not a report of Einsatzgruppe A, but it is a monthly situational reports of the commander of the commander of the Security Police and SD in Latvia. On page 2 of the report, the general security in Latvia is being dealt with, and it speaks about newspaper publications of 9 March 1942; on page 14 there is a date, 26 April 1942. on page 13 there are agricultural matters, there is another mention of '42; on page 14, that is the order of 1 March 1942, containing slaughtering restrictions. In the report about the position of the work of the security Service, on page 15, the events of 19 march, and of 21 March 1942 are being discussed.

Page 21, mentions the arrest of a prison supervisor, on 26 March. On the same page there is another report, this time of 24 March 1942, and page 17, finally contains the date, 10 March 1942; here a hand grenade attack is being described. The report was not received and not compiled by the general sector of the Einsatzgruppe; it is evidently an independent report by the commander to Berlin, the commander had the authority to write such reports. These reports had to be filed by the end of each month. It is evident that this is a monthly report for the month of March. After the date, 23 March, there is no other mentioning of any date, so that this report can be regarded as concluded. The events are therefore of a time before I took over the office.

Q: When did you take over this office?

A: On 29 March 1942 -- yes, '42.

Q: Were the figures mentioned on page 8 of this document new to you?

A: They concerned the establishment of the Latvia office of information.

Q: That is page 67. Public information.

A: You mean , page 68?

Q: Yes, it is page 68, the Question itself is found on the preceding page.

A: Yes, it is II- A, 162 -- page 182.

Q: I shall repeat this question later on. In the Document Book in front of you, II-A that is, will you please turn to page 142, it is English page 128, Exhibit No. 55, Document No. 3281 of 17 April 1942. It is operational report USSR-193, 17 April 1942, what have you to say to this?

A: Basically, I have to say that this report was on *ithuania riots, dealing therefore, with a territory which was not within the command of the Einsatzgruppe. Events are being described therein which are proved to have taken place in the former Polish territories. Perwons were arrested and shot because of communist activities, and on account of maintaining relation to partisans. It has been established that  was not just a mass execution, but executions carried out *ter the guilt of the people of Olita had been established. They were persons who were executed on account of endangering public security, and therefore the local commander was authorized to take these measures. They, the commander, can act independently, and they need no special order or authority to carry out such a mission.

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

Q. Did you hear about these events immediately after they took place?

A. I cannot remember.

Q. I now show you -

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, before you go to the next document, please, I would like to ask a question.

Q. Witness, if you had received this report, as you have read it, you would have approved it, and concluded that the officials who conducted the executions had acted properly?

A. That I cannot say just from reading and looking at a report of this kind, but the independent duties transferred to the individual offices, and the restrictions issued to me not to carry out and not bother about executive measures would not have made possible as investigation of the individual cases.

Q. I gather from what you said, that since these executions were conducted only because of security reasons, that, therefore, they were justified?

A. If a report of the reasons of an arrest and justification thereof has been received, and, even if not only just a group of persons are being punished, but a group of these individuals are proved to be guilty of relations with partisans, and to be in active contact with such, if such matters are revealed, then - -

Q. Then the execution is justified?

A. According to the orders by the OKW and as given by the OKW people in contact with partisans, or partisans themselves, Whether volunteers or a forced partisans had to be shot if such guilt had been proved.

Q. Very well, you have justified this shooting by reading one sentence in this report, but you did not read the following sentence which contains, "The same day 22 persons among them 14 Jews who purportedly had spread Communist propaganda very recently were shot in Kauen."

A. Yes, that is on page 2 of the text in the document; it stops just here, and it goes on with the second page. That is the second part of the report.

Q. Well, I assume that you had been looking at the entire document, and have given us your observation of that document?

A. Yes.

Q. And we assume from what you had said that because it appeared in the report the report the executions were justified, and you gave quite a lay reason why you thought they were justified. Now I ask you, would it be justifiable to shoot 14 Jews only because it was assumed or was of purported that they had spread Communistic propaganda?

A. In the report it is: "Those who are proved guilty after they had been suspected." They proved to be guilty; it is not Just assumed, and not only because they belonged to a race.

Q. I, of course, do not nave the German text before me, and even if I did, I would not understand it. I would like to have you read from the German, and that is will be interpreted for us that sentence which begins, "The same day 22 persons, among them," and so on. Please read that sentence as you find it there. Read it slowly.

A. "On the same day in Kauen 22 persons of these 14 Jews who purportedly had spread Communistic propaganda very recently."

Q. Yes.

A. "Were shot in Kauen."

Q. Yes, the translation as it came to us now agrees with the translation of the document as it appears in the book.

These 14 Jews were only suspected of having spread this Communist propaganda, and it was assumed, it Was said, that they had spread it. There is no indication in the report that it was established and proved that they had spread the Communistic propaganda?

DR. SCHWARZ: Mr. President, Your Honor, I beg your pardon - -

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. SCHWARZ: I must agree here with the defendant that the term "purportedly", according to German usage, expresses enough for the authorities to carry out these executions.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, it all depends upon the translation of the word "purportedly." The work "purportedly' in English is a long distance from the word "To prove". Now I don't know how many kilometers it is away in Germany, but it is many miles away in English.

DR. SCHWARZ: If I may draw your attention to the fact, Your Honor, that the German word "Nachweislich" has been translated into English, and perhaps there is a mistake here, and the whole picture becomes distorted, and you get a distorted view.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the German word in the document?

DR. SCHWARZ: "Nachweislich". I beg your pardon, Your Honor. I am just being told that the word "nachweislich," should be translated by "approved", and I believe the English word "approved" actually expresses what I mean by the German word "nachweislich".

THE PRESIDENT: Of course, if the word in English were "proved" instead of "purportedly" then that would bear out what you have said.

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honor, there is a mistrans lation in the document.

When you asked the defendant to read the document book, I read from the English version.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE INTERPRETER: So it is a mistranslation.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you say then that translated literally, the word should be "proved" instead of "purportedly"?

THE INTERPRETER: Definitely.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well that correction will be noted in the document. We can assume then that this document says: "That 14 Jews had circulated Communistic propaganda and because of that they were shot."

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, I take it, witness, that you assume that to have been a correct procedure?

THE WITNESS: This manner of acting without the individual happinings of the event, today, after five and a half years, can no longer be looked upon in its proper light. It is Just a report.

THE PRESIDENT: I asked you directly: do you regard it proper, militarily proper, to shoot fourteen people, or only one person for that matter, because he spread Communist propaganda?

THE WITNESS: According to my orders these measures had to be carried out. In that far it was correct and justified.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, may I then proceed in submitting the documents?

THE PRESIDENT: Please do. BY DR. SCHWARZ: No. 92; English 66. It is Exhibit 109. It is Document No. 3256. It is an operational duty report, U.S.S.R., No. 186, of the 27th of March, 1942. On Page 1 of this document where the Einsatzgruppe A is mentioned, in the place of the name of the leader of the Einsatzgruppe, there is a remark in brackets; it says, "Handwritten," and then "illegible". I ask you now if at this date - I beg your pardon, at the date of the original document, your name could have appeared as that of the leader of the Einsatzgruppe. of a report - when I myself had not taken over the post as leader of the Kommando, but it can be assumed, as I said, that on the 27th of March the authority who issued this report in Berlin, already knew of my appointment, because this was actually made known two or three days before. It is, therefore, possible that my name appears as a handwritten remakr there, although I had not actually taken over the office yet. But apart from this, the events mentioned in this document are so far back that they must have happened long before I actually took over my office, apart from the fact that, again, they were outside the territory under the command of Einsatzgruppe A. fact that in the opening speech of the Prosecution, which I have here, on Page 18 of the German document, the Einsatzgruppe A is being spoken about, and in the last paragraph on this page - this is on the 27th of March, 1942, - it says, "The Defendant Jost was in charge of Einsatzgruppe A when they reported that in Tscherven 15,000 Jews were shot.

I understood you correctly if I assume that this event was before the time at which you began your service with Einsatzgruppe A? report was compiled on the 27th of March in Berlin at a date when I myself had not started yet taking over matters of the Einsatzgruppe, but even if I had done so at that date, on the 27th of March, the mentioned events are far back, in fact weeks, and certainly long before I took over. you were already in command of the Einsatzgruppe? ings in Tscherven?

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I have now arrived at the conclusion of the direct examination of the Defendant Jost.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribuanl will be in recess for the usual afternoon recess, and then defense counsel will have an opportunity to cross-examine the witness.

(A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. MANDRY (Attorney for defendant Sandberger): March, 1942, until the beginning of September, 1942, Sandberger was your subordinate. What impression did you have of him, and his character, and his interests? What impression did you gain through these five months?

A In the year 1940 I met Sandberger in Berlin. On that occasion I talked to him for about five minutes. I saw him again in Larch 1942 and now I had an opportunity to talk to him repeatedly and on those occasions, of course, I got to know him better. His attitude was correct and well mannered. He was a man who tried in such difficult times and in such a territory to deal with his task in a manner which certainly one could not describe it as being a policy of tyranny. On the contrary, Sandberger certainly was not a friend of harsh and severe measures. the Security police?

A We might explain it in such a way: His interests were firstly political. He was interested in the territory he was working in, that is the Estonian territory, as a political problem. His interests in police matters were of minor importance. He was neither trained for police work; and this was not his sphere of interests. people?

AAs I heard repeatedly from him, Sandberger's opinion and attitude was that the Estonian people should become politically independent as far as possible, and the manner in which he dealt with Estonians, the way he dealt with the Estonian indigeneous government officials and Police officers, especially with officers of the Security Police and asked them to cooperate with him and how he supported their independence and always tried to form them into an Estonian unit, who could work independently.

of Communists, in particular, Communists who were charged with union offences. I should like to know if you would tell us. about Sandberger's general attitude in Security Police measures against Communists. Communists charged with minor offenses could be released from captivity. On that occasion, he told me that in Estonia this had happened previously, a few months before individuals were released continuously; and that on some holiday it had been achieved that a greater number should be released. However, he added that these measures were not approved by the national Estonian circles, who did not like anything that was connected with Bolchevism and they were not enthusiastic about it, because the Estonian people made the Communists responsible for all that had happened in Estonia in 1940 and 1941. Many of the Communists who had been released were again arrested, because they immediately became active again, and, therefore, the Estonian authorities and the German authorities had new trouble to trace them.

Estonia, or bad conditions calmed down? operational territory. Of course, they always tried to develop Communist activity in his territory. Small groups of partisans or parachutists and agents who came down by parachute were active and for that reason something was always going on. In any case the territory was endangered. collective measures against Communists, whether he ordered such measures, or whether he approved of them? and I can't imagine it, knowing Sandberger personally, but I do know that he had set up a very complicated channel of procedure in order to examine each individual Communist. This was also done with the strongest cooperation of the Estonian Security Police, because this authority knew the Estonians best and had to deal with the entire problem of the Communists in Estonia and also the individuals and could judge best. In general, some Estonian Police agency took such reports and sent them on to some superior agency where they were examined, I presume, and in the end in Reval, in a central office, they were again examined very thoroughly and here Sandberger has set up a commission to deal with the final examination, containing three lawyers or officers who examined the matter again. There, orders could be refuted, if not sufficient proof was given, or a decision was then confirmed by Sandberger's office. It was a very thorough system and certainly a very individual system. towards the Fuehrer Order concerning the extermination of the Jews.

Did you also discuss this with Sandberger? Did you discuss this Jewish question with him and what opinion did Sandberger hold on the problem, as far as you remember? Sandberger considered this order to be impracticable and that his whole attitude expressed this, even if he is not a man who talked a lot and criticized measures strongly or discussed it a lot, but it had been expressed quite clearly that he disapproved. passive person, concerning the Jewish question and the extermination of Jews? be described as passive, although that is an expression which is not correct and suitable here, because it was more than just being passive. What he expressed was a real objection. Estonia, you had the wrong view that in Estonia there were Jews who were concerned with the extermination decree. What did Sandberger tell you about the existence of Jews and executions that he had carried out? What did he tell you about this ? were left. That from the very beginning there had been very few Jews, whose greater part, when the Russians left, had left as well. Part of these Jews at the immediate direction from Riga without his cooperation had been gotten rid of. having caused executions of Jews? was done without his assistance and done during his absence and his knowledge.

About details I did not ask him.

Q You told us before, owing to Sandberger's attitude, it can be shown that he objected to the extermination of the Jews. Your predecessor was Stahlecker. Do you know about his views about the necessity of carrying out the Fuehrer Order concerning the extermination of Jews, do you know anything about that? Stahlecker and did not see him. I therefore did not have the opportunity to hear his personal opinion to this question but I had known Sthalecker previously for years and I do know that he was very ambitious and I know that he did everything in order to follow his ambitions. Therefore, I can imagine that an open objection, that means objecting to carrying out orders, he would never have tolerated. It was not his way to act in a very harsh manner himself, that is to take measures himself on the spot, but he would have made a report for the competent court which would have had the appropriate consequences.

Q Who was your legal chief? Jeckeln. the practice of war, he tried to attain through the SS and his idea about the jurisdiction of the time when you were with Jeckeln? Can you give us some examples about this? man who was very hard indeed, but also he was hard and strict to himself. What he expected of a subordiante he expected of himself too. In the same way as his own views were very strict, this was expressed in his measures, of course. I remember that during the summer months of 1942 he was in charge of a combat unit near Leningrad, temporarily.

Two volunteer officers of this combat unit -- did I say Estionian officers? -- had taken an unofficial leave, and left for a short period of time, about twenty-four hours and had travelled to Estonia. Jeckeln was informed about this or he somehow discovered this. They were out before a courtmartial immediately. They were condemned to death. The sentence was confirmed by Jeckeln. The harshness shown in the measure proves how Jeckeln dealt in such cases. Jeckeln? already explained this morning: that he was prepared to have shot SS men whose nerves could not stand the strain.

That proves his harshness towards his subordinates. This court-martial against officers also proves this. But how in his personal sphere, down to the bitter and he could be so, is shown by the fact that even one of his own children, which was not quite sane, he had killed -- that is, he used Euthanasia. That proves how hard this man was. took a hand in Sandberger's sphere of duty?

A Yes. In Sandberger's sphere, that is, Einsatzkommando 1-A. There Jeckeln discovered some Jews who lived in a barrack gathered there. He immediately ordered that they should be dealt with. Sandberger himself only heard about this afterwards, of course, because he was in Breskaw. option could he have done anything against it, in order to lay that his subordinate took a hand in this sphere? because the High SS and Police leader had all the authority. In this individual case it was not possible, in particular, because Jeckeln's personality as Obergruppenfuehrer certainly did not want any instructions given by people of lower rank. did you tell the interrogating officer about the fact, in how far Sandberger ordered executions of Jews? time Sandberger certainly did not carry out any such measures, and he had told me that in the previous time he had not carried out, or ordered, or caused, such measures to be taken. way Sandberger made his reports, and did you get to know it.

some offices, when Sandberger told a co-worker who had to make a report, and criticized him very sharply. He criticized the contents of the report, as well as its style, constantly. I stayed in the room for some time and I think Sandberger did not even see me. In any case, on that occasion I should see that he was very thorough and very conscientious about these reports.

DR. MANDRY: I have no further questions, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel? BY DR. MINZFELT, Assistant to Dr. Gick, for the defendant Strauch: the way the civilian administration was set up for the Eastern territory. Will you please repeat when the civilian administration was set up in Latvia?

A I don't exactly know the date and the month, because, as I said, the civilian administration was set up in stages administration must have been set up. civilian administration had already been set up, was he sent there as a commander of the Security Police and of the SD, or as Einsatzkommando chief? had been set up, the Commando agencies had been set up; and if he had an immediate order for Latvia, he must have been ordered there as a commander. being set up, where was Einsatzkommando 2?

A I can't say that because the Einsatzkommandos in their entirety or in part had moved on to the front with the Army. previous replies, that Einsatzkommando 2 already was far away from the civilian administration in Latvia, that is, from Riga, and had moved to the front. at the time? Commando. 2 could be commanded from Riga? made up from this Commando, had the headquarters in the Army territory, owing to the distance it was hardly possible to command both units at the same time. Einsatzkommando 2 at the time when the Commando chief's position was taken over in Riga by Strauch Einsatzkommando 2 was near Krasnowardeisk; if it was near this locality, could Strauch's Einsatzkommando be commanded from Riga? Krasnowardeisk -- I don't know whether it was, it is possible -- I do not see any possibility how these two agencies could be commanded by one person only. Theoretically, it can be imagined; but practically, there would be no sense to it. leaders of Einsatzkommando 2 during, or before, your time?

constituted the Commando Loknia later on - I think it must have been like that - in that case, in Loknia there was Sturmbannfuehrer Dr. Bloetz, before my time; and during my time, Sturmbannfuehrer Kober. How it was before my time, I don't know, of course, provided that Einsatzkommando 2 later constituted Einsatzkommando Loknia. the Office of the Commander with the Security Police and the SD, and an Einsatzkommando.

A I have already done it this morning. The Einsatzkommando is a military unit connected with the army; the Commander of the Security Police and the SD, when the civilian administration has been set up, does not constitute a special unit but a proper authority. General Districts, were there any executions carried out? submitted -- of which I don't remember the number -- and there executions in Latvia were mentioned. Those were executions because of Communist propaganda, sabotage and similar things -- that is, if actual facts were proved, executions were carried out. you remember, and did you hear about, mass executions? to that effect. and the SD also carry out partisan measures, or rather, anti-partisan measures?

partisan problem as well, of course, and it was their job to make reconnaissance. The actual combatting of partisans was up to Army and Police troops. During reconnaissance, of course, occasional fighting took place, but that was not the idea. of March 1942 you met Strauch in Riga and talked with him there?

A That is right. At the beginning of March 1942 I saw him in Riga. that time when you met him there?

A Because I saw him; and I believe at the time I exchanged gasoline coupons because in the Reich territories different gasoline coupons were valid than in Eastern territories. Department III of the Command in Riga, and he worked there? the Commander of the Security Police and the SD, and there in Department III, that is, the SD Department.

Q Department IIId. Did Strauch tell you at the time that he would have to go to Minsk soon in order to take the position of the Commander of White Ruthenia? few days. He had been appointed to go to White Ruthenia and would soon go there. When he went, I don't know. Heydrich to give him authority so that in Jewish affairs temporarily he would not have to undertake anything?

it was Heydrich's intention to travel to White Ruthenia himself in order to give instructions there personally, without telling me what kind of instructions there would be. I also said that in the beginning of May, up to the middle of May, he actually was there, and that he did not inform me about his stay there, and his instructions. Later I heard from Strauch, however, that Heydrich had been there, and that after Strauch had addressed himself to Heydrich, Heydrich had granted to Strauch that for economical reasons, or for reasons of labor, temporarily nothing was to be done concerning the Jews for the time being, or that he would not have to undertake anything as yet. You say that Strauch also was very courageous, indeed, to address Heydrich and to ask him that the order for execution of Jews in White Ruthenia should not be carried out yet. took a let of courage to discuss the subject at all with Heydrich. Exhibit 111, Document 3428, the alleged letter of General Commissar Kube to Reich Commissar Lohse, of 31 July 1942, is contained. From the document books, did you also hear about this letter? newspaper which published it. Previously I had not known about it. of this letter? for several reasons. The greatest surprise for me in this letter was that Kube is supposed to have written it.

Kube was known generally, as well as to me, as a man who wanted the Jews to live, not only for economic reasons but also for humane reasons. For that reason the letter seems so incredulous to me. I also knew that Kube himself formerly had objected to measures against Jews. This is also in opposition, and contrary to that. Thirdly, I knew that in White Ruthenia at the time Kube described here, criticism was practiced as stated in reports. Therefore, it cannot be understood that on the one hand for economic reasons and reasons of labor the Jews should be put into ghettos, and on the other hand, that same Kube who requested such measures wanted Jews to be liquidated to that extent. within ten weeks before 31 July 1942, would you have known White Ruthenia, would you have heard about such an event, or heard about it some way or other? other, even if the report had been sent to Berlin immediately. But such events would have become known somehow. clever cooperator and worker. What do you think of this characterization of Strauch by Kube? between Kube and Strauch there was a very bad relation; they were on very bad terms, and I can't imagine why Kube should suddenly change his mind.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel, do I understand that you question the authenticity of this document?

DR. MINSFELT: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have the photostat available?

DR. MINSFELT: No, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Does the Prosecution have the photostat of this original document available?

MR. GLANCY: The Prosecution, sir, to the best of my knowledge and belief, is in possession of it, but not here in the courtroom. It can be furnished in a very few minutes, though.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think that some time soon it should be submitted to the Tribunal for scrutiny and examination.

MR. GLANCY: It will be done, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. MINZFELT: Your Honor, may I add - we consider this letter to be forged, but if it should be found that it has actually been written then we must consider the contents as incorrect and not corresponding with the actual events in White Ruthenia. For definite reasons we must state that the letter and the truth do not correspond.

THE PRESIDENT: At this moment, you can only question the authenticity of the document, and since you do question it, the Tribunal will need to pass upon whether the document is what it purports to be. With regard to the contents, that is something that your client can attack when he takes the witness stand.

DR MINZFELT: Yes.

MR CLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, I would like to advise that the Tribunal is already in possession of this in its archives as Prosecution's Exhibit 111.

THE PRESIDENT: The Secretary-General will present the photostat to the Tribunal tomorrow morning. Any other defense counsel who desires to cross examine the present witness will please step to the podium. If not , the Prosecution will begin its cross examination of the witness. By MR CLANCY:

Q Mr Jost, isn't it ture that you have stated in your affidavit that in addition to your duties as commanding officer of the Einsatzgruppe-A, that you were also at the same time Befehlshaber of the Reich Security Police and the SD? Commander of the SD? East were according to the instructions given by Heydrich, which were merely temporarily conducting this office as a commander. the SD and the Security Police during those four months? limitations that I told you about.

Q What limitations do you speak of? tasks of the executive were not part of my tasks, but, that these tasks were up to the independent commanders.

the guidance of a commanding officer? shown the independent position they had. English - - if the Tribunal please, it is on page 2 of the English, I apologize, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Page 1, I understand it to be.

MR CLANCY: I wish to refer to page 2, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, very well. BY MR CLANCY:

Q In paragraph 6 it says that, "In its entirety or on the whole the duties of the commander-in-chief of the Security Police and SD, that is, of a KdS, were the same as these of the chief of Social Command or an Einsatzgruppe." Did you not state that in your affidavit?

A It states here "in general" and I have given an explanation about this in detail this morning, as it is not possible to explain in one sentence in detail the difference of the entire tasks of the various departments. the Kommandeur des Reich Security Police was subordinate, is not that correct?

A This was a double subordination. I already was working on that this morning. The commander in the first instance was there for his general area and his local commander was the SS and Police Leader; who had to give orders and was the superior. I also explained that there were considerable differences between the various Special Commands (Einsatzkommandos) difference which was in the chain of command, is that correct?

Q Do you wish to add something to that?

A One moment please. I said the difference in the description can be explained by this, and I must add that I have given a detailed statement to that this morning to clarify the situation about the tasks. Police Leader, didn't you then an intermediary say, that you yourself as BDS were subordinate to the Higher SS and Police Leader?

A Your question is not quite to the point. The commander was subordinate to the SS and Police Leader, and I was subordinate to the Higher SS and Police Leader, but your question was correct in so far as you said that I had an in-between position or was - as you expressed yourself - an intermediary.

Q In other words; any order issued by the Higher SS and Police Leader would as a natural course of events come to you for transmission to the lower units, is that not correct?

A It could have gone through two chancels. The higher SS and Police Leader could give me an order to be handed onto the commanders, but the Higher SS and Police Leader can also give orders to the SS and Police Leaders, who then on their own account hand the orders to the commanders. These two channels were in existence side by side. observed, is it not? "commander" does not quite describe the competency and the functions of a man; this depends on the entire organization of the region, described by me this morning. In a military sense, I understand a commander to be an agency which has complete and unlimited authority to give orders. This complete authority, as I have described it, does not apply to this case. Your authority was limited. You said that Heydrich put you in command of Einsatzgruppe-A as BDS-Ostland and he limited your authority, is that correct?

Q Limited to what?

A First, as to time, it was only a temporary task; secondly, being a representative with the limitation, that I had nothing to do with the executive, those were tasks of the commanders. first and to limit it to such an extent that you would not be effective? in general, it had to be considered a temporary special arrangement which was not meant to last, because for the final appointment which he intended, this limitation would not have been given. an especially limited case sofar as service in Russia was concerned. You had authority and yet you lacked it? (interruption) You met with frequent directions which might have appeared reasonable to other people in any other case but your own. You seemed to have led a charmed life. Let's study it. You protested to Heydrich, yet I understood that Heyrich was a severe, hard, militaristic individual who would not suffer any interference; secondly, we have just heard that Jekeln, Obergruppenfuehrer Jukeln, a superior to you, we have heard that he was a hard man, and a ruthless man, who thought nothing of sacrificing his own son, or his own daughter, because he was imperfect and because he was insane, and yet you with complete impunity were able to tell him that you would not carry out his order, is not that correct?

Q How do you explain that?

A I beg your pardon, did you say "his" orders?

Q Orders at least coming from him, I know not their source? of what I told him and what Heydrich had told me, and what I had told Heydrich.

to carry out an order; it does not matter how you phrase it, how eloquently it was couched, it still had constituted an outright refusal, did it not?

A I didn't hand on the order which I received. coming from Jekeln?

A It did not come from Jekeln. This order came from Heydrich.

Q Didn't you state on direct examination that you received orders from Jekeln?

A No, that is a mistake. I said, I didn't get any orders from him after the discussing. he explained to me again what he intended to do. He didn't tell me so when he would give me any orders.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr Clancy, if you are going to take up another phase, suppose we recess until tomorrow morning.

MR CLANCY: Very well.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 9:30 tomorros morning.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 23 October 1947, 0930 hours)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Yesterday, we asked for a document, and the Secretary General has handed in a photostat. It is Document 3426-PS. What is the exhibit number of this document and in which book does it appear?

MR. GLANCY: The exhibit number is 111. It is found in Document Book III-A, on page 42, if Your Honors please.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will show that the Tribunal has physically examined the photostat, has noted all the various features which go into the construction of a document, and will therefore have a visual memory of the document so that in its deliberation as to its authenticity, it will recall its actual appearance. The document will now be returned to the secretary General for filing.

DR. GICK (Attorney for the Defendant Strauch): Your Honor, as has been measured very briefly yesterday, my client suspects that this document is not genuine. The photostatic copy which was submitted today and which I have previously seen for one moment does, of course, give an exact picture of the original, but the document differs very much from the documents submitted in general by the defense here. May I remind you that the affidavits of a certain Max Weinreich of New York reveal that this document was found in the East-Ministry, together with some other documents. The exact circumstances are not explained in COURT II-A CASE IX this affidavit.

It is merely explained that this document was secured by a Sgt. Friedman. Like the other documents, tins document is not given over to the military authorities, but this document was sent privately to the Jewish Society in New York, a private society which deals with Jewish social problems and for that reason it probably received the document. Society. The prosecution has never actually held it and therefore I could never see it here. existence of this document, that none of the persons concerned here know anything about it, neither the persons mentioned, nor gentlemen who worked there; neither the Police Chief Chimanov, for example, nor Lohse, the Reich Commissar to whom this letter is addressed. White Ruthenia at the time and they show them upside down. There are strong contradictions contained in this document concerning the person of Mr. Kubeling, as well as his attitude and also about conditions which I still have to prove as to conditions in white Ruthenia. I see contradictions is the Kube letter. in this case the original be submitted. One can recognise matters much better iron the original than from the photostatic copy of a document, of course. That is, one can test its steams, the signatures, and initials, only when the original can be looked into here, can one see whether the document is authentic. If you ask the prosecution to get this document -- and this should not be difficult, if it is in New York -- I should like to reserve the right that, when the document is here, that the persons mentioned in this affidavit be called here as witnesses be cross-examined.

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

THE PRESIDENT: The right to call those witnesses already exists. There is not reason why you can't call these witnesses now, immediately. This document, like any other document is subject to attack on the Dart of anyone, especially with regard to the authenticity and certainly with regard to content, so there is no reason why you can't call witnesses to shed further light upon this document and attach it from any angle.

DR. GICK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: With regard to the obtaining of the original, a question may arise as to whether this Institution would be willing to hazard the loss or whatever could happen to a document travelling that distance. I would like to hear from the prosecution as to what hopes they could entertain in obtaining the original of this document for the purposes of this trial.

MR. GLANCY: The prosecution at this point is unable to suspect what success they could gain by a request to this named institute. However, we shall made every effort to bring the original here, or at least to shed more light through the word of an affidavit as to how it was found, by whom it was found, under what auspices it was found -- possibly it was a Government sponsored agency. That I do not know, Sir. However, we snail attempt to ascertain that and inform the Court.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: Another point, if Your honor pleases, it would facilitate our task, and the task of the Tribunal, and the task of the defense, if defense counsel would be a little more specific as to the discrepancies Which he has noted, the fault that he finds with the document.

THE PRESIDENT: Following out Mr. Glancy's suggestion, the Tribunal recommends to defense counsel that he prepare a brief out specific document pointing out wherein he questions the authenticity of this document.

The statement will accompany the letter, which will be written by the prosecution asking for the temporary submission of this original document to the Tribunal and, if, for any reason, the Institute does not feel inclined to release the original, even for the short period, then, at least, we will have its answer to the questions which you present.

DR. GICK: Your Honor, I shall write down everything I nave said here and I shall submit this letter to the Tribunal and the prosecution.

I have another request, Your Honor. Owing to the condition of Defendant Strauch, I have had no opportunity to discuss in detail Herr Jost's statements in the witness box. Today I am not able to discuss everything, while he is in the witness box. Therefore, I reserve the right at a later time to do this and to cross-examine Herr Jost at a later point again.

THE PRESIDENT: Aren't you sufficiently familiar with your client's case to conduct a cross-examination now?

DR. GICK: Unfortunately not, Your Honor. There are various points which arose which are quite new to me and which I have not yet discussed with my client.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, we will reserve the right to you.

MR. GLANCY: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Please. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q. Witness, in your direct examination, you stated that you joined the National Socialist Party in 1928, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. For the purpose of the record alone, is it not actually true that you joined in the fall of 1927?

A. I applied to join at the end of 1927 and was actually accented in 1928. That can be proved by the membership number.

Q. Then When you became a member, the Party was in an early stage of development, right?

A. Yes, in the first stages of development.

Q. Three years later, that is, in 1931, you joined the SA, is that right?

A. I finally joined, yes.

Q. Was the SA not used as an authority or unit to superior opposition and to protect speakers of the growing National Socialist movement?

A. At that time there were so few members of the SA that one could hardly say that they were in a position to suppress opposition, out it was their task to deal with protective measures, particularly during meetings. young, a little too were, to accomplish its task?

A. I said if they had had the task which you say they had.

Q. Hot what I say. I believe that you just said it was for protection at meetings: is that not true?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. From this training you must have experienced violence and ruthlessness in cutting down any opposition which arose to your speakers at these meetings, correct?

A. I beg your pardon. I did not quite understand your question.

Q. During these times and during your activity as a protective member, of a protective group, namely, the SA, you must have experienced violence and ruthlessness in curbing any opposition which arose during your meetings, correct?

A. If you imagine that during every meeting nothing but atrocities took place, I don't know how to reply to your question. At the time, all political meetings were conducted in a very orderly fashion. of course, there were discussions. That is natural. Occasionally there were disturbances, as well, serious disturbances, That is also known, but that has nothing to do with the fact that opponents had to be suppressed or that they had to be destroyed.

Q. You seated that you took over the police office in Worms in March 1933, right?

A. Yes.

Q. What were your duties there?

A. The task of police chief - when the security endangered it, and anything connected with such tasks, to take measures to secure the security.

Q. Never having been a police chief, I do now know... Can you inform me what those tasks were, specifically?

A. To the sphere of the police...the regular police... belong the Police Revieres distributed through the city, traffic police, criminal police, police dealing with strangers, political police -- those approximately are the tasks.

Q. You included, I believe, criminal police, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You had stated on direct examination that one of your objections to taking over command in the East was your lack of police experience, am I right?

A. Not lack of experience, but the fact that I did not like to work in the police, and that I was not suitable for it because I think I personally am not suitable for these tasks as would be required.

Q. You were suitable in 1933, weren't you?

A. They considered me to be suited, but I personally was no longer interested in these tasks. That is why I turned to different tasks later on.

Q. In the autumn of 1933 you were in charge of the police office in Giessen and remained there until March 1934. Right?

A. Yes.

Q. You still didn't feel that you were personally suitable to these tasks?

A. In any case, I left there. I could have remained, if I wanted.

Q. In the year 1934 you joined the SS?

A. Yes.

Q. In the same year you joined the SD and were given the task of creating an information and counter intelligence service which had the task of combatting foreign intelligence, agencies, or organizations which might pose a threat to the security of National Socialism, right?

A. You have not formulated it correctly. This organization had to deal with counter intelligence, as I have mentioned, that is, to find out about foreign news service and to prevent them from giving such news. The activity of these news agencies need not be anti-National Socialist first of all, but, of course, they can be antiNational Socialist.

Q. But was it not one of your basic reasons for suppressing this type of thing, - that which might constitute a threat to National Socialism and give it a black eye in other countries?

A. I don't quite know how to answer this question. In every country there are counter intelligence organizations, and every country tries to avoid foreign agencies espionage-I don't See anything particular in this. I think the country would be careless if they did not build up an organization for its protection.

Q. I quite agree with you. But that is not the reason for my question. Wouldn't you say that this task constituted, or rather, was in the nature of a security function also?

A. All questions connected with a foreign news agency, that is, all questions connected to making these activities difficult, or make them impossible, of course,

Q. Thank you. Was this not also in the nature, COURT II-A CASE IX possibly slightly removed, of police work, detection, suppression?

A. I have already explained this briefly in the direct examination, that the tasks of the police were limited, according to their general field of activity, to deal with espionage cases - that is, cases which had already occurred, to clear them up, and to search the person who was guilty.

Q. My question is merely.... Was this in the nature of police work. Yes or no?

A. That is just what I was tring to explain.

Q. It only takes one word.

A. May I ask you to repeat the question?

Q. Was this work in the nature of police work?

A. I understand you now. No, it did not have the character or the nature of police work. It had been built up on means at the disposal of the SD - that is, with cooperators, and those co-workers had no police functions because they were not able to search houses, or arrest people, nor to fulfill tasks which are normally given to the police.

Q. During this period of development of the National Socialist regime in which you participated, might we not say from this that you were conversant with persons, groups, or movements, which threatened the security of the Third Reich?

A. That I knew such personnel, or such groups of persons.... is that the question?

Q. No, it is not. That you were aware that these groups of persons, or movements, existed as possible or potential opposition to National Socialism.

A. I don't know what reason somebody might have who is commissioned with news information Service whether COURT II-A CASE IX his activity directed against National Socialism, or Whether he just does it to Serve his Fatherland, to get information for his Fatherland, or whether he does it to be paid well.

...there might be various reasons and these reasons will be immaterial to whom carries out the counterintelligence.

Q. You stated in your direct examination that you had been a propagandist for the National Socialist movement, right?

A. Insofar as I discussed with people who held different opinions -- that happened not only once, but repeatedly, - inasfar as I distributed propaganda material, that I temporarily worked in a propaganda department, - yes,

Q. At what time did you become aware of the fact, as a National Socialist, that Jews were considered an economic and a virtual Physical threat to the Reich?

A. As endangering the Reich?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know how to reply to a question addressed like this.

Q. Perhaps I can rephrase it for you, make it a little easier. Were you aware that Hitler, and the other members of the Hierarchy of National S ocialism, intended to rid Germany of Jews because they were considered a potential threat, economically and physically?

A. During the first years after 1933, perhaps until the beginning of the war, I cannot say for certain, plans on a large scale to resettle the Jews or to give them the possibility of emigrating, I did not know about that. I knew, of course, that Jews emigrated, and that it was desired; but whether there was a general plan for that, I didn't know.

Q. You were aware that the National Socialists didn't COURT II-A CASE IX exactly find the Jews pleasing?

A. That's right.

Q. Were you aware of the laws that were passed which deprived Jews of their property rights, their rights of citizenship? In the final analysis, speaking of concentration camps, their right to live?

A. No, I was not conscious of that, that they denied them their right to live.

Q. You didn't fully answer my question. Were you aware of the discriminatroy laws regarding property rights, and the rights of citizenship?

A. No, I was not conscious of that.

Q. Can you read?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you read the papers?

A. In general, yes.

Q. Thank you. In 1939 you marched with the Army, that is, the Third Army, into Poland, right?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your position with the Third Army?

A. In the staff of the Third Army I was chief of the civil administration.

Q. Did you have a title?

A. No.

Q. Was it skin to a BDS?

A. No, no. It was a military position that is attached to the Third Army.

Q. I understood you to say on direct examination that it was rather a shock to you when you were - we might saydegraded, and sent to the front as an Unterscharfuehrer for the reason that you had never had any military experience.

A. That was not why I was surprised. The shock was owing to the fact that as Major General I had been demoted, COURT II-A CASE IX and now was an NCO.

Q. My question was... On direct examination you stated that you had no previous military experience, Right?

A. I had no real training, and no experience at the front.

Q. I understand that a seasoned soldier, a soldier who knows his way around, is a person who has participated in a campaign, Isn't that experience of the best?

A. The campaign in Poland, where I had a position on the staff, cannot be compared to this.

Q. Was this a tea party or a campaign?

A. That was a campaign, but with a position on the staff.

Q. You stated that it was a military task, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. What were your duties here?

A. Setting up administration offices, as in the territory under the military commanders, setting up county offices, mayor offices, setting up economic administration, and get it going again: and also agriculture. That was part of the work I did.

Q. Night we not say that this experience that you gained in this campaign would qualify you for the position of BDS?

A. That has nothing to do with this, because they were merely administrative tasks of the military administration

Q. I believe it is common knowledge that excesses were committed here against the Polish Jews in the polish intelligentsia. Are you aware, or were you at that time aware, -- did you witness these excesses.

A. From the time when I was in this territory in the COURT II-A CASE IX north of Poland, where German policemen had shot a Jewess in self-defense, was put before the court-martial and was condemned to death.

I remember this case very vividly. But measures against Polish intelligentsia or Jews at that time, up to the beginning of October 1939, I know nothing about that.

Q. Let us confine ourselves merely to the Jews or to the intelligentsia... Were there any other groups who were annihilated during this campaign?

A. In the territory where I was at that time I did not hear of any such measures.

Q. It later came to your attention that these things took place, except in one isolated, qualified incident?

A. At the moment I cannot remember any other case.

Q. Leaving this, after your service in Poland in October 1939, you returned to Berlin to become chief of Amt VI of the RSHA... right?

A. Yes.

Q. You remained in this position until September 1941 ... correct?

A. Yes.

DR. SUESS (for Defendant Schulz): Your Honor, the Defendant Schulz has a bladder trouble, and I ask for a short interval, that he may have a chance to affend his nature.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Schulz will be escorted from the courtroom by the Marshal until his temporary indisposition has passed.

DR. SUESS: Thank you, your Honor. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q. As part of the duties within your agency, that is, Amt VI, did you not have representatives in Russia selecting natives of Russia for intelligence work?

A. In Russia? If I understand you correctly, I am supposed to have had agents in Russia Itself. I must say that a German intelligence service unfortunately did not succeed to set up a news service system in Russia itself.

Q. If I am not mistaken, I have understood the Defendant Naumann to state that there were representatives of Office VI in Russia and that they had a house of their own from which they operated in selecting people to carry out counter intelligence work.

A. In the occupied Russian territory, I thought I understood you to say in Russia, in the Russian territory, Mr. Prosecutor. If you want to have detailed information on this, I ask you to ask my successor. During my time I had no opportunity yet to deal with this.

Q. From September 1941 until February 1942, you stated on direct examination that you were paid by the RSHA, but that you were without assignment.

A. Yes.

Q. Was this merely that you were awaiting for an opening suitable to your rank, such as the Einsatzgruppe?

A. No, I was supposed to join the Ministry East.

Q. In February 1942 you took an information tour into Russia?

A. Yes.

Q. What type of information were you gathering?

A. In the interest of my future assignment in the Eastern administration, I was to get some information on the situation in the East, that is, get to know the country. That was the task given in Posen. This was no special task. The task was only given because I had nothing else to do. Just to give me something to do.

Q. You stated on direct examination that you went to Riga and took command of Einsatzgruppe A, with the task 23 O ct 47-3&4-9-M-AEH-Biolsi (Juelich) COURT II-A CASS IX of BDS and Ausland included, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At this time did you become aware, or were you previously sware, of a Hitler order for the extermination of Jews, Communist functionaries, or other undesirable elements?

A. At the latest, at the time when I arrived in Riga I was informed about the Fuehrer order. Whether this has been discussed previously -- in any case, I did not know of the contents of it until then. Even in Riga itself, when I asked to have the order made known to me, I only considered him, considering the Jewish question because that was the main problem.

Q. You were aware of this Hitler order to contain the specific order to wipe out the Jews in the occupied Eastern territories of Russia?

A. Yes, I heard about chat in Riga, quite clearly.

Q. From whom?

A. From the adjutant of Stahlecker.

Q. On what date did you learn of the order to kill Jews?

A. I knew previously that the order existed, although I did not know about its full extent.

Q. I am sorry. Will you repeat that please?

A. I said, I knew that Jews were being shot, but I did not know about the extent of the order and the great importance of it. I only heard about this in Riga; I only could realize it there.

Q. On what date did you become fully conversant with all the uncaning of this order to kill Jews?

A. Well, I presume the day I started to work in Riga.

Q. Which was?

A. I believe it was 29 March.

Q. On the 29th of March 1942, you were aware of the order to exterminate Jews?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your reaction when you first became aware of this order?

A. It was my intention to travel to Berlin in order to try to ask Heydrich to cancel, this order, The psychological reaction, not only at that moment, but also previously, for instance, the discussion in Smolensk, which I described yesterday... this mental state remained.

Q. You found this distasteful then... it repulsed you?

A. It is hard to describe this in orders, how these things were.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, will you please speak more directly into the microphone? The interpreter has difficulty in hearing you.

Q. (By Mr. Glancy) Will you kindly repeat your answer?

A. I said, the entire psychological condition is hard to describe in words.

Q. Were you shocked?

Q. You were pleased?

A. I don't think it necessary to emphasize that this was not the case. I think I used the expression "shocked" yesterday. That is perhaps what it was.

Q. As a National Socialist were you at any time convinced that this was a necessary task, that is, the extermination of Jews?

A. Whether I personally had the opinion that they had to be exterminated, and this was necessary, I personally did not hold this view.

Q. You were not of this opinions?

A. No.

Q You refused to pass this order on? hand it on.

Q That, at least, was a passive refusal? checked up on the different Einsatzgruppen to see the orders that had been issued from Berlin were carried out?

A No, there was no such man at the time. Heydrich was the chief, and apart from him there was nobody special who was given the commission to check on the Einsatzgruppen, or do anything of the sort. Berlin, this being a military, or at least a para-military organization, weren't you required to reply by endorsement, that is, something like contents received, or noted, carried out, or ignored?

A No. In that case it did not happen that way. of these orders? matter - only the receipt was confirmed, but if it was not a top secret matter, no receipt was given for it. It was a more formality, it has nothing to do with the contents.

as to the execution of the tasks given to their subordinate commanders was by the reports sent to Amt-IV RSHA, is that correct? any other authority. to Amt IV?

A I don't think so. It is possible that monthly reports were still made, but I can not remember any details any more.

Q In other words, you merely do not remember? and what kind of reports were made. formal report, were they?

A They were reports. Situational Reports, and Activity Reports, which as far as I remember the commander sent in every month.

Q To you?

Q But to you first? reports at their discretion, the two reports could be made simultaneously.

Q You did receive your reports?

A What do you mean? My own? you say it was their privilege to sent out simultaneously. You received yours?

Page 1,244

First, the Chief of Einsatzgruppen-A, and, secondly, that you were BDS or Commander-inchief of force of Security Police and SD, is that right? description of your duties, first, as Chief of Einsatzgruppe-A, secondly, as Commander-in-Chief of Security Police and SD?

instructions Heydrich gave me, and depended on the position in which Einsatzgruppe-A was

Q That was the position of Einsatzgruppe-A?

A What the position was? The position of Einsatzgruppe A was, as stated yesterday, that there were the three commandants, I-A at Krasnogwardeisk, and commander I-A was part of the roar army area in Estonia, and had to deal with those areas which overlapped the civilian administration; the Commander Krasnogwardeisk was working in the territory of the 18th army, and the commander of Loknia was near the front with the 16th Army. existed? dissolved before my time, or were subdivided before my time. I don't know exactly whether the Kommando of Loknia consisted only of Kommando-II or only part of this, and whether a new subdivision were added. All this happened before my time. I only know that during my time One-A, Krasnowardeisk and Loknia were talked about and written about.

Q Let's get on to the BDS. When Heydrich assigned you to Einsatzgruppe-A you stated it was no longer active as an Einsatzgruppe, is that correct? the beginning, were no longer dealt with, because the Kommando Loknia was part of the troops, and Kommando Krasnowardeisk dealt with part of army duties, that is espionage, counter intelligence, part of them general security duties. These were the original tasks which had been assigned to the Einsatzgruppe.

against your expressed wishes, did Heydrich insist upon naming you the Chief of Einsatzgruppe-A?

A Why he insisted on it? Or rather, why he didn't comply with my request to send somebody else there in my place. I don't know exactly why. He told me at the moment he didn't have any one at his disposal for this.

Q My question is, not why he didn't appoint some one else. You have stated that, at least in a sense, this was a case of temporary command. You had nothing to do. You had no Kommando under Einsatzgruppe-A?

A I understand you now. I said yesterday that the group staff in Krasnowardeisk, that is, the group staff of Einsatzgruppe-I-A were almost one unit with Kommando Krasnogwardeisk, because no other task had been assigned to the kommando in such a way, that the existence of special groups or groupstaff was no longer justified; they had not really been dissolved but they had become a unit. kommando still active as you were appointed commander? stated that there is a possibility that executions of Jews took place, is that correct? as in that territory there were no Jews.

Q Then let's broaden the question to include your task of the troops under your command as BDS-Ostland? Were there any executions that took place during your period of command as chief of Einsatzgruppe-A or BDS Ostland?

Q First, was Estonia under your command? ambiguous position, in as far as first, there was Sonderkommando-A which came under the commander in the rear of the territory in Verra, and, also under the commander of the Security Police and SD, and again belonged to the general district of Estonia, therefore, there was an overlapping of the competency there.

Q Couldn't that be simplied by saying that although they could receive orders from others, they also received orders from you, and in turn had to report all happenings within their areas to you?

A Not every event had to be reported to me. In many cases it might have happened, that only the military office was informed, or only a civilian office was informed. There is no guarantee that I heard about every event. the commanding officer of action of troops under him? that this always happened, because there was a possibility that the reports were sent to Berlin immediately. The commander had special authority to report independently from his superior.

Q: Previously you sadi that they must send reports and they had the right to make the simultaneously with a direct report to Berlin, and send a cive-copy to you?

A: They could have sent this to me, yes.

Q: Was Latvia also under your command?

A: Latvia was under the commander of Latvia.

Q: Was there a commander of Security Police there?

A: A commander of Security Police and the SD.

Q: Weren't you the commander-in-Chief of Security Police and SD?

A: Yes, I was the commander-in-chief.

Q: Therefore, these two as were subordinated to you?

A: With the modification I made yesterday.

Q: Which was?

A: That is an individual general district, as independently administrated, it was the general-commissar who was the responsible man. Under him was the SS and Police Leader, and order him the commander of Security Police and SD. This results in an subordination system which can make it possible that somebody might be omitted.

Q: You were the BDS Ostland?

A: Yes.

Q: These troops then of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and White Ruthenia were KDS for that particular countries?

A: As commanders of the security police, yes.

Q: Therefore, they were subordinate to you, is not that correct?

A: With the limitations I have mentioned.

Q: Did they not report to you?

A: They did send reports to me, but I have no guarantee that I got all of the reports.

Q: There is in the course of events a good, chance that you got most if not all?

A: I didn't know that.

Q: Was that not the custom to forward the reports to you?

A: I have explained repeatedly that the commanders had the right to give any reports to the RSHA, the Reich Ministry Security Office, and then to the Einsatzgruppe-commander; the scheme was quite different here, there was a different possibility of injustice for the RSHA and this could result in entirely different channels of command.

Q: But perhaps the channels were devious and many; but you were in one of the channels, were you not?

A: Yes, I belonged to it.

Q: You were in a commanding position?

A: I must repeat again and again - in a limited position as commander resulting from the special situation in this territory.

Q: Let's make it very clear then. You could issue orders, could you not?

A: Yes, I could issue orders.

Q: They owed you the duty of rendering reports and carrying out your orders, is that right?

A: If I had passed on this Heydrich Order at that moment, I would have given an order, of course, and would have requested that reports be sent to me; and would have waited until it was reported to me that this order had been carried out.

Q: I am going to show you one of the many reports received from the occupied zone of Russia. You have stated now that White Ruthenia, Lithuania, Estonia and Lativia were under your command, is not that correct?

A: I repeat; in the form I stated.

Q: I shall repeat, you could issue orders to the KDS, and these armies with the full expectation they would be carried out, is that correct?

A: Orders could be given by me, as well as by the commissar-general, and, also by the local Police and SS Leader; therefore, there were many possibilities of issuing orders, part of those orders could be given from the Reich Ministry Security Office, and also from the Higher Police and SS Leader, who would always do this immediately.

Q: Didn't the Higher SS and Police Leader customarly, except in the case of an emergency, issue final reports or rather orders to you for your subordinates?

A: Please repeat that.

Q: Was it not a custom, except in cases of rare emergencies, for the Higher SS and Police Leader to issue order to your subordinates through you?

A: During the time when I was there, I cannot remember any specific case. It might have been possible.

Q: Thank you. Now I want to point out a report I have here, and it would seem to the eye that there are clear marks of demarcation that is showing an expressed chain of command, and I want your comment upon it? (hands photostat to the witness)

A: Do you mean this page here? Do you mean this page here?

Q: That is right (Counsel is at the witness's box). I also would like to show the court what I mean and I point out what appears as a line of demarcation.

THE PRESIDENT: You want to do something for the purpose of the record -- you had better talk into the microphone, Mr. Clancy.

MR. CLANCY: I want to show the Tribunal the line of demarcation which would seem to note a definite chain of command.

It will be noted -

THE PRESIDENT: You are not getting that?

THE INTERPRETER: No, sir, I cannot hear.

MR. CLANCY: I wish to point one to the Tribunal the lines of demarcation which are outlined in the document, and which appears after each division and sub division, namely under Speduln there appear three dashes separating him from Brigadefuehrer Jost. This is identified under him with the commanders of the counries of Estonia, Latvia Lithuania and White Ruthenia.

THE PRESIDENT: Has this document been translated and will it be introduced as an exhibit?

MR. GLANCY: It has been translated, Your Honor. It is being distributed, and I am offering this copy for the archives of the Court.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. GLANCY: It is Document NO-5156 and will be offered now as Prosecution's Exhibit 178.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, this might be a good point at which to suspend for the morning recess.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you sir.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now be in recess.

( A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, before you begin your cross-examination the Tribunal will announce that we will recess today at 12:15 instead of 12:30, and then reconvene at 2:15. You may proceed. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Defendant Jost, there are a few points I would like to go over with you again in order to clarify some of the statements you have made. You have stated that on the 29th of March, 1942, you became fully aware of the Hitler order which meant the killing of defenseless people, is that correct?

A. May I first say something about a document which was previously submitted?

Q. Just a moment. If you please, I will ask you the questions in a very specific way, and I would appreciate it if you would speak up and answer the questions briefly and concisely and to the point. We will return to the document where you left off, and at that time you will be able to give as full an explanation as you care to make. Now, I ask you again, is it correct that on the 29th of March, 1942, you became aware of the Hitler order to kill defenseless people?

A. At the latest, at that day, yes.

Q. Specifically, who told you about this order?

A. I already said the former adjutant of my predecessor Stahlecker told me about the existence of this order, without being able to show it to me in a written form because it did not exist in a written form.

Q. And he gave it to you also as an order for you to carry out, is that correct?

A. No, he could not do that as an adjutant, of course.

Q. You mean he just passed the order on in a conversational way and said, "Here, you are arriving as commander of a unit, let me tell you about this order just for conversation, not for you to carry it out," is that what you are trying to imply?

A. No, An adjutant does not have the power to tell me to carry out an order.

Q. But he was passing on an order from Hitler. Was he telling you about it saving, "This is a Hitler order," just so you would be aware of it in a conversational way, or so you would know what your duties were to be?

A. He merely informed me about it upon my request to give me the Einsatzkommando orders, which he spoke about. He did not show it to me in a written form. It was made known to the Einsatzgruppe chief before an assignment was given to him.

Q. I realize it was met in a written form, but when an adjutant tells you that Hitler has ordered what defenseless women and children will be shot, don't you interpret that as telling you that you are to continue to carry out that order?

A. I already said that an adjutant does not have the possibility of telling a superior to carry out an order.

Q. What did you do immediately upon hearing this order?

A. I called up Berlin and tried to get in touch which Heydrich.

Q. Did you get in touch with Heydrich?

A. No, he was not there; he was on the road.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. About two days later I decided to go to Berlin In order to clarify the situation, and at that moment Heydrich, by superior, arrived in person.

Q. Why did you want to clarify the situation, was it because you were not clear as to exactly who was to be killed or was it you didn't believe that Hitler had given such an order? Why was it that you decided to call Heydrich or to go to Berlin?

A. In order to try, to have my assignment revoked.

Q. You have heard the Defendants Ohlendorf and Neumann testify from the stand that it would have been impossible or cut of the question to try to have this order revoked, have you not?

correct? the question to raise such a matter with anybody in Berlin. A Hitler order was not to be questioned. Now you tell us you did go back to question that order. How do you reconcile that with, the statements made by Ohlendorf and Naumann?

A These are two different matters. I wanted my position to be revoked. About the order, I asked Heydrich whether it could not be revoked for the Reich Commissariat, for there were no Jews; despite the existence of the order and despite the fact that the territory was under the domination of the Germans there were Jews and so I asked them whether this order could not be revoked for that area. order, is that correct? Berlin? be revoked for this area.

Q Just a content. We are back in Berlin. You said you went back to Berlin when you heard about the order in order to try to have it changed or to have it changed insofar as it affected you. Now I ask you just to clarify that statement, did you or did you net try to have the order revoked while you were in Berlin?

A I was not in Berlin at all. I wanted to go to Berlin, but then Heydrich case to Riga and in Riga the conversation took place. The trip to Berlin never took place, because Heydrich arrived in Riga on surprise.

QWell, when Heydrich arrived in Riga -- Let me say it this way: When you got to Riga, you tried to call Heydrich by telephone and he was not there.

A few days later he arrived in Riga at which time you tried to get him to revoke the order, is that correct?

A I asked him whether it wasn't possible to have this order revoked for the Eastern Territories.

Q Why did you do that? carried out on the basis of this order that the reasoning Jews be killed. be carried out when it was an order involving the killing of defenseless people, is that correct?

A May I have the question repeated.?

Q The question is: Since you told Heydrich that you didn't want the order to be carried out, to have it revoked at least for your area, didn't you then, in effect, tell him that a Hitler Order was wrong and should not be carried out?

A No, I did not tell him that. I merely asked him whether the order could not be revoked.

Q I am asking you why did you do that? Did you think the Hitler Order was wrong to kill defenseless people or did you think it was too difficult to carry out, or did you think now you should use those people as laborers? What was the motive behind your trying to have a Hitler Order revoked? misfortune.

Q What do you mean by misfortune? Do you think it was wrong to carry out this order? Did you think it was not necessary for the security of the Reich? immeasurable misfortune for the victims, that that will explain matters, to be killed, but Hitler considered it necessary for the security of the Reich and Ohlendorf and Neumann have explained that it was necessary to kill children, because the future security of the Reich would be endangered.

Therefore, it was correct to have such an order and to carry out such an order. Do you agree with that reasoning? Ohlendorf's reasons. I personally had the feeling of what had happened or what could happen - and this feeling overwhelmed me.

Q You are not answering the question. You are an attorney, are you not?

Q Well, please answer the question. Do you agree with the reasoning that defenseless people, Jews, particularly, should be shot or should have been shot to assure the security of the Reich? existing could be carried out humanly. The order exited and it was binding to everyone, with all the consequences of such an order of the Chief of State. Thinking about the details whatever it was necessary, etc., I don't think that one could make this analysis in detail in such a spiritual state of mind. in such a spiritual state of mind you stated you objected to this order. You went to Heydrich and you said you wanted to have the order revoked. You must have thought about the order. I just want to know what was in your mind, for what reasons you wanted to have it revoked. Did you think the order was correct? Did you think it was too difficult to carry out? Did you think it was wrong? What did you have in mind when you went to Heydrich to revoke the order?

Q How, just a moment. You say, then, that you thought the Hitler order was a wrong order, is that correct?

A It was not right. no, I did not consider it as right, I could not bring myself to think it was right.

the order was wrong? it, you did not think it was correct, which was the same thing. Did you mention this to Heydrich? did not exist to have the order revoked for the Eastland; and the second sentence, which contained my personal opinion. He had known me for eight years and I thought I had to tell him that I could not imagine how I was to carry out such types of measures. That is the content of my explanation in two sentences.

A The first sentence shows that I objected to this order. Otherwise, I would not have asked for its revocation. The second sentence shows, my personal human attitude. wrong, did you? was sufficient in the situation, for it was a matter of being successful and asking and not the formulation in detail, and one could not think about for hours, years and months previously, but one had to make it right at the moment. morally wrong? when I got it. order, even though it came from Hitler, is that correct?

already. Here it is only the question whether such an order given by the Chief of State is legal. The next question, what can one do against such an order, or how can one express one's opinion, or what can one do about such an order for having it revoked; and there is a further question whether one can carry it out, for there are many things in this world which are absolutely legal, which are terrible in carrying them out, but that doesn't change the legality, but if I am prepared to say other things which are not pleasant either, so, for instance, the Potsdam Agreement is absolutely legal there can be no doubt about it ....

Q I don't like to interrupt, but, perhaps, will you just state your point? What is the point you are trying to make with your answer? of State.

Q I didn't raise the question of legality at all. I asked you morality is connected with the fact of whether the order was given by the Chief of State and therefore is legal. repulsed by it. I thought I understood you to say earlier that you thought such an order was wrong. Are you now saying that you thought it was legally wrong? That is why you were repulsed by it, though morally you thought it was correct and necessary? existed and was there and I thought it impossible of execution and as I expressed it yesterday, I thought there were enough people who would do something against this order, and see that it was revoked.

Q Why was it impossible of execution? Some of the other defendants have explained how they executed the order. Why do you say it was impossible of execution?

certain groups, I was not able to pass on this order. I just was not in a position to do so.

Q You mean you were too work to carry on and pass on this order?

A If I had been weak and soft, I would have passed it on. I think this needs tremendous strength not to pass this order on.

Q But why didn't you pass the order on? That is the point I am trying to raise. Did you think it was morally wrong and did you think it was physically impossible? What was the reason why you refused to pass or an order from Hitler? the result of the carrying out of the order would be terrible for many thousands of people and that this over whelmed me so much that I just could not pass on the order. If you can imagine such a situation - I don't know whether it can be reconstructed by a third person, at least this was sufficient for me, and I would like to add this: I looked at the problem from a historical point of view and I locked for examples in history where another things the First World War. when Monkey threw out the Armenians for military security and transported then to the Sinai desert and thereby killed 2,000,000 Armenians in a terrible way. This was an extermination like only to say by this example that I looked into this situation from all sorts of views and considered it. because you thought it morally wrong?

A Yes, I have given my statement. It isn't possible today, after 51 years , to give a detailed analysis of the feelings and thoughts. whether it is right or wrong, or whether it was right or wrong to kill defenseless people?

everything to see that the order was revoked. More than that I could not do.

Q Well, you certainly did not consider it correct. Let's pass on.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, just as a matter of chronology, I would like to know when he received the written order. Witness, you learned of the order orally on March 29, 1942. When did you receive the written order?

THE WITNESS: The end of April or beginning of May.

THE PRESIDENT: And between the end of March and the beginning of May on what orders were you operating?

THE WITNESS: I then was not operating at all, but the explanation of Heydrich "that may be we will come to a resettlement" aroused the hope in me that actually a change might he possible. That I was wrong in believing in this hope shook me, very much, because, after all, I did get the order later, for I had not counted on such a possibility.

THE PRESIDENT: You May proceed, Mr. Ferencz. BY MR. FERENCZ: revoked?

A "Perhaps we will come to a resettlement." a Hitler order? manner Heydrich could speak with Hitler about this matter. I did not know what the two men did discuss between each other. I absolutely could not survey that.

Q What did you judge from his answer?

A I beg your pardon?

Q You say he said they would see if they couldn't change the order or have it revoked, is that correct?

A Who said that?

A Heydrich said, "Maybe we come to a resettlement". whom did you receive it from? signed in his own hand.

Q What did, you do at that time?

DR. SCHWARZ (Attorney for the Defendant Jost): Your Honor, pardon me for interrupting, but I would like to call your attention to the fact that the interpreter mistranslated the word "Umsiedlung", as far as I have just been told with "change". I would like to point this out so that there will be no misunderstanding.

THE PRESIDENT: The interpreter express the situation linguistically because the Tribunal, naturally, can't pass upon the suggestion of counsels.

INTERPRETER IDEA: The word used here is literally translated by "resettlement" , so that the defendant may mean that Heydrich said the headquarters could be changed to another location. I can't quite make out what he means. He just used the word, "resettlement".

THE PRESIDENT: Does that satisfy counsel?

DR. SCHWARZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Ferencz. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Then on this point. Heydrich's reply to your objection to the order was that there might be some resettlements, is that what the answer was supposed to have been?

A That's how I understood him."Perhaps we will arrive at a resettlement." by Heydrich telling you that all the Jews were to be executed, is that correct?

executed? correct? is that correct?

Q But it was by Heydrich addressed to you, is that correct?

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

Q. You stated this morning that as chief of Einsatzgruppe A you followed Heydrich's instructions, do you remember that?

A. What?

Q. As chief of Einsatzgruppe A you followed Heydrich's instructions, do you remember that answer?

A. That Heydrich gave me social instructions, yes.

Q. I am asking you -- please answer the question -you stated this morning that as chief of Einsatzgruppe A you followed Heydrich's instructions, is that correct? discussed this morning.

Q. Pardon me for interrupting. Will you answer the question first, and then explain it. I think it will clarify matters. I ask you again, did you say this morning that as chief of Einsatzgruppe A you followed Heydrich's instructions?

A. ...that I say my job as chief of Einsatzgruppe A the way Heydrich had given them to me, with the limitation the way I described it yesterday as well as this morning.

Q. Now, you have stated that the first time you objected to Heydrich he said - "perhaps there can be some resettlement" - and three weeks later you received an order to kill children, and that later on there were some modifications, is that what you are trying to say?

A. That can't be understood the way it came through.

Q. Are you trying to tell us that although the only official reply you received from Heydrich upon protesting the Hitler order was a direct order to you to carry it cut, that later on Heydrich came around and made some special concessions to you and gave you some special instruction, is that correct?

A. I said yesterday, that whether what Heydrich told me was true or was what he meant, or whether it was camouflaged, or whether he told me to make it easier for me to assume my command, that I don't know. But I believe the first. That is why I was the more surprised when a few weeks later an order to me personally actually did arrive; for this order proves that until that time I did not get any orders from him personally to carry out these measures. Otherwise the second order would not have been necessary.

Q. When you got the written Heydrich order did you carry it out?

A. No.

Q. In other words, you did not carry out an order you received from your military superior, is that correct?

A. I did not pass it on.

Q. What was your rank at that time?

A. Brigadier General, and Brigadefurhrer.

Q. What was your rank a year later?

A. The same.

Q. In other words, though you did not carry out an order from your superior, you were not shot, you were not tried, - a year later you had the same rank you had at that time, - Brigadier General in the SS... Correct?

A. If you heard this yesterday, as I described it, it is understandable.

Q. I am more interested in the conclusion as being clearer. Is that the correct conclusion?

A. I did not pass on the order, and after a few days I decided, even if it was hopeless, to go to see Heydrich.

Q. Please, answer the question. Is that a correct conclusion? That you did not pass on or carry our an order from your direct military superior and a year later you still had the same rank of Brigadier General in the SS.

.. Is that correct?

A. Because of the death of Heydrich, nobody came to know that I did not pass on this order, for you can't demand of me today that I should report to Himmler about an order which I did not passion. That would have been a little too much.

Q. Your answer there is yes, with the explanation you have given. Is that correct? that you did not pass on the order, you did not carry out the orders of your military superior, yet a year later you were still a Brigadier General in the SS?

A. I did not pass it on, and I was still a Brigadier General a year later, yes.

Q. Did you receive any decorations in that year, in between?

A. Between -

Q. Between April 1942 and April 1943?

A. In April 1942 I got the War Merit Cross, First Class. That had been applied for a long time ago, and had nothing to do with the activity in the East - for such decorations don't arrive at the moment they are applied for. It takes months or years. Otherwise, I did not get any kind of decoration.

Q. Let me make my point clearer. You have stated or implied that thereason you were still a Brigadier General in the SS a year after having refused to comply with this order, and not complying with it, - the reason you were able to do that was because Heydrich was killed and nobody else knew that you were violating a Hitler order. But I am asking you, isn't it a fact that every SS man of any rank of importance knew in April 1942 that there was a general order to kill all Jewish children?

A. At that time, and later, not every SS man knew that.

Q. Did almost everybody know it?

A. I did not talk to the many thousands of SS leaders.

Q. I realize that. I realize that. And you understand my question.

A. The SS leaders who were assigned in the East probably would have known about it. Whether they knew the order in its wording and in its details, I don't know.

Q. In other words, most of the SS people, or a great many of them in the East, know that there was a general order existing to kill all Jewish children, so that if you did not carry out that order, someone besides Heydrich would have known that you were violating the order. Isn't that correct?

A. If no one knows the special order, and no other SS leader or any other person can than draw any conclusion against me.

Q. Is there any difference between a special order to kill children below 16, and a general order to kill Jewish children or all Jews? Or, wasn't the special order part of the greater order, the broader order, and if you didn't carry out even the part, it would have Green more apparent?

A. I said yesterday that this order, of course, was a result of the general Fuehrer Order; yes, that's true. For economic reasons, or for reasons of labor allocation, it provided for a limitation just at those ages - which was the special tragedy of the situation.

Q. My question is this. Please direct your attention to it, and your answer to it. You stated that it was generally known among the SS that there was an order from Hitler to kill all Jews.

You stated that you did not carry out your special order to kill all Jewish children up to 16. My question is: Would it not have been apparent from those two orders, and the fact that you didn't carry out the special order, that you were disobeying the orders of your superiors? Yes or no? Answer the question, please!

A. I must ask you to have it repeated, please, it was too long.

Q. For a lawyer you are very difficult to under stand questions. I repeat the short part. Would it not have been apparent to all SS officers when you did not kill Jewish children, that you were violating your orders?

A. No, that may not have been apparent.

Q. How do you explain that, that it would not have been apparent?

A. I just said that at the time of my arrival in this area there were some Jews still living there, who had not been killed even though they had been under German domination for 9 months. So that if there is no solution of this order or a complete carrying out of the order, would not be very conspicuous at the moment because in order to provide labor one had not completely carried out the order. Otherwise it would have had to have been carried out by that time, In 9 months it could have been carried out.

Q. What happened to all the Jewish children in your area?

A. They remained where they were.

Q. And nobody knew that you were not carrying out Hitler's order?

A. Outside of those two above mentioned people, no one knew that. They had read the order.

MR. FERENCZ: I think this would be a good time to recess, your Honors.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Just to recapitulate what Mr. Ferenz has been putting to you... It was generally known by SS leaders in that area that an order existed that all Jews were to be liquidated. You did not execute that order either before you received the written order with this limitation, or after. What Mr. Ferencz has been endeavoring to get from you is a crystalline answer - clear and specific - as to whether it did not become more obvious to those other SS leaders in your area, that you were flat-footedly refusing to obey an order which came down from the Fuehrer himself. Now just answer that question directly. Was it generally known?

A. At least, it was known to the members of my agency

Q. And it could be apparent to all the other SS leaders in that area?

A. I don't know.

Q. And yet nothing happened to you?

A. Through the death of Heydrich -

Q. Yes, we know that.

THE PRESIDENT: We will recess now until two-fifteen.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1415 hours.)

(The hearing reconvened at 1415 hours, 23 October 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued) BY MR. FERENCZ: had received an order to kill children low of the age of sixteen and people above the age of thirty-two, that you had refused to carry out this order, and retained your grade, at least for a year, as BrigadierGeneral in the SS. I would now like to move to your activity as commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe A. You were the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe A from the 29th of March until the 2nd of September, 1942, is that correct? that time?

A In any case there can't have been many.

Q Can you give us an approximation?

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, please try to get a little closer to the microphone and speak into it. number of dead during that time was very small, it must have been a very small number. BY MR. FERENCZ: command during the time you were in command, is that correct?

Q I am not asking for details. You were the commanding officer. I am asking you if units under your command killed some people while you were in command?

Q You refuse then to answer the question?

THE PRESIDENT: Witness -

THE PRESIDENT: You must be a little more direct in your answers. Now, you just can't avoid a question like that with a shrug of the shoulders. Now, please try to answer the question of the Prosecution, because these questions are relative. Put the question again.

THE WITNESS: Yes, yes. BY MR. FERENCZ: command while you were in command? already explained during my examination that there could only have been small numbers. All that concerned me was that the order given to me was kept back by me as far as possible.

Q Why do you presume that such killings took place? owing to some situation there might have been the possibility that executions did occur. There might have been partisans; there might have been some Communist activist, or several of them, so that they had to act on the spot. killed by units under your command?

AAt the moment I cannot remember that. Certainly I do not remember any reports about mass executions during my time. individuals or small groups of individuals?

A I cannot definitely remember. That is impossible. For example, the one report that was discussed yesterday, the report where 22 died in Kauen and some 20 died somewhere else, I have read that, but I cannot remember now since I did not read the reports so carefully at the time.

That I would remember that now. ment Book II-A. page 128.

A I don't know what number it has. I can only talk about the contents. shot on 7 April 1942, because of Communist activities and connection with partisan groups.

Q You were in command on 7 April 1942, were you not? given a detailed explanation about this at the request of the President, yesterday. persons, among them fourteen Jews who had spread Communist propaganda were also shot in Kauen. That makes 44 people shot during the time you were in command for Communist activities and Communist propaganda. Can you tell the Tribunal what your reaction was when you received such reports? dangerous and therefore mass executions had to be carried out or whether measures had to be taken in individual cases. I personally was under the pressure of mass executions which were threatened. wouldn't cause any reaction on your part, is that what you are trying to say? that there must be a difference whether executions are carried out owing to certain facts as they are reported in this report or whether it means the shooting of tens of thousands of people. There is some difference, isn't there?

Q Of course there is a difference. I would like to know from you what procedure was used to find out that these people were guilty of having spread Communist propaganda. You, as commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe A, must have had a certain responsibility to see that people were not innocently killed.

A That was not the task of the commander. I have already explained that yesterday, but the commander acted independently and on his own responsibility. That is, he neither had to find out the details about each order nor did he have to ask for permission. He was alone responsible, owing to the orders given to him and the position he had been given. to Einsatzgruppe A were independent and could act independently, and you as commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe A, and the highest ranking officer, had no responsibility for what they did and no duty to act?

Q Is that correct? rences in the territory of the command district of Lithuania. Secondly concerning my executive power was limited owing to orders from Heydrich and I would never have assumed more responsibility then Heydrich had given to me.

Q Now, you have made two points. One is that these units were not units of Einsatzgruppe A; they just happened to be somewhere in the area. Please explain to the Court why it is that these reports consistantly list Einsatzgruppe A, first and underneath Einsatzgruppe A certain sub-units, showing on the face of the report that they are part of Einsatzgruppe A. different territories and therefore two districs of competency. First of all we are concerned with Einsatzgruppe A, and secondly with the civilian administration of the Reich Commissariat, Eastland, where the commanders were appointed as regular authorities.

There are two different territories therefore. very misleading because they just show Einsatzgruppe A and the units under Einsatzgruppe A. Can you explain why the reports were written in such a misleading fashion? know. Of course, the reports were compiled in Berlin. I have already explained in a document yesterday how in the list of agencies the commanders of the agencies were mentioned, and that the Einsatzgruppe was a separate agency. The same is shown in the document which was submitted this morning. There it is also revealed that there is a Commandat and there is somebody who has the power, but the document does not say that the local commanders, the SS and Police Leaders, existed. It does not say that the General Commissars were also in this list. Therefore there is no proof at the full organization but only a listing of the actual agencies. and you say you don't know why the reports in Berlin were written in such a misleading fashion, is that correct?

things down were not very exact, but it does not make any difference, the differences and the different forms did in fact exist. of Einsatzgruppe A and second as B.D.S. or commander in chief of the Security Police and the SD for Ostland or the East, is that correct?

Q The answer is yes, is it not?

Q Now, as B.D.S. or commander in chief of the Security Police and SD, were there other units, K.D.S. or commanders of the Security Police and the SD, who were subordinate to you as commander in chief? Administration, din not exist. There were no other units which belonged to this territory. There were other SS units and other police units, but they had nothing to do with me.

Q Your reports seem to be very clear. You say they are oversimplified, but they show, and you were shown this morning the photostat of one document mentioning you as Commander in Chief of the Security Police and the SD for Ostland or the East, and under you in the same section listing the commanders of the Security Police and the SD for Estonia, Latvia, White Ruthenia. It would appear from the face of these reports that these are all subunits of your high command, is that correct? previously that the organization of the SS and Police Leaders and this General Commissar who was my superior were not listed in this list. as in the case of the Einsatzgruppe where they listed kommandos under you falsely, in the case of the B.D.S. they have done the same thing and listed the K.D.S.'s under you falsely, is that correct? were mentioned and to list the whole organizational structure again.

After all it was only a communication, who was in charge of a certain command. This is of no great importance. them, as regards Jost; they are not accurate?

A Because they don't describe the entire impression or picture.

Q Then they are wrong as concerns you, is that what you are saying? because it will not give a correct impression of the organization. ing of the B.D.S. or the Commander in Chief of the Security Police and the SD, the B.D.S.s or the Commanders of the Security Police and the SD for Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and White Ruthenia? and the SD.

Q Isn't it true that basically what happened there was that the Senderkommandos and Einsatzkommandos which had been under your command as Einsatzgruppe Leader became K.D.S. or Commanders of the Security Police under you as Commander in Chief of the Security Police? Isn't that basically the change organizationally which took place? it. again?

A I have explained it. I don't know how many more times I have to explain that question.

Q I am afraid it was not quite clear yesterday. Of course, if you refuse to answer the question I will proceed. about it, but I think I was very clear and explicit.

Q Then you refuse to answer it again, is that correct?

Q I asked you, you refuse to answer it again? It is a simple question. Will you please tell me, do you refuse or don't you refuse to answer it again?

THE WITNESS: I ask the President to tell me whether I have to repeat my answer to questions which have already been asked and I have replied to.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) I didn't ask you before whether you wanted to or didn't want to answer the question. I am asking you that now for the first time, do you or don't you want to answer the question?

THE PRESIDENT: Ordinarily we find that witnesses like to talk and our great trouble is in stopping them. They would like to talk forever. It is quite refreshing to find a witness who not only wants to be brief but who even doesn't want to talk at all. Now, the Prosecution has asked you to clarify a certain point. You have stated that you have already clarified it. Then he put another question to you as to whether you decline to clarify again. If you decline, that is within your privilege. So, if you will, please answer the last question put by Mr. Ferencz, whether you now are declining to once more give the explanation which you gave before.

THE WITNESS: May I ask that the question be addressed to me again?

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) I don't mind repeating the question. As I understand the explanation you offer, I ask you is it not true that what happened organizationally was that the units, the Sonderkommandos and Einsatzkommandos, which were under you as Einsatzgruppe Leader, became K. D.S.'s or kommandos of the Security Police and SD under you as Commander in Chief of the Security Police and SD and basically that was the organizational change which took place? into two regions. This had been done months ago. There was the Army territory and the territory under civil administration, and in the Army territory, out of the old Einsatzkommandos, new kommandos were formed, and in the territory under civilian administration a completely new organization was set up which dealt with civilian administration of this territory, and set themselves up accordingly.

These were the command posts for the general districts. This was done without my assistance. This was already so when I came there. Now this went about in detail I don't know, of course, when and how individual people were a ppointed, I don't know. an Einsatzkommando under you became in charge of a K.D.S. or became the K.D.S. under you when you became the B.D.S.?

A No, that is not correct. I have explained that yesterday as well, that only in Estonia a personal union existed between the local commander there and the Kommando I-A. The reason was that here a territory under civilian administration was still operational territory. Therefore two competencies overlapped.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you pardon me, Mr. Ferencz? BY THE PRESIDENT: have, prepared on June 27th of this year. The answer would seem to be in variance to what you have just stated, and I would like to have your clarification on it. Your statement read, "On the whole the duties of a Commander in Chief of the Security Police and SD were the same as those of a Chief of an Einsatzgruppe, and the duties of a Commander of the Security Police and SD (KDS) the same as those of a Chief of a Sonderkommando or Einsatzkommando, respectively."

Q Is this statement correct?

Q Now, please don't tell me about yesterday. I want to know now, this afternoon, is this statement correct.

A The statement is not sufficient. It is not explicit enough.

Q As far as it goes, is it correct? Einsatzgruppen and also for Kommandos were combatting Communists, but that these tasks varied, according to the situation in the Army territory and in the territories under civilian administration they changed and other tasks were, added to these basic tasks which existed from the very beginning and that particularly under civilian administration where the police was a regular authority there was no special unit for a special term of time. These were the tasks of the criminal police and administrative police, the tasks of establishing a district police organization and therefore the organizational picture changed and that that channel of command changed and their responsibility to Berlin changed.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, at least I got further than you do. I got him to talk. BY MR. FERENCZ: picutre. You were Chief of Einsatzgruppe A, and you became commander in chief for the Security Police and SD in the East. Sandberger was head of Sonderkommado Ia and be became commander of the Security Police and SD for Estonia. for Lithuania. became KDS for White Ruthenia, is that a correct organizational picture of people who were under you as Einsatzgruppe A Chief and then weren't there subordinate units with you as the commander in chief of the Security Police?

A No, during my time it was different. During my time, Jager was commander of the Security Police and SD in Lithuania. Whether previously he was in charge of Einsatzkommando III I don't know. I know that he was commander of the Security Police and SD in Lithuania. I also know that Strauch was commander of the Security Police and SD in White Ruthenia, because the kommandos and Einsatzkommandos had disappeared from these territories and had been moved up to the Army territories.

Q Let's take them one at a time. Perhaps you can give us the answer then.

You have already stated that you were the head of Einsatzgruppe A and the BDS, commander of the Security Police. Was it true that Sandberger was at one time commanding officer of Sonderkommando I-A and at some time he was commander of Security Police for Estonia? Einsatzkommando III and he was at one time commander of the Security Police and SD for Lithuania?

A During my time he was commander of Lithuania. Whether he previously was in command of Kommando III, I really don't know. II and he was at one time commander of the Security Police for White Ruthenia? II previously. During my time he was Commander of the Security Police and the SD in White Ruthenia.

Q You don't know whether he was or was not commander of Einsatzkommando II is that correct, or do you want to state that you do know he was not?

yesterday, in Document Book III-A, page 3, Document USSR 41. Here it reports the killing of many people, including children on the 14th of April, 1942, which was during your time, in a letter sent from the Chief of the Security Police and SD in Latvia. You have seen the document listing the Security Police and SD for Latvia under you as commander in chief of the Security Police and SD for the East. Would you please explain again or for the first time, how it is that you deny responsibility for these crimes?

A Shall I give an explanation about the document? I am repeating it. I do not know anything about the action mentioned here; I would have stopped it the same way I did in Krasnogwardeisk, where I stopped them from liquidating insane people. The document itself does not prove who carried out this action. Also it is strange that this document was found in the office of the sender and not in the office of the addressee, because it is addressed to the Registrar Office of the City of Riga and therefore should have been found there.

Q General, on this point you say you can't understand how it is that a letter sent from one office and addressed to another is found in the office from which it is supposedly sent. Isn't it the practice to keep carbon copies? I do not have here, it is supposed to be an original. remained in that office? this is a true document and you are confused by it, and, even if it were true, you don't know anything about those things, is that correct?

in Krasnogwardeisk. Did you know that that was a violation of a Hitler order?

A That I stopped It? In any case I stopped the order given at that time.

Q Tell us exactly how you did that. To whom did you speak? To whom did you give the order not to kill insane persons? fuehrer Dr, Roeder.

Q who was he?

A I beg your pardon?

Q what was his position?

Q What Kommando?

Q Was that an Army Kommando or an Einsatzkommando? What was it?

Q Was it a unit of the Army or a unit of the SS?

A No, it was a unit of the Security Police and SD. That was one of those special units which had been assigned to help the Army. Krasnogwardeisk? that these insane people should be killed because the building was requested as barracks.

Q Who had requested him to do that? Police and SD and tell them to kill people without consulting the highest officer of the Security Police and SD?

A In any case, it occurred as I have described it. Obviously this Army agency thought they had the authority to give an order to that kind of subordinate unit or else they would not have given it. was a unit of the Security Police and the SD and you were Commander in Chief of the Security Police and SD. It must have been a unit subordinated to you, is that correct? was one of these three kommandos which was in the territory of Einsatzkommando A and was active there. Police and SD and override an order of the Army, is that correct? that.

Q I am asking you about your authority. You have explained that the Army gave a unit of the Security Police and SD an order to kill people in Krasnogwardeisk; that you lifted that order and prevented those killings. Does that mean that you had authority over all units of the Security Police and SD, even to the extent of overriding an Army order? to tell this Army agency that I did not want such orders and refused to ask units to carry out such an order. It was up to the Army to tell them, whether they did not like it.

Q You say in any case you took the right. I am asking you, if you had the right by virtue of your position?

A I think it depends on what I said and did in that case; that must be the decisive matter, but in any case, the Army could have insisted on it inspite of me. The Army could have done it on their own as has been done in other cases and I could not have done anything about it and without even informing me about it. All that was possible. That depends on the circumstances.

to kill people without your consent, or over your objection? the Army order,is that correct?

AAm I responsible for that too, that I overrode my authority? I don't understand the question.

THE PRESIDENT: He is not charging you with any responsibility for it. He is merely asking you if you did override the authority of the Army. It is only a question of fact, not a question of responsibility.

THE WITNESS: Yes. complaints about you. Did the Army speak - say that they wanted that building and that you had gone over their order?

A.- I asked that I be told that if this agency insisted on that order, I asked them to inform me in that case. I would complain to the chief of the Army Group; that would have been the next step I would have taken if this Army agency, who was somehow subordinate to the Army had insisted on this. If the Chief of the Army Group had said "My unit was wrong. I revoke this." Everything would have been settled, but that never came about. One can't think of all the possibilities. That was enough for me.

Q.- Well, we'll leave the subject of your overriding the Army in Krasnogwardeisk and turn to something completely different. How many gas vans did the unit under your command have?

A.- I don't know anything about that.

Q.- If it says something in the reports about that, you'd regard it was misleading, wouldn't you?

A.- I don't know what reports are concerned.

Q.- You were the Commandant, the Commanding Officer, Commander in Chief of the Security Police and Security Service in Ostland were you not?

A.- Yes.

Q.- And you held that position on the 15th of June, 1942, is that correct?

A.- Yes.

Q.- You say you do not know anything about gas vans being part of your unit, is that correct? Let me refresh your memory.

A.- Yes.

Q.- I am going to give you a document, which is a photostatic copy of a message concerning gas vans, which state, I read from the English translation found in Document Book I, page 136. The Defense Counsel all have it. It was Prosecution Exhibit 32, Document 501-PS, page 136 of Document Book I. This document , signed by the Commandant of the Security Police and Security Service in Ostland by somebody else for him, which was you, states:

"A transport of jews, which has to be treated in a special way, arrives weekly at the office of the commandant of the Security Police and the Security Service of white Ruthenia."

"The three S-vans, which are there, are not sufficient for that purpose. I request assignment of another S-van (5 tons). At the same time I request the shipment of 20 gas hoses for the three S-vans on hand (2 Diamond, 1 Saurer), since the ones on hand are leaky already." Signed, "For the commandant of the Security Police and the Security Service, Ostland," which was you.

A.- That is the office.

Q.- That was your office, isn't that correct?

A.- That is the office.

Q.- Do you know anything about this?

A.- No, I have never seen this letter.

Q.- This is another illustration then of a report sent out of Berlin, or a document which we have, which is completely misleading and you don't know anything about it.

A.- Because the contents were not submitted, nor was the letter submitted to me.

Q.- Let me refresh your recollection perhaps.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we have affirmation that this is his office?

MR. FERENCZ: He has stated, Your Honor, that this is his office, Commander, or "Commandant," as it is here translated, "Of the Security Police and the Security Service, Ostland." That was your office, was it not?

THE WITNESS: Commander of the Security Police and the SD in the Ostland, yes.

Q.- Now, let me see if I can't refresh your recollection with another one of these misleading documents. I refer to page 137, the next page of Document Book I. Turn the page and there you see another top secret letter addressed to your office, Commandant of the Security Police and Security Service, Ostland, Riga, and here you see the reply to the cable which came from your office, or the letter which came from your office, and they say that the delivery of a 5-ton Saurer can be expected in the middle of next month and further on that 100 meters of hose will be supplied.

Does that remind you or does that bring to your mind

THE PRESIDENT: I don't locate that, Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: It is on page 137.

THE PRESIDENT: Of the English?

MR. FERENCZ: Of the English Document Book I. It is possible that the order of pages has been confused. If Your Honors like, I will come up and find it.

JUDGE DIXON: It's on page 136.

MR. FERENCZ: The pages may have been mised up, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I see now.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz): I am referring now to the reply to the top secret communication requesting additional gas vans and gas hoses and the reply which is addressed to your office during the time that you were in command states that they will deliver the gas vans, plus 100 meters of gas hose and I ask you do you now recall anything about gas vans in units under your command.

A.- The reply mentioned here, even if it has been received, was never shown to me personally or the sending out of a letter and the reply would have been treated by me in the proper manner.

Q.- Now, you are saying that you don't know anything about this, is that correct?

A.- No.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't quite understand the answer, the sending of the letter and the receipt of the reply would have been treated by me as always.

That is not clear to me. What do you mean by that?

THE WITNESS: The letter is not signed by me, and therefore was never submitted to me, because if I had seen it, I am sure that accordingding to what I have said already that I would have taken different steps and if I had received the reply and it would have been shown to me on that occasion I would have taken steps which I could not have done two or three weeks before.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know who it was that signed this letter on your behalf?

THE WITNESS: He did not sign it at my request, but is is the usual thing that the department chiefs as part of their tasks signed, "By order of", or, "At the request of"

THE PRESIDENT: I asked you if you know the person who signed in your behalf.

THE WITNESS: I know the person, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And did he have the authority to order equipment and receive equipment without conferring you, or informing you of the action?

THE WITNESS: He did not got the authority from me, nor did he discuss it with me.

THE PRESIDENT: Did he have the general authority to order equipment without your knowledge?

THE WITNESS: Within the Administration of the department of which he was in charge, he could request such things, which he thought he required for his department. This is one of those things which is not really within his normal sphere of tasks, within his department. because administration means that he had to deal with all those things.

THE PRESIDENT: I am asking you if he had the authority, did he have the authority to order equipment?

yes. ter? has never been discussed. He just assumed that authority. I could not have known anything about this.

Q Then he did this without the authority of anybody? him this authority; at least, I don't know that anybody else authorized him to do this.

Q Did you learn that the van then did arrive? that an answer was received, I have never seen a gas van. received?

A No. I was not told about this, neither by my adjutant, nor by my drivers, nor anyone. BY MR. FERENCZ: pletely misleading in that it would indicate that you were connected with gas vans - in some way, at least - whereas actually you knew nothing about it. Is that correct? That's true, isn't it? inaccurate reports in that they would indicate that you as the commander of the Security Police and SD were somehow connected with the requisitioning or distribution of gas vans - whereas actually you don't know anything about it?

Q Do you know where Salaspils is?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, would you mind suspending now while we take the afternoon recess.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the Prosecution has no questions to the defendant Just.

DR. MAYER: ( for the defendant Steimle): Your Honor, I ask that the Tribunal grant that the defendant Steimle be excused from tomorrow morning's session, so that we can prepare his examination.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Steimle will be excused from attendance in Court tomorrow in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. MAYER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Any re-direct examination?

DR. SCHWARZ: ( for the defendant Jost): Yes, Your Honor. Prosecution referred to Document Book III-A, Document USSR-41, Exhibit 101, page 5 of the German text, page 3 in the English text. I must to the authencity of this document. It looks as if the case of this document it is a re-translation of a Russian document, a Russian document collection. I would like to have the Prosecution submit this document in its original.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, is the original available?

MR. FERENCZ: I don't know, your Honor, if the original is available. Grom the number, USSR-41, I judge to be an exhibit which was introduced before the IMT. I don't know whether our document room has the original or a photostatic copy, certified and signed by the finder of the document.

DR. SCHWARZ: Pardonme, Your Honor. I did not not the translation through the microphone. May I please ask Mr. Ferencz to repeat what he has said?

THE PRESIDENT: He is now looking for the document, or the phtostat of it.

MR. FERENZC: Your Honor, I have a photostat of the document bearing an official Russian seal. The document is in Russian and I don't find any German document the Russian photostat I have before me. However, this, as in all other document, is certified to have been captured German documents, and this was admissible before the International Military Tribunal. It has all the officials Russian seals,as well as I gather, and an International Military Tribunal number. This is the only available to us, and it is the best evidence we have on this point.

THE PRESIDENT: What you have is available to defense counsel for study, is it not?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes Your Honor. It is. This is the same exhibit as was introduced in Court.

THE PRESIDENT: Where are the originals of the documents which were presented before the IMT?

MR. FERENCZ: Those are in the archives of the IMT, but I believe that the document introduced is exactly the same as the one we have here. It is an official Russian report, and that was the document introduced before the IMT, and we have a photostat of that exhibit, exactly the same as it was introduced before the IMT.

THE PRESIDENT: But before the IMT the document itself was introduced. Here you have the photostat.

MR. FERENCZ: I believe, Your Honor, that the document itself that is, the official Russian report itself, was introduced before the IMT. And that may be available, If it is, of course, it is open to defense counsel.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, would it be in this building?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, your Honor, it would be in this building.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, will you assist Dr. Schwarz in attempting to locate the actual archive in which it may be filed?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor, I know where it would be filed, and we would be glad to give that information to defense counsel.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any other observation?

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I am agreeable to this suggestion, and I would like to reserve the right to raise my objection, and to keep it raised, until I have the possibility of examining the document.

THE PRESIDENT: Your objection, therefore, will be kept in mid-air until such time as you are able to descend to the ground again.

DR. SCHWARZ: Thank you, your Honor. defendant Jost, but may I use this occasion to correct something in the transcript of the 14th of October 1947, the morning session, on page 594 of the German record the following is stated.... In this incident we are concerned with the examination of the defendant Ohlendorf by myself in cross-examination. May I briefly recapitulate the contents.

defendant Jost and this chief Mueller of Office-IV in the RSHA, and Mr. Walton raised an objection against my question stating: "Your Honor, I believe that the Indictment shows that of the time during which Jost was chief of an Einsatzgruppe was already after Mueller had died." The Prosecution, therefore, objected to questions which are concerned with the relationship between Jost and Mueller, since in the sense of the indictment this seemed to be irrelevant and, Your Honor, stated too that, if the time given by the Prosecution is correct, the objection is sustained. At that time I could not determine whether the assumption of the Prosecution that office chief Mueller had died by that time was correct, but in the meantime I found out that Mueller is still alive today. The objection of the Prosecution against my question is thus unfounded. May I ask that this be corrected in the record, sofar as the Prosecution remembers this.

MR. CLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, I am familiar with this. It was a bit of a slip of the tongue on the part of Mr. Walton. I am sure what he wanted to say was that Heydrich was at this time deceased, and that Mueller was alive. Perhaps it could be that Mr. Schwarz could tell us where Mueller is at this time?

DR. SCHWARZ: I unfortunately do not know that. I merely know that Mueller is alive.

THE COURT: The record will show that Heydrick is dead; that Mueller is alive and at large.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, since the questions I wanted to ask Ohlendorf were answered substantially when the objection of the Prosecution was raised, I do not want to waste the Tribunal's time, and, therefore, I shall do without the remaining questions which I intended to ask, after the matter which was important to me has been corrected.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. SCHWARZ: Now, Your Honor, I also would like to request since it has been impossible for me to do this as yet, to have the witnesses at the defendant Jost's disposal called, and I would like to have these witnesses called up into court as soon as possible after they have arrived I have called a number of witnesses; a number of these witnesses, their addresses not being available, will not appear, but sofar as it will be possible I will get affidavits from the remaining witnesses, and, I merely would like to reserve the right to call those witnesses to the witness stand from whom I can not get affidavits.

I believe I agree with the Tribuanl, if, in the interest of speeding up the proceedings, I see to it that the witnesses be called at about at the same time, and one after the other, and I shall then get in touch with the Prosecution and the Tribunal in this matter when the time comes, in order to set a definite date for the appearances of the witnesses.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. You have a number of things floating in midair, so we will add this one to those passengers.

DR. SCHWARZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Witness, I would like to direct your attention again to your affidavit of July 27th, this year, in which you say you did not give any orders to execute Jews and so on. June 27th, 1947, when you say: "I instructed my kommando leaders not to carry out any executions." You first learned of this order on March 29 1942. Did you call in your kommando leaders and tell them, "I have learned of an order with which I do not agree, and I am telling you now not to execute this order." Is that what you did? matter with him, and told him "I hoped that we shall be able to have this order revoked in the Eastland. For the moment please refrain from such measure in this area." In a similar manner I talked to the commander in Latvia, and then I spoke to the commander in Estonia. One after the other.

with which you did not agree, and that they should suspend any execution of that order until you contacted them again? known to me. I was new, and at that time, as I have already stated, there was a certain stoppage for reasons of labor allocations, they had not carried out the fuehrer order completely. Now I want to see to it that the order was stopped completely, because I was hoping by these words of Heydrich about the re-settlement, that the order would be revoked for the Eastland.

Q Yes. Did you tell these leaders not to talk about what you had stated to them?

A No, I didn't. Himmler, or your commanding officer, and as the result of that report could you have been subject immediately to a courtmartial?

A It could have been possible, if one of these people didn't agree with me, that he saw sabotage in my request, bur from the manner of my description I don't think that one of these leaders intended to denounce me.

Q And they didn't denounce you?

Q Yes. So then it was possible in the German Armed Forces to refuse to obey an order and not be shot immediately? any such refusal would become known to a superior, then the consequences were evident. this importance, one which came from the Fuehrer himself; it was possible to talk about it over an extended area, which included three countries, and, yet, the refusal to obey the order not come to the attention of the originator of the order, and those who passed it along?

Q But this happened in your case? Order existed, and inspite of the existence of the Fuehrer order, the order was not completely carried out, and even though it was for reasons of labor allocation, still such reason existed; that was the special situation in which I was. compelled others to act didn't compel you to act?

Q No, I just asked you a simple question. A very vital order and an important order, which compelled all others to act didn't compel you to act in this particular case? when the complete Heydrich order arrived, then a new situation arose. May, when you received a written order executions were suspended because of your attitude, and what you had told the kommando leaders under you? Fuehrer Order was in general not executed completely. I had no influence over this fact. This happened before my appearance there. This explained the fact which was described before, why other SS leaders just didn't say, why didn't you shoot everybody here, for this was possible this had nothing to do with my person. It was not very conspicuous that the Jews, who had been left there for the past six or eight months, and continued to live, this was not conspicuous. April?

Q What kind of a safe did you have?

Q Did,you carry it with you as you travelled? You were a mobie outfit, you moved around?

A No, no, this was a formal established agency. Riga was a permanent agency. It was stationary there.

Q I don't mean this was a "vest-pocedt" safe which you could carry on your person? you had received the written order? mentioned Refierungsrat, otherwise, I did not talk about this order, for I had decided for the time being to speak to Heydrich.

Q Yes. Now you saw Heydrich on May 22nd?

Q Then for three weeks this order went unexecuted?

Q And no one raised any objection?

Q It didn't come to the attention of any one that you had received this very vital order and you had refused to act on it? from those two above mentioned people.

Q Only Heydrich personally?

A Yes, who else could have known about it?

Q Well, the chain of command would have included somebody else?

Q Heydrich personally sent you this order. He wrote this order with his own hand, and sent it to you. He didn't send it through an adjutant, or through some intermediary office? personally, and was sent to me by Heydrich's courier, together with other mail. of the highest ranking officers in the Reich, and you paid no attention to it - - you did not execute it?

Q Well, you did not execute the order?

A I didn't pass it on because I reported to him.

Q You reported to him sometime - - on May 22nd?

Q Yes, for three weeks you didn't execute the order?

A That is right, I didn't pass it on, and I didn't execute it.

Q Then you conversed with Heydrich?

Q And then fortunately for you, from what you told us, he was killed?

A Yes, right. Not only for me. *---*u for not executing the order? *---*lat I would be recalled, and probably, if I understand it correctly, I *---*ould have been transferred to the troops. That would have been the end *---*f that, outside of the fact that something else might have happened, but *---*nfortunately for me, the assassination did come in.

Q Yes. And so far this order still went unexecuted, sofar as you *---*were concerned?

Q Yes. Then on August 22, or between August 22nd and the 26th you spoke to Himmler? August, you still kept this order locked up in your safe? Police officials above you?

Q Yes, continued to exist?

Q Yes. How long have you been a soldier. How long were you a soldier up to this time?

Q What? German Arm forces is implicit obedience? violate the first principles of a soldier, which is obedienoe? about five months, you did not obey an order which was issued to you by a superior officer?

Q And nothing happened to you? You were not even courtmartialed?

THE PRESIDENT: Have I been talking all this time without speaking with the microphone open.

THE INTERPRETER: No, but the microphone seems to be out of order.

THE PRESIDENT: I hope I have not been talking to myself?

THE INTERPRETER: No, sir, I got everything. But what was your last remark, I didn't get that?

THE PRESIDENT: I said I hope I have not been talking to myself during all of this time. you had put to naught this cardinal, essential, revered principle of the German Armed forces, that obedience is the first law of a soldier?

A I didn't pass on the order, and, therefore, I violated obedience, yes, that is right.

Q Ve ry well. In yyour testimony this afternoon you referred to a precedent for an extermination of a race by recalling the Armenian massacres. I didn't quite couch the purposes of that allusion. Did you mean that if Turkey could do it, that Germany could do it. Is that what you meant by that comparison? order to determine whether similar examples had happened, and all these statements always lead back to the fact that at other times this was done, if you look at the history of the middle ages, you will find the same thing, that is why I thought of this. recollection, and, therefore, justified the order? the Hitler-Himmler-Heydrich order to execute all Jews? time ago, I never understood this episode, and it seems to me it was a terrible tragedy, which hit the little people of Armenia who were defenseless. you historically recalled the Armenian massacre, that you in your own mind condemned the action of those who had exterminated the Armenians?

not understand it. and contrary to the laws of civilization? modern history.

Q They were both wrong, the Armenian massacre?

Q And this Heydrich massacre?

Q The Himmler-Heydrich massacre. Very well. How many vehicles - - first, let me ask you, how many men were in your Einsatzgruppe? men, and in the area of the Kommando there were three-hundred men, and, altogether, in the entire area there were somewhat about - - more than five-hundred people, of the German personnel.

Q Yes. How many vehicles did you have? merely according to what the different agencies needed, and I could only estimate it very roughly.

Q Let's have your rough estimate? hundred and ten. I simply don't know.

Q Yes. Well, could it not have been correct to say more than onehundred? today. you to have much more than one-hundred vehicles?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q. (By the President) So that if any unusual equipment came into your Einsatzgruppe it would be likely for you to notice this unusual equipment, considering that you had a limited number of vehicles?

A. Yes, I would notice that.

Q. How was it that you didn't notice this murder van which came, this gas van?

A. I don't even know whether it ever arrived. I didn't see it and no one ever told me about it.

Q. You read the correspondence about the gas van, did you not?

A. No, I did not see it.

Q. You read it here today?

A. Yes, here I saw it.

Q. You do not doubt the authenticity of those letters, do you?

A. I didn't examine them that carefully.

THE PRESIDENT: Can you quickly show him those letters again?

THE WITNESS: Looking at the photostat one can see no proof of the fact that it is not authentic, at least I can't see anything.

Q. (By the President) Now, the letter requesting the additional gas van states that your Einsatzgruppe already has three vans, but they are not sufficient for the purpose intended, and the purpose is quite obvious. A request is madefor another van, and the letter of June 22nd says that this 5 - ton van will arrive the middle of the following month, which would be in July while you were still the commander of Einsatzgruppe A. Now, are we to understand that although your Einsatzgruppe had four gas vans, vans which were equipped to kill people by a very ingenious device, although you had this most extraordinary equipment, that yet it did not come to your attention?

A. In any case I did not see the letter. That is an absolute fact. I just didn't see it.

Q. Let's forget about the letters. I am speaking now of the vans . These vans were especially equipped to treat Jews in a special way.

The original letter speaks of a transport of Jews arriving weekly. Now, that isn't an incident which could be bery easily overlooked, transports of human beings arriving and being gassed to death in certain types of equipment. All this constitutes a series of events which would not be easily over looked or not noticed by the commander of an operation who has his wits about him.

A. Apart from these letters I did not receive any reports that such transports of Jews were brought in. One single time they spoke about Jewish transports from white Ruthenia, but it was said because of the partisan situation no transports could be brought through.

Q. It says,"A transport of Jews, which has to be treated in a special way, arrives weekly at the office of the Commandant of the Security Police and Security Service of White Ruthenia." Here we have this most extraordinary spectacle of a transport of human beings arriving and being systematically fed to gas vans and there being liquidated. Now, this extraordinary situation in no way came to your attention although you were the commanding officer?

A. No, it did not become known to me.

Q. And although then the equipment was increased to four vans and you only had as many as one hundred vehicles, yet you did not know of these four gas vans which were used for the purpose of exterminating human beings, you did not know that?

A. If it was not reported to me and cannot suspect these things, then I cannot know them.

Q. You made inspections from time to time, I take it?

A. Yes, but nothing was said to me about gas vans and nothing was shown to me.

Q. You inspected your equipment from time to time, did you not?

A. No, I didn't inspect vehicles in detail.

Q. What kind of a Major General are you that you were conducting an operation and yet are not familiar with your equipment and its state of repair?

A. If they don't tell me anything about these vans I can't know it; I didn't see them.

Q. Did you inspect your equipment from time to time?

A. The vehicles, if I came to the garage yes, I looked at them.

Q. And if these gas vans had been there you would have observed them if you inspected the equipment, would you not?

A. If they had been there I would have had to see them, yes.

Q. So therefore we come back to the proposition that you questioned these letters.

A. I said I cannot see anything from looking at the photostat that they are not genuine.

Q. Very well. If the letters are genuine then your Einsatzgruppe would have three gas vans and ordered a fourth one, and the communications indicate that the fourth one would be delivered the middle of July.

A. It says in the letter that the gas vans were to go to White Ruthenia. That is, it is to a certain locality and not to the Einsatzgruppe, not even to the place where I was.

Q. Well, but you had command of that area, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Then we will sum it all up by saying this, that although you were an officer in the German Army, and although you had been a soldier for many years, yet you did not inspect your equipment and you were free to ignore orders which came to you from the highestranking officer in your organization.

A. I don't know what is more difficult, to live under this pressure for four months or to say this today. It would be easier not to say it today, and it would have been better for me at the time to act differently and not to make these efforts for months to achieve a different goal. I have said it day before yesterday, that I did not act this Way because my inner feelings forced me to act that way, and the realization of what would befall all these victims , not only the Jews, but that this would have terrible consequences, that something would have to be done against it.

That was my conviction.

Q. You are making a comparison between that period and the stress under which you find yourself today, and do we understand from that comparison that you are wondering now whether it might not have been easier for you to have executed the order and not find yourself in a position here on a witness stand admitting that you refused to obey an order, is that what we are to believe?

A. No.

Q. Then I don't understand why you made the reference to the great difficulty you have been having at the present time.

A. No, I wanted to say that at the time it was terribly difficult to make this attempt to swim against the stream, and that today it is very difficult to describe it in the manner it happened, especially since those people who knew about it and who were there are not to be found today. That is my misfortune. If the people whom I mentioned to my lawyer and who know about this affair were to be found then they can confirm it without any question. I have said that to my Lawyers,they know that for, that was a fact which I could not tell to a hundred people. Only a few could know about it.

Q. Very well.

A. That is why I asked that these witnesses be looked for, and I ask once more to look for them so that these things can be confirmed.

Q. Well, we can't find Reinhardt Heydrich for you but we might be able to locate Mueller.

A. No, I ask for Landgraf and Nyhogen and Jadeke . These are the three men who know about the situation.

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Schwarz, are you ready to proceed?

DR. SCHWARZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have anything further to present in the case of defendant Jost at this time?

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I have no redirect examination to put to the defendant. May I say only what I have already said yesterday that I reserve the right to call the witnesses later on, as soon as they have arrived here.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the defendant Jost will now be taken back to the defendant's dock.

DR. SCHWARZ: May I ask that the defendant Jost be excused from this afternoon's session.

THE PRESIDENT: For what reason?

DR. SCHWARZ: I Would like to discuss with the defendant the affidavits which yet have to be taken.

THE PRESIDENT: For the reasons indicated by defense counsel, the defendant Jost will be excused from attendance in Court this afternoon.

DR. SCHWARZ: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ulmer, are you ready to proceed with the defendant Six?

DR. ULMER: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the defendant Six will be escorted to the witness stand.

FRANZ SIX, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE DIXON: Hold up your right hand and repeat after me: the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. ULMER:

Q. I ask the defendant - what is your name?

A. My name is Franz Alfred Six.

Q. Please give your data.

A. I was born on the 12th of August 1909 in Mannheim. I attended the Gymnasium - High School - and graduated in 1930. From 1930 to 1934 I studied social and policical science, history, at the University of Heidelberg.

Q. Did you only study at Heidelberg?

A. Heidelberg was the German school of Socialogy. I got to know teachers and personalities which impressed me very deeply. They gave me an extensive knowledge in the entire theory of political science and sociology, and above all, they gave me a picture of the modern world state.

Q. Was Heidelberg in this respect of great importance for your future career?

A. Yes; in Heidelberg there was the first Institute for teaching foreign political science.

Q. Please describe this Institute.

A. It was an Institute for comparative political science and sociology. It gave me an interest in the study of political science and to set up a teaching institute, that is to say, the way it had already existed for a long time in the Anglo-Saxon countries.

Q. These interests which were aroused in you in Heidelberg could you make use of them and realize them after your studies?

A. No. It was clear to me that if I wanted to take up a scholastic career I first had to pass the prescribed examination.

Q. What examination did you pass?

A. In the year 1934 I passed my PhD at the University of Heidelberg. In the fall of the same year I took up a teaching position at the University of Koenigsberg, and at the same time I took the press position and publicity directorship in the German Students Association. In the year 1936 I passed degree of Dr. Phil. That is, a higher doctor's degree than the previous one, and got another degree at the University of Koenigsberg. As a result of these examinations, in the year 1936 I became a lecturer, and in the year 1938 I became a professor in the faculty for law and political science, at the University of Koenigsberg. In the year 1939 I was transferred to the University of Berlin.

Q. Didn't you pass an examination in Leipzig?

A. Yes, that was the Venia Legendi.

Q. You said Koenigsberg; you meant Leipzig?

A. Yes.

Q. What professorship did you receive in Berlin...to which professorship were you called?

A. In Berlin I received the chain for foreign political science anf for external politics. I taught general political science, the history of the European powers, the history of world politics, and world states, and history of diplomacy and foreign policies.

Q. Did this mean the realization of your plan made at Heidelberg to extend these political sciences?

A. Yes, in Berlin I was able to realize this.

Q. In how far?

A. In Berlin there were two semi-academic institutes, a University for political science, and the Semi-academic institute for foreign policies. I made them into full academic institutes, and incorporated them as a faculty of political science into the University of Berlin. I was the first Dean of this faculty in Berlin.

Q. And the educational aim of this faculty, - what was it?

A. The educational aim of this institute of foreign politics was the training of a number of highly qualified people for all the private and official agencies of the Reich in foreign countries. This education took place in three branches. A branch for international law, a branch for world economics and foreign trade, and a branch for cultural history and philosophy. Everyone of these branches was connected with the study of a special country and its language. Outside of this educational aim I aimed at the education of Germans who could think internationally, whom we had not yet known how to create since the beginning of the Reich. Above all, this new type of German was to see that Germany was led away from its intellectual isolation and to see to it that the prejudices against Germany were lifted.

Q. You were the Dean?

A. That is right.

Q. And how was your faculty composed?

A. The faculty included the best specialists from the German universities. These experts had been visiting professors for years, or even for decades, at the leading universities of foreign countries. Thus they had knowledge of the international situation. They had formed their own political opinion, and for a great part they had reservations about National Socialism.

Q. Was one of the educational aims of this faculty the training of the diplomatic service?

A. Originally not. The Foreign Office under State Secretary Luther had its own school for the training of diplomats, but it had not proceeded with its plans. For this reason in the year 1942 I was given the task by the Foreign Office to take over the planning and the training of people for the Diplomatic Service. I was to carry out this training within this faculty of international politics.

Q. This was then an additional task for you as a university professor?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you serve in any other capacity in the Foreign Office?

A. Yes, the development for total war made the drafting of many age groups as attaches of the Foreign Service - made that impossible for the duration of the war. The tranining for the diplomatic service, therefore, was postponed for the duration of the war. For this reason I was offered the direction of the cultural political branch. This I directed from 1943 on.

Q. Was it customary that a university professor took over the direction of the cultural branch of the Foreign Office?

A. No, since the establishment of the cultural branch in the Foreign Office in the year 1920, it had become a tradition to take scholars and university professors and make them directors of a cultural branch.

Q. What were the missions of this cultural political branch?

A. The cultural branch had the direction and administration of German cultural organizations in foreign countries, that is to say, of the German schools, of the German scientific institutes, of the German language institutes of the German visiting professors, etc. Outside of that, the whole cultural exchange program under this branch, that is, in the fields of poetry, of science, of the theater, of music, of the fine arts, and of the film. As war missions there was added the translation and dissemination of German writings in foreign countries, especially of the papers and document books.

Q. This, then was a mission which one could only give you, and which you could only assume on the basis of your scholastic capacity?

A. Well, as I have already said, My predecessors were mostly scholars and university professors. The difficult and complicated relations with the scholars in the Reich and in foreign countries made it seem feasible to have scholars as directors of this branch.

Q. What rank did you hold in the Foreign Office?

A. After assuming this cultural political branch I became an Envoy, First Class.

For this purpose I gave up my professorship and continued my lectures as an honorary professor.

Q. That is the some activity as a professor, only you did not have the possibility to be a regular professor because of your official activities, and you were forced to become honorary professor?

A. Yes, the duties were the same, but the official duties changed. This was a normal, a customary prescription in the former German administration system.

Q. How long did you direct the cultural political branch?

A. I directed this branch until the capitulation.

Q. And now your Party dates, place.

A. Member of the Nazi Party in the year 1930. Membership in the Student League of the SA, November 1932. Member of the SD and SS in the year 1935. Chief of office in the RSHA in 1939.

Q. Your personnel file is here.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, it is Document 4807, Prosecution Exhibit 126, Book III-B, page 145 in the German text. I don't know the page number in the English text.

THE PRESIDENT: We have it. 79.

DR. ULMER: Page 79 in the English text.

Q. (By Dr. Ulmer) In this personnel file you are listed as chief of office as your official position.

Q What were you working at in full capacity?

A I was university professor that was my only capacity. As such I was paid and as such I carried out my activities. to you as a General, designated you as a General. Were you a General? Did you have the title of a General?

A No, it was one of the few titles I did not have. I was Honorary Brigadier General, but that is to say, Brigadier General in the General-SS. In the Waffen-SS I was Untersturmfuehrer; I never held a rank of the Police as a General. you had held this rank in the Waffen-SS, or in the Police Service, that you were actually a general in the Police Service? the Police and the Waffen-SS, or something like that.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you mean by "Honorary Brigadier General"? I became Brigadier General in January 1945. This was done in accordance with my promotions to a higher class envoy. That is, to say, my appointment to Brigadier General was honorary.

Q Were you at the time addressed as a General? weren't you so addressed? people in the service of the State to give them ranks in the SS in order to give them equivalent ranks according to heir official civil service ranks. Accordingly, I became a SS-Brigadier General.

Q Well, you were entitled to that designation, were you not?

A Your Honor, I would have to explain it linguistically. The meaning of Brigadier General in German does not mean a General, but in English it is translated as Brigadier General. In order to be a General in Germany it would have to say "Brigadefuehrer und General, this is an Army Brigadier General and SS Brigadier General. would be Brigadier General? rank in the English concept of the word. value in the English language, it would be Brigadier General, would it not? equivalent would be Brigadier General? for in German there is a difference between the rank in the SS and the military rank in the Waffen-SS, or in the Police. For if this were not this way, every State-secretayr, or every official of a ministry who held an honorary rank in the SS would have to have a rank such as major, or general, or something like that, or some other rank, but this was not the case. Did I explain that sufficiently, Your Honor? confusion into my mind in this respect. That you are the first officer that I ever heard ow who was entitled to be called a General, but didn't want to be called a General.

A May I answer this, please?

Q No, I don't think it is necessary?

A This is a very basic question. As an university professor, and as an official in the diplomatic service, I could not very well assume a Police rank, and I didn't think there was adequate connection in the rank and positions. As an university professor, I could hardly call myself General of the Police, I have always refused to do it, and today I am saying that I did so rightly, and for my inner convictions.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, counsel, General or Corporal, let's proceed.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, may I just state in conclusion that as the translation brings about a mistake, perhaps Brigadier-leader would be the translation in the SS rank, and Brigadier General, that is, General Major in German, which is the designation of an equivalent to a uniformed soldier, or a Police officer.

THE PRESIDENT: I assure you that despite the witness's efforts to extricate himself from what he regards as an ignominy, of being a General, that even if the Tribunal were to ascertain him as holding a General rank, we would not impute to him any additional incriminality because he was a General. BY DR ULMER:

Q Why did you join the Nazi Party?

A I was born in an industrial city, and grew up in one. I came from a working class family. From my sixth to twenty-fourth year, I saw most of the social questions, and its root, namely, in my own home, and in my development. I had to earn my living early in my life, when I was still going to school, and then the situations were often so difficult that I had to leave school in order to be able to earn my living, and in order to continue to go to school, and continue my studies at the university, which I could only make possible by hard work and going short. In all these years I did not get any assistance from the State, or any scholarship. But I had no chance that there would be any prospect for that from the State. In view of this unfortunate situation, and my hopeless future, I set my hopes on the Party, which would bring about a justifiable solution of the social question. Many of my generation faced this decision either to become Communists or National Socialist. I became a National Socialist. Less for reasons of the program, but from recognizing the potential power of National Socialism, which promised me to solve the social question not from the class point of view, but from the whole peoples point of view.

But perhaps, that is not a reason that I became a National Socialist when I was twenty years of age, and, for this reason I would like to site two examples which were decisive for me. In my home town, I witnessed the bloodiest class sturggles through the years of 1918 until the year of 1933, that is, for fifteen years workers rose on every First of May, for fifteen years the regular police, or the Reich Militia, came in and put down these revolts with machine guns. I asked myself at that time if the State was still in order; if the request for bread and employment is not by a machine gun and rifle. The second example, I carried on my studies at Heidelberg, for four years on an average of twenty marks a month. I needed elevne marks to live in an attic, and that left me nine marks to live on. Nine marks, that meant thirty pfennigs a day, at ten pfennigs for the lunch in the kitchen for the poor, ten pfennigs for four rolls in the evening, and ten pfennigs for cigarettes, and this I lived through for four years in the midst of Heidelberg Student Romanticism, where the main problems were welfare and donation and then I asked myself, whether society was still healthy, if it finds so much camplacency, and how it can reconcile this complacency with so much distress. The answer which I gave myself was joining the Nazi Party. much the reasons?

in those years did not mean anything, or nothing at all. It was known as a temporary program, and that is how we judged it. I would just like to give a few examples. There was the interpretation of the "Feder" ideology and the interpretation of "Rosenberg" ideology. There was the school of Spain and the school of Greek; there were western ideologies, and eatern ideologies. There were believers in Germanic Divinity, and there were positive Christians -

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, when did you begin your scholastic career at Heidelberg?

Q Your affidavit states"from 1933 until 1934 I studied Social, Political Science, History and Journalism at the University of Heidelberg."

A That is a mistake, Your Honor. It means 1930.

THE PRESIDENT:Yes. Socialist Party?

Q Yes. Now you have given us a heart-rendering tale of eating in a garret for four years, and then you joined the National Socialist Party, but apparently jou joined the Party before ever these trials and tribulations had developed at the University of Heidelberg, where there was so much complacency in the midst of distress; now did you anticipate what you were going to suffer at Heidelberg at the time? worked for two years before I graduated; I saw this and actually experienced it. ing at the University of Heidelberg, you then joined the Party?

lead me to become a Nazi. the University of Heidelberg?

A Yes, that is right? could draw upon while you were at the University?

A I didn't understand what advantage - what profit I could draw from it. that you found yourself that your only resource could be was to join the National Socialist Party. You found that was the only escape that you could find from this distress in which you were?

Q Yes, all right, then you became a Nazi in 1930? titled to have from 1930? could be derived from this political affiliation with a certain Party you could get from 1930. but you have described to us the harrowing experience and your distress at the University of Heidelberg when you already were a fullfledged Nazi? Party that did not help any while you were at the University of Heidelberg?

Q Or did it ever help you?

Q THE PRESIDENT: All right.

BY DR. ULMER: Heidelberg, or in the hope that this Party will keep its promises and realize then out of the entire German distress? and in the year of 1930, one didn't think about that a Party would distribute any advantages. It was a really inner will and hope that there would be an ideal of a community where class struggles would be eliminated, and the advantages of social order would be brought about. and when? the time the Party issued a decree that every member of the Party would have to become a member of the professional organization. Accordingly I became a member of those two organizations.

Q And then in 1935 you also became a member of the SD. Why? and press expert. A University colleague suggested to me to build up a press department in the SS agency. That made the material of the world press available to me which was no longer available in a common way. For this reason I decided to take over this activity as a sideline, and this was in the year of 1935. the SD; what did you know about the SD at the time this offer was made?

A Until the year of 1935 I had no connections with the SD. It was nothing more to me than an agency of the SS, just like many others.

Q You were not then with the SS. Why did you become a member of the SS, was there any connection between them? SS automatically. Merely to mention it, I never made an application to enter the SS. I didn't fill any racial questionnaires either. I was just taken in and then later had to be dismissed from the SA.

Q You were in the SD Main Office from 1935 to '39. What branches did your activity include? and Writing, and from the year of 1937 to 1939, Domestic Department. University? professor and as a sideline I was Department Chief in the SD from '35 to '39.

Q Then in '39 you handed over these activities in the SD. Why? ship with Heydrich. In the year of 1939 I was dismissed from my job.

Q And why did your relationship with Heydrich become worse?

A We had human end political reasons. Human reasons since a purely power political terroristic character like Heydrich could not bear intellectual arguments for any length of time, every co-worker who had his own intellectual opinion sooner or later had to be suspected of being soft and agreeing to compromises, that is intellectually. Heydrich's political attitude was to divide the entire German people into supporters and opponents and therefore disregarded education and personal opinion completely.

A (Continuing) For this reason I had an increasing number of disputes which then led to the bad relationship and finally to my dismissal.

Q And what were the results of this dismissal?

Q Was it possible to be dismissed from the SD? dismissal. Furthermore I was university professor in full capacity and financially independent so that I could permit myself this stop.

Q And Heydrich approved the dismissal, or didn't he? and how an SS Leader can leave the SD.

Q And Why didn't Heydrich approve this dismissal? This was one of the characteristics of Heydrich which has often been described here. No one could be honorably dismissed from his service. Either something was said about him or he just ruined him. September, 1939, on? start completely new office, the office for science and research.

Q What was the name of this institute?

Q What were its missions? questions.

Q What type of research purposes? no modern problems but historical ones in the manner of a historical university institute. It was to undertake cultural history, intellectual history, an intellectual history of foreign countries. The reason why Heydrich founded such an institute during the war can only be seen from his own snobbishness.

He just wanted to have his own office of science which would, so-to-speak, be a decorative office in his RSHA. with them? necessary research workers impossible. Thus there were only a number of publications about the history of liberalism and Free Masonry.

Q Could these research results be used practically? lished in a series of publications. Therefore, they could not be used in the Reich or anywhere else.

Q How many collaborators were there in office VII?

A The Office VII was in charge of 15 referents, experts. In addition there were some translators, some archive workers and liberians and some stenographers. All told there were forty people.

Q And how large were the other offices in comparison? Police Office included 800 people.

Q All others had several hundred? occupied territories? 40 people.

Q How long were you director of this office? from December, 1941, until July, 1942. about? 1940, I was called up.

A My relationship to Heydrich had not improved. Office VII did not seem important to me as far as the war was concerned, but the important thing was for me, that like every other German I believed I had to do my duty as a soldier.

Q How long were you with the Waffen-SS?

A From May, 1940, until April, 1942. actively from May, 1940, to June, 1941.

Q Where were you with the Waffen-SS? battalion for retraining. From September to December I was in the war school, 1940, war academy. From December, 1940, to July, 1941, I was in the Division Reich.

Q And where were you with this Division Reich? the eastern border.

Q What was your position in the Waffen-SS ? kommando.

Q What military rank did you have in the Waffen-SS? so long, was that agreeable to him?

A No, it was not. He tried to call me back several times.

Q And you were still able to remain with the Waffen-SS? all my heart, and that I wanted to remain with the division until the end of the war. Therefore they always designated me as indispensable for lack of officers.

Q And when were you finally recalled after all?

A Two days before the war with Russia began. On that date an order signed by Himmler arrived in the division headquarters that I was to be sent to Berlin.

attempts to remain with the troops?

A I tried by all means to stay with the troops. It was a matter of my honor not to leave the troops two days before the beginning of this War.

Q And what did the Army say? but I was informed that an order of Himmler had to be complied with and they could not do anything further.

Q When did you leave the division?

Q Were you dismissed from the Waffen-SS? to it.

Q Why? to the division.

Q And when did you arrive in Berlin? 1941.

Q Was the outbreak of the war on the 22nd?

Q Where did you report in Berlin? to the main office of the Waffen-SS. This referred me to the RSHA because the RSHA had called for me. Thereupon I reported to Heydrich.

from the front?

A No, the transfer had come as a complete surprise. I had no idea why I had been ordered to Berlin.

Q What did Heydrich tell you about it?

A Heydrich didn't even receive me. His adjutant, Plotz, told me that I had bean with the Waffen-SS long enough, He intended to give me an archive command in Moscow which I would have to organize and set up . The kommandos of the Einsatz Staff Rosenberg and of the Battalion Kunzberg of the Foreign Office which were archive kommandos of other agencies were already on the road, and therefore I was to see to it and I should arrive in Moscow first. For this reason I was to take up a connection with the Chief of Einsatzgruppe B, Nebe, who was responsible for the Moscow area.

Q You were to arrive in Moscow first? What do you mean by that, with the combat troops? these duties in Moscow as soon as the German troops arrived there. kommando would be subordinate to Einsatzgruppe B?

A No, I had received my order from Heydrich. As Chief of Office VII, I could not be made subordinate to another chief of an office. without objection? be compromised before the officers of my division if I would leave my troops shortly before the outbreak of war, and I asked that I be sent back to the division.

Q What was Heydrich's reaction, did he consider this objection?

A No, he refused it. Plotz told me it would be out of the question. It was up to me later to advance with my division.

research and international politics, or were similar security orders given previously to this office? the office of Rosenberg. The office of Rosenberg by a special Fuehrer order had received the mission to secure certain - to confiscate certain objects of an artistic value in the occupied territory. As a result of the agreement between Heydrich and Rosenberg in the spring of 1940, the Security Police was given the right to confiscate certain documents and archive material from the time after 1933. This special order was given to Office VII in the spring of 1940.

Q Was Office VII active according to this order, and where? Athens and in Belgrade where it was busy with such archive orders.

Q In what form was this activity carried out? these documents and had to evaluate them. carried on. What was the activity, for example, in Paris?

A In Paris the great political organizations were secured. All the ministries, together with the historical work of the foreign office, all those documents were photostated. A number of archive documents which were requested by offices in Berlin, such as the Surete or the Alliance Francaise, they were taken to Berlin. These are just a few excerpts from this work. from your answer. You said we secured the great political organizations. organizations.

Q Could you yourself confiscate these?

A The procedure was as follows: The confiscation was carried on by the Secret Field Police, a military organization, and then the evaluation was taken up by the Kommandos of Office VII.

DR. ULMER: I am referring to a translation error, "confiscation",

THE INTERPRETER: They are arguing here about the translation of the word "Beschlagnahme" which to me means confiscation.

THE WITNESS: The difference is not great. Confiscation would be a final taking away, and here we mean confiscation for the purposes of evaluation and then the documents are returned.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we know that those documents were returned?

DR. ULMER: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Not all documents were taken away. Mostly they were left in the buildings More examined, and were then again returned to the offices.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, would you say then that it was a temporary seizure of documents?

THE WITNESS: Yes, with those which were not carried away from the place of origin it was a temporary seizure, yes. Others, of course, which were needed in Berlin were confiscated.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Well, then, you might make that distinction between confiscation, where the documents were taken and not returned, and temporary seizure where the documents were merely temporarily taken for the purpose of study, scrutiny, and then returned.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. Thus you received the order from Heydrich to set up a similar kommando for Moscow?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Heydrich or his deputy issue a written order to set up such a kommando?

A. No, this was not customary. The setting up of such kommandos was an exclusive function of Office VII.

Q. It is not customary then. Did office VII carry out its task without Heydrich issuing an order?

A. Yes.

Q. Thus this became a work of experts in Office VII?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a difference between this kommando to be organized for Moscow and the former archive Kommandos of Office VII?

A. No, not their missions. No, there was no difference only in the importance of the objective, the interest in the Soviet Russian documents was especially great. For this reason I was given the mission in Moscow.

Q. Was Moscow especially important within the interest for these Russian documents?

A. Well, it was known that the Russian centralization has Moscow as the head of all important agencies of the State, of the Party, and of the cultural life and likewise, the way in Paris, Brussels, and the Hague were important for their countries, so Moscow was the city in Russia, which was the city in Russia which was most important.

Q. How did you prepare this Kommando?

A. I informed my co-workers in Office VII. I gave them the orders to prepare the materials necessary for Moscow , that is, city maps guides and organizations there and the other materials which are necessary to carry out such a mission. Furthermore, I reserved the right to ask for these co-workers.

Q. When was that?

A. After I had made contact with Nebe, which had been ordered by Heydrich.

Q. Where Was Nebe at that time?

A. Nebe was in Warsaw.

Q. What were the results of your conferences with Nebe?

A. Nebe was not very agreeable to this mission. He already had thought himself of securing the documents in Moscow and he didn't think a special kommando was necessary.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, now we will have to go into detail about this advance Kommando Moscow, the actual Count I. I think this would be a good point to recess.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal agrees with you. The Tribunal will be in recess for 15 minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. ULMER: discussion with Nebe and you said that Nebe had not been pleased, that you received this particular assignment, and you have said that he thought that the security of files could be done by, and that he did not need a special commander for this purpose. How did you react to this answer of Nebe's? assignment.

Q Did you go to Heydrich and speak to Heydrich about it?

A Yes, but he did not receive me. But he said that he had given me the assignment, the order, and I had to carry it out.

Q How did he let you know - in writingg? Ploetz? towards Heydrich. For a long time after I tried not to return to Berlin and to shirk from this duty, and I was certain that if I now made any moral objections once more I had to reckon on very severe measures against myself.

Q You mean arrest?

Q You then went back to Warsaw, did you?

Q Did Nebe now agree?

A No. Nebe again made some objections and he said that now he had to discuss it first with the chief of the authority in Minsk, the AOK, which is the superior commando to the Army. That was General Field Marshal von Kluge.

Q Where was he? Was he in Warsaw?

Q And did Nebe actually talk to Kluge?

Q Was it about this Archives Commando?

Q Was von Kluge in agreement with this?

A Yes, Kluge agreed. He referred him for further discussion to his major in 1-c Helmdaeh. He was a major in the general staff.

Q What were your further steps then? for a meeting and a discussion of the departmental experts.

Q And did they arrive?

A No, only two of these arrived. Streckenbach said that he could not dispense with any more experts, and the rest should have been taken from reserve leader corps of the Einsatzgruppen.

Q Who was Streckenbach?

A Streckenbach was the Department Chief 1 of the SD. He was in charge of the personnel department.

Q Office I was only personnel?

Q What did you do then under the circumstances? back to Berlin again. For this reason I declared myself satisfied with the state of affairs and I asked Nebe to put at my disposal a few interpreters whom he had in Moscow. detachment?

A Two arrived from Berlin. Two of them were actually from the staff, two came from the detachment VII-B, and two from the Einsatzkommando IX.

Q Two, did you say, from Group Staff?

Q Thank you. And how were they sub-divided, according to their origin?

A Mahnke and Augsburg came from Berlin. Engelhard and Siebert came from the Staff. Klingelhoeffer and Noack from Commando VII-B, and Luther and Feldmann from Einsatzkommando IX.

Q Mahnke and Augsburg, e.g. were scientists? who were put at your disposal? or they had to have some scientific knowledge of archives.

Q Did the Archive Commando have a special name?

A Yes. I just called it "Advance Commando "- "Vorkommando Moscow" - in order to make clear its special character and its special purpose. in the preliminary syllable "Vor"? this Commando a name? connection with this particular Commando - armaments, clothing, giving of names - everything, was my assignment as the chief of Office VII. assignment? for Moscow and had such material prepared which I took with me. On the basis of this material I appointed these men and prepared them for their task.

Q What kind of material was it? and in German. There were statements, and drafts, and distribution plans of Ministries which gave a full picture of the whole administrative system of Moscow.

All the organizations - that is, the Bolshevist party organizations, all public cultural organizations, archives, libraries, institutes, were established. Degrees of their importance were established. Individual offices and institutes, were marked down on the map accordingly and these materials were passed on to one particular expert to work out in his particular sphere. Did you take part in the preliminary discussions in the setting up of tasks for the Einsatzgruppe, at Berlin, Pretsch or Duben? I was to go to Berlin. or some other representatives, or did you receive instructions about the execution order? with Heydrich or Streckenbach before my departure or even after my return. My sole discussion was by telephone. It was a discussion with the adjutant Ploetz. Therefore, I received no instruction from anyone in Berlin concerning the execution order. or just information concerning the execution order?

A No, not even Nebe. Nebe gave me neither instructions nor information, neither in Warsaw nor in Minsk. did you receive any knowledge about the execution order?

Q Where?

naturally were mentioned and were discussed, but I myself - and I have to make a point in stating this - had no knowledge about the general elimination of Jewery, especially about the extermination of women and children... As I said, I had no knowledge and never received any knowledge. did it ever get the assignment, or, in your opinion, could the Einsatzkommando have received such order for executions?

A No. The advance Commando Moscow was special commando of the Reich Security Main Office. It was not an Einsatzkommando. And as a consequence of this, there was no need for me to pass on any instructions or give any orders. Vorkommando Moscow concluded?

A That was on the 14th of July. At that time I left Minsk.

Q That is, with the Advance Commando Moscow?

Q What was your next destiny?

A That was the Division Reich. It was a combat division actually, Combat Division for Moscow.

Q Where was it situated?

A The Division Reich was in the vicinity of Smolensk. About the garrison I was to find out from OAK-4.

Q Where was the army under AOK-4?

A That was stationed in Tolochino. That is half way to Smolensk.

Q Did you actually move there, to Tolochino? Were you stationed there? of AOK-4, on an estate, on a farm.

Q When was that?

Furthermore, I gave him a full explanation of the purpose of the Advance Commando Moscow for the securing of archives material in Moscow. I furthermore gave him an explanation that it was of major importance to reach Moscow with the actual combat troops in order to secure the material undamaged and undestroyed, and in conclusion I asked him to issue a decree, an army decree, so that the advance units would be informed about this and would be able to support me. special assignment of your Commando, as the Commando for archive securing? about the consistency of the Commando, whether I had enough experts, and he asked me how I would behave in Moscow, and he was fully in agreement with this, in general.

Q what did he do? He explained to me about the fighting around Smolensk, which had been particularly severe, and for the first time had stopped the quick advance of the German troops, and he also mentioned in detail the garrison and the location of the Division Reich.

This was in a gap, a little further from Smolensk in the so-called Djelna Curve. He said that it would be good to wait for a few days until the AOK-4 itself would march into Smolensk as the road had been interrupted on various points.

Q What did you do then in Tolochino?

A I said that I arrived there on the 16th. I spoke to Helmbach on the 12th about, I sent a few quartermasters, in advance - and on the 23d I marched off in the direction of Smolensk with the AOK-4.

Q Then you stayed in Tolochino for quite some time. Did you have further discussions with Helmbach?

A I had two further discussions with Helmbach. One discussion just shortly before we reached Smolensk, because Smolensk was still being bombarded, a position had been built up in the vicinity of Smolensk; and a further discussion I had with Helmdach in the middle of August, which I shall come back to eventually. activity?

A That was not my assignment. Furthermore, I was in a combat zone. There was no possibility to carry out any executive activities. 23d of July 1941 --- you sent quartermasters in advance, didn't you? up quarters there? in the vicinity around Smolensk - the eastern part of the town still was in the hands of the Russians. Until the 4th of August there were heavy artillery fights, and practically until the 4th of August the town was bombarded by an immense number of Russian batteries. in Smolensk?

Smolensk. Only the water carriers were sent out to fetch back water at the wells.

Q Where about were you stationed in Smolensk? That was one of the few buildings which had not been fully occupied by troops, because it was only three hundred meters from the foremost front lines. administration?

Q Were there other units in this building?

Q Did you then go to your Division Reich from Smolensk? Division Reich, and I had given him a letter to the commander of Division Reich, in which I explained the purpose of my being on the way there, and that I should take up contact with him.

Q Did the commander react to this? ed me that the division would be withdrawn from the Djelna area, that it would be stationed there and that I should not go to beyond the Djelna curve.

Q Who was this commander?

Q When did you talk to him? the division while they were marching.

Q That title of Sturmbannfuehrer is that equal to a colonel? advance to Moscow with the Division Reich?

A Yes, I did say it in several discussions. I called on the division while it was stationed there, as well as the Commander Wunder, and some of his officers came to see me in Smolensk in order to clarify this question.

Q What did you arrange with the Division? Division to Moscow, that I would receive fuel and rations from the Division and that I would furthermore be able to use their signal service.

Q Who is "We" would advance with their Division?

Q What did you and your leaders do in Smolensk? to do for some time. Therefore I decided to inspect Smolensk which is a large city in the Russian territory and to look for archives and other valuable documentary material.

Q What did you do then for example?

A I inspected the archives of the town. The archives of the administrative district; all cultural organizations, institutions, universities, and other places like churches. Either as I said , I looked at them, and inspected them, or I marked them with notices and protective notices.

Q What were these protective notices you stuck there? in Minsk to print proclamations in the German and Russian languages which proclaimed to the population and soldiers that certain articles were under protection. For experience had taught that archives and documents were deliberately destroyed by the indigenous population and sometimes by our own troops through negligence.

A There were two big churches in Smolensk. One was the famous Cathedral of Smolensk which by the Russians had been turned into a museum. It was full of wonderful treasures such as crowns and other objects which were completely exposed. The other was a very famous and beautiful old Russian wooden church which was used as a central archive for the Russian Government.

I turned this cathedral over to a Russian orthodox minister and I had the objects taken away from the other church and I turned this church over to the catholic priest. The reason was to safeguard these treasures from plunder and spoliation. in Smolensk? have already said, the city was under artillery fire until the 4th of July, the whole town before the retreat of the Russians, was evacuated and dismantled and there were only a few inhabitants remaining who as a consequence of the battle had gone into hiding. The rest had escaped, and fled to the vicinity of the town of Smolensk. The town was practically empty of all population.

Q Therefore, no police actions or executions were carried out?

Q Nebe, and the group-staff had remained, isn't that so? You were alone with the VKN?

Q Did Nebe arrive with his group-staff in Smolensk and at what date?

Q Where were the accommodations for him and his group-staff? remaining buildings, he moved into another wing of the same building.

Q What kind of contact did you have with Nebe? Security Main Office. I did not look for such a point of contact either, because I had to deal with the marching of the Division Reich, and I was definitely marching with them.

Q Were there any actual personal tensions between you and Nebe? interpreters of my command for his purposes.

Q For what purposes were you to place them at his disposal?

A He wanted translation work to be done. He wanted contact with the town administration, and that in one case he even wanted interpreters for the police commander.

Q For what purposes?

Q For interpreting purposes? reference to your kommando? the part of my interpreters without my special approval. Furthermore, for reasons of our being stationed together in the same building, I demenaded strict separation between the group-staff and my own unit.

Q That, of course, increased the tension?

Q Why then did you not simply leave Smolensk? Smolensk created a completely new military position, a position which was decisive for the final phase of the campaign of this year; the Army and motorized units of the AOK-IV were taken away from the advanced direction of Moscow and were put into the position in the direction south of Chernikov-Kiev in order to eliminate the endangered flank. Among those transferred troops was also the Division Reich. A discussion with I/c Major I.G. Helrmbach in the middle of August, it must have been the 15th of August, revealed that Moscow would not be taken within a measurable space of time, therefore, the advance kommando Moscow became idle for weeks, even months. protective assignment? porate my kommando into the Einsatzgruppe B.

Q You mean the whole command?

Q What kind of thing was this special task going to be? in the East territory, that is in the vicinity of Smolensk. With this, of course, the nature of the assignment of my VKM would have changed completely and I would have been forced to most severe measures.

Q Did you accept? accepted it I would have been his subordinate.

Q Well, what did you do?

Q Where did you send this teletype message?

Q You mean the Reich Mein Security Office to Streckenbach?

Q Did you choose another way also? courier, in which I detailed my position, and the reasons for the wish for my release.

Q What was the result, were you released? On 20th of August I left Smolensk and went to Berlin.

Q Who received the order?

Q It was to you, was it not?

Q Did you take leave from Nebe? Or did you just leave without much ado? the responsibility for Vorkommando Moscow. superior command office?

secure files and archives in Mascow. I only reached Smolensk with this order, therefore, I had no reasons to send reports.

Q And you didn't do it?

A No, I didn't.

Q Did you make reports to the Einsatzgruppe B? Office directly and there was no point, there was no reason and no duty to report to Nebe. situation reports? during this trial, but I assure that these reports are not due to my own initiative. before I do so, will you give me some data you have on the VKM? order to establish the VKM. On 14 July I left Minsk; from the 16th to the 23rd of July I was in Tolochino;from the 23rd to the 4th of August I was by myself in Smolensk. That is, I was with the Vorkommando Moscow. That is the date when Smolensk was still being attacked. On 5 August the group-staff arrived in Smolensk, and as to this I was luckily united with the group-staff; from the 20th of August - - on 20 August at six o'clock I left Smolensk.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, I am now forced to name a number of operational situation reports which unfortunately have not been submitted by the Prosecution. The use of these documents, however, has been promised me by Mr. Ferencz, who told me I could use them outside of court, and which I shall offer in evidence in my document book for the defense. May I put a few questions from the contents of these operational situation reports?

THE PRESIDENT: By all means. Since you have mentioned document books, the Tribunal would like to announce to defense counsel that we are informed that up to this point only two defense books have been prepared, and two are in the state of preparation. We would like to repeat that defense counsel should interest themselves in the immediate preparation of any documents which they intend to submit, so that we will not he confronted with a state of congestion towards the latter days of the trial. You may proceed.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, as to my own case, and my own defense, I can say that my document book is being prepared very actively, it has already been stencilled, and it is only a matter of having them run down and translated. Therefore, shortly after my direct examination of the defendant Six, it will be submitted to the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. ULMER: operational situation report of Einsatzgruppe B covering the period o of July and August 1941. There is one operational situation report for instance, of the 9 of Julh 1941, which lists first of all the advance kommando Moscow, and states: "After negotiations in Minsk the Special Kommando VII-A is being transferred from the AOK-IX which is to march past Moscow to the newly formed armored AOK 4 to which an Advance Kommando is attached, including interpreters, and those who know the locality of Moscow under the command of Standartenfuehrer Dr. Six. The present AOK-IV has been turned into AOK-II, and the Sonderkommando VII B will be at the disposal of AOK IV". How do you explain the compilation of this report? it to Berlin. ferred from AOK IX, to AOK IV?

with my archive-assignment.

Q Would you have been able to carry on with your task? (Film not to be heard here). not have inspired my task as both Kommandos had completely different tasks. But this report, in my opinion, confirms my task's concerning the archives ahd the independence of the Advance Kommandos Moscow.

Q Why? one AOK which the Einsatzgruppe with its personnel status could not have afforded to carry out.

Q You mean a double staffing , in what way?

AA double staffing with the two kommandos. I mean, the same character, but if I really just simplify, VII-A was a special Einsatzkommando, and my unit was an Archive-kommando.

Q There is an operational situation report of 23 July 1941. This states: "VKM is still stationed in Tolochino". Is this report correct? stationed in Tolochino in the combat zone AOK-IV. this report? inflammation of the jaw. He had to leave for home via Minsk, evidently Nebe reported that fact.

Q And Nebe made a report of this?

Q On his own initiative, without your suggestion?

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, another operational situation report has to be presented, so would you like for me to proceed, or would you like to call a recess?

THE PRESIDENT: I think that we should have a recess at this point. The Tribunal will be in recess until L;45.

(A recess was taken until 1345, 24 October 1947).

(The hearing reconvened at 1350 hours, 24 October 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued) BY DR. ULMER: situation report about Tolochino. A further operational situation report on 26th of July 1941 reports the VKM to be in Smolensk, is that correct? with some quartermaster since the 21st of July, 1941. The city was still being fought over as the report mentioned.

Q How do you explain this report? who suddenly got sick and had a severe appendicitis and had to leave immediately. He went back by way of Minsk. Therefore, it may be assumed that he gave his report to Nebe orally. of the German text, Exhibit 118, the Staff of Einsatzgruppe B is reported to be in Smolensk, is that correct?

THE PRESIDENT: Which Document Number please?

DR. ULMER: I beg your pardon, your Honors. It is Document NO-2949, Exhibit 118.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, thank you.

Q (By Dr. Ulmer) Is that correct? his group staff on the 5th of august, 1941. been yet submitted of 6th of August 1941 reports from Smolensk as follows:

"In the City of Smolensk in the House of the Soviet important material was safeguarded. The material, after having been examined, will be forwarded." Is that correct?

Q How do you know that? safeguarded in Smolensk by the Advance Kommando Moscow.

Q What did this material consist of? USSR shortly before the outbreak of war.

Q You know that - how did Nebe know about that? was lacking, I saw to it that those secured documents were handed over to the staff in order that the staff may send them on to Berlin. Further material was sent on to the staff also as it was found.

Q It was sent continually to Berlin in this manner?

Q Thank you. According to these operational situation reports the group staff under Nebe's direction and the Advance Kommando under your direction was in Smolensk from the 5th of August 1941, until the time of your departure on the 20th of August, 1941, and they were locally together? to the Einsatzgruppe or to the Einsatzgruppe staff in that time? kommando.

Q On Nebe's approval? that time? sent to Berlin by courier. If Nebe wanted to process this material in his reports this was completeky outside of his duties for it was safeguarded by the Advance Kommando Moscow.

Q Thank you. Why did you yourself not report the safeguarding of this archive material to Berlin? the way the other kommandos had it and had no other means of communication. The safeguarding in Smolensk was caused by the special military situation and by the fact that we had stayed there without having planned to do so.

Q Now, I have the operational situation report, No. 67, of the 29th of august 1941. This is Document No. 3837, Document Book II-B, Page 5 of the German text, Page 6 of the English text, your Honor, Prosecution's Exhibit 58. Do you know this document?

Q Since when? mentioned according to which the Army gives 740 civilians over to the Advance Kommando Moscow in two days. Is this report correct?

A Factually yes, but formally no. The field command, because of lack of interpreters, had handed over some hundred civilian prisoners to the Einsatzgruppe who had been handed over to it by field units. Since there were so many of them, Nebe asked me that the interpreters of the Advance Kommando Moscow be used in order to screen these people.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, unfortunately this operational situation report which I have just mentioned has not been fully submitted by the Prosecution. I intend to submit several of the paragraphs from the operational situation report which have a direct Bearing on the questions submitted by the Prosecution, and I want to read these paragraphs now, and later I want to submit them in my document books.

It says there, "During the screening the following took place: First, the main group of civilian prisoners were people who, in the course of the advance of the combat troops, for security reasons, had been taken into provisional civilian or prisoners of war camps, for the most part outside of their regular identification papers they hold discharge papers from a Dulag, from a transient camp. Secondly, one group of punitive prisoners who had been sentenced to prison-terms by the Bolshevists for misdemeanors such as drunkness during work and reporting too late for work, had been used as punitive labor for digging ditches after the outbreak of the war and for building improvised fortifications. When combat took place in their territory they had mostly fled and were later arrested as vagabonds by the Army agencies. This group usually lacks identification papers since, when they were brought into the Russian prison their identification papers were taken from them by the prison officials. Third, a group of draftees who had an order to report to the Army and were on the way to join their unit but were no longer able to roach their unit. They were mostly to be used as drivers, as road builders and railroad engineers."

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ulmer, how long is this quotation which you are going to read?

DR. ULMER: I just read about half of it, your Honor. I could summarize it.

THE PRESIDENT: I think that is what you should do, summarize it, especially in view of the fact that you intend to submit the entire text later. You give us the content in a few brief words indicating that you intend to let us have the entire text later?

DR. ULMER: Yes, your Honor. people who had been ordered to join the Army and who were no longer able to reach their unit. Their identification papers consisted only of their order to report to a certain unit. A Fourth group is also mentioned, persons who had been taken away from their field work and farmers who had been arrested without any reason. They have identification papers issued by Army agencies, Wehrmacht agencies as workers on collective farms.

Q. (By Dr. Ulmer) Witness, my question in reference to this is as follows: Outside of these four main groups were any more persons isolated, selected?

A. The distribution of the prisoners was done as follows: It was done the way the report says, and the exactness of this report shows how much care was taken in this to see to it that these partly half-starved people be distributed justly and that they be subdivided into these four groups. Any further subdivision of prisoners or even execution did not take place since there was on reason to do that. These civilian prisoners, after the subdivision into these four groups had taken place, were led away by soldiers of the Field Command who had been present during COURT II-A CASE IX the subdivision.

More than that I cannot tell you about this subject.

Q. Thank you. In Document Book II-B, Document 2844, Prosecution's Exhibit 61, Page 22 of the German text and Page 22 of the English text, we find an operational situation report, No. 73, Do you know this one?

A. No, I did not see it until the trial here.

Q. Thank you. Can I have it back, please? This operational situation report mentions, on Page 29 of the German text, that group staff and Advance Kommando Moscow from the 22nd of June to the 20th of August had shot dead 144 people. Is this report correct?

A. No, The Advance Kommando Moscow in the time between the 22nd of June, 1941, and the 20th of August, 1941, did not shoot any people. As far as the Advance Kommando Moscow is mentioned in this report, the report is wrong. As far as the group staff is concerned, I cannot give you any details.

Q. How do you explain that this report came to be made out?

A. An explanation is easily to be found. The report was made out after my departure, that Is to say at a time when I had already subordinated the Kommando to Nebe.

Q. How do you come to the conclusion that this report was made out after your departure?

A. That can be seen from the report itself. It is here a collective report of all kommandos of Einsatzgruppe B with the deadline 20th of August. These reports took at least a few days until the Einsatzgruppe received them from the various Kommandos. At that time, that is when Nebe made out this collective report, I had already left.

Q. How do you come to conclude that this report was made out unjustly as far as the participation of the Advance COURT II-A CASE IX Kommando Moscow is mentioned in the execution?

A. Until the 20th of august, 1941, that is the day of my departure, the Advance Kommando Moscow did not carry out any executions. This is proved by the total reports which are submitted here. There are single individual reports about all kommandos of the Einsatzgruppe, about executions by the Kommandos. There is no such report about the Advance Kommando Moscow, but the operational situation reports show that executions were carried out by the group staff.

Q. For what reason did Nebe give a point for the Group Staff and Advance Kommando Moscow?

A. On the 20th of August I left. On the same day, Nebe put the Advance Kommando Moscow under his command. Thus Group Staff and Advance Kommando Moscow were under his command. This fact was unknown in Berlin. Nebe therefore used the first opportunity to report this subordination.

Q. To report it where?

A. To report it to Berlin. He thereby explained that now the Advance Kommando Moscow in reference to its position was equivalent in its position to all the other Kommandos. Furthermore, Nebe wanted to accomplish with this report that in this first collective report of all Kommandos - for this was the first report like that-no report like it existed before that - that all Kommandos under his command would now be listed as being under his command.

Q. Could one imagine reasons for the report mentioning jointly Group Staff and Advance Kommando Moscow from those commands being in the same building?

A. As I have already explained, Nebe tried, when I was still there, to use my interpreters for his own purposes. After my departure, he had a free hand in doing this and he certainly made use of that. Thus, there probably was an organizational unity between the Group Staff and the Advance Kommando Moscow, as it is expressed in this report at hand.

Q. Then you consider this report an arbitrary action on Nebe's side?

A. Yes, Nebe wanted to express to Berlin that now Group Staff and Advance Kommando Moscow Were both under his command. If the Advance Kommando Moscow really had carried out independent executions on its own, then it would have been listed separately.

Q. Thus you exclude completely the participation on the part of the Advance Kommando Moscow in this figure of 144 executed people during the time of the 22nd of June until the 20th of August?

A. Yes, for reason of time, of location, and for reasons of the proof of the Operational situation reports. Therefore, in my opinion, the claim of the prosecution in Letter U in the indictment, according to which the executions are supposed to have taken place in the vicinity of Smolensk in unfounded. For then the prosecution tries to limit the time of the execution between the 5th and the 20th of August, out the operational situation report states that the executions took place in the time from the 22nd of June until the 20th of August and not during the time of the 5th of August to the 20th of August, that is to say, during that time during which Advance Kommando Moscow and the Group Staff were together at the same place.

Q. In the same document which was just submitted to you, namely, in the operational situation Report No. 73, the Advance Kommando Moscow is supposed to have executed 46 people among them 38 intellectual Jews, who had tried to engender discontent and dissatisfaction in the newly erected Ghetto in Smolensk. How do you explain this report?

A. I have no explanation whatever for this report. As I have stated, in general, the advance Kommando Moscow between the 22nd of June until the 20th of August did not execute any people and I also want to say especially that the Advance Kommando Moscow between the 22nd of June and the 20th of August did not shoot any Jews.

Q. Do you have any proof of time for those months?

A. Yes, the subdivision of these civilian prisoners brought in by the Field Command took place on the 18th and 19th of August, that is, one or two days before my departure. This is the last incident in which Advance Kommado Moscow participated which can have any reference to me, as far as the date is concerned. This incident of these prisoners brought in by the Field Police are mentioned in the Situation Report of the 29th of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you have stated several times now that between June 22 and August 20, 1941, that your Kommando did not exe cute any Jews.

THE WITNESS: I have said between the 22nd of June and the 20th of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes

THE WITNESS: 20th of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Well during what period of time did they participate in executions?

THE WITNESS: I don't know. I am just trying to analyze to you for what reasons no executions can have taken place in the period down to the 20th of August. Especially, I tried to analyze at the moment why this report about the execution of 38 Jews and 8 other people could not belong to the period up to the 20th of August.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, during what period or time, did the Vorkommando Moscow conduct any executions?

THE WITNESS: Until the time of the 20th of August, non, but Advance Kommando Moscow continued to exist and I shall come back to these questions later together with my counsel.

THE PRESIDENT: well, do you know of any period of time during which this Kommando executed Jews?

THE WITNESS: No, I don't know. I merely tried to prove by the dates in the report that this report about 38 Jews and 8 other people, since this the Prosecution charged me with the responsibility for itthat I should try to prove that this does not belong to my period of services there.

THE PRESIDENT: proceed.

Q. (By Dr. Ulmer) Did you continue to be informed after your departure from Russia about what the Advance Kommando Moscow continued to do or in what manner it continued to operate?

A. No, I had no knowledge of that at all.

Q. In other words, what you can say about the Advance Kommando Moscow refers only to that period you mentioned, between the 22nd of June and the 20th of August. The execution of 46 people from the Ghettos is stated in the operational Situation Report of the 4th of September, 1941.

The subdivision of the prisoners as undertaken by the Army is mentioned in the report of the 29th of August, 1941; you were just about to explain that the subdivision of the prisoners is therefore the last event which happened during the time of your presence and the registration mentioned in the report of the 29th of August, 1941, is included in this. why should the execution of the 46 people and, especially the registration of this not appear in the Situation report of the 4th ofSeptember, 1941? Why can that not fall within this period?

A. As I just said, the last event which can have any reference to my presence there was the distribution of the civilian prisoners and this distribution of civilian prisoners appears in the report of the 29th of August. The report about the execution of 46 people, among them 38 Jews, does not appear in this report of the 29th of August, but in the one of the 4th of September. The incident of the execution of these 38 Jews plus 8 further persons, must therefore, be later than the incident about the subdivision of prisoners mentioned in the previous report of the 29th of August, but, since I left immediately after this distribution of prisoners, namely, on the 20th of August, 1941, the time of the execution of these 46 people cannot fall in the period of my presence in Smolensk.

Q. In this operational situation report of the 4th of September, 1941, the execution of the 46 people in Smolensk is mentioned once and then it mentions the liquidation by Einsatzgruppe B, according to the status of the 20th of August, 1941. Can you give me any explanation for this?

A. Yes, for these same logical reasons of the date. If the execution of these 46 people in Smolensk took place between the 20th and 30th of August, then this date corresponds to the date of receipt of the reports of the Einsatzgruppe, for the Einsatzkommandos as of the 20th of August, 1941, had to report the figures of liquidation. These reports took a few days, as I said, in order to reach the Einsatzgruppe from the advance Kommandos.

After the receipt of these individual reports, the collective reports could be made out by the Group Staff, that is, Nebe. This also could only have been possible in the last August days. This explanation then that the execution of the 46 people, including those 38 Jews in Smolensk, judging by the receipt of the reports from the Einsatzkommandos to the Einsatzgruppe must have happened at a time when I was no longer in Smolensk,

Q. But where were you?

A. I was in Berlin.

Q. In this document which reports the execution of these 46 people by Advance Kommando Moscow on pages 28 and 29 of the German text you can see reports of liquidations by Einsatzgruppe B, about these collective figures, about which we just spoke.

A. Yes.

Q. In the last mentioned report, the Advance Kommando Moscow and the Group Staff are mentioned. Would you find any explanation for this?

A. There is really a further explanation for what I have already said, if the above mentioned report of the 4th of September, 1941, that is, the collective report of all of the Einsatzkommandos, mentions the Advance Kommando Moscow in reference to the killing of 46 people, that is, as an individual report, and then one page later mentions the various execution figures of the various Einsatzkommandos, then it would have been conspicuous for a reader in Berlin if the collective report of all the Einsatzkommandos would not have mentioned the Advance Kommando Moscow too, since no liquidation figures for the time until the 20th of August existed for the Advance Kommando Moscow, the report merely mentioned the Advance Kommando Moscow together with the staff. which the Advance Kommando Moscow in the report of the 4th of September, 1941 is also mentioned in connection with the liquidation of 144 people. Do you have any personal knowledge about the origin of this report?

A. No, I have seen this report for the first time during this trial. Therefore, I can give no explanation of my own knowledge. I can only make short explanations with my own reasoning, which can be gathered from the above mentioned reasons of location, time, etc.

Q. I shall give you my document book with the three last mentioned reports, which have been submitted and which I want to show you. First of all, there is Document No. 3143, Prosecution Exhibit 64, Book II-B, page 42 of the German, page 47 of the English. This is a report on the 29th of September and the Group Staff and the Advance Kommando Moscow is mentioned with a number of 12 executions of people. What do you have to explain about this?

A. I have already explained that on the 20th of August, 1941, I left Smolensk, and, if I give my explanation about the collective reports, the collective reports after the 20th of August only can be a collection of reports of later executions of the Einsatzgruppe B, that is to say, at a time after the 20th of August, about which I cannot say anything from my own knowledge.

Q. 2,029 executed people, this is what the Situation Report 108 reports on the 9th of October, 1941, Document 3156, Prosecution 60, Book II-B, page 15 of the German text, page 16 of the English. Please give an explanation for this.

A. Here too again We are concerned with the collective report of a still later date about which I can merely repeat what I have already said. I left Smolensk on the 20th of August and I have given my explanation about the first collective report of the 20th of August. About this report, too, I cannot say anything from my own knowledge.

Q. Finally, under the date of the 26th of October, 1941, I have a collection of execution figures of 2,457 people for the Staff and the Advance Kommando Moscow. This is mentioned in the Operational Report 125 of the 26th of October, 1941, Document 3403, Prosecution Exhibit 63, Book 211-B, page 39, Page 41 of the English.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Ulmer, when you give us these citations you start out with the most minute thing first and then finally lead up to the biggest thing last, which is the document book, so we are compelled to keep all this in our mind until finally you tell us the big secret, in which document book it is. Please tell us first the document book and then give us all the details.

DR. ULMER: Yes, Your Honor, I shall try to do this, but this was the last Quotation:

A.(By Dr. Ulmer) I would like to have an explanation from you for this collective report.

A. Here, again, I must repeat what I have said about the two preceding reports.

This is a report of a still later date which is a summary of executions which Were carried out within Einsatzgruppe B, that is, at a time when I was no longer with the Einsatzgruppe in Smolensk and therefore I can make no statement about it.

Q. Then you left Smolensk on the 20th of August, 1941?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you arrive in Berlin?

A. I arrived in Berlin on the 21st of August.

Q. why so quickly?

A. From Orscha I used a transport plane which brought me back by way of Warsaw.

Q. To whom did you report in Berlin?

A. I reported to Streckenbach, since Heydrich was not in Berlin at the time.

Q. How did Streckenbach receive you?

A. He received me in a friendly manner, out he told me that Heydrich was angry about my application to be relieved, it would have been my duty to take on this partisan warfare order. He told me that until he had discussed this question with me, I should not take up any work in Berlin.

Q. who said that, Streckenbach, or Heydrich via Streckenback?

A. Heydrich via Streckenbach.

Q. What did you say to Streckenbach in answer?

A. I told Streckenbach in answer to this, and I am certain about it, that I was an officer of the Waffen SS and that if any steps were intended against me, I would ask for a proceedings to be started against me myself.

Q. what was Streckenbach's attitude about that?

Q. what was Streckenbach's attitude about that?

A. He understood my attitude, but he told me he would pass on this report to Heydrich.

Q. Did you tell your military agency, the SS Main Operational Office about it?

A. Yes, I reported to Juettner, the Chief of the SS main Office and I asked for his protection, since I was still an officer of the Waffen SS and that I had been taken back from the troops against my will, and that I was still on an army status.

Q. what did Obergruppenfuehrer Juetner have to say about that?

A. Juettner promised me his protection and he promised me not to have me released - from the Waffen SS until this Question had been closed in a satisfactory manner.

Q. what did Heydrich or Streckenbach do in the meantime?

A. In the month of September and October nothing happened; the matter just rested.

Q.- And what did you do during that time?

A.- At that time I took up my duties as lecturer at the university and as Dean.

Q.- When did this case come up for decision?

A.- At the beginning of November I was ordered to see Heydrich in Prague, and he reproached me about my so-called desertion from the SD to the Waffen-SS. He told me I was unfaithful and disobedient, and similar things.

Q.- Did you just take this, or did you answer him?

A.- One can only imagine my position at that time if one knows the relationship between Heydrich and myself which existed since the year 1938/1939. Heydrich had treated me like a dog for three years. And I believe that anyone who was in the RSHA at the time knew that, and knows it. And at the time I was in a mental state in which I no longer considered my personal fate, and it did not matter to me what Heydrich was going to undertake. It was clear to me that sooner or later he would break me in some manner. Therefore, I told him at the time that since the year 1939 I had tried to get out of the SD, that I had volunteered to go to the Waffen-SS in order to achieve my inner freedom; that was recalled from my troops against my will, and that I could see no sense in the situation in which the German people found themselves to take over such an unnecessary office, so unimportant for the war as Office VII was. I can only say that Heydrich broke out in a fit of rage and finally threw me out.

Q.- Did this happen in front of witnesses?

A.- There were some people in the anteroom -- the State Secretary Frank, Sturmbannfuehrer Ploetz, and a secretary.

Q.- What happened then?

A.- I returned to Berlin and told Streckenbach about the conversation and about my whole position. And I must say again today what had become clear to me at that time, - that Streckenbach at that time was the good angel in the RSHA.

At any rate be introduced and tried to eliminate this dispute in some manner. At the end of November, after Nebe returned from Smolensk, a conference took place at Streckenbach's office between Streckenbach, Nebe and myself. In this conference Nebe was absolutely stubborn, Therepupon, Streckenbach decided he would take up the matter with Heydrich personally. The result of this Heydrich-Streckenbach conversation was evidently the fact that I was informed that I was to take on my duties in Office VII once more; that he spoke to Juettner, and that I would be dismissed from the Waffen-SS, and that, therefore, some sort of compromise might be reached. I mention this only because it shows the special situation in which I found myself at the time. It explains the psychological situation I found myself in my relationship with Heydrich for three years. I also want to mention here that in the beginning of December, retroactive to the 9th of November, I became an Oberfuehrer, and this promotion came about at a time when all other office chiefs in the RSHA were also promoted.

Q.- This promotion to Oberfuehrer came about after the compromise achieved by Streckenbach, and it represented an awarding which should have been made before but it was withheld?

A.- At any rate, in September 1938 I had been promoted the last time. And I had wondered that I had been promoted, but at any rate I was promoted.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, I just hear that when translating my question about the witnesses during this dispute with Heydrich, only two names Minister Frank and Adjutant Ploetz were given -- according to the answer of the defendant there was an another witness who was also present -- the Secretary Scherrer. Please, correct the English record.

THE PRESIDENT: What are you complaining about?

DR. ULMER: The answer to the question - "Who witnessed the dispute between the defendant and Heydrich" - were three names.

And the translation gave only two names.

INTERPRETER: No, I translated all three.

DR. ULMER: -- I think that you probably missed the Secretary Scherrer?

THE PRESIDENT: The interpreter states that he did mention all three. But at any rate, your statement is on the record and the official mechanical record will state what actually occurred.

DR. ULMER: I thank you; I just wanted to have it correct. I didn't want to complain.

Q.(By Dr. Ulmer) - When were you dismissed from the Waffen-SS?

A.- That took some time longer. The Division Reich had been completely destroyed in the fighting area near Moscow in December, and had to be reconstituted so that the dismissal only came about in March or April. This time corresponds with the repatriation of the Division into the Reich.

MR. FERENCZ: I think there has been another error in translation. The question was, "When was the 'Entlassung'"..... which is properly translated "release", and it came across as "dismissal", I would like to have that corrected in the record, or have the translator make it clear now how he translates the word "entlassung".

THE PRESIDENT: Now let's make this clear first. We haven't admitted that there was an error in the first instance. You now merely call attention to this situation which will be cleared up immediately.

DR. ULMER: My question was, "When were you dismissed from the Waffen-SS"?

MR. FERENCZ: The question is .... is translation of the word "Entlassung" -- "dismissed" or "released"?

INTERPRETER: TO me it is "dismissed".

MR. FERENCZ: Thank you.

BY DR. ULMER:

Q.- Did you speak with Heydrich once more?

A.- No, I got another order in May 1942 to take part in a conference in day at Prague, but I did not speak to any of the other office chiefs, and I was not addressed by Heydrich. A few days later the assassination of Heydrich took place.

Q.- After the death of Heydrich, did you dissolve your relationship with the SS?

A.- Immediately after the death of Heydrich a discussion between Streckenbach and myself took place. Strenckenbach agreed with me to the extent that I could now leave the SD. The offer at the time made to me by the State Secretary Luther of the Foreign Office, namely to take over the training of the diplomatic service, was then the official reason. From the 1st of August 1942 I was let out of the SD.

Q.- Why were you again called into the Waffen-SS in February 1943?

A.- I think there was a slight variation in the translation. On the 1st of August I was given leave not released, and Kaltenbrunner, the successor to Heydrich, on the occasion of taking over the RSHA, made the demand to me that I should be in charge of Office VII temporarily. I refused this, and I volunteered for the Waffen-SS.

Q.- But you were called into the Waffen-SS on the 22nd of February 1943 -- your call-up was revoked again. For what reason?

A.- I told the then Foreign Minister Ribbentrop that this was a forced situation for me; whereupon, he intervened with the FHA of the Waffen-SS and my draft was revoked.

Q.- And when were you taken into the Foreign Office?

A.- Immediately after the call was revoked. In February 1943 I made indispensable to the Foreign Office and I was given the direction of the cultural branch. At the same time as an Office Chief I left office VII, officially.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, I just have a few concluding questions. If you wish the recess, this would be a good point.

THE PRESIDENT: If the questions are only a few, and by that we suppose they would not occupy more than five or ten minutes, then we will proceed until you actually terminate,

DR. ULMER: Yes, it would be finished in ten minutes at most.

Q. (By Dr. Ulmer) - Then the concluding question. Your activity as Dean, or University professor - was this in connection with your activity in the SD or Security Police?

A.- No; I can say at the most that I had great difficulties on behalf of this faculty of international politics through Gruppenfuehrer Mueller. Twice I was threatened with arrest by him. I only say this because I want to emphasize what great contrast could exist there between such workers of international politics and Office IV, the Gestapo, even though I was in the RSHA myself. When I built up this faculty of international politics in 1940 I had about 20 to 25 no-aryan students from the university "Foreign countries"; I had taken them into my faculty as students from another institute. On the basis of a denunciation with the State Police he demanded that those people be excluded - whereas I had my way about it -- and they were able to conclude their examination in my faculty. He demanded the arrest and dismissal of the 50% non-aryan professor, Albrecht Haushofer, whom I had suggested as a professor, and whom I kept on down to the last moment. He further demanded the recall of another professor, Professor Grave, who had married a half Jewish wife, and nevertheless I kept him as a professor. He arrested a number of students and lecturers in 1942, who had set up a resistance movement, and he threatened me with arrest and interrogated me for hours. This is only a short description of what the relationship of this faculty was toward the Gestapo.

Q.- Was your activity in the Foreign Office in any connection with the SD?

A.- No. Since 1941 a decree existed in the Foreign Office that no SD member may belong to the diplomatic service. And Ribbentrop made me promise that I would leave the SD since one could not serve two masters.

Q.- What were your principles in the cultural work with the Foreign Office?

A.- Those principles were conditioned by the war. I wanted to realize the principles or maintaining intellectual contact with foreign countries, even during the war, and thereby to maintain intellectual exchange with foreign countries during the war - for as the director of the cultural branch in the Foreign Office it was my uppermost duty, also during the war at least, to maintain those contacts and not to interrupt them which were the only connection there with world - at least European culture. This I did faithfully. Even though it was not easy to do this in the Foreign Office. My department chiefs in the Foreign Office had very bad disputes with Goebbels during the 2 1/2 years of my activity there. In the course of the years I had retained a pretty good picture of the relationship of the personality to the community, and of the originality of intellectual achievement. Whatever goebbles did in Germany was the greatest cultural mechanism which has ever been seen, and in my field, at least in foreign countries, I tried to maintain the idea of an intellectual liberty and of a genuine cultural contribution, It was not easy - for every thinker, every poet, every scholar who went abroad on my order, and with my signature, had to go there against the will of Goebbles. And if I can say one thing that I did in those years, it was to prevent that the barren cultural mechanism of Goebbles would become the token by which Germany is known abroad. The result of my attitude was expressed by the fact that in the year 1944 Goebbles via the State Secretary Mussehl, demanded the dissolution of my cultural branch and my being drafted. But just as much as I maintained the idea of intellectual freedom in my cultural work, I thought that it was also my job as director of the cultural branch to maintain and direct the intellectual and religious ties with the foreign countries.
